Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the membership of the board of the BBC, together with their salaries.

Mr. Brooke: The members of the board of the BBC and their salaries are as follows:

Lord Nicholas Gordon Lennox KCMG KCVO	7,570
Miss Jane Glover	7,570
Mrs. Shahwar Sadeque	7,570

Concessionary Television Licences

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make it his policy to introduce a special concessionary television licence for all chronically sick persons, including those who do not live in residential nursing homes and similar sheltered housing schemes.

Mr. Brooke: No. As the Government have repeatedly stated, they have no plans to extend the scope of the existing concessionary television licence scheme, under which concessionary licences are available only to retirement pensioners and disabled people living in residential homes or in comparable sheltered housing schemes.

Tourism (Safety Regulations)

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress he has made to equalise fire, safety and health regulations faced by the tourist industry in the European Union.

Mr. Sproat: I have held a series of meetings with ministerial colleagues with a view to reducing the impact of legislative and bureaucratic burdens on tourism, and discussions are continuing between Department and a number of other Departments. The areas of regulation under discussion include fire precautions, food hygiene and some elements of health and safety at work legislation. The implementation and enforcement of regulations in these areas in other European Union member states is not within the Government's control, but I am concerned to ensure that the tourism industry in the United Kingdom is not put at a disadvantage because regulations are enforced in more rigorous manner here than in other member states.

Uniform Business Rates

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received regarding the six-bed rule for exemption from uniform business rates.

Mr. Sproat: My Department has received many representations expressing different points of view on the six-bedspace rule, which was introduced in April 1991 after very wide consultation with interested parties. Ministers at the Department of Environment, who are responsible for policy on non-domestic rates, are also aware of the tourism industry's opinions.

Sportsmatch Scheme

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the grants awarded by the Sportsmatch scheme in 1993 indicating the amounts, the recipients and the commercial sponsors and which grants have gone to private schools.

Mr. Brooke: I have arranged for a list of all the Sportsmatch scheme awards approved in 1993 to be made available in the Library. Only non-profit distributing bodies are eligible to receive awards, and priority is given to those schemes which increase participation and are considered to benefit young people, the disabled and ethnic minorities, or deprived urban or rural areas. As far as we are aware, no awards were made to private schools.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Private Bills

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will bring forward proposals to alter the restrictions on the drafting of private bills.

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to do so.

Privy Council

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the precise wording of the oath administered to persons appointed to the Privy Council.

Mr. Newton: By convention, the terms of the Privy Counsellor's oath are confidential to members of the Privy Council.

EDUCATION

Discipline

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to introduce new measures to improve discipline in schools.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has recently issued for consultation a number of draft circulars providing guidance on a range of issues relating to discipline in schools and pupils with problems. We look forward to positive and constructive responses which will strengthen and improve the guidance in those circulars.

Food Technology

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will review the status of food technology in the national curriculum at key stage 3 following the Dearing report.

Mr. Robin Squire: No decisions have yet been made about the new requirements for national curriculum technology to be introduced in 1995. The responsibility for continuing the review of the existing requirements, so as to take account of the Dearing report, rests currently with the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority. My right hon. Friend expects to receive the authority's recommendations for revision in April.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member on 21 January at column 849.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January at column 849.

School Transport

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will make a statement on the rules and regulations governing concessionary school transport for pupils attending secondary schools;

(2) what powers county councils have to discriminate against one secondary school with regard to concessionary school transport without adopting a similar policy for all other similar secondary schools in the county; what representations he has had from Essex on this matter; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many non-Church comprehensive schools in Essex benefit from the policy of concessionary school transport from Essex county council; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will make a statement on Essex county council's proposed policy towards discretionary school transport.

Mr. Forth: A local education authority must provide free transport if it considers it necessary to facilitate a pupil's school attendance. Authorities have considerable discretion to tailor this provision to meet pupils' individual needs. They also have power to help other pupils with their travelling expenses, and to carry them at a charge in any spare seats on school buses provided by the authority to carry pupils who do qualify for free transport. Data on local education authorities' school transport provision are not collected centrally.

LEAs must treat pupils at grant-maintained schools no less favourably than comparable pupils at schools maintained by an LEA. The Department has had three representations from Essex about the authority's proposal to phase out discretionary transport for pupils at the Ingatestone Anglo-European and Davenant Foundation grant-maintained schools, but has seen no evidence that would justify my right hon. Friend's intervention.

Chief Inspector of Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will place in the Library a copy of every letter to hon. Members from her Majesty's chief inspector of schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: I am consulting Professor Sutherland and will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Fitzherbert School, Brighton

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish the guidance given by his Department to the estate agent responsible for the sale of the former Fitzherbert school site, Brighton.

Mr. Robin Squire: As owner of the site the CTC trust instructed agents for sale.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if the former Fitzherbert school site Brighton was sold to the organisation submitting the highest offer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: After taking professional advice, the Department was satisfied that sale of the former Fitzherbert school site was achieved on the most favourable terms available.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on how many occasions (a) he, (b) his civil servants or (c) the city technology college trust met with Mr. John Spiers to discuss the future use of the former Fitzherbert school site, Brighton.

Mr. Robin Squire: I understand that the then Secretary of State met Mr. Spiers on 19 May 1989, together with Mr. Ivor Revere who was the principal potential sponsor, to discuss the proposal to establish a CTC in Brighton. I am not aware of any other meeting with Ministers, but officials and staff of the CTC trust met Mr. Spiers and others interested in the project on various occasions before the Government withdrew their support in April 1990.

City Technology College, Brighton

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list those individuals and industrial sponsors who had indicated an interest in supporting the proposed city technology college in Brighton.

Mr. Robin Squire: The principal potential sponsor was Mr. Ivor Revere chairman and managing director of South Weald Properties Ltd.—trading as Greenleaf Planters. Mr. Revere had made a firm written pledge of £1 million which he withdrew on 13 April 1990. In consequence, the Secretary of State announced to Parliament on 24 April 1990 that the Government were withdrawing their financial support. Other potential sponsors had expressed interest but had not submitted firm pledges to the Department.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 414, what are the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his Departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 of the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr Boswell: The information requested will not be available until after the end of the financial year requested.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, column 73, what is the total number of schools in each local education authority and the percentage thereof which have opted for grant-maintained status.

Mr. Robin Squire: The table shows total numbers of maintained schools and the numbers and percentages of schools operating with or approved for grant-maintained status in each local education authority area.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which her Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Jack: During the years 1992 and 1993, the following firms, including one merchant bank, offering accountancy services were awarded consultancy contracts by my core Department.

- Amtec Consulting
- BDO Binder-Hamlyn
- Coopers & Lybrand
- Ernst & Young
- KPMG Peat Marwick
- Leopold Joseph
- PA Consulting
- Price Waterhouse
- Stoy Hayward
- Touche Ross Management Consultants

Consultancies given to the above firms included various areas of work other than accountancy and the total cost was in the region of £950,000 individual contract figures cannot be given as this information is classified commercial in confidence. This answer excludes contracts made by agencies.

Kent Woods

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the number and names of Forestry Commission woods in Kent (a) sold in the last two years and (b) to be sold in the next 12 months, showing the hectarage of each and how much money was or will be received for each wood.

Mr. Jack: The Forestry Commission has sold one woodland in Kent in the last two years—Rogley hop garden—3 hectares. The new owner did not agree to the purchase price being made public.

The commission is currently selling or considering the sale of the following woodlands in Kent in the next 12 months:

Woodland	Area (hectares)
Post Wood	26
Stone Wood	11
Cole Wood	22
Penfold Wood	7
West Wood	176

The price received for these woodlands will depend on the state of the market at the time.

Food Labelling

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the regulations currently implemented by Her Majest's Government and the European Commission relating to food labelling; what implications these have for the production and export of traditional Scottish fare, including haggis; and if she will ensure that no regulations will prevent the use of traditional recipes.

Mr. Jack: Food labelling rules are set out principally in EC directive 79/112 and these are implemented in Great Britain by the Food Labelling Regulations 1984 and the Food Labelling (Scotland) Regulations 1984, both of which have been subject to some amendment and both of which are currently being reviewed and updated. I know of nothing in any of these regulations which has a particular effect on either Scottish fare or any other traditional receipe and I have no plans to make regulations that will. If any applications are received under the EC schemes for the registration of specific characteristics of food or of geographic names, which are separate from the labelling rules, which appear to affect adversly the interests of Scottish, or any other UK producers, then I would wish to give them every opportunity to comment on issues which concern them.

Pesticides

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate she has made of the effect the liberalisation of trade under the new GATT regime will have on the amount of fruit and vegetables entering the United Kingdom contaminated with pesticide residues.

Mr. Jack: We expect imports of fruit and vegetables to continue to comply with our pesticide residues requirements. The food industry has been reminded of the need to ensure that residues comply with our statutory requirements.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many consignments of fruit and vegetables were refused entry at United Kingdom ports in 1993 because they contain excess levels of pesticides and preservatives.

Mr. Jack: In 1993, our monitoring of imported fruit and vegetables, including enforcement monitoring of imported oranges, indicated that residue levels were sufficiently low and that the imports were acceptable. Consequently, none were refused entry.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps her Department is taking to ensure that imports of fruit do not contain levels of pesticides and preservatives exceeding the maximum residue level.

Mr. Jack: One of the purposes of the surveillance monitoring programme which is carried out by the Government's working party on pesticide residues is to check that imported food complies with statutory maximum residue levels contained in the Pesticides (Maximum Residue Levels in Food) Regulations 1988. The latest results, which are made available in full each year, were published on 18 January. Where surveillance shows that imported food does not comply with statutory limits, enforcement action may be taken at ports or within the UK.

Rift Valley Fever

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the number of incidents of Rift Valley fever in each year since 1985.

Mr. Jack: There have been no outbreaks of Rift Valley fever since 1985.

Coastal Erosion, Isle of Wight

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what advice she can give the Isle of Wight local authorities following the recent extensive coastal problems; and what moneys may be available to help with the problems;

(2) if she will ensure her advisers visit the Isle of Wight to assess the extent of coastal erosion and landslip and to advise the local authorities.

Mr. Jack: I understand that the earth slip on the southern coast of the Isle of Wight was caused by excess water in the coastal slope rather than erosion by the sea. The coastal defences around the Isle of Wight have not been affected but, if the council wishes to undertake any works to protect against erosion by the sea in the area, its proposals will be considered by MAFF for grant aid in the normal way. So far as the present landslip is concerned, I understand that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment would be willing to consider any application for assistance under the Bellwin scheme.

Engineers from South Wight borough council have been in contact with the Ministry's regional engineer but have not yet felt it necessary to invite him to visit the area.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Howard: Neither of the special advisers employed by the Home Office is seconded from other organisations.

Visas

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the European Commission proposal for a regulation determining the third countries whose nationals must be in possession of a visa when crossing the external borders of the member states;

(2) if he will list those countries which are indicated on the European Commission list as countries which will require a visa for entry to the European Union.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In accordance with the procedures for Parliamentary scrutiny of European Community documents, the Commission's proposal was deposited on 18 January. An explanatory memorandum is in preparation.

Addictive Diseases Trust

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contribution his Department makes towards the Addictive Diseases Trust.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Addictive Diseases Trust receives a grant of £18,000 towards the provision of drug counselling services at HM prison Downview for the period 1 September 1993 to 30 August 1994.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons which make available the services of the Addictive Diseases Trust to combat drug and alcohol abuse.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Lady Olga Maitland, dated 24 January 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prisons which make available the services of the Addictive Diseases Trust.

Currently, one prison, HMP Downview, makes the services of this organisation available to prisoners.

Police Co-operation

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he will take to improve police co-operation and the sharing of evidence with local housing authorities where their tenants are behaving in a criminal and anti-social manner.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This is entirely a matter for the chief officer of the police force concerned.

Joseph Kasser

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the co-operation between the Customs and Excise and No. 2—north-east—regional crime squad in relation to the case which resulted in the conviction on drugs charges of Joseph Kasser in January at Newcastle Crown court.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Two defendants in this case are still awaiting trial and it would therefore be inappropriate for me to comment while the case is sub judice.

Child Abuse

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported cases of child abuse there have been in each year since 1988 in (a) England and (b) Wales; how many prosecutions there have been in each of those years; and how many convictions have been obtained in each of those years.

Mr. Maclean: The available information is given in the tables. It is not possible from the information held centrally to identify all offences where the victim is aged under 16 years; children may also have been the victim of other offences—such as murder—which are not defined by reference to the victim's age.

Stolen Horses

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, by county, the number of reported incidents of horses being stolen in each of the last three years.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Loans

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, for each scheme operated by his Department under which loans are available, the objectives of the scheme, the number of unrecovered loans, the total value of unrecovered loans, the average number of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990, the average value of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990 and the annual cost of recovering loans.

Mr. Howard: Long-term loans have been made by my Department to the Fire Service College, a trading fund, for capital expenditure in 1992-93 and 1993-94. All proper repayments have been made when due.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has made an assessment of the value of and applicability of citizens charter type principles to electoral registration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Electoral registration officers have a statutory duty to compile a comprehensive electoral register. Electors' rights are enshrined in statute and remedies are available through the courts in cases where rights have been denied. My right hon. and learned Friend therefore has no plans to introduce a charter covering this area.

North Wales Police Helicopter

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often the North Wales police helicopter is used for transporting accident victims to hospitals or transferring patients from one hospital to another; how much has been reclaimed from the health authorities for this service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Between 1 October 1992 and 31 December 1993 a total of 65 casualties were conveyed to hospital by helicopter—3 per cent. of the helicopter's total usage. No payment has been requested from health authorities in respect of casualty evacuations in this financial year. Negotiations are taking place with the North Wales ambulance trust about charges in the next financial year when the helicopter is used at the trust's request.

The use of the helicopter in medical emergencies is confined to cases where the casualty's life is at risk, or where the use of a land vehicle would be impractical. The police helicopter may also be used to move patients between one hospital and another where such assistance is likely to save life. The sum of £4,900 has been received from hospitals for three such flights in the current financial year.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the monthly operating cost of the North Wales constabulary's helicopter; what is the helicopter's total mileage since being brought into service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The average monthly cost of the North Wales police helicopter in 1993-94 is expected to be about £59,000. This includes an element of cost involved in establishing the air support unit, and therefore should reduce next year.

Helicopter usage is measured in flying hours rather than by distance covered. From the start of the operation on 1 October 1992 up to 31 December 1993, the helicopter recorded 795 flying hours.

Correspondence

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Hammersmith may expect an answer to his letters of 11 October and 22 November 1993 concerning the effectiveness of the 27 points he announced to deal with crime.

Mr. Maclean: I wrote to the hon. Member on 20 January 1994.

Search Warrants

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department grants the power to execute a search warrant to anyone other than police officers where inquiries are being made into the immigration status of someone who is known or suspected to be in breach of immigration laws.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Paragraph 17(2) of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971 provides for a warrant granted by a justice of the peace to enter premises to search for a person liable to detention, to be executed only by a constable.

Section 16(2) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 provides that such a warrant may authorise persons to accompany any constable who is executing it.

Dorothy Nwokedi

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the aircraft commander on the plane in which Dorothy Nwokedi was deported had given explicit authorisation for the use of the restraints used upon her;

(2) if he will publish the record of the reasons for the use of restraints used on Dorothy Nwokedi and of the aircraft commander's authority.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Measures were taken to restrain Mrs. Nwokedi on board the aircraft in order to avoid endangering the safety of others on board. The captain's authorisation was not explicitly sought, but he was fully aware of the measures taken and has confirmed that he was satisfied that they were necessary for the safety of other passengers.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 375, what estimate he has made of the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 resulting from the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Howard: No precise estimate has been made, but the additional costs are expected to be approximately £1·4 million.

Local Government Grants

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total grant allocation made under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 for the years 1993-94 and 1994-95; and if he will list the individual allocations for each local authority for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Total provision for section 11 grant in 1993-94 is currently £130·8 million. The corresponding figure for 1994-95 amounts to £111·5 million. This includes funding transferred to the new single regeneration budget. I shall write to the hon. Member on the second part of his question.

Early Release Prisoners

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in each of the last six months have been released from prison on parole, licence or any other scheme for the early or temporary release of prisoners; how many committed offences or have been charged with committing offences while released under these schemes; and what were the offences concerned.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Win Griffiths, dated 24 January 1994:

EARLY OR TEMPORARY RELEASE OF PRISONERS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many prisoners in each of the last six months have been released from prison on parole, licence or any other scheme for the early or temporary release of prisoners; how many committed offences or have been charged with committing offences whilst released under these schemes; and what were the offences concerned.

I regret that there is currently no accurate information available for the numbers released from prison in recent months. however, all those discharged from determinate sentences are released early either under the 1991 CJA or, for those sentenced before 1 october 1992, previous legislation. The average number discharged is about 4,000 a month. At present we have no central information on the numbers released on temporary absence nor on those committing or charged with committing offences whilst released, either temporarily or otherwise. We are considering whether and if so how such information can be made available in the future.

Escaped Prisoners

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons from which there have been escapes in each of the last five years; how many prisoners were involved in each escape; how long it was before they were recaptured; and what further offences, if any, were committed during the escape period.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Win Griffiths, dated 24 January 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for details of the prisons from which there have been escapes in each of the last five years; the number of prisoners involved in each escape; the period before recapture; and any further offences committed during the escape period.

I attach a table which lists the prisons from which prisoners have escaped, the number of prisoners involved and the number of escapees still unlawfully at large, as recorded by the Incident Management Support Unit.

The further offences committed by escaped prisoners is not recorded centrally, and the time spent unlawfully at large could only be calculated at disproportionate cost.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have died in British prisons as a result of the use of unlawful drugs in each year since 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 21 January 1994]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of people who have died in British prisons as a result of the use of unlawful drugs in each year since 1988.

Information from the outcome of post mortem examinations does not always provide details of the drugs which may be implicated in deaths. In England and Wales the information available centrally, which may not be complete, on deaths in prison which were attributable to illicit drugs which are not pharmaceutical preparations is as follows:

1989	0
1990	0

Data are not yet available for 1993.

Directorate of Telecommunications

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has made to the request from the three civil service unions for a meeting to discuss the directorate of telecommunications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have agreed to the meeting.

Bail Hostels

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what would be the annual saving arising from the closure of bail hostels in the west midlands area.

Mr. Maclean: We expect the savings to be in the order of £200,000 in 1994-95 and £400,000 for 1995-96.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average cost of a place in a bail hostel in the west midlands, (b) the average length of stay and (c) the average cost of a prison remand place in the west midlands; and if he will give weekly figures from the latest available information.

Mr. Maclean: (a) The average weekly cost in 1993-94 is £243; (b) this information is not readily available in the form requested; (c) costs for remand prisoners are not kept separately. For 1992-93, the average weekly net operating cost per prisoner at Birmingham prison—the only prison in the west midlands—was £383. Remand prisoners represent just over 40 per cent. of these prisoners.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of persons who will be remanded into custody as a result of the closure of bail hostels in the west midlands.

Mr. Maclean: It is for the courts to decide who should be remanded in custody. There are approved hostel facilities available to them in the same or neighbouring probation areas.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternative arrangements are planned following the proposed closure of bail hostels in the west midlands.

Mr. Maclean: There are alternative hostel facilities in the west midlands and in neighbouring probation areas and it will be for the probation service there to bring them to the attention of the courts.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whom he plans to consult about the proposed closure of bail hostels in the west midlands.

Mr. Maclean: West midlands probation service was notified on 1 December of our closure proposals and given the opportunity to comment.

Dover Bail Hostel

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, for each of the last three years for which figures are available, how many residents of Dover bail hostel were (a) aged under 17 years, (b) aged 17 to 21 years and (c) aged 21 years and over.

Mr. Maclean: The figures for individual years are not readily available. However, the total number in each category over the last three years is (a) 0, (b) 134, (c) 146.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital and revenue expenditure will be available for hostel provision in the Kent area for 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Maclean: Revenue grant for 1994-95 and 1995-96 will be about £200,000 a year. Capital grant will depend on the scrutiny of spending proposals submitted by all probation areas.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, for the latest year available, how many people were remanded in Dover bail hostel; and how many were (a) black males and (b) black females.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not held centrally and is not readily available.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are likely to be made redundant in the event of the closure of the Dover bail hostel; and what would be the financial costs.

Mr. Maclean: It will be for the Kent probation committee as employer to decide how to handle the consequences of closure in terms of redeployment or redundancies; we have not yet received a full account of its conclusions.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people might be remanded into custody per annum as a result of the closure of Dover bail hostel in Kent.

Mr. Maclean: It is for the courts to decide who should be remanded in custody. There are approved hostel facilities available to them in the same or neighbouring probation areas.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what would be the annual saving as a result of the closure of the Dover bail hostel in Kent.

Mr. Maclean: We expect the saving to be in the order of £100,000 in 1994-95 and £200,000 in 1995-96.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were either rearrested and charged or breached for failure to comply with requirements at the Dover bail hostel for the last 10 quarters for which statistics are available.

Mr. Maclean: The quarterly figures are not readily available. However, over the last three years a total of 16 residents were rearrested and charged with other offences; and breach proceedings were taken against 94 residents for failure to comply with hostel requirements.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average cost of a weekly place in the Dover bail hostel, (b) the average length of stay and (c) what was the average cost of a person remand place in the Kent area.

Mr. Maclean: (a) The current weekly cost is £269. (b) This information is not readily available in the form requested. (c) Figures showing the average cost of a prison remand place alone are not available. The current average cost of a place at the three local prison establishments that cover a multi-functional role, of which remand is a part, is £398 per place per week.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the occupancy rate of the Dover bail hostel for each of the last 10 quarters.

Mr. Maclean: The occupancy figures for the period April 1991 to March 1992 are not available in a quarterly form. The figures from April 1992 to September 1993 are detailed:

	Per cent.
April 1992 to June 1992	61
July 1992 to September 1992	68
October 1992 to December 1992	55
January 1993 to March 1993	57
April 1993 to June 1993	52
July 1993 to September 1993	50

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will be consulted about the proposed closure of the Dover bail hostel in Kent.

Mr. Maclean: The Kent probation service was notified on 1 December of our closure proposals and given the opportunity to comment.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital expenditure was planned for the Dover bail hostel prior to the Home Office statement of 30 November.

Mr. Maclean: A proposal for capital expenditure on the Dover bail hostel was under consideration by my officials prior to the 30 November statement, but it was not formally approved.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the event of the closure of the Dover bail hostel, what advice would be given to the magistrates courts regarding any future bail hostel remands.

Mr. Maclean: It is for the Kent probation service to bring to the attention of magistrates courts the facilities offered by approved hostels in its own or in neighbouring areas.

Charity Commission Investigation

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 947-48, how many people were interviewed by the Charity Commission during the investigation; and if Dame Shirley Porter, Michael Ivens, or members of Marketforce Communications Ltd. were interviewed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: One person, Sir Nigel Mobbs, the chairman of the charity's trustees, was interviewed during the investigation.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 947-48, in what months the Charity Commission's investigations into the payments from the Foundation for Business Responsibilities of Marketforce Communications Ltd. were carried out.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The investigation was carried out between November 1991 and May 1992.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 947-48, who repaid the money to the Foundation for Business Responsibilities following the Charity Commission's investigation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Michael Ivens repaid the money to the foundation.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 947-48, what considerations underlay the Charity Commission's decision not to interview the donors to the Foundation for Business Responsibilties; and which of the foundation's trustees were interviewed during the Charity Commission's investigations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It was not necessary for the purposes of the investigation to interview the donors to the Foundation for Business Responsibilities.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 947-48, how many companies and individuals made donations to the Foundation for Business Responsibilities during 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Charities are not required to identify donors or donations in their accounts and these details are not separately identified in the published accounts of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 947-48, who has been the director of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities following Michael Ivens' resignation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There has been no director of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities since the resignation of Mr. Ivens. Any further appointment is a matter for the trustees.

Deportation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which destinations are considered to pose a greater risk to a police officer's safety than to that of the employees of private companies when escorting detainees; and what criteria are used in arriving at these decisions.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There is no comprehensive list of such destinations and the position may change from time to time. Assessments are made on the basis of all relevant information available to my Department and to the police.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will extend the planned use of standard request forms to private security firms as well as to police in requests for assistance in deportation cases.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Yes.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account the Home Office and police review of removal procedures in immigration cases took of the standard of training carried out by private contractors before concluding that the use of a private contractor is undesirable where there is a known propensity to violence on the part of the detainee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The conclusion was based on considerations related to the powers and resources of the police rather than the standard of training provided by private contractors.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the improvements in training of police officers involved in escorting deportees announced in the recent Home Office/police review will be extended to the employees of private security firms involved in this work.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The companies which provide escorts are selected carefully, and their staff are expected to be fully trained. In considering the adequacy of that training the immigration service will take full account of the Home Office/police review of removal procedures.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which other European countries use (a) gags, (b) handcuffs, (c) bodybelts, (d) arm restraints and (e) leg restraints during deportations; and what discussions he has had with Ministers of other EC countries about the use of such restraints.

Mr. Charles Wardle: It would not be possible to provide this information without detailed inquiries of other European countries. I have had no discussions with Ministers of other European Union countries about the use of restraints.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what proportion of escorted deportations carried out by private security firms restraining equipment is used;

(2) in how many cases where deportees were escorted any sort of restraint was used in the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion of the total number of escorted deportations this represents.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information in the form requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Available information on the use of restraints by the police relates to the Metropolitan police deportation group. I understand that during the period January 1992 to July 1993, 139 escorts abroad were undertaken by officers from the group, and that restraints were used in 37 of these cases.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to compensate deportees or their families who have been injured by the use of a gag during attempted deportation.

Mr. Charles Wardle: If it were established that the Home Department had been responsible for any injury, my right hon. and learned Friend would consider any claim for compensation.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what independent element there was in the joint immigration and nationality department/Metropolitan police review of deportations.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The review was conducted by senior immigration and nationality department officials and senior officers of the Metropolitan police. A representative of the Association of Chief Police Officers was also involved. There was no independent element, but the fact that the review was being conducted was made known publicly. It was open to anyone to comment on the issues involved and comments on the review's conclusions would still be welcome.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment the joint Home Office and police review made of same day removals in deportation cases; and if he will now make it his policy not to carry out such removals.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The review concluded that removal direct from the home to the airport can raise the overall level of anxiety in what is already a difficult process. Whilst the review did not rule out "same day" removals altogether, it concluded that there should be a strong presumption against them, and that they should occur only in highly exceptional circumstances and with the authority of a senior member of the immigration service.

As he made clear in answer to my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence) on 12 January, columns 212-13, my right hon. and learned Friend has accepted the recommendations in the review as a sensible basis for continued co-operation between the police and the immigration service in this sensitive area.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the standard request form for police assistance in deportations to be ready; and what elements it will contain.

Mr. Charles Wardle: As recommended in the joint review of removal procedures in immigration cases, it is intended to provide the police with all information relevant to them for planning purposes. The precise format has not yet been settled but is likely to include a brief case summary of the immigration history including the reason for removal; a reference to any known propensity to violence; any relevant medical history of which the immigration service is aware; and details of family members or others who may be expected to be on the premises. It is not yet possible to say precisely when the new arrangements will be introduced, but work is already in hand.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much notice immigration officers give to police divisions that they require police assistance in deporting someone.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Normally, a minimum of 24 hours' notice.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the detailed rules and supporting guidance for claimants of the new scheme proposed in the White Paper "Compensating Victims of Violent Crime".

Mr. Maclean: We hope to be able to publish the detailed rules and supporting guidance by early March.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many nominations he has received for the proposed criminal injuries compensation appeals panel; and which organisations have made these nominations.

Mr. Maclean: To date, 85 nominations have been received. Fifteen of these have been made by friends or associates of the nominee or by the nominees themselves. The remainder have come from the Trades Union Congress, the Cabinet Office—Office of Public Service and Science—and the Department of Health.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the 1993 annual report of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board will be published.

Mr. Maclean: I understand that publication of the board's 29th annual report has been delayed as a result of a query raised by the board's auditors in connection with final approval of the financial accounts for 1992-93. The report will be published as soon as the auditors provide the necessary certification.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Abortion

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he received the report on abortion law from the Standing Commission on Human Rights in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. Friend received the 18th annual report of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights on 24 May 1993. The report includes a paper on Northern Ireland abortion law, which was subsequently published by the commission for consultation which ended on 1 December. The commission is considering the replies.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions in each of the last five years an abortion ruled to be legal has not been performed because no doctor was available to carry out the operation; and if he will set out the circumstances of each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: I am aware of one such case in which an application by "K", a minor, was heard by Mr. Justice Sheil in the High Court in October 1993. If she so wishes, the hon. Member may apply for details of the case to the family division of the High Court of Justice in Northern Ireland.

Civil Servants

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants, by Department, are employed in each council area in Northern Ireland; and what is his estimate of total salaries paid in respect of those employees in each council area.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested in respect of civil servants employed by the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is as follows:

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of civil service jobs (a) created and (b) transferred to each location within Northern Ireland and to Northern Ireland from elsewhere in the United Kingdom; and if he will show for each such movement the location from which they were moved and the type of employment and grades of civil servants involved and the cost of the movement in payments to personnel and for buildings, equipment and furnishings.

Sir John Wheeler: The number of jobs created and detailed information on the movement of civil service jobs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the number of civil service jobs in the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments transferred within Northern Ireland since 1990 were as follows:

	Number	From	To
1990	—	—	—
1991	664	Stormont	Belfast city centre
	18	Belfast	Londonderry
	24	Hydebank	Belfast city centre

1993	62	Stormont	Londonderry
	98	Bangor	Londonderry
	364	Stormont	Belfast city centre
	11	Coleraine	Belfast
	13	Antrim	Belfast

Although no jobs in the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments were transferred to Northern Ireland from elsewhere in the United Kingdom, the following new jobs were attracted to Northern Ireland from Great Britain:

580 social security benefit processing jobs to deal with claims from areas of central London have been created in a Belfast benefit centre since June 1990;

211 jobs relating to accounting work on encashed books were created at a paid order unit in Lisahally, County Londonderry in 1991. This work was formerly carried out by the Post Office on the mainland; and 455 jobs have been created in Belfast since 1993 to assess, collect and enforce child maintenance on behalf of the Great Britain Child Support Agency.

Civil Service (Performance Pay)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what evidence he has as to the extent to which performance-related pay policy in the Northern Ireland civil service is achieving its objectives.

Sir John Wheeler: The present scheme has been in existence for less than two years and the extent to which performance related pay policy in the Northern Ireland civil service is achieving its objectives has not yet been subject to formal review.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will set out the breakdowns of numbers and percentages for the years 1991-92 and 1992-93 of the overall performance appraisal ratings for non-industrial staff in the Department of Finance and Personnel; and whether this breakdown is consistent with the original predictions.

Sir John Wheeler: When the present performance appraisal system was introduced, no predictions were made as to the anticipated performance levels of staff.

The annual statistics on performance appraisal ratings are as follows:

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Sir John Wheeler: None.

Cardiac Operations

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many private cardiac operations were carried out in the period from 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993 and 1 April 1993 to 31 May 1993 in each of the health and social services boards;

(2) how many NHS cardiac operations were carried out in the period from 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993 and 1 April 1993 to 31 May 1993 in each of the health and social services boards.

Mr. Ancram: The provisional number of finished consultant episodes in the cardiac surgery specialty for HPSS and private patients are as follows:

	Finished consultant episodes
	HPSS	Private
1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993	798	95
1 April 1993 to 31 May 1993	113	14

Cardiac surgery in Northern Ireland is only available at the Royal Victoria hospital.

Most cases in the cardiac surgery specialty will have had only one operation, but information on the total number of operations is not available.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 404, what are the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 of the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Sir John Wheeler: Approximately £2 million.

Strip Searches

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what purpose strip searches are carried out in prison institutions in Northern Ireland.

Sir John Wheeler: As elsewhere in the United Kingdom, strip searches of male prisoners in Northern Ireland are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the policy operated in Northern Ireland is broadly in line with that in the rest of the United Kingdom.

Owing to the small number of female prisoners, the statistics are readily available. During the period 1 January 1989 to 9 January 1994, 1,992 full searches were carried out on female prisoners. This figure is due to the diverse status of the prisoners held at Her Majesty's prison, Maghabery and their associated movements to and from the prison.

Full strip searches of female prisoners are generally restricted to prisoners re-entering the prison and are not routinely carried out as part of cell searches.

WALES

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Redwood: In the calendar years 1992 and 1993 the Welsh Office awarded 30 consultancy contracts to six firms of consultants which also have an accountancy practice within the same group. The total value of these contracts was £1·1 million. The firms involved were Coopers and Lybrand, CSL Group, KPMG Peat Marwick, Pannell Kerr Forster Associates, Price Waterhouse and Touche Ross. The Welsh Office did not award any consultancy contracts to merchant banks during this period.

Mr. Redwood: My Department does not operate any loan schemes available to the public or bodies corporate other than advances from the national loans fund to certain non-departmental public bodies. The annual accounts for those advances are audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General and laid before Parliament.

Ysbyty Gwynedd Bangor

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement regarding the incident on 27 December 1993 at Ysbyty Gwynedd Bangor in which there was a delay before an accident victim was transferred from a helipad to the casualty department at the hospital.

The figures show the number of individuals employed. They include staff seconded to other organisations and exclude casual staff.

The Welsh Office is an equal opportunities employer and seeks to employ and promote staff on ability. Women comprise approximately half the staff in the Department and are encouraged to develop their potential through the Department's positive action programme for women.

Llandudno General Hospital

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement regarding the proposed rheumatology unit to be based at Llandudno general hospital.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is a matter for Gwynedd health authority.

County Council Smallholdings

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement regarding the future of county council smallholdings in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Subject to the provisions of the Agriculture Act 1970, it is for county councils in Wales to manage and run their smallholdings. The Local Government (Wales) Bill will transfer these functions to the new unitary authorities.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 402, what estimate he has made of the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 resulting from the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There should be no additional net cost.

SCOTLAND

Mr. Lang: The table sets out details of the outstanding balances for loan schemes for the private sector operated by my Department. Only one such scheme, crofters building grants and loans, has incidences of repayment arrears; these details are included.

My Department also provides loans from the national loans fund to public corporations. The annual accounts for these are audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General and are laid before Parliament.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which agencies are employed by the North Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust, the South Ayrshire NHS trust, and the Community Health Care NHS trust to deal with their public relations; and if he will make a statement about the costs of this service to each of the trusts.

Mr. Stewart: The agencies employed are as follows:

North Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust	Rex Stewart Grayling
South Ayrshire NHS trust	Alan Clark Associates
Ayrshire and Arran community healthcare NHS trust	Alan Clark Associates.

The cost of the service, which is an essential part of providing an efficient service to patients and the community, represents only a minute amount—between 0·02 per cent. and 0·05 per cent.—of the revenue of the trusts concerned.

Telephone Information Line

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the Scottish Office's telephone information line; and what are the costs involved in running the service, the total numbers of staff employed, the numbers of inquiries dealt with and the number of inquiries passed on to other agencies.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office information line, 0345 741 741 was launched on 30 September 1993. Calls on the information line to the Scottish Office central inquiry unit in Edinburgh from public phones anywhere in Scotland are charged at local rate. In addition members of the public may make calls to the unit from over 20 local information points throughout Scotland at no cost.

Since the launch, the information line has received over 1,900 calls. It is estimated that more than 90 per cent. of them have been for the Scottish Office and its associated departments or agencies to deal with. The cost of operating the information line is estimated to be £28,500 per annum. This excludes start up and initial publicity costs of £175,000. The staff of the central inquiry unit was augmented by one to handle the initiative.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many official Christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by (a) Ministers, (b) civil servants and (c) staff of Government agencies working in or to his Department; and how much these cards cost (i) to buy, (ii) to post and (iii) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes.

Mr. Lang: In 1993 Ministers in my Department sent 770 official Christmas cards, officials sent 6,208 and agencies sent 1,715.

The cost of the cards was £2,875 including VAT; it is not possible to identify the postal costs and staff time devoted to the dispatch of the cards.

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Lang: During the financial year 1992-93, 14 consultancy contracts costing more than £20,000 per contract were awarded by the Scottish Office to four firms of consultants, which also have an accountancy practice within the same group. The total value of these contracts was £1,031,400. The firms were Coopers and Lybrand, KPMG, Price Waterhouse and Touche Ross. No consultancy business was awarded by the Scottish Office to merchant banks during this period.

NHS (Cars)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cars have been allocated to NHS managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

NHS Trust Hospitals

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Freight on Ferry Services

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of subsidy concerning freight on ferry services to island communities in the United Kingdom since 1992.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1992-93 deficit grant subsidy of £6·1 million was paid to Caledonian MacBrayne to meet the operating deficit incurred in providing ferry services to the inner and outer Hebrides and islands in the Firth of Clyde. Because the subsidy paid to Caledonian MacBrayne is paid to meet the overall deficit incurred in providing ferry services for commercial vehicles, loose freight, cars and passengers, it is not possible to disaggregate the amount of subsidy paid specifically in relation to the carriage of freight.

In 1992-93 tariff rebate subsidy of £2·8 million was paid to P and O Scottish ferries in respect of carriage of freight to Orkney and Shetland in 1992-93. In addition, tariff rebate subsidy of £2·2 million was made available in 1992-93 to nine bulk shipping operators providing freight services to the northern and western isles. Subsidy paid under the tariff rebate subsidy scheme is paid in respect of different categories of traffic carried by shipping operators.

Outturn information in respect of 1993-94 is not yet available.

Yorkhill Hospital, Glasgow

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which grades of employee at Yorkhill national health service trust hospital, Glasgow, are to lose entitlement to sick pay scheme benefits higher than those of the statutory scheme.

Mr. Stewart: Terms and conditions of service are a matter for the trust.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much in the next financial year will be the reduction in sick pay paid out to employees of Yorkhill national health service trust hospital, Glasgow, following adoption of the statutory minimum entitlements.

Mr. Stewart: Such information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will consult medical authorities on their assessment of risk to sick children's health if low-paid employees at Yorkhill national health service trust hospital, Glasgow change their attendance patterns as a result of the abolition of their sick pay scheme and the introduction of minimum statutory entitlements.

Mr. Stewart: The work pattern of staff is a matter for the trust concerned.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what indication Yorkhill national health service trust gave in its application for trust status, on its intentions as to (a) reducing its employees' sick pay to the statutory minimum and (b) putting their jobs out to tender if they rejected these terms.

Mr. Stewart: The application referred to differences in various primary conditions of service, including sick leave, and declared an intention to review these over time.

National Health Service Trusts (Pay)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the percentage by which national health service trust chief executives' pay rose between 1992 and 1993; and what is the current salary of each.

Mr. Stewart: In November 1992, chairmen of trusts were asked to ensure that average settlements for staff on trust terms and conditions did not exceed 1·5 per cent. In March 1993, trust chief executives were asked to ensure that their annual reports show total emoluments of senior staff with that of the chief executive separately identified.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the percentage by which national health service unit general managers' pay rose between 1992 and 1993; and the current salaries of each.

Mr. Stewart: The annual uplift for unit general managers pay has been from 1 September of each year. The uplift as from 1 September 1992 was 3·9 per cent. Information on the salaries of each unit general manager is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy that each national health service trust will publish annually the emoluments of the chairman and the chief executive.

Mr. Stewart: In March 1993, trust chief executives were asked to ensure that their annual reports show total emoluments of senior staff, including board members, in broad bandings with chairman and chief executive separately identified.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the highest possible remuneration for (a) a national health service unit general manager and (b) a trust chief executive including any bonuses.

Mr. Stewart: Under new arrangements introduced as from 1 September 1993, the maximum possible pay of a unit general manager could be in the range £61,721 to £77,150 and that of a trust chief executive the range £66,944 to £83,681. A non-consolidated bonus of up to an additional 20 per cent. can be paid by the employing body to a unit general manager or trust chief executive at the top of the range who demonstrates outstanding performance.

Lung Cancer

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women died of lung cancer in 1992 in each health board area.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is available in table C2.16 on pages 70-81 of the 1992 annual report of the registrar general for Scotland, a copy of which was sent to the hon. Member in July 1993. A copy was also placed in the Library.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much he spent in 1992 and 1993 on publicising the rise in mortality amongst women from lung cancer; and how much will be spent for this purpose in 1994.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 January 1994]: The mortality rates from lung cancer in women are published in the annual reports of the registrar general for Scotland. No sums are specifically allocated to publicising these data.

The trends in mortality have been taken into account in the Government's health strategy for Scotland. A national target to reduce cancers by 15 per cent. by 2000 was adopted in 1991 and smoking, as the major cause of lung cancer, was identified as a priority for health education. By March this year, the Health Education Board for Scotland, which was established in 1991, will have spent nearly £3·7 million on anti-smoking campaigns, much of it aimed at women. The board plans to spend £500,000 on further measures during the next financial year.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on Friday 21 January by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January at column 849.

Samaritan Hospital, Glasgow

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Samaritan hospital, Glasgow, is to close; and what arrangements are in hand for the transfer of patients and the staff employed in that hospital.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 January 1994]: Greater Glasgow health board has yet to conclude its review of acute services. The Royal Samaritan hospital features is part of that review. The Secretary of State looks forward to receiving the health board's recommendations in due course.

Casualty Departments

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those casualty departments where patients have had to wait overnight for beds during the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 January 1994]: This information is not held centrally.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

8. Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of revenue forgone as a result of the extension of the channel tunnel concession by 10 years.

Mr. MacGregor: It is not possible to say with any precision what the value to Eurotunnel or the cost to the Government of the extension of the concession will be.

Newly Qualified Drivers

9. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce stricter standards in driving tests and for newly qualified drivers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: This proposal was considered in our recent consultation document on new driver safety, on which my right hon. Friend will shortly be making an announcement.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to which his Department sent, and from which it has received responses, regarding the consultation paper on measures to reduce accidents involving newly qualified drivers, together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. Key: The Department issued over 5,200 copies of the consultation paper to road safey and motoring organisations, local authorities and all MPs, also to all individuals who asked for a copy. We received 203 responses from organisations and 195 from individuals. It is not our practice to identify those organisations or individuals who respond to consultation exercises.

Public Transport, London

10. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next expects to meet the chairman of London Transport to discuss improvements to public transport in London.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I meet the chairman of London Transport regularly to discuss progress in meeting the Government's objective of securing continuing improvements in London's public transport.

Car Ownership

12. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the best estimate of the increase in United Kingdom car ownership by the turn of the century.

Mr. Key: The Department of Transport's forecasts are for Great Britain. Growth in the number of cars between 1994 and the year 2000 is expected to be in the range of 11 per cent. to 16 per cent.

New Roads

13. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much public money he proposes to spend on new roads during the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: In 1994-95, I plan to spend around £1·3 billion on new construction of national roads in England. For each of the following two years, the figure is about £1·2 billion.

London Lorry Ban

14. Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the London night-time and weekend lorry ban.

Mr. Norris: The Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill was introduced in the House last Wednesday. This contains proposals for the Secretary of State to take powers to vary traffic orders imposing permit-based restrictions on heavy lorries in London where an undue burden is imposed on business. The London night-time and weekend ban is such a restriction and the Government will be consulting shortly on proposals to amend the ban. It is not our intention to abolish the ban, contrary to some newspaper reports. However, we do intend to dispense with the bureaucratic permit system.

Ebbsfleet International Station

15. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the positioning of an international station at Ebbsfleet, Kent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I have received representations from the promoter of the station at Ebbsfleet, from the "Kent Thames-side" Group, from Kent County Council and from a number of other organisations, individuals and hon. Members. We are considering those representations, together with Union Railways' October report, and will announce our decisions shortly.

Jubilee Line Extension

16. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that British firms gain contracts to build the Jubilee line.

Mr. Norris: The award of contracts for the Jubilee line extension is entirely a matter for London Underground Ltd. LUL has a duty to secure competitive tenders in a proper legal fashion, having regard to EC directives, and to secure best value for money.

M1, West Yorkshire

17. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to widen the M1 motorway in west Yorkshire.

Mr. Key: As part of the Department's proposals for the M1-A1 link road east of Leeds, it is planned to widen the M1 motorway over a one-mile length between Lofthouse interchange and Belle Isle. This local widening is needed to accommodate the major traffic flows between the M1, M62 and A1.

M11 Extension

18. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the social and environmental consequence of the M11 extension.

Mr. Norris: Representations received about construction of the A12 link road between Hackney Wick and the M11 have largely focused on the impact of the new road on the local community.

Rail Services, Barnsley

19. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about rail services from Barnsley to neighbouring areas.

Mr. Freeman: I have received various representations from time to time about rail services in the Barnsley area.

Road Pricing

20. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the effects of motorway tolls/road pricing, on the economies of the English regions and Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Motorway charging will provide another source of finance for expanding the inter-urban road network more quickly. This will prevent congestion that would otherwise occur and so benefit the economies of all parts of the United Kingdom.

Open Shipping Register

21. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about a British open shipping register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 11 January, Official Report, column 124. A proposal for a British open register was received from the Baltic exchange on 3 December 1993. The complex issues which it raises require careful study. That remains the position.

Crossrail

22. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of the crossrail project.

Mr. MacGregor: Having considered the report of the consultants appointed to review crossrail, the Government continue to support the project. It remains the Government's view that crossrail should be taken forward as a joint venture, with a substantial private sector financial contribution. Accordingly, the promoters will be seeking to progress the crossrail Bill when the Committee stage resumes on 25 January.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what conclusions he has drawn on the respective roles of public and private finance in crossrail following the report of the consultants commissioned by his Department to evaluate the project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 21 January 1994]: It remains the intention of Ministers that crossrail should be taken forward as a joint venture with the private sector.

Travelcards

23. Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now introduce legislation to guarantee the retention of the travelcard following privatisation of London Buses and British Rail.

Mr. Norris: No new legislation is needed to ensure the continued availability of travelcard on the London public transport network. The Railways Act 1993 gives the franchising director power to require franchisees to participate in multi-modal ticketing schemes. After privatisation of London Buses Ltd., London Transport will remain responsible for the overall structure of fares and ticketing on London's buses and can thus ensure that travelcard will continue to be available on its bus services.

"Paying for Better Motorways"

24. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish comparative figures for the level of motorway charges in other European countries compared with the levels mentioned in his Green Paper "Paying for Better Motorways".

Mr. Key: Average tolls for cars on motorways in France, Italy, Spain and Portugal are between about 5p and 10p per mile. In Greece, they are up to 4p per mile. The levels of electronic tolls for cars discussed in the Green Paper were between 0·5p and 1·5p per mile.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to which his Department sent, and from which it has received responses, regarding the Green Paper "Paying for Better Motorways", together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. Key [holding answer 18 January 1994]: My Department issued copies of the Green Paper to all the motoring organisations, organisations representing industry and local government, and to others who contacted the Department following reports in the media. We received a total of 204 responses from organisations. It is not our practice to identify those who respond to consultation exercises.

Chronic Oil Pollution

25. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve United Kingdom port reception facilities to combat chronic oil pollution.

Mr. Norris: Recent research commissioned by the Department indicates that the provision of reception facilities for oily wastes in United Kingdom ports is adequate. The provision of such facilities is kept under review.

Railways (Noise)

26. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce his final decision about the compensation and protection arrangements relating to noise on (a) existing railway lines in Kent and (b) proposed new railway lines in Kent.

Mr. Freeman: On (a), I agreed during the Adjournment debate initiated on 13 January by my right hon. Friend the Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley), Official Report, column 432, to reflect on the legal opinion which he had received, through the local authorities concerned, on the subject of compensation for those with properties alongside existing rail routes to the channel tunnel. I shall clarify the position to the House as soon as possible.

On (b), Union Railways has incorporated extensive noise mitigation measures in the design of the channel tunnel link and it will be for Parliament to decide, when considering a hybrid Bill to approve the project, on the adequacy of the measures. Meanwhile, the Department of Transport is currently consulting on draft regulations which will bring the arrangements for noise insulation for new railways in line with those for new highways, by making properties alongside eligible for insulation where noise exceeds certain levels. All comments received, including comments on the coverage of the regulations, will be considered carefully before regulations are laid before Parliament.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to whom his Department sent, and from whom it has received responses, regarding the consultation letter on noise insulation regulations for new railways and other guided systems, together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 18 January 1994]: The Department issued 210 copies of the consultation papers to local authorities, professional institutions, railway operators, local action groups and others. A list of the original addressees for the consultation letter of 11 October 1993 was placed in the Library of the House at the time, with a set of the consultation documents. Some 200 further copies have since been issued in response to inquiries. The consultation period has therefore been extended by two months and responses will now be accepted until 28 February. I shall subsequently inform the House of the Government's conclusions on the response to the consultation. However, it is not our practice to identify those organisations or individuals who respond to consultation exercises.

M4, West Drayton

27. Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about proposals to widen the M4 motorway at West Drayton.

Mr. Norris: My Department has received some 300 representations about the proposals to widen the M4 between junctions 3 and 4B. They are mainly opposed on grounds of increased noise, air pollution and environmental impact; some also suggest alternative proposals.

M6, Birmingham

28. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of a dedicated junction on the M6 motorway in Birmingham to service the inland container point and the Holford industrial estate taking into account the effect upon local roads of such a junction.

Mr. Key: Undertaking such an assessment would serve no useful purpose in view of the Department's firm policy not to permit dedicated accesses from motorways to serve private developments.

Trans-European Rail Network

29. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next intends to discuss with his counterparts within the European Union progress towards a trans-European railway network.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport meets the Transport Ministers of the European Union from time to time at meetings of the Transport Council. Meetings will be held on 18 April and 20 and 21 June this year, but it is not yet known whether the trans-European railway network will be on the agenda. We understand that the Greek presidency is keen to make progress with those networks, including rail, for which proposals have not yet been adopted.

Rail Assets, Isle of Wight

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to offer British Rail assets on the Isle of Wight for sale.

Mr. Freeman: We intend to franchise rail services on the Isle of Wight on a vertically integrated basis. The timetable for the sale of franchises is a matter for the Office of the Passenger Rail Franchiser, who will be formulating a franchising programme and submitting it to the Secretary of State.

Railways (Assaults)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of violent crime and sexual assault were recorded at British Rail stations in Yorkshire and Humberside in each year since 1988; what is the national figure; and what are the figures expressed as percentages of the numbers of passengers.

Mr. Freeman: The figures for violent crime and sexual assaults before 1992, and the overall numbers of passengers are not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Figures for violent crime and sexual assault for 1992 and 1993 are as follows:

1992—118 Yorkshire and Humberside, 2,521 nationally
1993—84 Yorkshire and Humberside, 2,720 nationally.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were the victims of assault on a Network SouthEast train for each year from 1975; and how many of them were women.

Mr. Freeman: Figures are not readily available before 1992 and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost. Figures for assaults on Network SouthEast trains during 1992 and 1993 are as follows:

	Number	Women
1992	843	164
1993	894	157
Total	1,737	321

Motorway Training

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to encourage the development of extra motorway training at an affordable price.

Mr. Key: One of the proposals in the Department's recent consultation paper "New Driver Safety" was to develop post-test driver training schemes, including motorway tuition, in collaboration with the insurance industry. Tuition fees would not be regulated, but the aim would be to secure insurance discounts to offset the cost of the training. My right hon. Friend will be making a statement shortly on the outcome of the consultation.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce compulsory motorway tuition for all drivers.

Mr. Key: We have no such plans. Motorways are our safest roads: only 3 per cent. of accidents occur on them, though they carry 15 per cent. of traffic. Learners who live several miles from a motorway would face great inconvenience and cost if such tuition were made compulsory.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received regarding compulsory motorway tuition for drivers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: About 12 per cent. of over 400 responses to the "New Driver Safety" consultation document included representations of various kinds on motorway tuition, either for learners or for newly qualified drivers. Other representations on this, as on many other road safety issues, have been made at various times by organisations or individuals, including the hon. Member.

Bus Routes, London

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many London Transport bus routes have been put out to tender; and what is the latest estimate of the consequential savings.

Mr. Norris: London Transport operates some 650 bus routes. Of these, 279 have been competitively tendered. LT estimates that tendering has produced average cost savings, net of administrative costs, of 15 to 20 per cent.

Aylesbury to Wing Bypass

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of public consultation on his Department's initial proposals for the west of Aylesbury to Wing bypass.

Mr. Key: In response to the views expressed on proposals for a southern bypass of Aylesbury, my Department is today withdrawing from consultation. I have decided to look again at this issue, not ruling out the possibility of a northern corridor along the A41 towards the M40. Now that Buckinghamshire county council's southern bypass of Wing will not proceed as planned, I will commission a new and strategic study of the route between the A5 near Leighton Buzzard in the east and the M40 in the Oxford area in the West. This will be an early priority for the new Highways Agency.

London Underground

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the annual cost of regular maintenance undertaken of each major technical aspect of London Underground; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The distribution of maintenance expenditure is an operational matter for London Underground Ltd.

Toxic Loads

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to make it illegal for toxic loads to be transported through toll tunnels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: None. A list of restrictions is published and applied by companies operating as British Toll Tunnels under relevant tunnel byelaws. These restrictions are based on the UN recommendations on the transport of dangerous goods. Taken together with appropriate tunnel management systems, they ensure that any risks in transporting dangerous goods are kept to a minimum and such tunnels have operated safely for many years.

Aberystwyth to Machynlleth Rail Line

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the return to full service of the Aberystwyth to Machynlleth rail line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that rail services have now been restored between Aberystwyth and Machynlleth; and that British Rail hopes to restore through services to Shrewsbury during March, following repairs to the damaged bridge south of Welshpool.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, columns 419-20, what are the additional costs, net of any reduction in employers' national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 of the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Norris: The separate effects of the change in statutory sick pay provision and the reduction in employers' national insurance contribution rates cannot be estimated accurately, except at disproportionate cost. Reimbursements of national insurance contributions under the statutory sick pay arrangements currently run at approximately £1 million per annum and the reduction in the percentage contribution rates is expected to offer savings of approximately £1 million, so the overall effect of the changes in 1994-95 will be approximately neutral.

Cycles (Statistics)

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to oblige rail service providers to collate statistics on the number of cycles carried; and if he will make it a condition of the public service obligation grant or franchise agreement to do so.

Mr. Freeman: I have no plans to oblige rail service providers to collate such statistics.

We have, however, invited the cyclist public affairs group to produce guidance for rail service operators explaining how they can make their services more attractive to the growing number of cyclists. I shall ensure that copies of this guidance are sent to all bidders for rail franchises.

Railway Lines (Fox Hounds)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many reported incidents of fox hounds on railway lines there have been in the last three years; and how many resulted in prosecutions.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 14 January 1994]: In the three years up to 31 December 1993, there were 24 reported incidents of fox hounds on railway lines and no prosecutions.

Taxi Services

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to which his Department sent and from which it has received responses, regarding the consultation paper on the future of taxi and private hire services in England and Wales, together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 18 January 1994]: My Department has issued about 4,500 copies of this consultation paper to organisations and individuals who have an interest in the subject. These include local authority associations and all individual county and district councils, local and national taxi and private hire vehicle organisations, the licensing officers organisation, the police, organisations concerned with people who have mobility problems and vulnerable members of society, consumer groups, transport interests, the press, car, taxi and taximeter manufacturers and those concerned with tourists. Copies were available in the Lobby of the House and in another place. The paper was also published in a trade newspaper.

It is not our practice to identify those organisations or individuals who respond to consultation exercises, and, in any event, the consultation period lasts until 1 March 1994.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to which his Department sent and from which it has received responses regarding the consultation paper on "Railway Privatisation: Passenger Rolling Stock", together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 18 January 1994]: My Department issued 349 copies of the consultation paper to potential lessors and franchisees, rolling stock manufacturers, financial institutions, local authority associations, and other interested parties, and we received 31 responses from a similar range of organisations.

It is not our practice to identify those organisations or individuals who respond to consultation exercises.

Road/Rail Transport

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to which his Department sent and from which it has received responses regarding the consultation paper on heavier lorries for combined road/rail transport, together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. Key [holding answer 18 January 1994]: My Department issued over 3,000 copies of the consultation paper to more than 400 organisations, companies and individuals. These included transport industry associations, the local authority associations and many individual local authorities, transport and distribution companies and agents, user of freight services, environmental groups, the police associations and various institutes and universities with interests in transport. We received 48 responses from associations, 136 from individual organisations and five from individuals. It is not our practice to identify those organisations or individuals who respond to consultation exercises.

Buses

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to whom his Department sent, and from whom his Department has received responses, regarding the consultation paper on the operation of local bus services outside London, together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 18 January 1994]: My Department initially issued 56 copies of the consultation paper to individual bus operators, local authorities and to their associations and to bus user groups. We issued copies subsequently to all, including individuals, who requested it. We received 135 responses from organisations and 27 responses from individuals. It is not our practice to identify those organisations or individuals who respond to consultation exercises.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Know-how Fund

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent on the know-how fund 1992-93; how much has been spent in the current financial year; what projects were undertaken; and which consultancy companies were in receipt of know-how fund moneys in 1992-93 and in the current financial year.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A total of £47,249,000 was disbursed through the know-how fund in the financial year 1992-93. Approximately £28,437,000 has been disbursed in the current financial year. A list of projects undertaken from the beginning of 1992-93 onwards, using know-how fund moneys, has been placed in the Library. This list also contains the names of the consultancy companies, other organisations and individuals contracted to carry out these projects.

Overseas Aid

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what considerations underlay the decision not to include details of United Kingdom overseas aid as a percentage of United Kingdom gross domestic product in "British Overseas Aid, Annual Review 1993" or in the statistical appendix forming part of the review.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British overseas aid annual review 1993 is intended to provide a broad overview of our aid activities in 1992-93. Comprehensive statistics including the United Kingdom's aid-GNP ratio are contained in British aid statistics 1988-89 to 1992-93, section D, which has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Eastern Europe (Aid)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring provision exists in regard to multilateral aid to former east European nations within the European Union framework; what are the comparable procedures for monitoring of bilateral aid given to developing nations in other parts of the world; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: European Commission procedures for monitoring EC aid financed activities in countries in central and eastern Europe under the Poland, Hungary Aid for Reconstruction of the Economy programme include regular reports from project managers and visits to projects by both EC staff and EC consultants. EC project staff and recipient Governments are both involved in monitoring physical and financial progress.

Arrangements for monitoring bilateral aid projects involve a combination of visits by ODA staff and embassy and high commission officials, together with reports from project personnel and recipient authorities. When the project implementation nears its conclusion, a completion report is prepared. The precise arrangements vary according to the needs of individual projects.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Attorney-General how many official Christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by (a) Ministers, (b) civil servants and (c) staff of Government agencies working in or to his Department; and how much these cards cost (i) to buy, (ii) to post and (iii) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes.

The Attorney-General: In 1993, (a) 150 Christmas cards were sent by Ministers, (b) 1,190 by civil servants in the Treasury Solicitor's Department, the Serious Fraud Office and the legal secretariat to the Law Officers and (c) 196 by staff of the Government Property Lawyers Agency. The approximate cost of these cards was (i) £1,100 to buy and (ii) approximately £255 to post. Figures are not available for the cost of staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes. Figures for the Crown Prosecution Service are not included and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Market Testing

37. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if it is Government policy to consider directly privatising departmental activities before giving consideration to market testing them.

Mr. Waldegrave: Where an activity does not need to be managed by Government, we will consider whether it needs to be carried out at all or whether it should be privatised.

Where we consider that ultimate responsibility for a function should remain within Government, its delivery may be contracted out or market tested in order to see whether value for money can be improved.

Science Budget

38. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the size of the science budget in each of the last three years.

Mr. Waldegrave: The science budget was £930 million in 1991-92 and £1,051 million in 1992-93 and the outturn for 1993-94 is estimated at £1,164 million.

Civil Service (Outside Recruitment)

40. Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what opportunities exist within the civil service for recruiting specialists from private industry and the professions.

Mr. David Davis: There are opportunities at all levels of the civil service for recruits from a wide range of specialisms and professional backgrounds, from actuaries to zoologists. Government Departments and agencies are particularly interested in recruits with relevant outside experience.

"Back to Basics"

41. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the public policy objectives of the Government's "back-to-basics" campaign are monitored already by citizens charter standards.

Mr. Waldegrave: The citizens charter is based on fundamental principles which should underlie all good organisations—explicit standards of service, consultation with customers and a proper response if standards are not met. The charter is seeking to ensure that the basic public services on which we all depend—our schools, hospitals, local authorities, railways, utilities—are run in accordance with these principles.

Scientific Inventions

42. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what new proposals he has to support scientific inventions.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government set out their policies for the support of science and technology in the White Paper "Realising our Potential"—Cm 2250—issued in May last year.

Charters

43. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what system is used by his Department to judge whether the standards set by individual charters can be tightened.

Mr. David Davis: Under the citizens charter, public services are required to publish their standards and their performance against these standards. As standards are met, so they are being raised.

My right hon. Friend regularly reviews progress in raising standards of service across the whole public sector.

Science Research

39. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proportion of Government spending on science is distributed to research undertaken outside of universities.

Mr. Waldegrave: In 1991-92, the latest year for which data on the destination of Government R and D spending is available, 73 per cent. of the total was spent in non-university sectors.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to ensure that an adequate number of science lecturers will be available to undertake research in universities.

Mr. David Davis: It is primarily for the universities, as autonomous institutions, to determine how best to meet their future staffing needs. The research councils have a responsibility to help ensure the supply of highly-qualified scientists and engineers who might undertake research in universities or elsewhere.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 369, what estimate he has made of the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 resulting from the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. David Davis: The additional cost to my departmental budget resulting from the change in statutory sick pay provision, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, is estimated to be £5,000 a year. The precise figure will, in any one year, depend on a number of factors including the level of sickness absence and the distribution of salaries across the national insurance bands.

Psychometric Testing

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement regarding the use of psychometric testing in the civil service and United Kingdom businesses in the assessment of individual employee performance ability and the removal from employment.

Mr. Waldegrave: Following the delegation of responsibility for personal review and promotion to Departments and agencies, information is not held centrally on the use of psychometric testing in the civil service. Neither is information held on the use of psychometric tests in United Kingdom businesses. However, the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency acts on behalf of some Departments and agencies, and uses psychometric tests when appropriate. This is always done under the direction of a chartered psychologist and in conformity with the Institute of Personnel Management and the British Psychological Society guidelines.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during the current year.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to him on 21 January at col. 849.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January at col. 849.

Inhumane Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects Her Majesty's Government to ratify the 1981 inhumane weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom hopes to ratify the convention later this year.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the effect on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the export of anti-personnel mines of ratification of the 1981 inhumane weapons convention by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Ratification of the convention will not have any direct effects on our policy regarding mine exports. The convention relates to the use of mines, booby traps and other devices as defined, not to their export.

The United Kingdom already adheres strictly to the principles of the convention. We also adopt a responsible approach to the export of defence equipment, and have one of the most rigorous systems for scrutinising licence applications. The United Kingdom has not produced or exported anti-personnel mines for some time.

United Nations First Committee

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list Her Majesty's Government's voting record for each measure, and amendments thereto, on the agenda of the first committee of the United Nations General Assembly in 1993.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British subjects have been appointed to the provisional technical secretariat of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, formed under the chemical weapons convention; and what posts they have filled.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Three British citizens have been appointed to professional posts in the provisional technical secretariat. They occupy the posts of executive secretary, head of the chemical weapons branch of the verification division and head of the general services branch of the administration division. A further three British citizens are employed in the general services branch.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's time scale for the ratification of the chemical weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We intend to ratify the chemical weapons convention as soon as the necessary implementing legislation is in place. The legislation will be introduced as soon as parliamentary time becomes available.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many papers were presented by the United Kingdom Government to the disarmament negotiations for the chemical weapons convention disclosing details of its past chemical weapons programme; and when these papers were presented.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom has presented two papers disclosing details of its past chemical weapons programme. On 24 April 1979 the United Kingdom presented a paper titled "Visit to Britain by Chemical Weapons Experts" to the committee on disarmament, now known as the conference on disarmament. The second paper, titled "Past Production of Chemical Warfare Agents in the United Kingdom" was presented to the conference on disarmament on 17 August 1988.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the status of the British subjects who have been appointed to the provisional technical secretariat of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, formed under the chemical weapons convention, will change if the United Kingdom has not ratified the convention by the time it enters into force.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Only citizens of states which have ratified the chemical weapons convention will be eligible to work at the technical secretariat of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons after the treaty enters into force. The technical secretariat will replace the provisional technical secretariat on entry into force of the convention.

Cyprus

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he will use to promote the implementation of the United Nations Secretary-General's confidence-building measures in Cyprus.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We continue to encourage all parties to make progress on the package of confidence building measures proposed by the United Nations Secretary-General. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs stressed the urgency of progress during his trip to Ankara on 19-20 January, and will do so when he meets the Cypriot Minister of Foreign Affairs, Alecos Michaelides, on 2 February.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the number of Turkish citizens who have moved into the north of Cyprus since 1974; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There is dispute and uncertainty about the number of Turkish settlers in northern Cyprus. A range of figures are quoted, usually by partisan groups. We have no means to compile our own statistics. Security Council resolution 789 of 25 November 1992 urged the parties to commit themselves to a number of confidence-building measures, including a Cyprus-wide census under the auspices of the United Nations.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice he intends to give the United Nations regarding the continued movement into the north of Cyprus of citizens of Turkey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The issue of residence rights is intrinsic to the UN-sponsored talks on Cyprus and would be an important element in any negotiated settlement.

GCHQ

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the research projects in universities which have been funded by the Government Communications Headquarters since 1989, including the duration, titles and value of each project; and what security classification applied to each such university project.

Mr. Hurd: The information requested by the hon. Member is as follows:

Year	University and title		Cost £	Duration
1989	Cambridge	Max Newman Fellowship	109,683	4 years
1990	Leicester	Testing and integration of direction finding sub-system	1,700	2 months
1991	Leicester	Analysis of high frequency radio propagation measurements	35,392	3½ years
	Leicester	Data collection and processing for analysis of high frequency radio propagation measurements	64,849	2 years
	York	Screened room measurements	101,823	2 years
	Oxford	Mathematical Research Fellowship	109,000	3 years
	Leicester	Development and construction of data collection and processing unit for high frequency radio propagation measurements	33,151	2 years
1992	York	Characterisation of facsimile	5,000	18 months
	York	Research support in field of communications simulation and modelling	14,547	1 year
1993	Leicester	Direction finding data analysis	67,075	1 year
	Cambridge	Max Newman Fellowship	99,000	3 years

In addition to the two university research projects listed for 1992 there was a project with Cheltenham and Gloucester college of higher education—cost £10,000, duration one year—on fax image orientation.

As I told the hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) on 21 July 1993 at column 236, the research commissioned is confined to unclassified subjects. We retain proprietary rights over the research, but the results may be published by the relevant academic institution, if it wishes.

Major General Mohnke

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 458, what requests were received from the German authorities for co-operation in their investigation into Major General Mohnke's involvement in the murder of more than 80 British service men; and what was the response.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In 1988 we offered the German authorities full co-operation in this matter, including access to the British records. The offer was accepted. The German authorities' subsequent requests to visit the United Kingdom to interview survivors and others with relevant information and to have statements taken from them were granted. Full facilities were given by the relevant British authorities while the German prosecutor was in this country.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 356, what estimate he has made of the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 resulting from the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Goodlad: In 1992-93 the Department of Social Security reimbursed the Foreign and Commonwealth office a sum of £167,586 in respect of statutory sick pay provision. The projected sum for 1994-95 is £148,089. The DSS have yet to advise what reduction is to be made to national insurance contributions. But it is clear that the overall cost to the FCO of the new arrangements will be relatively small and will be able to be absorbed within the Department's running costs.

Serbia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to raise with the Greek presidency of the European Union allegations of breaking of European Union-backed sanctions by Greek companies in providing oil and military equipment to Serbia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Since the imposition of sanctions on Serbia and Montenegro we have been in close contact with the Greek Government over alleged sanctions breaches by Greek companies. As a result of our representations the Greek authorities have initiated a number of prosecutions against sanctions violators.

We shall continue to make representations where we receive reports of alleged breaches. We have seen no evidence of Greek involvement in the supply of military equipment to Serbia.

EMPLOYMENT

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during the current year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January 1994 at col. 849.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January 1994 at col. 849.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list job losses in each year since 1973 in the Houghton and Washington constituency and give the level of youth unemployment in the same years.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available in the form requested. Comparable employment information for parliamentary constituencies is available only form the periodic censuses of employment, held between 1984 and 1991. This can be used to estimate the net change in the number of employees in employment.

Claimant unemployment statistics for local areas are available from July 1983. Statistics for particular age bands are available quarterly for the months of January, April, July and October.

Employment and unemployment statistics for parliamentary constituencies can be obtained from the NOMIS database available in the Library.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new jobs have been created in the Houghton and Washington constituency in each year since 1973.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available in the form requested. Comparable employment information for parliamentary constituencies is available only from the periodic censuses of employment, held between 1984 and 1991. This can be used to estimate the net change in the number of employees in employment, and is given in the following table:

Employees in employment in Houghton and Washington constituency, September of each year

Year	Number
1984	28,400
1987	27,400
1989	27,800
1991	29,100

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of full-time manual workers, full-time non-manual workers and all full-time workers earned, including overtime, less than £203·07 per week in (a) the west midlands region and (b) Great Britain for (i) males, (ii) females and (iii) all adults in 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is provided in the following table:

Per cent.

	West midlands region	Great Britain
Manual men	26·2	25·9

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is provided in the table:

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

European Social Fund

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the number of (a) long-term unemployed people and (b) young jobseekers who have benefited, in each year since its establishment, from the European social fund's employment and training grants, giving each figure for (i) the northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The figures show the numbers in Great Britain and Northern region of long-term unemployed and young people supported by the European social fund, for each calendar application year:

	1991	1992	1993
Great Britain
long-term unemployed	—	763,829	1,241,328
young people	333,773	589,946	810,410
Northern region
long-term unemployed	—	43,552	53,364
young people	40,690	47,579	66,921

1. Figures for 1990 are not available, and disaggregated figures for long-term unemployed are only available from 1992 onwards.
2. The European social fund in Northern Ireland is administered separately by the Department of Economic Development.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total budget awarded to the EC's European social fund in each year since its establishment; and what proportion of this was granted to (i) the northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The figures set out below show the total value of European social fund payments across the Community. The figures are drawn from the published EC budget for each year since 1990, when the current arrangements for devolved management of the fund by member states came fully into operation:

mecu	3,322	3,869	4,505	5,061

The following figures show the level of spend in Great Britain and northern region for each calendar application year:

Year	Great Britain	Northern region £ million
1990	269·2	—
1991	367·0	26·0
1992	374·0	26·5
1993	595·0	45·0

Notes:

1. Regional data is only readily available for 1991 onwards.
2. Final figures of spend for 1993 are not yet available, so figures for committed spend have been provided.
3. The European social fund in Northern Ireland is administered by the Department of Economic Development.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total value of the budgets provided by the European Community under the European social fund for (a) vocational training and guidance and (b) job creation in each year since its establishment; and what was the total allocation of each to (i) the Northern Region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Figures for the EC budget are not available separately for vocational training and job creation. However, the total value of the European social fund across the Community since 1990 is set out in the table. The figures are drawn from the published EC budget for each year since 1990, when the current arrangements for devolved management of the fund by member states came fully into operation.

1991	3,869
1992	4,505
1993	5,061

The following figures show the level of spend in Great Britain and northern region for vocational training and guidance, and job creation for each calendar application year, where data is readily available, since the time when management of the fund by member states came fully into operation:

2. Final figures of spend for 1993 are not yet available, so figures for committed spend have been provided.
3. The European social fund in Northern Ireland is administered separately by the Department of Economic Development.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he is planning to take to ensure that the modern apprenticeship scheme will promote equal opportunities, and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made it clear that he wants to see modern apprenticeships open equally to young women and young men. We shall be asking industry training organisations to take into account all aspects of equal opportunities in apprenticeship models they develop, and shall continue to place a contractual requirement on training and enterprise councils to ensure equality of opportunity in all their activities.

Sikh Workers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to grant a general exemption to the British Sikh community from the Personal Protective Equipment at Work Regulations 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We have given careful consideration to the representations that have been made for a complete exemption for Sikhs from health and safety requirements to wear head protection. Any exemption would be contrary to the EC directive on personal protective equipment, which the 1992 regulations implement. Attempts to secure a derogation from the directive failed in 1989 as the United Kingdom was unable to obtain the support of other member states. Now this directive is in force, the only way an exemption could be granted would be if the European Commission were to put forward an amending directive. This seems unlikely given the earlier lack of support from other member states.

Agism

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to bring forward proposals for legislation preventing companies from putting age limits on job vacancy advertisements; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 4 November 1993, Official Report, columns. 433-34.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 695, what are the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 of the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As indicated in my reply of 19 January 1994 to the hon. Member, Official Report, column 695, the Department anticipates no net additional costs.

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will make a statement on (a) the level of the ceiling for employer contributions and (b) the level of ceiling on allocations for individual employees within the new access to work scheme; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of employer contributions towards the purchase of specialist equipment and services for disabled employees upon (a) self-employed disabled people, (b) part-time disabled employees, (c) disabled employees working at home, (d) disabled employees on temporary contracts of one year or less and (e) disabled people contracted to work concurrently for two or more separate employers; and if he will make a statement;

(3) who will own equipment jointly purchased by employers and the Government for disabled employees under the access to work proposals; what advice will be issued to companies by his Department on (a) the declaration of equipment purchasing within the audited accounts of companies and (b) arrangements for insuring equipment; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will make it his policy to establish a mechanism enabling disabled employees to lodge appeals against capping limits set under the new access to work scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 January 1994]: In reaching final decisions about the details of the access to work scheme, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and my noble Friend Lord Henley are considering carefully all the representations made by the disability and employer groups that we have met. My right hon. Friend hopes to announce decisions soon.

DEFENCE

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many official Christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by (a) Ministers, (b) civil servants and (c) staff of Government agencies working in or to his Department; and how much these cards cost (i) to buy, (ii) to post and (iii) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes.

Mr. Hanley: The information as requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Loans

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, for each scheme operated by his Department under which loans are available, the objectives of the scheme, the number of unrecovered loans, the total value of unrecovered loans, the average number of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990, the average value of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990 and the annual cost of recovering loans.

Mr. Aitken: My Department operates a number of schemes whereby loans may be made available to its civilian staff. These are normally in the form of advances of salary, which are repayable. The schemes are:

Season Ticket Advance

To assist staff purchase a quarterly or longer season ticket for travel between home and office.

Advances for Staff Posted Overseas

An advance of up to three months' gross salary may be paid to assist staff with settling-in expenses on arrival overseas.

Holiday Advances

A salary advance of up to £300 may be made to staff once each year prior to taking annual leave to assist with holiday expenses.

House Purchase

Where all other means of funding have been exhausted up to six months gross pay may be advanced to assist staff purchase property following transfer.

Similarly in cases of "negative equity" and where an out-standing bridging loan exceeds the value of the sale property, advances of up to 12 months' gross salary may be made.

The information for 1990 to 1992 is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The number of advances in operation at December 1993 for the current financial year for each scheme and the balance still to be recovered was:

	Number of advances	Balance outstanding (£)
Season ticket advance	6,219	4,083,525
Advances for staff posted overseas	738	1,565,699
Holiday advances	12	3,600
House purchase	1,704	7,069,805

The annual cost of administering the schemes is £35,000 at present price levels.

Porton Down Officials (US Visits)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when officials from the Ministry of Defence or the chemical and biological establishment at Porton Down visited or were stationed at (a) Pine Bluff arsenal in Arkansas and (b) at the M687 binary metal parts facility at the Louisiana army ammunition plant in Shreveport, Louisiana, United States of America; what was the aim of these visits; and under which defence agreement they were organised.

Mr. Hanley: This matter is for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 24 January 1994:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking when officials from the Ministry of Defence or the chemical and biological establishment at Porton Down visited or were stationed at (a) Pine Bluff Arsenal in Arkansas and (b) at the M687 binary metal parts facility at the Louisiana Army Ammunition Plant in Shreveport, Louisiana, United States of America; what was the aim of these visits; and under which defence agreement they were organised (Question 2, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. No collated records are kept of the visitors from the Ministry of Defence or the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment to these US defence facilities. I have consulted my staff and we are not aware of any visits to or staff stationed at the M687 binary metal parts facility at the Louisiana Army Ammunition Plant in Shreveport, USA. We are aware that there have been occasional infrequent visits to the Pine Bluff Arsenal in Arkansas. We are not aware of any staff being stationed at Pine Bluff Arsenal. It is probable that these visits would have taken place under one of the defence agreements referred to by the right hon. Archie Hamilton, MP, in his reply of 21 May 1992, Official Report, columns 255-256.

Northern Ireland (Murders)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many members of the armed forces serving in Northern Ireland have been (a) charged with and (b) convicted of murder in the Province in each of the last 10 years;

(2) what was the interval between date of charge and date of trial in respect of each member of the armed forces serving in Northern Ireland charged with murder in the Province in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1974, 11 members of the armed forces have been charged with murder while on duty in Northern Ireland. Two service men have been found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment, while two service men are still awaiting trial.

The table shows those charged with murder in the last 10 years and the interval between the date of the charge and the date of the trial:

On duty murder cases involving armed forces

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, columns 445-46, what are the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 of the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Aitken: Any assessment of the net effect of the changes to statutory sick pay provision and the reduction in employer's national insurance contributions for the financial year 1994-95 could be provided only at disproporationate cost.

Chartered Vessels

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the name, type, country of registration and gross registered tonnage of each vessel chartered for use by the British Government in (a) the Falkland campaign and (b) Operation Granby.

Mr. Hanley: Information for the Falklands campaign is not held in the form requested and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The name, type, country and registration and gross tonnage of the vessels chartered by the British Government during Operation Granby is as follows:

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost in today's prices, of chartering (a) British and (b) foreign merchant vessels for (i) the Falklands campaign and (ii) Operation Granby.

Mr. Hanley: The cost at today's prices of chartering British and foreign merchant ships during Operation Granby was £15,303,925 and £122,516,169 respectively. The information for the Falklands campaign is not held and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

"Options for Change"

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel, as defined in table 2.4 of "UK Defence Statistics 1993", will be retained by each of the services following the completion of the "Options for Change" force restructuring programme.

Mr. Hanley: On current plans, in 1995 the forecast requirement for service manpower will be around 52,500 in the Royal Navy, up to 122,000 in the Army—including Gurkhas and up to an additional 3,000 announced by [illegible] right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 1 December 1993—and around 70,000 in the Royal Air Force.

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vessels, including those in refit and on standby, will be operated by the Royal Navy following the completion of the "Options for Change" force restructuring programme in the classes (a) offshore patrol, (b) patrol craft and (c) Royal Fleet auxiliaries, as defined in annex B of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1993.

Mr. Hanley: On current plans, the Royal Navy will, by the mid-1990s, operate eight offshore patrol vessels, 22 patrol craft—including the three Hong Kong patrol craft —and 21 ships of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary. The total given for patrol craft includes the five River class minesweepers which have been re-roled as patrol craft since the publication of the 1993 Statement on the Defence Estimates.

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many squadrons will be operated by the Royal Air Force following the completion of the "Options for Change" force restructuring programme in each of the (a) strike/attack, (b) offensive support, (c) air defence, (d) maritime patrol, (e) reconnaissance, (f) airborne early warning, (g) transport, (h) tankers, (i) search and rescue, (j) surface to air missiles and (k) ground defence roles, as defined in table 3.1 of "UK Defence Statistics 1993".

Mr. Hanley: On current plans the RAF will, by the mid-1990s, operate six strike/attack, five offensive support, six air defence, three maritime patrol, five reconnaise, one airborne early warning, 14 transport, two tanker, two search and rescue, five surface to air missile and four ground defence squadrons.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January at col. 849.

HEALTH

Entertainment Budget

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will itemise under heads of expenditure how the budget for entertainment within her Department was expended in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health does not have a budget for entertainment. The nearest equivalent is hospitality, on which £246,374 was spent in 1992-93. A breakdown of this figure is shown in the table. Hospitality expenditure includes costs of refreshments for meetings of working groups and advisory committees and the high level of expenditure in some areas reflects activity on areas of work such as the Tomlinson review, specialist medical training, mental health, diet and nutrition, and the Warner report on the selection and recruitment of staff working in children's homes.

1. These titles represent the organisational groups which deal with the subjects concerned.

2. Hospitality expenditure tends to consist of a large number of small payments—for example, refreshments for meetings of advisory committees, working groups etcetera.

[illegible]anagers are required to balance increased requirements in one area—such as hospitality—against reduced requirements in other areas.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the hospitality budget for her Department, the management executive and each regional health authority for each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the hospitality budget for regional health authorities is not available centrally. Figures for the Department of Health are shown in the table.

2. Figures have not been adjusted for inflation.
3. Departmental figures include the NHS management executive figures.
4. Management executive figures are not directly comparable from year to year because of organisational changes.

GPs (Misconduct)

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the procedures for determining allegations of professional misconduct against general practitioners were last subject to review.

Dr. Mawhinney: Professor Alan Wilson of Leeds university is chairing a full review of national health service complaints systems. We will consider the need to review the current NHS disciplinary arrangements for general practitioners in the light of Professor Wilson's recommendations on complaints.

The General Medical Council's preliminary proceedings committee and professional conduct committees operate disciplinary procedures under powers contained in the Medical Act 1983. Subject to that Act, the procedural rules under which these committees operate are the responsibility of the GMC, an independent statutory body, and are subject to periodic review. From time to time proposals for more substantial changes to the disciplinary machinery of the council are put forward, such as the recent GMC proposal for new performance procedures to extend its disciplinary remit beyond cases of serious professional misconduct to lesser offences of persistently poor performance. Changes in the underlying structure of the GMC's disciplinary powers would require an amendment to the Medical Act.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons she considers it to be appropriate and in the public interest for a general practitioner who has been struck off the register by the General Medical Council to be able to continue to practice pending an appeal.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is for the General Medical Council's professional conduct committee to decide whether to order the immediate suspension of a doctor's registration where it has found the doctor guilty of serious professional misconduct and directed that his or her name should be erased from the register. Under the Medical Act 1983, this committee can order the immediate suspension of a doctor's registration only where it is satisfied that to do so is necessary to protect the public or is in the best interests of the doctor concerned. Unless such an order is made, the doctor can continue to practice until the erasure takes effect 28 days after the doctor is served with a notice of erasure, or a longer period if an appeal is lodged. Only where the committee orders an immediate suspension do family health services authorities have the power to remove the doctor's name from their list immediately.

The professional conduct committee decides whether to order an immediate suspension on the basis of the evidence put before it in each individual case. The General Medical Council is an independent statutory body charged under the Medical Act 1983 with responsibility for the registration of doctors and the regulation of the medical profession. It would not be appropriate for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to intervene in the way it carries out its responsibilities under the Act. Any change in the General Medical Council's powers described above would require primary legislation and would be a matter for Parliament to decide.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will review the procedures for suspension of general practitioners from the provision of national health service services in the light of the recent case raised with her by the hon. Member for Woolwich; on what date she became aware of the medical service committee hearing of the Greenwich and Bexley family health services authority held in July 1989; on what date she communicated the findings of that hearing to the General Medical Council; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what assessment she has made of the propriety of general practitioners continuing to practise in the NHS following findings of misconduct by a local medical service committee and by the professional conduct committee of the General Medical Council and the decision by the judical committee of the Privy Council on the merits of an appeal against such findings; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 18 January 1994]: The General Medical Council's professional conduct committee has the power under the Medical Act 1983, where it finds a doctor to be guilty of serious professional misconduct and directs that he or she should be struck off or suspended from the medical register, to order an immediate suspension of that doctor's registration. The exercise of this power is a matter for the professional conduct committee which may only use it where it is satisfied that it is necessary to do so for the protection of members of the public or would be in the best interests of the doctor concerned.

We are giving urgent consideration to the need for legislation to provide, in extreme cases, for a power of immediate suspension of general practitioners from provision of national health service services pending the outcome of investigations into allegations of serious misconduct.

In the case to which the hon. Member refers, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State became aware of a decision of Greenwich and Bexley family health services authority on 4 July 1989 when a copy of the decision was sent to the Department in accordance with regulation 10 of the National Health Service (Service Committees and Tribunal) Regulations 1974. The practitioner appealed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. My right hon. Friend's decision on the appeal, together with the family health services authority decision and its service committee's recommendations, were passed on to the General Medical Council on 10 May 1991.

Redundancy

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the redundancy entitlement of an officer of the national health service made redundant after 40 years service whilst on sick leave and having accumulated 6 per cent. performance-related pay.

Dr. Mawhinney: Redundancy payments for national health service staff employed on national terms and conditions of service are governed by section 45 of the General Whitley Council handbook, a copy of which is available in the Library. The amount to be paid will be calculated according to age, length of service and whether there is entitlement to early payment of superannuation benefits. The calculation may take account of performance-related pay when it is consolidated in annual salary; it is not affected by sick leave.

Dr. Kabir

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the case of Dr. Kabir was referred to the Privy Council; when a final decision was made to strike him off the register of general practitioners; what investigation she is making into the length of time it has taken for this case to be resolved; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The professional conduct registrar committee of the General Medical Council directed the register to erase Dr. Kabir's name from the medical register on 19 March 1993. Dr. Kabir lodged a petition of appeal with the Privy Council, within the statutory 28 days, on 16 April 1993. After two adjournments, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council dismissed his appeal on 12 January 1994. This decision remains subject to formal approval of Her Majesty in Council. We have asked the family health services authority and officials to report to us on the handling of this case.

Surveillance Cameras

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance has been issued by her Department to health authorities and national health service trusts regarding the use of hidden surveillance cameras to detect staff misdemeanours; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what data has been collected by her Department regarding the number of national health service trusts and directly managed units which currently use hidden surveillance cameras on their premises.

Mr. Sackville: None.

The membership of the committees on toxicity, mutagenicity and carcinogenicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment are published annually in their joint report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who are the members currently appointed to the Health Advisory Service.

Mr. Bowis: The responsibility for running the Health Advisory Service falls to Dr. Richard Williams, who is accountable to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The Health Advisory Service has no membership as such, but relies on secondments from the national health service and elsewhere to carry forward its work programme. Details are contained in the annual report of the director of the HAS for 1992-93 "A Unique Window on Change", copies of which are available in the Library.

Young People (Rent)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that local authority social services departments pay the rent of young persons being helped by the local authority under the terms of section 17 or section 20 of the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Bowis: Young persons may be entitled to housing benefit if they have a legal liability to pay rent. Section 17 of the Children Act is about the provision of services for children in need, their families and others by local authorities, and does not have a bearing on the liability of a young person to pay rent. Section 20 of the Children Act sets out the duties and powers of local authorities to provide accommodation for those children or young persons in need who require it. The Departments of Health and of Social Security are jointly considering going out to consultation on guidance to clarify the responsibilities of local authority social services departments and the benefit position when a young person is helped by an authority under the Children Act.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those general practitioners who will become fundholders in each region on 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally. Regional health authorities manage the general practitioner fundholding scheme and are responsible for admitting practices to the scheme.

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the procedure for the continuing treatment of patients when a GP fundholder has overspent his budget and therefore run out of funds.

Dr. Mawhinney: Patients of general practitioner fundholders will not suffer because a fundholder overspends his budget. Any overspending will be met from regional health authority contingencies, but where overspending is the result of mismanagement the GP fundholder may have fundholding status withdrawn.

Community Care (Transitional Grants)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations she has had, and what representations she has received, regarding the implications and operation of the special transitional grant to local authorities in respect of responsibilities arising under the community care policy; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: We have had discussions with, or received representations from, various people, including the local authority associations and representatives of private and voluntary sector community care service providers.

Standard Spending Assessment, Dorset

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be (a) the social service standard spending assessment for Dorset and (b) its mental health specific grant; and what it was in 1993-94.

Mr. Bowis: The personal social services standard spending assessments for Dorset for 1993-94 and 1994-95 are £59·481 million and, provisionally, £68·429 million respectively. The mental illness specific grant is £427,000 for 1993-94; the grant for 1994-95 has not yet been decided.

Dentistry

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental domiciliary visits involving a dental chair anaesthetist have been made in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Health Authorities

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the proceeds of health authority land are held at central, regional or local health authority level; and what changes are proposed when the regional authorities are reorganised;

(2) what are the rules governing the use of proceeds from the sale of health authority land;

(3) what restrictions are placed on health authorities with regard to the use of capital receipts in their area;

(4) what changes are proposed within the national health service reorganisation to the guidelines for the control of capital receipts;

(5) when health authority land or assets are sold, if the capital receipts are held centrally, regionally or at a local health authority level.

Mr. Sackville: Regional health authorities retain capital receipts as additions to their cash limits. Deployment of this resource to support RHA and trust capital programmes is agreed between RHAs and management executive outposts. In the case of assets which provided services for mentally ill people and people with learning disabilities, regions are expected to make sure that priority in the use of such proceeds is given to the development of services for these groups.

No decision has yet been taken on the handling of capital receipts following the proposed abolition of RHAs.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what capital receipts were realised from the sale of health authority land and buildings in the Trent region in 1992-93;

(2) what capital receipts have been raised in the Trent region over the last five years from the sale of land, buildings and assets.

Mr. Sackville: The available information on capital receipts that have been raised/realised is:

Year	£ million
1988-89	13·9
1989-90	18·7
1990-91	25·9
1991-92	4·8
1992-93	2·9

No breakdown of these figures into land, buildings and other assets is available centrally.

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will happen to any surplus moneys not spent by district health authorities in the course of the current financial year; and what effect the fact of the DHA being in surplus will have on the calculation of funding allocation for future years.

Mr. Sackville: Surpluses at regional health authorities are carried forward. They are not taken into account when subsequent allocations are calculated.

Allocations to district health authorities are made by RHAs and there are some variations in the approaches adopted. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the RHAs for further information.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who are those people currently appointed to serve on district health authorities.

Dr. Mawhinney: The names of district health authority chairmen are listed in the table. Regional health authorities are responsible for the appointment of non-executive members. The appointment of executive members is a matter for individual district health authorities.

Confidentiality

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements she has made to replace circular LAC(88)17 on social services confidentiality, which expired on 31 December.

Mr. Bowis: Circular LAC(88)17 was continued in force by virtue of local authority social services letter—LASSL—(92)9 issued to authorities in November 1992. I am arranging for copies of both circulars to be placed in the Library.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated cost of extending remission of national health service charges to disability working allowance claimants.

Dr. Mawhinney: The estimated cost of providing automatic remission of national health service charges for disability working allowance recipients with capital of £8,000 or less from 1 April 1995 is about £1 million in the first year.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people United Kingdom have been registered as suffering from ME.

Mr. Sackville: As there is no agreed case definition, accurate figures cannot be collected.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated by Her Majesty's Government for research into the causes and treatment of ME.

Mr. Sackville: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The MRC has been funding a study at the Institute of Psychiatry for four years where researchers are attempting to find ways to help myalgic encephalomyelitis sufferers to cope with their disease and regain their health. The estimated cost of this project is £91,000. The Department and the MRC are always willing to receive and consider soundly based research proposals in competition with other applications.

Clinicians

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance or advice has been issued on the activity rates to be undertaken by clinicians working within the NHS; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance from the Department is issued to ensure that the national health service provides high quality, effective and efficient health care. Locally agreed contracts between purchasers and providers specify the level, quality and cost of services. Guidance stresses that clinicians should be involved in this process.

Working Parties

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many working parties she has set up since becoming Secretary of State; if she will list them; and if she will provide a breakdown of their cost.

Dr. Mawhinney: Collective discussion involving officials and outside experts, either in a formal or in an ad hoc meeting or series of meetings is an integral part of the way the Department conducts its business.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what visits she has made over the last 12 months; and what has been the cost of each visit.

Mr. Sackville: Information to this level of detail could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Community Health Sheffield NHS Trust

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which land and buildings, currently in health authority ownership, will pass to the ownership of the new trust, on the formation of Community Health Sheffield NHS trust.

Mr. Sackville: A final decision on the land and buildings that will transfer to the Community Health Sheffield trust has not yet been made.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer on 17 January, Official Report, column 393, what estimates he has made of the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to her departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 resulting from the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Sackville: Current estimates suggest that the changes in statutory sick pay provision, offset by reductions in employer's national insurance contributions, will result in a net additional cost within the Department of some £50,000 in 1994-95. This additional cost will be absorbed within the Department's running costs of £253 million.

Organ Donations

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to bring forward legislation to increase the number of organ transplant donors by requiring individuals and their families to opt out of organ donation rather than opt in; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: None. Increasing the organ donation rate is a Government priority. We do not believe that opt-out legislation would achieve this. We believe that the decision to donate should continue to be a positive choice made by individuals rather than a presumed statutory right.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to increase the number of organ transplant donors; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Government actively and continuously pursue the promotion of organ donation; more resources are being devoted to publicity than ever before. Examples of current initiatives are:

The scheme for reimbursing costs to donor hospitals which has proved effective.

A programme of information and training for doctors and nurses developed by the European donor hospital education programme which is being piloted in two regions with the co-operation of the professions concerned.

Multi-organ retrieval teams which were introduced in October 1993 to speed up and increase the recovery of organs.

The survey into reasons why some relatives refuse permission to use organs; the results are expected this summer.

Patient S

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in which hospitals Patient S, who recently died in Cossham hospital, Bristol, previously received care; and why he was transferred from those hospitals.

Mr. Sackville: The Department does not hold confidential personal information of this nature.

Nuffield Trust Hospital

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions she or her Ministers or officials have discussed with the Brighton health care trust the role to be played in health care provision in the Brighton area by the new Nuffield trust hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: We are aware of no such discussions.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for her Department during 1994.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what working definition of "back to basics" is used by her Department; and what her Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Sackville: [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Members to the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January at col. 849.

Written Answers to Questions

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Hearsay Rule

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has in relation to the Law Commission's Report, "The Hearsay Rule in Civil Proceedings"—Cm 2321, Law Com. No. 216—which was published in September 1993.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government welcome the report and will introduce legislation implementing its recommendations when a suitable opportunity arises.

Judges' Accommodation

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the cost of accommodation for judges in 1992-93 and 1982-83; what were the major categories of cost; and what was spent in each category.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Figures for the cost of accommodation of judges when sitting in the courts are not separately maintained. The cost of accommodation in lodgings for judges on circuit was £5·02 million in 1992-93. These costs are in two categories, of fixed costs—including rents, hiring charges, maintenance and permanent staff—and variable costs, including fuel and utilities, and casual and itinerant staff. Fixed costs in 1992-93 were £4·14 million and variable costs were £0·88 million. The Property Services Agency was primarily responsible for the lodgings in 1982-83 and the figures for that year cannot be ascertained without disproportionate cost.

Medical Treatment (Consent)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what work has been undertaken by the Law Commission, in consultation with the British Medical Association or other bodies, on the production of draft Bills dealing with the subject of the withdrawal of consent to medical treatment or related matters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Law Commission is reviewing the law and procedures relating to decision making on behalf of mentally incapacitated adults, which involves consideration of issues relating to consent to medical treatment by or on behalf of such persons.

Consultants

Ms Abbott: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. John M. Taylor: An answer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Prisons Ombudsman

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to create a post of prisons ombudsman; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Proposals to revise the procedures under which prisoners in Scotland are able to make requests and complaints and to air grievances in relation to the Scottish Prison Service were contained in the report of a Scottish Prison Service working group entitled "Right and Just", which was published for comment in September 1992. The consultation exercise indicated a general consensus in favour of introducing an independent element to the system, and we have taken the view that this can best be achieved by the appointment of an external complaints adjudicator—an independent person on a fixed term contract, with advisory functions. This will fulfil the commitment in the justice charter for Scotland to introduce an independent element in the new procedures. Officials in the Scottish Office have been asked to start the process of advertising for such a person with a view to an appointment later this year.

In advance of that, however, proposals for revised internal grievance procedures have been fully worked up for implementation in establishments next month. The main features are that requests or complaints will be resolved as close as possible to the source of the matter at issue; those who take decisions will be accountable for them; prisoners will receive reasoned responses within a set time scale; and accurate and sufficiently detailed records will be maintained. Gallery officers and hall managers will have a key role to play in the day-to-day handling of requests and complaints, but issues which they cannot resolve will be referred to an internal complaints committee. Prisoners will be given the opportunity to appeal against the committee's decisions to the governor-in-charge. If they remain dissatisfied, they will have the right of appeal to the external complaints adjudicator. Under transitional arrangements there will be a right of appeal to Scottish Prison Service headquarters.

The external complaints adjudicator will take a case on board only when all previous stages in the procedure have been exhausted. He or she will review both the merits of decisions and the way in which requests and complaints have been handled in the internal system. Where the complaints adjudicator disagrees with a decision, he or she will have the power to recommend the questioning of any finding of guilt or remission of any punishment. The complaints adjudicator will make a report to the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service on each case with a reasoned recommendation.

I believe that this new appointment, taken with the overhauled internal procedures, will represent a significant advance in the way in which prisoners' requests and complaints are handled.

Sheriff Courts (Training)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the organisation of training for the judiciary in the sheriff courts.

Mr. Lang: Responsibility for the content of judicial training rests with the judiciary and responsibility for its funding rests with me. I very much welcome the growth in recent years in the amount of training undertaken by the judiciary. To assist in its further development I have decided, following consultation with the Lord President of the Court of Session, to set up a group to co-ordinate the provision of training for the judiciary in the sheriff courts. The right hon. Lord Cameron of Lochbroom has kindly agreed to chair the group, the membership of which will be as follows:

Sheriff Iain Macmillan CBE, President, Temporary Sheriffs Association
Mr. Gordon Murray CB, Director, Scottish Courts Administration
Sheriff Principal Gordon Nicholson QC, Convener, Sheriffs Principal
Sheriff Gordon Shiach, Acting President, Sheriffs Association

Mountain Deaths

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set up an inquiry to ascertain the causes of deaths arising from incidents on Scottish mountains and to initiate action to avoid a repetition of such fatalities.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 14 January 1994]: I am sure that the hon. Member is aware of the great concern I have repeatedly expressed about the loss of life in the Scottish mountains. He will no doubt have seen my Christmas message on mountain safety which was extensively relayed in the Scottish press. The Scottish mountain rescue committee publishes annual statistics which give a breakdown of accidents by type of incident and injury and provide details of resources expended in rescue. Relevant bodies incuding the Scottish mountain safety group and the Scottish Sports Council are actively considering the question of further research into safety in the Scottish mountains and I expect to receive their recommendations in due course. Until that time I have no plans to set up an inquiry.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Public Order Act 1986

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how many times the Attorney General has refused his consent to a prosecution under part III of the Public Order Act 1986.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Solicitor General to the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore) on 17 December 1993, at columns 1050-51.

Public Interest

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases the Crown Prosecution Service has dropped in the public interest in each year since its establishment.

The Attorney-General: The information sought by the hon. Member is recorded only on individual case files and is not collected or collated centrally. The information requested could therefore be collected only at disproportionate cost. Many of the files on case completed since 1986 have been destroyed in accordance with the Public Records Acts.

A survey has been carried out of all prosecutions dropped during November 1993 and the results will be published very shortly.

ENVIRONMENT

Homelessness

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households were accepted as homeless and in priority need in the Greater Manchester area in each year since 1987.

Sir George Young: Information on households accepted by local authorities in the Greater Manchester area as homeless and in priority need, and covering the whole of the period, is readily available only for financial years. The information is as follows:

	Number
1987-88	8,960
1988-89	11,030
1989-90	10,630
1990-91	13,030
1991-92	13,280
1992-93	11,840

Source: Housing Investment Programme (HIP1) returns.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are homeless in the parliamentary constituencies of Sunderland, North, Sunderland, South and Washington and Houghton.

Sir George Young: The available data relate to local authority areas. The numbers of households accepted as homeless by Sunderland metropolitan district council are given in the supplementary table to the quarterly information bulletin "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985: England"; copies of both are in the Library. The latest available statistics are for the third quarter of 1993.

Petrol Fumes

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has held about the environmental and health risk of vapour fumes from unleaded petrol.

Mr. Atkins: Government Ministers and officials have held discussions with interested parties at national and international level.

Environmental Standards

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made as to the effect of the GATT on environmental standards.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply by the then Minister for the Environment and Countryside to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 29 November, Official Report, column 381.

Petrol Pumps

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to regulate to ensure that petrol pump nozzles are fitted with vapour controls to limit the dangers of carcinogenic fumes.

Mr. Atkins: None at present. However, a proposal from the European Commission to introduce a system of petrol vapour recovery during vehicle refuelling is expected in the near future. The proposal is likely to aim at controlling emissions of volatile organic compounds as precursors of ground level ozone.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the findings of his Department's research on rent arrears as an update to "Preventing Rent Arrears", published in December 1983.

Sir George Young: I expect to publish the research findings in the summer.

Assured Shorthold Tenancies

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average duration of assured shorthold tenancies granted under the provisions of the Housing Act 1988.

Sir George Young: This information is not available at present. However, the survey of English housing will provide further information. The results of the first year of the survey are expected to be published in the autumn.

Waste Management Licensing

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the new waste management licensing provisions of part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 will be implemented before 1 May 1994; and when the necessary regulations will be laid.

Mr. Atkins: As the then Minister for the Environment and Countryside announced on 24 November 1993 at column 384 it is the Government's intention to bring the waste management licensing provisions of part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 into force on 1 May 1994. The necessary regulations will be laid before Parliament before that date.

Disabled Access

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy that no buildings or parts thereof will be secured for or on behalf of his Department unless there is adequate access for disabled people.

Mr. Atkins: It is already Government policy to take into account the needs of disabled people both in operating existing buildings and in acquiring new buildings.

Cetaceans

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department has received on draft guidelines prepared by the sea mammal research unit on precautions to minimise acoustic disturbance to small cetaceans.

Mr. Atkins: My Department has received no written representations on the draft guidelines, and three telephoned inquiries from two non-governmental organisations.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the expected total costs to public funds of the 16 enterprise zones that he announced on 18 January.

Mr. Baldry: The principal public sector costs of enterprise zones are rate relief and capital allowances. Neither can be accurately calculated in advance as they depend on the rate of development of the zones.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will detail the ownership of the sites of the 16 enterprise zones which he announced on 18 January; what measures he will use to evaluate the effectiveness of those enterprise zones; and how he will monitor their performance.

Mr. Baldry: Designation of the 16 sites proposed for enterprise zone status is subject to the agreement of the European Commission and to statutory consultation procedures. Precise site boundaries have yet to be determined. It would therefore be premature and potentially misleading to give details of land ownership at this stage. This information will be available as part of the statutory consultation process.

A programme of monitoring and evaluation for any new zones will be established on designation.

Portable Discounts

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many recipients of portable discounts paid for leaving their rented council property have subsequently received a further discount on purchasing a second council-owned property.

Sir George Young: No statistics on the matter are held by my Department.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many portable discounts were paid to tenants of (a) Westminster council and (b) Wandsworth council in each year of the operation of the scheme to date which did not result in the vacant property being relet to a homeless family or an applicant on the council's housing list.

Sir George Young: The table shows the number of cash incentive grants paid directly by Westminster council and Wandsworth council which did not result in the property vacated being relet to a homeless household or an applicant on the housing waiting-transfer list.

My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State approved these schemes on the basis that vacated properties could be sold to tenant purchasers, whose vacated properties would in turn be relet to a homeless household or waiting list applicant.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has received to the consultation paper on local government reorganisation, "Proposed Arrangements for 1994-95 Reorganisation Costs", issued to all local authorities on 2 December 1993; and what arrangements he has decided to adopt in relation to reorganisation costs to be incurred by authorities in 1994-95.

Mr. Curry: There have been some 40 responses to the consultation paper. We have carefully considered the responses, and have decided to confirm the proposals for 1994-95 with modifications. We shall issue to authorities supplementary credit approvals to enable them to borrow to meet specified reorganisation costs incurred in 1994-95, up to a limit. We shall determine the limit on the basis, inter alia, of information provided by the authorities concerned and the Government's public expenditure plans.

We have issued to authorities in the Isle of Wight and Cleveland notices requiring them to supply information about their reorganisation costs to be incurred in 1994-95. We intend, in the course of 1994-95, to issue further notices to any other authorities in respect on which reorganisation orders under section 17 of the Local Government Act 1992 are made that year. We do not expect reorganisation costs in 1994-95 to be significant for such authorities.

Pollution

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ensure the monitoring of pollution levels in Britain's larger towns; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 24 January 1994]: In the second anniversary report of the 1990 environment White Paper, "This Common Inheritance", the Government made a commitment to extend their urban air quality monitoring network to cover all major cities by 1997. In addition, the Government are currently considering responses to their recent consultation paper "The Future of Air Quality Monitoring Networks in the United Kingdom", which included proposals for a framework which draws local and national air quality monitoring together into a coherent quality assured network.

Waste Exports

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what quantities of waste have been exported annually from the United Kingdom since 1988 to non-OECD countries for (a) disposal and (b) recovery or recycling;

(2) if the Government intend to support a total ban on the export of all toxic waste to non-OECD countries at the forthcoming Basel convention meeting in March;

(3) if he will place in the Library the information supplied by the United Kingdom to the European Commission as its contribution to the review of waste exports for recovery, as requested at the Environment Council meeting in March 1993;

(4) which local and national authorities (a) were responsible for determining whether the United Kingdom waste exported to the Brazilian company Produquimica in August 1993 was a controlled waste and (b) are now responsible for the management of the waste subsequently returned to the United Kingdom recently;

(5) what measures he has taken or intends to take to ensure that wastes exported to non-OECD countries for the purposes of recycling and recovery are handled in an environmentally sound manner.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 24 January 1994]: My Department has no record under the Transfrontier Shipment of Hazardous Waste Regulations 1988 of any exports since 1988 of hazardous waste to non-OECD countries for disposal. A total of 16,300 tonnes of hazardous red and amber list waste were exported to non-OECD countries for recovery or recycling in 1991. Information for 1992 is as follows. Information for earlier years has not been analysed and would be available only at disproportionate cost.

I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Brecon and Radnor (Mr. Evans) on 12 January at columns 200-201.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 18 January, at column 567. I understand that no documentation was submitted to the competent authorities under the Transfrontier Shipment of Hazardous Waste Regulations 1988 prior to the export of this material by London Metals Ltd. to the Produquimica Co. in Brazil. Humberside county council is aware that the material is being transported to a storage facility in its area.

The following information was supplied to the European Commission:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for her Department during 1994.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 21 January 1994 Official Report, column 849, by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what working definition of "back to basics" is used by her Department; and what her Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January 1994 Official Report, column 849.

Animal Welfare

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment she has made as to the effect of GATT on standards of animal welfare at home and abroad.

Mr. Soames: No such assessment has been made. However, the GATT Uruguay round agreement on agriculture does not change the basic GATT requirement that animal welfare measures should not place more stringent measures on third country imports than on domestic production.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which special advisers in her Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Jack: None.

Intervention Stocks

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the value of the intervention stocks for free distribution that were (a) allocated and (b) distributed, for each European Union member in 1993 in (i) pound sterling and (ii) ecus.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The maximum levels of expenditure allocated by the Commission for 1993 under the EC surplus food scheme were as follows:

Member state	£ sterling[1,2] (millions)	ecus[2] (millions)
Belgium	1·931	2·422
Denmark	1·595	2·000
France	22·771	28·560

Total	118·000	148·000

[1] ecu/£ conversion rate=0·797291 as at 1 October 1992.

[2] These total figures include transport and administration costs.

Final figures for actual expenditure for 1993 are not yet available.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Coe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 24 January; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This Council meeting, at which I represented the United Kingdom, formally adopted the legal texts implementing the package of decisions reached at its December meeting and as described in my reply of 17 December to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) Official Report, columns 1071-72. As stated in that reply, I voted against the decision on oilseeds.

The Council also adopted unanimously a regulation permitting member states to impose a levy on milk production in order to fund promotional measures; considered the situation of beekeepers in the Community, on which the Commission will present a more detailed study in due course; and discussed, without reaching any specific conclusions, a report from the Commission on the sheepmeat market.

I took the opportunity to press the Commission to reach a speedy decision on the legality or otherwise of French national assistance to pig producers, an issue which I had first raised in the Council last October.

Hedgerows

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many agreements have been made, how much has been spent and how many kilometres of hedgerow were restored under the hedgerow incentive scheme by her Ministry in (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94 in each region in England; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 11 January 1994]: The table sets out by MAFF region the number of claims and the amount of money paid at November 1993 to farmers under the farm and conservation grant scheme—F and CGS—in support of the Countryside Commission's hedgerow incentive scheme—HIS. No such payments were made in the financial year 1992-93. Because these payments accompanied payments by the Countryside Commission it is not possible to identify separately the proportion of the hedgerow restored under the HIS which attracted grant under the F and CGS.

Government support for hedgerow restoration through the HIS is minor compared to the considerable support which is available also under the F and CGS. Under this scheme, since 1989, we have paid 3,500 farmers £5·24 million towards the restoration of 3,300 km of hedgerow.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will publish the farm income figures for (a) English, (b) Welsh, (c) Scottish and (d) Northern Irish hill livestock farm enterprises in each of the past 10 years for which figures are available, at constant prices, shown as a percentage of full-time manual earnings for the United Kingdom for the same period.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 18 January 1993]: None of the measures of farm income are comparable with those of manual worker's earnings. The tables show estimates of the level of cash income for each accounting year since 1986-87 and the average earnings of full-time adult workers as at April each year in terms of current prices and 1992-93 prices. Income data are not available for the new classification of farm types before 1986-87.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Iran

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance Her Majesty's Government have given to Iran to help refugees from Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since 1991 we have contributed £2,216,000 to helping Iraqi refugees in Iran. These sums include £200,000 to CARE; £320,000 to the Iraqi humanitarian relief committee; £52,000 to the South Manchester accident and rescue team; £20,000 to the Association of Pioneer Relief Officers; £1 million to the International Commission of the Red Cross and £624,000 to Iraqi civilian aid. This latter British based non-governmental organisation has used the funds for work in refugee camps in Iran and also for work with displaced marsh Arabs camped on the Iran-Iraq border. The United Kingdom has not given any funds directly to the Government of Iran to help Iraqi refugees.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance Her Majesty's Government have given to Iran to help refugees from Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have given £3 million in 1993-94 to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, for work with Afghan refugees. This includes the repatriation programmes from both Pakistan and Iran.

We are ready to consider funding proposals for humanitarian activities by non-governmental organisations; and are currently considering proposals for a river crossing on the Helmand river which would provide an additional border crossing for returning Afghan refugees.

Crown Agents for Overseas Governments and Administrations

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who are the members currently appointed to the board of the Crown Agents for Oversea Governments and Administrations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The board of Crown Agents is presently constituted as follows:

Mr. D. H. Probert (Chairman)
Mr. J. D. Andrewes
Mr. P. F. Berry (Managing Director)
Mr. F. Cassell CB
Baroness Miller of Hendon MBE
Miss K. Mortimer
Mr. A. K. Stewart-Roberts
Mr. F. I. Sumner

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Brooke: Mr. Bryan Jefferson acts as architectural adviser to the Secretaries of the State for National Heritage and for the Environment. His appointment to the Department of National Heritage is on a one day a week basis.

Film Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement setting out his policy and his objectives in relation to the British film industry.

Mr. Brooke: It is the Government's policy to create an economic framework which will allow the United Kingdom film industry to thrive. The Department's medium-term objectives in relation to film are to help reverse the decline in British film production since 1985; to promote the United Kingdom as a location for the filming of feature films, television programmes and commercials; to expand opportunities for access to high quality films from Britain and elsewhere; and to foster international co-operation in production, distribution and exhibition of films. Measures to achieve these objectives are under consideration, and I will make an announcement as soon as practicable.

Regional Sports Councils

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish a table showing the grant in aid for the last 10 financial years, this year and projections for the next two years, for each of the regional sports councils.

Mr. Brooke: The Sports Council's regional offices provide the secretariat for the regional councils for sport and recreation, but neither the Department nor the Sports Council makes grants to these bodies.

The Sports Council's support for regional sporting activity and development is delivered directly through its own regional offices.

Millennium Commission

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his timetable for the setting up of the Millennium Commission; whether he will chair the commission; when he expects to hold the first meeting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I expect the Millennium Commission to be appointed by Her Majesty the Queen in February, and the Government Minister to chair the Millennium Commission will be announced at the same time. The first meeting of the commission will be held shortly thereafter.

Royal Opera House

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the Royal Opera house development plan.

Mr. Brooke: I understand that the board of the Royal Opera house is currently considering the outcome of a review it has commissioned of financial and other aspects of the present development scheme, which received Government consent in 1991. I will be advised of the board's conclusions and will then consider, in the usual way, the extent to which any new consents are required.

Cyprus

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) Greek Cypriots and (b) Turkish Cypriots are employed by the United Kingdom high commission in Cyprus.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The United Kingdom high commission in Cyprus employs 28 Greek Cypriots and six Turkish Cypriots. It also has seven Armenian Cypriot employees.

Lot Airlines

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his latest assessment of the impact on United Kingdom-Polish relations of the suspension of the permit of Lot Airlines to land at Heathrow.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We remain concerned at the suspension of air services between Britain and Poland. This is an air services dispute and has no impact on our current friendly relations with Poland. We want to see the situation resolved as soon as possible.

There has been a number of contacts recently with the Polish Government and I hope there will be an early meeting of officials to discuss a framework for the resumption of services. We are making every effort to secure a settlement which will be in the interests of both the airlines involved and the travelling public, and be consistent with the principles which govern aviation in the European Union.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the Governor of Hong Kong to discuss the future of Hong Kong.

Mr. Goodlad: The Governor of Hong Kong visited London from 19 to 24 January. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had a useful discussion with Mr. Patten on a wide range of Hong Kong issues, including the 1994-95 election arrangements.

The first stage of the draft legislation on election arrangements is now progressing through the Legislative Council in Hong Kong. We expect it to complete its passage next month.

It would clearly not be feasible to withdraw this draft legislation. But this should not preclude continued discussion with China on the remaining electoral issues; nor should it prevent our co-operating with China in the many other matters of importance to Hong Kong.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Goodlad: None.

Child Abduction

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries (a) are and (b) are not currently signatories to the international convention on child abduction.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are two international conventions on child abduction. The following countries have signed the European convention on recognition and enforcement of decisions concerning custody of children and on restoration of custody of children.

UNESCO

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress Her Majesty's Government have made in considering renewal of the United Kingdom's membership of UNESCO.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are continuing to keep this matter under close review.

Visas

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will hold discussions with the Governments of those commonwealth countries whose nationals are currently able to visit the United Kingdom without a visa about the European Commission's proposals to make a list of countries whose nationals must be in possession of a visa when crossing the external frontiers of member states.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The European Commission's proposals will be a matter for discussion with European Union partners and the Commission. I do not propose, at this stage, to initiate discussions with those commonwealth countries whose citizens would be affected by the Commission's proposals as currently drafted.

Social Development Summit

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will be representing the United Kingdom Government at the preparatory committee meeting in New York on 31 January to 11 February for the world summit on social development; which non-governmental organisations have been invited to be members of the United Kingdom delegation; what plans Her Majesty's Government have to set up a national committee on the summit; and which organisations have been invited to participate.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's permanent representative to the United Nations will represent the United Kingdom at the forthcoming preparatory committee for the world summit for social development. He will be supported by his local staff and experts from Whitehall. We have not invited any non-governmental organisations to be part of the United Kingdom delegation. The secretariat for the summit has made arrangements for any NGO's who wish to attend. There are no plans at present to establish a national committee on the summit. We will review this question following the preparatory committee meeting in February.

Iran

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many hon. Members have written to him concerning the human rights situation in Iran since April 1992; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how Her Majesty's Government have voted in the United Nations General Assembly on the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to Iran concerning the abuse of human rights in Iran; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have received 423 letters from hon. Members on the human rights situation in Iran since April 1992.

We remain seriously concerned about the human rights situation in Iran and repeatedly make this clear to the Iranian authorities, both with our European partners and bilaterally. In December 1993 we co-sponsored and voted in favour of a resolution at the United Nations General Assembly that reflected the critical report of the United Nations special representative on human rights in Iran.

Most recently we gave our full support to representations made by the European Union on behalf of the Rev. Mehdi Dibaj and two members of the Baha'i faith, all of whom were reportedly sentenced to death in Iran for their religious beliefs. We have also raised Dibaj's case with the Iranian embassy in London.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's current policy with respect to Iran.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We restored relations with Iran on 27 September 1990 on the basis of mutual respect and non-interference in each other's affairs.

We and our European Community partners made clear at the European Council at Edinburgh in December 1992 that improvements in Iran's behaviour in a number of areas, particularly human rights, the fatwa on Mr. Rushdie and terrorism, would be important in determining the extent to which closer relations and confidence in Iran could be developed.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the circumstances of the recent shooting incident near the United Kingdom embassy in Teheran; what co-operation has been received from the Iranian authorities to investigate it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A number of shots were fired at the offices of the British embassy in Tehran late on 9 January 1994, after office hours. No one was injured. The Iranian authorities are investigating the incident and we are satisfied with their co-operation.

Flight ULE 966

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice was given by British officials at the United Kingdom post in Jamaica to Jamaican citizens booked to travel on flight ULE 966 chartered from Air UK Leisure to the United Kingdom when they sought advice on the suitability of their travel documents.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As prior entry clearance for visitors from Jamaica is not mandatory, they are not obliged to contact the British high commission in Kingston. When Jamaican citizens seek advice on documents required for entry into the United Kingdom, the high commission does not necessarily know details of the flights on which they intend to travel. This was so in the case of the visitors booked to travel on flight ULE 966, and it is not therefore known how many may have sought advice.

All visitors seeking advice from the British high commission are given the information which I described on 11 January at column 43 in reply to an earlier question from the hon. Member.

Lockerbie (Trial)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will discuss with the United Nations the possibility of holding the trial of two Libyan nationals suspected of the Lockerbie Pan Am 103 crime in The Hague.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is clear from resolution 883 of 11 November 1993 that the United Nations Security Council envisages trial only before the appropriate United Kingdom or United States court.

Malaysia

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what agreements Her Majesty's Government made with the Government of Malaysia with respect to arms contracts and an overseas aid package; when those agreements were made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: During discussions in 1988 about the proposed memorandum of understanding on defence sales, the Malaysians expressed their wish to make a reference to aid. A protocol was signed during the visit to Kuala Lumpur in March 1988 by the then Defence Secretary, my noble Friend Lord Younger of Prestwick. This set out the Malaysian Government's intention to buy defence equipment from the United Kingdom, with the details to be elaborated in the later memorandum. The protocol included a reference to > "aid in support of non-military aspects under this programme."

After consultation with ministerial colleagues in London, the Secretary of State for Defence wrote to the Malaysian Minister of Finance in June 1988 to say that aid could not be linked to defence sales. As a result, the issue was not taken up in the memorandum of understanding on defence procurement which the British and Malaysian Prime Ministers signed in September 1988, and which did not cover aid. Our aid programme is not linked to arms sales.

Malaysia has been eligible for support under the aid and trade provision since the scheme was introduced in 1977; and 23 of the 270 ATP projects financed since then have been in Malaysia. The Malaysian Government have been well aware of the availability of ATP, which was reaffirmed in 1988. Malaysia is expected shortly to graduate under OCED rules from eligibility for aid credits such as ATP. British aid has contributed to Malaysia's rapid economic development and to the productive relationship which we have with Malaysia in many fields of activity, including trade.

Angola

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy in relation to the Government of the Republic of Angola and to UNITA; and if he will indicate what specific support is being given by Her Majesty's Government to the Angolan peace process.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our policy in Angola is to support a negotiated settlement to the civil war. To this end we took an active part in drafting Security Council resolution 864, which imposed sanctions against UNITA. We fully support the United Nations brokered negotations taking place in Lusaka between the Government of Angola and UNITA. We have provided £10 million of humanitarian aid since June 1993, to all areas of Angola.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax (Further Education Courses)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Customs and Excise current consultative proposals on VAT in relation to training and education provide for the continued exemption from VAT for courses of further education for adults provided by local authorities under section 11 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992.

Sir John Cope: I can confirm that as part of their review of the VAT treatment of education and training services Customs and Excise are considering the VAT position of courses of further education for adults provided by local authorities. Consultation with interested parties is currently taking place and decisions on the review have not yet been made. However, at this stage it is not envisaged that such courses will be made subject to VAT.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average cost of a valuation investigation for an appeal against council tax banding.

Mr. Nelson: The estimated average cost of processing a council tax appeal in the current financial year in England is £115. This estimate includes Valuation Office agency and valuation tribunal costs.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of outstanding appeals against council tax bandings at each valuation office as at 1 January.

Mr. Nelson: The number of outstanding appeals against council tax bandings in England and Wales as at 1 January 1994 is as follows:

Mr. Straw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will show for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland separately the forecast of council tax receipts contained in line 5 of table 6.11 in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" 1994-95.

Mr. Portillo: Disaggregated projections of council tax receipts in 1993-94 and 1994-95 are not available.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account he took of the level of costs of local government reform in determining his allocation of resources to the Scottish Office.

Mr. Portillo: The total resources allocated to Scotland are determined in accordance with the established block and formula arrangements. Within those totals, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland set out the amounts he has made available for local authorities, including for the costs of local government reform, in replies to my hon. Friend the Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch) on 7 December, Official Report, columns 187-88.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect he expects GATT to have on the rate of inflation.

Mr. Nelson: GATT will lead to an increase in world trade and benefit both business and consumers. More effective competition and lower tariffs should lead to some downward pressure on prices.

Health Insurance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated cost to his Department of exempting from income tax benefits payable under permanent health insurance policies in the first 12 months of disability.

Mr. Dorrell: Precise figures are not available centrally but is estimated that in 1994-95 the cost of exempting payments made in the first 12 months of disability will be around £10 million.

Air Passenger Duty

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made, and what representations he has received, in respect of the impact of the air passenger duty charges on small municipally owned airports and the market for small turbo prop and regional class jet aircraft.

Sir John Cope: I have received a small number of representations about air passenger duty which mentioned the impact on small airports and turbo prop aircraft. The impact of air passenger duty on demand for air travel will vary by type of passenger and by route. Overall, the impact is expected to be small. No specific estimates have been made of the impct on small municipally owned airports nor on the market for small turbo prop and regional class jet aircraft, and any such estimates would be highly speculative.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Straw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will show for England only and for each year from 1992-93 to 1994-95, the local authority transactions contained within table 6.1 in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" 1994-95.

Mr. Portillo: The local authority transactions underlying table 6.1 are set out in table 6.9. Separate figures for England only on the basis of table 6.9 are not available.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will show for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland separately the amounts of local authority self-financed expenditure recorded in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" and identify the amounts within that figure of expenditure financed from council tax.

Mr. Portillo: Total local authority spending for 1988-89 to 1993-94 and total central Government support for 1988-89 to 1996-97 will be published by country in the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" 1994-95. Projections for total local authority spending in 1994-95 to 1996-97 are not available on a disaggregated basis.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what forecast he has made of when Britain will be economically strong enough to reconsider rejoining the ERM.

Mr. Nelson: Sterling's re-entry to the ERM could not be considered until there is greater convergence between the monetary policies appropriate for all the Community economies. I should also need to be satisfied that the system would be operated to the benefit of all its members. I do not expect these conditions to be met during this Parliament.

Westfield Contributory Health Scheme

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had from Westfield contributory health scheme as to the effect of the insurance premium tax on their membership.

Sir John Cope: Various representations have been made to Treasury Ministers seeking exemption from the proposed insurance premium tax by a number of contributory health schemes, including the Westfield contributory health scheme.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Nelson: Neither of the special advisers in the Treasury seconded from other organisations.

EC Programmes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the the total budgets of the European Commission's educational mobility programmes of (a) ARION, (b) ERASMUS, (c) LINGUA, (d) the science plan, (e) SPES and (f) sectoral grants in each year since their establishment; and what proportion of each was granted to (i) the Northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Boswell: I have been asked to reply.

The science plan, SPES and sectoral grants are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The information requested on ARION, ERASMUS and LINGUA is as follows:

The ARION Programme started during the 1978-79 academic year. Complete records are only available from 1985-86. The table illustrates the number of bursaries awarded.

PRIME MINISTER

Kashmir

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had in the last six months regarding Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I discussed Kashmir at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in October with the Prime Minister of Pakistan. We regularly raise Kashmir in our discussions with the Indian and Pakistan Governments.

Arms Supplies (Iraq)

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister what action he has taken to ascertain who drew up the original draft of the letter about arms supplies to Iraq that he sent to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton on 17 February 1992 and who made deletions in that draft to alter it to the form in which the Prime Minister sent the aforesaid letter to the right hon. Member; what explanation he has received for the deletions; and what action he intends to take (a) in regard to responsibility for the deletions and (b) in regard to writing to the aforesaid right hon. Member to correct the false impression that he now acknowledges his letter gave.

The Prime Minister: My Office has supplied Lord Justice Scott's inquiry with the further information he requested. The issues arising are a matter for Lord Justice Scott. As will be apparent from my evidence to the inquiry, I do not accept that my letter to the right hon. Gentleman was misleading.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister which public appointments are handled by the No. 10 appointments secretary.

The Prime Minister: My appointments secretary assists me over a range of appointments in Church and state for which I am responsible, particularly those where the appointment is made by Her Majesty the Queen on my advice.

New Year's Honours List

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a list of the people included in this year's new year's honours list with their place of residence by standard region and their occupation.

The Prime Minister: No. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

British Empire Forces

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister where the records of all the soldiers of the British empire forces, who were sentenced to death during the first world war but whose sentences were subsequently commuted, are located; and if he will now arrange for them to be made available in the Public Record Office.

The Prime Minister: The courts martial records of British service men who were sentenced to death during the first world war but whose sentences were subsequently commuted have regrettably not survived. The available evidence suggests they were lost when a German bomb hit the main war office and Army repository in 1940.

The availability of the courts martial records of other British empire forces is a matter that should be pursued with each of the countries concerned.

Government Successes (Criteria)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what are the criteria by which Her Majesty's Government will measure their success in 1994 Official Report, column 849.

The Prime Minister: By the success of our policies in all areas of national life.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement giving details of the Government's "back to basics" policy.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 21 January 1994 Official Report, column 849

Ministers (Unsuitability for Office)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the circumstances which render Ministers unsuitable to retain office.

The Prime Minister: There can be a variety of circumstances but the main criterion should be whether the Minister can continue to perform the duties of office effectively.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 25 January.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 25 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if, when he next meets President Clinton, he will discuss the report of the Harvard medical school team on child malnutrition and disease in Iraq.

The Prime Minister: I expect to meet President Clinton during my visit to Washington at the end of February. The situation in Iraq may come up in our talks then. However, United Kingdom and United States officials are in regular touch over Iraq, including the humanitarian situation.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 20 January Official Report, column 814.

Health Promotion, Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to place in the Library a copy of his efficiency unit's efficiency scrutiny of the delivery of health promotion in Wales.

The Prime Minister: Copies of the efficiency scrutiny of health promotion in Wales were placed in the Library of the House on 1 April 1993.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bail Hostels

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bail and probation hostels and places are currently open and available in England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: There are currently 115 approved hostels providing 2,690 places.

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bail and probation hostels in England and Wales are due to close as a consequence of the most recent public expenditure survey.

Mr. Maclean: Seven hostels have been identified for closure: Bewsey Street, Cheshire; Dover, Kent; St. Vincents, inner London; Dudley centre, Devon; Fir Tree Grange, Durham; Windyridge, Essex; and Hollywood Manor, Kent—currently closed and not to reopen. In addition three probation areas have been asked to identify which of their hostels should be closed: west midlands —two hostels; south Yorkshire—one hostel; and inner London—one hostel.

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what expenditure will be saved during the financial years 1994-95 and 1995-96 by the closure of certain existing bail and probation hostels arising out of the public expenditure survey.

Mr. Maclean: The expected savings in revenue grant expenditure are about £1·2 million in 1994-95 and about £2·5 million in 1995-96.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital and revenue expenditure will be available for bail hostel provision in inner London for 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Maclean: Revenue grant for inner London approved probation-bail hostels for 1994-95 and 1995-96 will be £1·9 million a year. The level of capital grant will depend on the scrutiny of spending proposals submitted by inner London hostels and the results of the current survey of the condition of all hostels.

Probation Trainees

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the intake of probation trainees to the diploma in social work courses in 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Maclean: The number of probation trainees sponsored by the Home Office starting diploma in social work courses was 451 in 1992 and 470 in 1993.

Social Work Courses

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many trainee places to diploma in social work courses will be lost in 1995, 1996 and 1997 as a consequence of the public expenditure survey.

Mr. Maclean: Decisions on the number of sponsorships in future years will be taken in the light of the conclusions of the forthcoming review of probation officer qualifying training.

Police (Press)

Mr. Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions govern the use by members of the Metropolitan police of their position of advantage to sell stories to the press.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Under schedule 1, paragraphs 6 and 7 of the Police (Discipline) Regulations 1985, an offence against discipline is committed where a member of a police force without proper authority communicates to any person, any information which he has in his possession as a member of a police force; or improperly uses, or attempts so to use, his position as a member of the force for his private advantage.

European Parliamentary Constituency Committee

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the Official Report of the European Parliamentary Constituency Committee for England and Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The reports of both committees were published on 20 January.

Police, Northumbria

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the numbers of (a) murders, (b) murders of members of the police force, (c) attacks on police officers, giving level of seriousness of injury, and (d) policemen and women in post in each year since 1973 in the Northumbria police force area.

Mr. Maclean: The following table shows for Northumbria such information as is readily available centrally:

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Crime, Northumbria

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of cars damaged and the level of house burglary, theft from cars and burglary in each year since 1973 in the Northumbria police area.

Mr. Maclean: The available information is contained in the table. Police force area boundaries changed in 1974 so figures are given from 1975 onwards. Information on the number of cars damaged is not collected centrally.

Mr. Brian Charrington

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been convicted of drug offences where assistance in the police investigation and detection was given by Brian Charrington.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Operational matters are the responsibility of the chief officer of the police force concerned and it would not be appropriate for me to provide information on any particular case.

Video Outlets

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to license video outlets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Where the sale and hire of sexually explicit material comprise a significant degree of the business of video outlets, such establishments are already subject to licensing by local authorities under section 2 of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982. These adoptive powers enable local authorities to vet those seeking to run sex establishments and to exclude such establishments altogether from unsuitable areas. We have no present plans to extend these provisions nor are we persuaded that compliance with the provisions of the Video Recordings Act 1984 would be improved by a more general licensing system.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding clamping companies; whether he proposes to have consultations on the subject of clamping companies; if he will introduce legislation or guidelines to control clamping companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: During the consultation exercise carried out last year concerning wheel clamping on private land, the Government received a number of different views, including some from the companies themselves and a representative association, about the activities of clamping companies and about ways of reducing concerns that exist about those activities.

In considering what, if any, action it may be appropriate to take, the Government's aim continues to be to ensure that any measure introduced to prevent or deter irresponsible and heavy-handed wheel clamping on private land does not prevent sensible measures being taken to control genuine parking problems.

Vehicle Identification

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which manufacturers and importers have given him commitments in respect of the introduction of visible vehicle identification numbers; and if he will detail those commitments.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No specific commitments have been made to the Home Office by motor manufacturers on this issue. However, following representations from the Home Office and the police, a number of manufacturers and importers—including BMW, Ford, Honda, Jaguar, Porsche, Rolls-Royce, Rover, Saab and Volvo—have introduced visible vehicle identification number plates into some or all of their models. A number of others—including Peugeot and Vauxhall—are etching the vehicle identification number into the front and rear window glass.

Information provided by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders in March 1993 showed that, in 1992, visible vehicle identification numbers were provided on 49 per cent. of vehicle models—of which 61 per cent. were on the structure of the vehicle and the rest etched into the window glass.

Emergency Planning

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision he is making for local emergency planning in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement regarding training for volunteers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: During 1994-95 a maximum of £15 million will be available from the Home Office as a contribution towards expenses incurred by local authorities in carrying out their responsibilities under the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1993.

The Home Office no longer provides funds for the training of volunteers for civil defence but encourages local authorities to develop and maintain relationships with established voluntary organisations. Some authorities have chosen to keep their volunteer groups and to provide training.

British Caledonian Flight

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers were on a charter flight by British Caledonian from the Caribbean arriving at Gatwick on 14 December; how many passengers were (a) allowed to enter the United Kingdom as visitors, (b) given temporary admission as a visitor to the United Kingdom, (c) refused entry, (d) detained and (e) deported; how many passengers remain in detention; and what was the (i) minimum and (ii) the maximum period for which the passengers sought to visit the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information is as follows. I understand that 353 passengers arrived on flight BA 1262—KT 310—at Gatwick on 15 December. Most were citizens of Jamaica who sought entry as visitors. Thirty-eight people were refused leave to enter of whom 33 have been removed. Twelve of those refused were detained, none of whom remain in detention. Those admitted as visitors were given leave to enter for six months.

St. Vincent's Bail Hostel

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the residents of St. Vincent's bail hostel for the last 12 months to the latest available date were (a) aged under 17, (b) aged 17 to 20 inclusive and (c) aged 21 years or over.

Mr. Maclean: (a) none, (b) 25, (c) 94.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average cost per week of a place in St. Vincent's bail hostel, (b) the average length of stay in St. Vincent's bail hostel and (c) the average cost per week of a prison remand place in the inner London area, at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean: (a) £222. (b) This information is not available. (c) For 1992-93, the average weekly net operating cost per prisoner at prisons in inner London was £566. Remand prisoners represent just over 40 per cent. of these prisoners but costs for remand prisoners are not kept separately.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the occupancy rate of St. Vincent's bail hostel for each of the last 10 quarters.

Mr. Maclean: The occupancy figures for the period April 1991 to March 1992 are not available in a quarterly form. The figures from April 1992 to September 1993 are as follows:

	Per cent.
April 1992 to June 1992	64
July 1992 to September 1992	56
October 1992 to December 1992	31
January 1993 to March 1993	27
April 1993 to June 1993	34
July 1993 to September 1993	43

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who has been and who will be consulted about the proposed closure of St. Vincent's bail hostel in inner London.

Mr. Maclean: The chief probation officer for inner London and the chair of the hostel's managing committee were notified on 1 December of the proposed closure and given the opportunity to comment.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he expects to be the annual saving as a result of the proposed closure of St. Vincent's bail hostel in inner London.

Mr. Maclean: I expect the saving to the Home Office in 1994-95 to be approximately £100,000 and in 1995-96 approximately £200,000.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital expenditure was planned for St. Vincent's bail hostel prior to his Department's statement of 30 November.

Mr. Maclean: A proposal for capital expenditure on the conversion of dormitory to single bedroom accommodation had been submitted and was under consideration prior to the 30 November statement; but no plans for improvements to the hostel had been approved.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were (a) rearrested and charged or (b) breached for failure to comply with requirements at St. Vincent's bail hostel in each of the last 10 quarters.

Mr. Maclean: The information supplied by the hostel is in the table.

	Rearrested and charged	Breached
August to October 1991	2	2
November to January 1992	2	0
February to April 1992	2	3
May to July 1992	0	3

November to January 1993	0	0

May to July 1993	2	4
August to October 1993	2	3
November to 24 January 1994	5	4
Totals	15	27

Note: In addition, during this period 41 residents are recorded as having absconded.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people he expects to be remanded into custody per annum as a result of the proposed closure of St. Vincent's bail hostel in inner London.

Mr. Maclean: It is for the courts to decide who should be remanded in custody. There are other approved hostel facilities available to them throughout London.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were remanded in St. Vincent's bail hostel during the last 12 months to the latest available date; and how many of these people were (a) black males and (b) black females.

Mr. Maclean: Between February 1993 and 24 January 1994, 150 bailees were admitted to the hostel. The information requested at (a) and (b) is not held centrally and is not readily available.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are expected to be made redundant by the proposed closure of the St. Vincent's bail hostel; and at what financial cost.

Mr. Maclean: It will be for the managing committee to decide how to handle the consequences of closure in terms of redeployment or redundancies; we have not yet received a full account of its conclusions.

Carl Bridgewater

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reach a decision on whether to refer the convictions in the Carl Bridgewater case to the Court of Appeal.

Mr. Maclean: The latest representations about this case were received between June and December 1993. We understand that more are to follow. We have already asked the police to make inquiries into some of the matters raised. When those inquiries have been completed and any further representations have been considered, my right hon. and learned Friend will consider in the light of all the information available to him whether it would be right for him to refer any of the convictions to the Court of Appeal or to take any other action.

Mrs. Joy Gardner

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the name of the immigration officer involved in the deportation of Joy Gardner; what was his or her rank; and whether this officer has been suspended from duty pending the Police Complaints Authority investigation into the death of Joy Gardner.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A male immigration officer accompanied the police officers to Mrs. Joy Gardner's home. No complaint has been made against this officer, and he has not been suspended. It would not be appropriate to name him while an investigation by the Police Complaints Authority remains in progress.

Flight ULE 966

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the immigration service received advance knowledge of charter flight ULE 966 which landed at Gatwick airport on 21 December; when the immigration service received from the charter company a passenger list; whether this list was volunteered or requested; how many people named as passengers had (a) previously been refused entry to the United Kingdom and (b) previously been refused entry clearance to the United Kingdom; how many passengers, in either category, were (i) refused entry as a visitor, (ii) detained and (iii) deported on 25 December; and how many passengers in either category were given (1) entry to the United Kingdom and (2) given temporary admission.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The immigration service was informed about flight ULE 966 on 16 December and the passenger list was requested subsequently. It was received on 21 December, three and a half hours before the aircraft's arrival. Of those passengers listed, two were identified as having previously been refused entry; eight were identified as having been refused entry clearance and one of whom had also been refused entry.

Of those nine passengers, five were refused entry and four were granted leave to enter. Four passengers were detained for at least one night; five were granted temporary admission. Three passengers were removed on 25 December.

May Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report from the inquiry presently being conducted by Mr. Justice May.

Mr. Maclean: I understand that Sir John May hopes to submit his report into the case of the Guildford Four in March.

Somali Nationals

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the concessionary policy operated by his Department to facilitate family reunion for Somali nationals resident in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Somali family reunion concession was introduced to make it easier for those Somalis with relatives in the United Kingdom who had been displaced to refugee camps in Ethiopia and Djibouti to seek entry clearance to the United Kingdom. It took account of the fact that fighting in both Somalia and Ethiopia at that time had made it difficult to travel to any British diplomatic post in the area in order to apply for entry clearance.

The concession allowed the United Kingdom sponsor to seek advice in advance from the Home Office on whether his or her relatives seemed likely to qualify for a visa if they made a formal application at their nearest post. It thus reduced—usually to one—the number of journeys they needed to make to the post in order to pursue their application.

The concession had its origins in a period when both Somalia and Ethiopia were torn by civil war and any movement by civilians in the area was potentially hazardous. The situation in Somalia itself remains grave, but over 95 per cent. of cases now raised under the concession concern people who are in Ethiopia. That country has been at peace for nearly three years now, and the evidence is that Somali nationals in Ethiopia can move about safely there. People in Somalia itself are able to move into Ethiopia, Kenya or Djibouti if they wish. In these circumstances it is open to applicants to seek entry clearance at our posts in Addis Ababa, Nairobi of Djibouti in the normal way. I have therefore decided that the concession should be withdrawn with effect from midnight on 27 January 1994.

This decision applies to new cases only. All cases which have already been raised with us under the concession, including any received between now and 27 January 1994, will be considered under the existing arrangements.

Prison Visits (Homosexuals)

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will allow homosexual partners to benefit from the assisted prison visits scheme on similar terms to other partners.

Mr. Howard: No. I do not believe that taxpayers' money should be used for this purpose.

Car Crime

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to improve the protection from car crimes on public roads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 24 January 1993]: The Home Office continued with its car crime prevention campaign during 1993, to build on the success achieved in 1992. Evaluation of the campaign showed a very high awareness of the campaign's message. We shall continue to encourage the motor manufacturers to improve vehicle security. We shall also continue our efforts to make motorists aware of car crime and the measures they should take to keep themselves and their vehicles safe.

DEFENCE

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Aitken: Those firms identifying themselves as having accountancy as their principal business awarded centrally placed consultancy contracts valued at over £10,000 by the Ministry of Defence in 1992 and 1993 were as follows:

KPMG
Touche Ross
Coopers and Lybrand
PE International
Price Waterhouse
Arthur Andersen
PA Consulting
Ernst and Young

Merchant Banks awarded centrally placed consultancy contracts by the Ministry of Defence in 1992 and 1993 were as follows:

Kleinwort Benson Investment Trust Ltd.

The total value of these consultancy contracts amounted to £14·9 million. A breakdown of these contracts is as follows. To protect commercial confidentiality, the individual contract values have been omitted.

A number of other low-value contracts will have been placed with such firms in the period in question but these could be identified only at disproportionate cost. Furthermore, a number of consultancy contracts may be placed as part of specific projects but are not separately accounted. These are not recorded centrally and, similarly, could be identified only at disproportionate cost.

Airports and Aerodromes

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the airports or aerodromes other than RAF Northolt that his Department owns or controls in south-east England; and if he will list the length of each airport or aerodrome runway, together with details of the annual volume of flights in and out of each location.

Mr. Hanley: Airfields other than RAF Northolt which the Department owns or controls in south east England are: RAF Manston, RAF Odiham and Farnborough. The length of their runways together with details of the annual volume of flights in and out of each location are as follows:

(a) RAF Manston—One main runway, RW 28/10 (2,752 metres), and one secondary grass strip, RW 24/06 (792 metres). Landings and take-offs during 1993 were: military 19,708, civilian 36,797.

(b) RAF Odiham—One runway, RW 28/10 (1,830 metres). Landings and take-offs during 1993 were: military 20,054, civilian 137.

(c) Farnborough—One main runway, RW 07/25 (2,400 metres), and two secondary runways, RWs 11/29 (1,370 metres) and 18/36 (1,282 metres). Landings and take-offs during 1993 were: military 7,932, civilian 5,380.

RAF Northolt

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft have landed or taken off from RAF Northolt for each of the past five years.

Mr. Hanley: Landings and take-offs from RAF Northolt for each of the past five years were as follows:

Year	Military	Civilian	Total
1989	9,500	5,600	15,100
1990	9,300	5,400	14,700
1991	9,100	4,700	13,800
1992	9,608	4,893	14,501
1993	8,310	4,650	12,960

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the length of the runway at RAF Northolt airport;

(2) what scope there would be to extend the existing runway at RAF Northolt within the airport's existing curtilage.

Mr. Hanley: The length of runway at RAF Northolt is 1,684m, there is no scope for its extension within the existing curtilege.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which is the largest military aircraft to have landed, or taken off, at RAF Northolt since 1964.

Mr. Hanley: The largest military aircraft to have landed, or taken off at RAF Northolt since 1964 is a United States Air Force C141 Starlifter.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which is the largest civil aircraft to have landed, or taken off, at RAF Northolt since 1964.

Mr. Hanley: The largest civil aircraft to have landed or taken off at RAF Northolt since 1964 was a European Airbus A320 on a demonstration flight; the aircraft was both lightly fuelled and loaded.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which is the largest civil aircraft that could be landed at RAF Northolt in normal operating conditions.

Mr. Hanley: Under current regulations specified in the United Kingdom aeronautical information publication—AIP—RAF Northolt can accept an approved quiet turbo jet powered civilian aircraft with a maximum capacity of 20 seats, subject to specified load, runway and pavement classifications. The largest aircraft on the civil register to operate routinely from RAF Northolt is the BAe 146.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total annual cost of running the airport at RAF Northolt.

Mr. Hanley: Of the total running costs for RAF Northolt, £11,960,000 per annum is spent on operating the airfield: this includes the costs of personnel; air traffic control; fire, crash and rescue services, heating and lighting.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total area of the airport at RAF Northolt.

Mr. Hanley: The total area of the RAF Northolt base is 448·4 acres—181·5 hectares.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the distance between RAF Northolt and the nearest Heathrow airport terminal building.

Mr. Hanley: The distance between RAF Northolt and the nearest Heathrow terminal building is 8·7 miles—14 km—by road, or 6·2 miles—10 km—in a straight line.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the primary function of the airport at RAF Northolt.

Mr. Hanley: The primary function of RAF Northolt is to meet the air transport needs within Europe of members of the royal family, and senior members of Her Majesty's Government and the armed forces.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what review there has been into the requirement of the airport at RAF Northolt for military purposes (a) before the publication of "Options for Change" and (b) since the publication of "Options for Change".

Mr. Hanley: The requirement for RAF Northolt has frequently been examined and confirmed in the normal course of business, both prior to and after "Options for Change". This process has involved a number of studies and is continuing with the current front line first initiative.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what non-governmental organisations had use of the royal yacht Britannia; for what purpose; on whose authority; and at what cost in (a) 1991-92 and *(b)*1992-93.

Mr. Hanley: Government Departments sponsor the use of the royal yacht by non-governmental organisations in order to promote British exports and attract inward investment to the United Kingdom. Such use is authorised by Buckingham palace and the Cabinet Secretary. All additional costs of these events are paid for by the organisations concerned. For the period in question the events were as follows:

1991-92	British Invisibles at London
1992-93	British Invisibles at Rome
	British Invisibles at Stockholm
	Scottish Financial Enterprise at Leith

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the result of the review of the future of the royal yacht Britannia.

Mr. Hanley: In view of the age of the royal yacht, its future is currently under review, with a range of options being considered. The future of the yacht will be made clear in due course.

Flag Officer Royal Yachts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role and responsibilities of the flag officer royal yachts.

Mr. Hanley: Flag officer royal yachts—FORY—is both an independent fleet flag officer and the commanding officer of HM yacht Britannia. He is generally accountable, as a member of the royal household, to Sir Robert Fellowes, private secretary to Her Majesty the Queen. He is responsible for Britannia's safe and efficient operation at all times and for the detailed planning of her programme keeping First Sea Lord and Commander in Chief, Fleet informed. He acts as the host at official receptions on behalf of the Queen when Britannia visits countries when no member of the royal family is embarked, and also hosts receptions on behalf of the Queen during sea days or commercial seminars held on board in support of British industry. These events bring FORY into direct and frequent contact with Heads of State and Government, and captains of industry.

In addition, he also exercises tactical control over RN, Commonwealth and foreign warships and RFAs forming the Royal Squadron when the Queen or other members of the royal family are embarked.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to extend the scope of exemptions to CCT requirements for cleaning contracts to more schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Travellers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list, for each relevant education authority, the amount of the bid for grant towards traveller education in 1994-95 and the actual grant awarded.

Mr. Robin Squire: Twenty-six local education authorities and one grant-maintained school in England were invited to bid for specific grant in 1994-95 for traveller education projects. Details of the bids and of the expenditure actually approved for support are as follows:

Support for a further £8·48 million of expenditure has been approved for the continuation of existing traveller education projects in 68 local education authorities and one grant-maintained school. Unsolicited bids from two of these authorities for new projects in 1994-95 were rejected. Grant is payable at the rate of 75 per cent. on all approved expenditure.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list for each relevant education authority the amount of grant towards traveller education in (a) 1990-91, (b) 1991-92 and (c) 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire: Local education authorities receive allowance in their revenue support grant to meet the basic educational needs of travellers in the same way and at the same rate as for other pupils. Grant is also payable under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 in respect of extra provision made by LEAs to meet the additional educational needs of travellers. The total approved expenditure in England, on which grant was payable at the rate of 75 per cent. for each of these three financial years was as follows:

Nursery Education

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the number of full-time equivalent places in nursery education for each of the London boroughs; and what proportion of under-fives in each borough attend a nursery school or class.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 21 January 1994, Official Report, columns 857-59, which gave the latest information about the numbers of pupils below compulsory school age and under-fives participation rates in maintained nursery provision in each local education authority in England. Information about nursery places is not held centrally.

Sports Facilities

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to ensure that the Further Education Funding Council encourages schools and colleges to gain maximum use for the local community from their sports facilities.

Mrs. Boswell: The Further Education Funding Control, which is reponsible for the funding of colleges in the further education sector, including sixth form colleges, already encourages college governing bodies to utilise their facilities efficiently. There is nothing to deter colleges from making their sports facilities available to the community when they are not required for other college purposes. The Further Education Funding Council does not have funding responsibilities for schools.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy to encourage schools and colleges to share their sports facilities with the local community.

Mr. Forth: The Government do encourage schools and colleges to make their premises, including sports facilities, available for use by the community when they are not required for school or college purposes.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what applications were received from grant-maintained schools for capital grant for the financial year 1994-95; what was the level of grant approval in each case; what is the total value of (i) applications and (ii) approvals; and how much has been set aside for the second round of bids closing on 28 January.

Mr. Robin Squire: I have placed in the Library copies of papers detailing the applications received from grant-maintained schools for 1994-95 and the allocations approved.

Applications from grant-maintained schools incorporated up to September 1993 totalled £315 million for funding in 1994-95 and £133 million for subsequent years.

Allocations worth over £40 million have so far been made and projects worth over £30 million are being funded for extra development work in 1994-95.

A minimum of £8 million has been set aside for 1994-95 starts in the next round of bids open to schools incorporated between September 1993 and January 1994.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the planned level of capital expenditure on grant-maintained schools for 1994-95 published in the DFE's departmental report, Cm 2210 in February 1993; what is the level of capital expenditure on grant-maintained schools for 1994-95 published in DFE press notice 425-93 in December 1993; and what is the reason for the difference between the two figures.

Mr. Robin Squire: The two sets of figures are not strictly comparable. The figure of £165 million in Cm 2210 relates to the total planned expenditure in 1994-95. The figure of £150 million in press notice 425-93 relates to the allocation of funds in particular projects within the capital programme and also includes allocations brought forward into the current financial year and projects of high priority for 1995-96.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if the 82 grant-maintained schools where bids for more than £30 million of capital grant were unsuccessful for 1994-95, but which were identified in the DFE press notice 425-93 as high priorities for funding in 1995-96, and which have been awarded funds to start development work on the projects, are being given advance priority over other grant-maintained schools which will be submitting bids for capital grant in 1995-96.

Mr. Robin Squire: Funding for 1995-96 is not guaranteed at this stage. The allocations for 1994-95 are intended to enable the schools to develop proposals which have been identified as high priorities for a future year. These schools, and all other grant-maintained schools, will be able to bid for funding in 1995-96 in the usual way.

Higher Education Funding Council for England

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the annual cost of administering the Higher Education Funding Council for England for every year of its existence; and what is the cost to the HEFCE of the quality assessment process.

Mr. Boswell: The HEFCE was set up during the financial year 1992-93 while the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council and Universities Funding Council were still in existence. The cost of setting up and administering the HEFCE for that period was £500,000. Now in its first operational year, the cost of administering the HEFCE is £10·1 million. The cost of the HEFCE of quality assessment this year is £2 million.

Manchester University Drama Society

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when the hon. Member may expect to receive an answer to his letter of 16 December with regard to Colin Child, chairman of Manchester University drama society.

Mr. Boswell: An interim reply to the hon. Member's letter was sent on 23 December 1993. I expect to send a full response shortly.

Postgraduate Fees

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he will announce the maximum level of postgraduate fees payable through the awards system for 1994-95.

Mr. Boswell: The maximum level of postgraduate fees payable through the Department for Education postgraduate awards schemes will be £2,350 for 1994-95. This represents an increase of 4 per cent. on the rate of 1993-94 and preserves the level of postgraduate fees in real terms.

Funding Reductions

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education for what reasons universities which have increased the admission of science and technology students and reduced arts and social science admissions are now advised by the Higher Education Funding Council for England that they will be subject to a larger than average reduction in funding; what effects this will have on universities which have achieved the targets for the admission of a higher proportion of science and technology students; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: No such advice has been given. The Higher Education Funding Council for England will publish its approach to funding and student numbers for 1994-95 shortly, including the position of institutions whch have increased science and technology intakes.

Office for Standards in Education

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education in which national newspapers the Department of Education places advertisements for appointments to the Ofsted inspectorate.

Mr. Robin Squire: Since its establishment in September 1992, Ofsted has been responsible for its own appointments procedures for inspectors and the Department for Education places no advertising on its behalf.

Cost-place Multipliers

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what the cost-place multiplier is in respect of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools; and what was the outturn capital expenditure in each local education authority in England in each category in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Forth: The cost multiplier used to calculate the basic need elements of LEA's annual capital guidelines for 1994-95 are: (a) for five to 11 age-range places, £3,747; (b) for 11 to 16 places, £5,116; and for 16 plus places, £6,128.

The outturn capital expenditure by LEAs, as notified to the Department of the Environment, for the financial year 1991-92 is shown in the following table:

Notes:

1. 1991-92 is the latest year for which final outturn figures are available.
2. Figures come from the Department of the Environment's capital outturn return forms.
3. Nursery and primary figures cannot be disaggregated.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received in relation to the cost-place multipliers used in relation to the basic need formula in determining annual capital guidelines for local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Since 1991 we have received representations from a number of LEAs, the Association of Metrolitan Authorities and the Association of County Councils about the level of the cost multipliers and our procedures for applying them to LEAs' bids in the basic need category.

The cost multipliers are derived from an analysis of nearly 500 school building projects between 1987 and 1991 and include a mix of both new schools and extension projects to existing schools. The cost elements of the multipliers was based on a value known as the "target basic building cost", which represents a level of performance being achieved by about a third of authorities.

For 1994-95 the cost multipliers have, in cash terms, remained broadly at the same level as 1993-94, when they rose in value by 9 per cent. on average over those used in 1992-93. This is at a time when building tender prices have shown a dramatic decline, by over 20 per cent. since 1990. This means that school building costs should have been falling and very competitive tenders should continue to be received.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Boswell: There are no special advisers seconded to the Department from other organisations.

Capital Guidelines

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment his Department has made in respect of each local education authority in determining annual capital guidelines for 1994-95 of anticipated capital receipts.

Mr. Forth: LEAs bid for annual capital guidelines in a number of categories, including projects to remove surplus places. The success of bids in that category depends on whether the projects meet our published cost-effectiveness tests. The latter take into account LEAs' own estimates of any capital receipts which may arise. But in no categories are LEAs' ACGs reduced or adjusted in the light of anticipated capital receipts.

Seat Belts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make additional resources available to schools to allow them to offset the cost of fitting seat belts to their school transport.

Mr. Forth: This is a matter on which each local authority needs to assess its priorities for use of the resources available. The Government's proposals for the 1994-95 grant settlements allow local education authorities in England an increase of 2·4 per cent. for education over the previous year; that should allow them some latitude in view of the continuing fall in inflation.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he will reply to the letter dated 22 November from the hon. Member for Pendle on the subject of seat belts in school transport.

Mr. Forth: An interim reply was sent to the hon. Member on 13 December, and I sent the hon. Member a final reply on 21 January.

Taught Week

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education in how many (a) secondary schools and (b) primary schools the taught week falls below the minimum acceptable level; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The minimum hours of taught lesson time per week recommended by the Department are 21 hours for five to seven-year-olds—key stage 1—23·5 hours for eight to 11-year-olds—key stage 2—and 24 hours for 12 to 16-year-olds—key stages 3 and 4. The numbers of maintained primary, middle and secondary schools in January 1993 reporting fewer hours per week than the recommended minima at each key stage were: 1,000 at key stage 1; 7,900 at key stage 2; 1,100 at key stage 3 and 800 at key stage 4. There may be some "double counting" in these results because schools generally provide for two and possibly three key stages.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he has received on the subject of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: Between April 1993 and January 1994 the Department of Social Security headquarters and the Child Support Agency headquarters received in the region of 10,750 written representations covering a range of views about child support policy and Child Support Agency operations.

The number of written representations made to Child Support Agency centres and field offices could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the turnover of staff has been for each of the Child Support Agency centres in (a) England and (b) Wales.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mrs. Llin Golding, dated 24 January 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for details about the turnover of staff for each Child Support Agency Centre (CSAC) in England and Wales.

There are four CSACs in England, and none in Wales. Staff turnover is shown in the following table. The figures show the staff in post at each CSAC on 18 January 1994, and the number of staff who have left since the Agency began on 5 April 1993. They include casual staff and staff employed on fixed term contracts.

CSAC	Staff in post	Departures
Birkenhead	592	7
Dudley	614	61
Hastings	690	62
Plymouth	576	29

I hope you find this information useful.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff the Child Support Agency employs in (i) England and (ii) Wales.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mrs. Llin Golding, dated 24 January 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for details about the staffing of the Child Support Agency in England and Wales.

At 1 January 1994, the Agency employed 3,413 full-time and 688 part-time staff in England, and 99 full-time and 25 part-time staff in Wales.

I hope you find this information useful.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost of providing office accommodation for the Child Support Agency in (a) England and (b) Wales.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for South Hams (Mr. Steen) by the chief executive of the Child Support Agency on 17 December 1993 at columns 1060-61.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 297, how many lone parents who were receiving no regular maintenance in April 1993 are now receiving maintenance as a result of action by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) by the chief executive of the Child Support Agency on Monday 24 January, Official Report, column 15.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) council tenants, (b) housing association tenants, (c) private tenants and (d) owner occupiers were in receipt of housing benefit for each of the London boroughs at the latest available date.

Mr. Burt: The percentages of local authority tenants, housing association tenants and other private tenants in receipt of housing benefit in London, in November 1992, the latest date for which figures are available, were approximately 60 per cent., 50 per cent. and 50 per cent. respectively. Information for individual local authorities and owner-occupiers is not available.

Sources: Housing Benefit and Community Charge Benefit Management Information Statistics quarterly case load information for November 1992 and Department of the Environment tenancy statistics December 1992.

Notes:

(i) Owner-occupiers, in England and Wales have not been eligible for Housing Benefit—(rate rebates)—since April 1990 when community charge benefit was introduced.

(ii) The quarterly case load figures include estimates for non-responding boroughs.

VAT (Domestic Fuel)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to compensate fully people with learning disabilities and their carers for the increase in their domestic heating bills resulting from VAT on fuel.

Mr. Burt: Our policy is to help poorer households, pensioners and disabled people on income-related benefits meet the extra cost of VAT on domestic fuel. A substantial package of measures was announced in the budget including increases above the normal uprating in invalidity benefit, severe disablement allowance and the disability premium in the income-related benefits.

Disabled people, including people with learning disabilities, who are receiving these benefits will receive the above-inflation increases.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average payment per recipient per week of housing benefit for each year since 1985, and his projected figure for 1994-95 for private sector, housing association and local authority tenancies.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

1. The average amounts are per benefit unit not per individual. A benefit unit may be a single person or a couple.
2. Projected figures for 1994-95 are not available.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people who have ceased to receive benefit following changes to the benefit law in each year since 1979.

Mr. Burt: Information on why individuals cease to claim benefit is not available. A comparison of estimates of the total number of current social security benefit awards at any one time shows an overall increase of around 18 million between 1979 and 1992-93.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Unemployment Benefit

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the value of unemployment benefit for a couple with two children under 11 years in relation to prices and earnings since 1976.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Benefits

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated saving to his Department of delaying payment of the child dependant's allowance payable with incapacity benefit until the 52nd week of incapacity.

Mr. Scott: It is estimated that there will be a net saving of £5 million a year as a result of the effect on entitlement to child dependency increases of the 52nd week qualifying period for long-term incapacity benefit.

Note:

Estimate expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to nearest £5 million and is net of offsetting changes and expenditure on income-related benefits.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of invalidity benefit are (a) in receipt of the higher rate of the care component of disability living allowance and (b) are currently over the age of 57 years.

Mr. Scott: On 4 April 1992, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 726,000 people aged 57 or over receiving invalidity benefit[1]. Reliable estimates of the number of invalidity benefit claimants also receiving the higher rate of care component of disability living allowance are not available.

Note:

[1] Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes he intends to make the 80 per cent. disablement test for severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Scott: None.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people (a) claimed and (b) were awarded non-contributory sickness benefit (i) between April 1992 and April 1993, (ii) since April 1993 and (iii) in total since April 1983.

Mr. Scott: Information is not routinely kept in the form requested. Information that is readily available is in the table. An estimate of the total since April 1983 will require researching of archived data. I shall write again to the hon. Member as soon as the figure is available. Information from April 1992 is currently unavailable.

Spells of sickness benefit which commenced in the statistical period as the result of an industrial accident or prescribed disease where the contribution conditions were deemed satisfied

Statistical Period	Number of sickness benefit spells commencing where the contribution position was deemed satisfied
2 April 1990 to 31 March 1991	6,000
1 April 1991 to 4 April 1992	3,000

Notes:

1. Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. A spell of incapacity is a single period of sickness for which an individual may have more than one in the statistical period.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security to what extent the rules permitting therapeutic work will continue after April 1995 for (a) incapacity benefit and (b) severe disablement allowance; what will be the rules concerning limitations on (i) the amount of earnings which can be kept before benefit entitlement is affected and (ii) the hours per week which may be worked; and what other restrictions will be introduced.

Mr. Scott: Proposals contained in the Incapacity for Work Bill provide for the therapeutic work rule to continue both for the new incapacity benefit and for severe disablement allowance when work undertaken would be of benefit to a person's condition. We intend that current arrangements for limitation of earnings will continue—present level £42·00 per week—and that there should be a weekly limit of 16 hours.

The Incapacity for Work Bill also introduces provision to allow all incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance recipients to undertake voluntary work for up to 16 hours a week with no effect to their benefit.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to alter the two-year linking rule allowing claimants on disability working allowances to requalify for incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Scott: We have no such plans.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people receive invalidity benefit following an award of non-contributory sickness benefit (a) between April 1992 and April 1993, (b) since April 1993 and (c) in total since April 1983.

Mr. Scott: Information is not routinely kept in the form requested. Information that is readily available is in the table. An estimate of the total since April 1983 will require researching of archived data. I shall write again to the hon. Member as soon as the figure is available. Information from April 1992 is currently unavailable.

Notes:

1. Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. A spell of incapacity is a single period of sickness for which an individual may have more than one in the statistical period.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated saving of his Department of delaying payment of the full rate of adult dependant's allowance payable with incapacity benefit until the 52nd week of incapacity.

Mr. Scott: It is estimated that there will be a net saving of £5 million a year as a result of the effect on the payable rate of adult dependency increases of the 52-week qualifying period for long-term incapacity benefit.

Note:

Estimate expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to the nearest £5 million and is net of offsetting changes and expenditure on income-related benefits. Estimate takes account of other planned changes in the qualifying conditions for adult dependency increases of incapacity benefit.

Child Support

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the value of child support for each child in a standard rate tax-paying family expressed in 1993-94 prices for each year since 1964.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table. While child benefit helps all families with children, there is a comprehensive range of other social security benefits which can provide additional help for some families according to their circumstances.

TRANSPORT

Ministerial Cars

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will quantify the cost of the factors which led to an increase in the cost of cars for Ministers in his Department since 1990-91.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government car service charges for 1990-91 did not cover the full cost of the provision of cars for ministers. Rates have since been increased by 12 per cent. from 1 July 1990 and again by 10 per cent. from 1 January 1991. Other factors are:

(i) Value added tax on GCS invoices increased from 15 per cent. to 17·5 per cent. from 1 April 1991.

(ii) The GCS introduced new charging arrangements from 1 April 1992 leading to greater use of the more expensive "Outside Core Hour" provision.

Isle of Wight

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider an addition to the transport supplementary grant to assist with the exceptional problems on the Isle of Wight and to improve and install additional highway damage drainage works.

Mr. Key: It is not possible to change the allocations that were given to local highway authorities, including the Isle of Wight, when the local transport capital settlement for 1994-95 was announced on 15 December. The island's council will have the opportunity to bid for resources to deal with current conditions on its roads when it makes its transport policies and programme submission for 1995-96 later this year. In the meantime, it has discretion to use its minor works allocation for 1994-95 on transport infrastructure of its choice. Resources allocated for structural maintenance on principal roads can also be used on any such road.

Rail Travel, London

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of a child's fare for a return journey by rail from Lewisham to London for each year from 1975.

Network SouthEast

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money was spent on (a) engineering improvements and (b) improving rolling stock on Network SouthEast rail lines for each year from 1975.

Mr. Freeman: As Network SouthEast did not exist as an organisation until 1986-87, there are no figures available before that year. I understand that figures for subsequent years are as follows:

Year	Rolling stock (£s million-current prices)	Other investment (£s million-current prices)
1986-87	26	208
1987-88	140	233

1990-91	88	320
1991-92	142	271
1992-93	323	222

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people used Network SouthEast rail services for each year from 1975.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the table shows the average daily number of passengers entering central London on BR services during the morning peak. Of these total figures BR estimates 6 per cent. of passengers would have arrived on InterCity services and 94 per cent. on Network SouthEast. I understand that some 70 per cent. of all BR passengers to London begin their journeys during the morning peak.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not available in the Department.

These figures for fatalities include accidents to railway staff and contractors, passengers and other persons.

The figures have been obtained from the Health and Safety Executive's HM railway inspectorate's annual report on the railway safety of Great Britain, copies of which have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Figures for Network SouthEast lines are not available.

The figures have been obtained from the Health and Safety Executive's HM railway inspectorate's annual report on the railway safety of Great Britain, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Separate figures for Network SouthEast lines are not available.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were injured in train crashes (a) in Britain and (b) on Network SouthEast lines for each year from 1975.

Mr. Freeman: The total numbers of injuries resulting from train accidents for each year from 1975 are as follows:

Year	Major	Minor
1975	62	384
1976	14	276

[1] From 1991 onwards, the figures shown are for the period 1 April to 31 March covering the financial year. The statistics shown for the first quarter 1991 allow for this adjustment. These figures are high due to the Cannon Street accident which occurred on 8 January 1991.

These figures for major and minor injuries include accidents to railway staff and contractors, passengers and other persons.

The figures have been obtained from the Health and Safety Executive's Her Majesty's railway inspectorate's annual report on the railway safety of Great Britain, copies of which have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Figures for Network SouthEast are not available.

Airports (Capacity)

Mr. Kenneth Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many listed buildings would be demolished or rendered uninhabitable if an additional runway were built as indicated in the report of the runway capacity in the south-east working group at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Stansted.

Mr. Norris: RUCATSE stated that were runways to be developed as indicated in the report, the numbers of listed buildings demolished would be: 43 at Heathrow, 13 at Gatwick and 25 at Stansted. The RUCATSE report estimated that a further 55 listed buildings would be rendered uninhabitable in the case of development at Gatwick. No comparable figure is provided in the report for development at Heathrow or at Stansted.

Traffic (Schools)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria highway authorities are instructed to take into consideration when determining traffic speed limits in the vicinity of schools.

Mr. Key: Revised guidance was issued to local authorities in January 1993, setting out the general principles recommended in setting local speed limits. This places more emphasis on the environment, including for example the presence of a school, through which the road passes and less on the need for an accident record on the road in question. Trials are also being conducted on some trunk and local authority roads of variable speed limits outside schools, whereby the limit can be temporarily reduced at arrival and departure times; if these trials show that the variable limits are successful in reducing vehicle speeds and accidents, they may be introduced more widely.

Cyclists (Accidents)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving cyclists were reported in each year since 1991.

Mr. Key: The Department collects data from personal injury road accidents. There were 25,042 injury accidents in 1991 and 24,962 injury accidents in 1992 involving pedal cyclists.

Speedboat Regulations

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those regulations which apply to the use of speedboats in inshore waters surrounding the United Kingdom; how many prosecutions hav been brought by (a) individuals and (b) local authorities against owners or users of speedboats in the context of the breach of national legislation or local byelaws in each of the past five years; and what consideration is being given to additional restrictions applicable to the onwership or use of such speedboats.

Mr. Norris: There are no national regulations governing the ownership and use of recreational craft in inshore waters. Local authorities in England and Wales have powers to make byelaws under section 231 of the Public Health Act 1936 for the regulation of vessels used for pleasure purposes; under section 76 of the Public Health Act 1961, for the regulation of seaside pleasure boats; and under section 235 of the Local Government Act 1972, for the regulation and suppression of nuisances by district and borough councils where no other powers are available. In Scotland, local authorities have powers under section 121 of the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 to make byelaws in relation to the sea shore, adjacent waters and inland waters. Separate provisions exist for local authorities in Northern Ireland.

Figures for prosecutions under byelaws are not collected centrally and no information is readily available on prosecutions by individuals.

In its first report the National Maritime Safety Steering Committee has drawn attention to problems identified by the district marine safety committees with the making of effective byelaws to control recreational craft on inland and inshore waters. These problems are also considered in a consultation document published in October 1993 by the Department of the Environment and the Welsh Office—"Managing the Coast—A review of Coastal Management Plans in England and Wales and the powers supporting them".

The report of the NMSSC has also drawn attention to a number of recommendations referred to it by the DMSCs relating to the further regulation of recreational craft and their users in the interests of safety. These recommendations are currently under consideration by the Department.

Seat Belts

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what review he has undertaken of mandatory seat belts in coaches and in vehicles transporting school children; and what conclusions he has reached.

Mr. Key: We are currently reviewing the full technical and cost implications of seat belts in all coaches and minibuses, not just those used to carry children. This review is not yet complete.

Light Rapid Transit Schemes

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding has been made available from the private sector towards the development and implementation of light rapid transit schemes in (a) Manchester, (b) Birmingham, (c) south Yorkshire and (d) Leeds and Nottingham.

Mr. Freeman: The private sector contributes to the development and implementation of light rapid transit schemes in three ways: expenditure on bids in competitive tenders and associated design work; developer contributions to the construction costs of schemes; and concession payments for contracts to undertake any or all of the design, building, operation and maintenance of a light rapid transit system. Some or all of these types of contribution have been received or are planned in all of the schemes listed. The amounts involved are commercially confidential.

Heathrow Terminals

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the distance between each of the terminals at Heathrow.

Mr. Norris: BAA plc has informed me as follows:

The central terminal area comprises terminals 1, 2 and 3. Walking distances between the terminals using subway connections are:

	Metres
Terminal 1 to terminal 2	392
Terminal 1 to terminal 3 (arrivals)	680
Terminal 1 to terminal 3 (departures)	676
Terminal 2 to terminal 3 (arrivals)	590
Terminal 2 to terminal 3 (departures)	568

The shortest journey from the central terminal area to terminal 4 is by the airside coach route from gate 80 to the transfer passenger point in terminal 4 and is some 3,379 m long. From landside in the central terminal area, the journey to terminal 4 would be about double—some 6,800 m.

Runway Length

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the length of the runway at (a) Gatwick airport, (b) Glasgow airport, (c) Edinburgh airport, (d) Manchester airport, (e) Luton airport, (f) Birmingham airport, (g) London city aiport, (h) Belfast international airport and (i) Belfast city airport.

Mr. Norris: The effective length of a runway depends on direction of use and whether it is being used for takeoff or landing. Takeoff run and landing distance are set out in the table:

Aerodrome	Runway	Takeoff Run (metres)	Landing distance (metres)
Gatwick	08R	3,159	2,766

Pedestrian Safety

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the Serjeant at Arms and hon. Members about pedestrian safety at the junction of Bridge street and Parliament square; and what action he has taken to improve pedestrian safety at this junction.

Mr. Norris: The Serjeant at Arms and the hon. Member have made several representations regarding the timing of pedestrian phases within the traffic lights at Bridge street-Parliament square. Details were passed on to Westminster city council, which is the responsible highway authority. The city council has extended the pedestrian green phase at the corner of Bridge street and Parliament square and installed supplementary signals to assist pedestrians.

Roads Policy

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the documents which set out his Department's policy on roads issued during the last six years and those sections of the documents which no longer represent Government policy.

Mr. Key: The two main documents setting out current roads policy are the 1989 White Paper "Roads for Prosperity" and the 1990 roads report "Trunk Roads, England into the 1990's". The aims of the Government's expenditure on roads can be found in the "Department of Transport Report 1993". I will write to my right hon. Friend shortly with a more detailed list of road policy documents.

Kingsferry Bridge

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the interruption of power to the Kingsferry bridge on the A249 trunk road between the mainland and the Isle of Sheppey and the announcement, later countermanded, that all road traffic could be delayed for hours to allow a ship to pass; if he will make it his policy to give priority to road and rail traffic in such circumstances; and if he will speed up construction of the second Swale crossing.

Mr. Key: On Thursday 20 January, because of a loss of power from the electricity suppliers, Seeboard Electricity, British Rail intended to use an emergency generator to open Kingsferry bridge to allow a ship to pass. The generator takes 20 minutes to raise and 20 minutes to lower the bridge.

At the request of the local Sittingbourne police and after consultation with the British Transport police, BR decided not to open the bridge, because of the extensive traffic congestion this would have caused during the peak traffic period.

The operation of Kingsferry bridge is a matter for BR in consultation with the British Transport police and the port authorities. They are best placed to judge the conditions prevailing at the time and the limitations placed on their powers to close the bridge for emergency maintenance.

Public consultation on proposals to improve the A249 between Iwade and Queensborough, which include a second crossing of the Swale, ended on 7 January and we are now considering the response. Start of construction will depend on the completion of design work and the statutory procedures and the availability of funds.

Direct Flights

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to which countries with which the United Kingdom has no diplomatic relations there are direct flights from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have been asked to reply.

The following are the states recognised by Her Majesty's Government, but with which we do not currently have diplomatic relations:

Bhutan
Iraq
Korea (North)
Libya

There are no direct flights from the United Kingdom to any of these.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to restore diplomatic relations with Taiwan; when direct flights from the United Kingdom to Taiwan were resumed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to establish diplomatic relations with Taiwan. EVA Airways and British Asia Airways commenced services from the United Kingdom to Taiwan in March 1993.

We welcome the increasing development of business links and tourism with Taiwan.

Airline Regulations

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which airline regulations relate to air passengers being handcuffed or bound by arm or leg restraints or a body belt during takeoff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 21 January 1994]: The only aviation legislation relating to the restraint of passengers is section 94 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982 which authorises the commander of an aircraft in flight to take reasonable measures, including bodily restraint, against someone who jeopardises the safety or good order of the aircraft.

National Air Traffic Control System

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to study the options for the privatisation of the national air traffic control system; and what is his timetable for the study.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 24 January 1994]: A working group of officials from my Department, the Ministry of Defence, the Treasury and the Civil Aviation Authority are examining the options for transferring national air traffic services to the private sector. They are looking at the operational, legal, financial and other implications of the options and expect to report to Ministers at the end of February.

British Merchant Fleet

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vessels there were in the British merchant fleet in 1964, 1970, and each year since 1980; and what was the total gross registered tonnage of the British fleet in each year.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 24 January 1994]: The table gives the information available for merchant—trading—vessels of 100 grt or above.

Manufactured Food Products (Export)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the value, for the most recent 12-month period available, of exports of manufactured food products to (a) Russia, (b) Hungary and (c) Czechoslovakia; and what are the corresponding figures over each of the previous three years.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 17 January 1994]: Trade statistics have been available for Russia only since the beginning of 1993. Since the beginning of last year, separate figures have been published on the Czech and Slovak Republics to reflect the break-up of Czechoslovakia.

The value of exports of manufactured food products —classifications 01–09 of the standard international trade classification, revision 3, which include cereals and cereal preparations—in the period from 1 January to 31 October 1993, were as follows:

The value of manufactured food exports to the former Soviet Union, Hungary and former Czechoslovakia for the three previous years are set out in the table:

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the meetings which he has held with British steel producers to discuss the December 1993 EC agreement on surplus capacity in the steel industry.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 24 January 1994]: I and my officials maintained close contact with the industry both before and during the 17 December Industry Council. Officials briefed the British Iron and Steel Producers Association on the outcome before Christmas, and I have since written to the chairman of British Steel.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will make a statement on the procedures established by his Department in order to monitor the implementation of the December 1993 EC agreement on steel capacity;

(2) if he will make a statement on current progress towards the implementation of the December 1993 EC agreement on surplus capacity in the steel industry.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answers 24 January 1994]: On 17 December, the Industry Council gave its assent to proposals under article 95 ECSC to allow state aid towards the costs of restructuring six steel companies in four member states.

The monitoring of state aids approved under article 95 ECSC is primarily for the Commission, which will report to the Council; but DTI officials will maintain a watching brief on all six cases, including direct liaison with United Kingdom representatives in the relevant member states for news of their progress.

Tours Direct

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps were taken by his Department to protect the public after Companies House struck Tours Direct off its register.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 24 January 1994]: This matter is for Companies House. I have, therefore, asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. Nigel Griffiths, dated 24 January 1994:

You tabled the following Parliamentary Question:

"To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what steps were taken by this Department to protect the public after Companies House struck Tours Direct off their register".

As this matter is my responsibility as Chief Executive and Registrar of Companies House, I am writing to you direct.

Section 652 of the Companies Act 1985, provides me with authority to dissolve companies which I have reasonable cause to believe are no longer carrying on in business or in operation.

In the case of Tours Direct Limited, correspondence received from accountants acting on behalf of the company, indicated that the company was no longer carrying on in business or in operation. Accordingly, formal inquiry letters were issued to the company at its registered office in accordance with the requirements of section 652(1) and 652(2) of the Companies Act 1985.

A director of the company subsequently confirmed that the company was no longer in operation and a notice was published in the London Gazette on 29 June 1993, of my intention to strike the company off the register at the expiration of 3 months, unless cause was shown to the contrary. A copy of this notice was placed on the public file and sent to the company on the same date.

In the absence of any objections to this action being received, the company was struck off the register on 10 October 1993 and dissolved by notice in the London Gazette of 19 October 1993. To date, I have not received any complaints concerning the removal of the company name from the register.

As to the matter of protection afforded to the public, section 653 of the Companies Act 1985 enables any creditor of a dissolved company to petition the Court to restore the name of the company to the register. Once restored, a company is deemed to have continued in existence as if its name had not been struck off. In addition, the Court may also give such directions and make such provisions as seem just for placing the company and all other persons in the same position, as nearly as may be, as if the company's name had not been struck off.

I trust that I have interpreted the question which you have tabled correctly and that I have covered the points raised. Should you, however, require any additional information please do not hesitate to contact me.

Perjury Act 1911 (Prosecutions)

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many prosecutions there have been under section 5 of the Perjury Act 1911 concerning fake declarations to the Registrar of Companies with regard to transactions covered by a company's articles of association; and who is responsible for initiating prosecutions.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 24 January 1994]: Our records are not kept in such a form that this information is readily available. No prosecutions have been brought by this Department in the last two years in the circumstances referred to in the question. Such prosecutions would normally be handled by this Department, but in some circumstances might be brought by other prosecuting authorities.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the objective of removing equal opportunities requirements from private contractors for government contracts.

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 20 January 1994, Official Report, column 776.

EMPLOYMENT

Disabled Employees

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the disability organisations with which he has met to discuss the requirement upon employers to pay a contribution towards the purchase of special equipment and services for disabled employees enshrined in the access to work proposals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has met representatives of the Royal National Institute for the Blind, the Royal National Institute for Deaf People, MENCAP, the Spinal Injuries Association, RADAR and Deaf Accord to discuss several aspects of the new scheme access to work which he announced on 22 June 1993, Official Report, column 102.

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement outlining how he intends to monitor the effectiveness of his Department's access to work proposals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A full evaluation of access to work will be carried out after its first full year of operation. The evaluation will consider the effectiveness of access to work in meeting its stated aims and will consider statistical information provided by placing assessment and counselling teams, as well as information provided through research.

Sheltered Employment

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many responses were received to the consultative document on the sheltered employment funding system; how many were (a) totally in favour and (b) totally against; and how many gave specific reservations;

(2) how many fully funded places in sheltered workshops have been available in each of the past five years; and what are the expected figures for the next two years;

(3) what has been the level of training grants allocated to sheltered workshops in each of the past five years; and what is the expected level for each of the next two years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mrs. Margaret Ewing, dated 25 January 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the responses received to the consultative document on the Sheltered Employment funding system, and the number of places available in and the level of training grants allocated to sheltered workshops.

A number of changes to the current way in which we fund Sheltered Employment were proposed in a recent consultative document. The consultation on these proposals ended on 13 September 1993 and responses are still being considered. The 115 responses received were generally supportive, but none were totally in favour or totally against our proposals—we would not have expected this to be otherwise as the consultation process was intended to elicit comments. Implementation of changes will not take place, however, until we are satisfied that the interests of severely disabled people will be best served.

The number of places we supported in local authority and voluntary body sheltered workshops over the last five years is:

	Number
1989	5,520
1990	5,476
1991	5,209
1992	5,060

Figures are for those supported on 31 March in each year and cover approved workers and trainees. Future plans are based on our supporting 4,900 workshop places in 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Sheltered workshops are only one part of the Sheltered Employment Programme; this also includes help to people with disabilities through the Sheltered Placement Scheme (SPS) and Remploy. Whilst the number of people supported in sheltered workshops has declined over the period, the overall number of people helped through the Programme has been maintained. The figures below illustrate this:

	Number
1989	19,276
1990	20,650
1991	20,777
1992	20,722

Future plans are to help at least 20,800 people through the Programme in 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Training grants paid to sheltered workshops comprise payment of an employee's basic workshop wage for an agreed period plus a contribution towards the cost of fees for externally purchased training. Employees' wages vary from workshop to workshop and year to year. There is, therefore, no standard grant payable for this item. Payment of training fees is based on reimbursement of actual costs subject to a maximum of £1,400 per person per annum (£27·88 per person per week). This has remained unchanged over the last five years. The abolition of payments for training wages and fees from 1 April 1994 is one of the items being considered in the review of Sheltered Employment funding. A very small number of workshops claimed assistance for wages and fees and it has been proposed that the money set aside for this should be added to the overall money available to local authorities and voluntary bodies for helping all individuals assisted through the Programme.

I hope this is helpful.

Slaughter Industry

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were employed in the slaughter industry in each year since 1985.

Miss Widdecombe: Information on employment in the slaughter industry is available only from the periodic censuses of employment and is as follows:

Number of employees in employment in the slaughter industry[1] in Great Britain, September of each year

Year	Number
1984	90,200
1987	92,500
1989	91,800
1991	95,100

[1] Group 412 of the standard industrial classification 1980.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the most recent residence-based unemployment rates for London by (a) borough and (b) constituency giving the figures overall and broken down for male and female; and what is the change in number of unemployed claimants in London by (i) borough and (ii) constituency for the same month in each of the last six years and the change since 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: At present, official unemployment rates are not available for areas smaller than the self-contained labour markets known as travel-to-work areas.

Unadjusted data on the numbers of unemployment claimants for each local authority district and parliamentary constituency are available on a monthly basis from June 1983 onwards. The data can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

European Social Fund

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what level of support will be available to Great Britain from the European social fund under objectives 3 and 4 from 1994 to 1999.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government welcome last Wednesday's announcement by the European Commission that Great Britain will receive approximately £2,500 million between 1994 and 1999 from the European social fund for expenditure under objectives 3 and 4 of the European Community's structural funds, outside objective 1 regions.

Objective 3 is targeted at helping young people who are joining the labour market, long-term unemployed people and other people facing particular disadvantages in finding and keeping work. The Government value the important contribution made over the years by the ESF to helping young and unemployed people in Britain prepare or compete effectively for jobs.

In the course of the negotiations on the reform of the structural funds last year, it was agreed that member states should be free to decide the balance of objective 3 and 4 in their respective countries. Objective 4 is targeted at workers still in employment. The Government's consistent view has been that the ESF should continue to concentrate first and foremost on helping unemployed people.

The Government plan therefore to devote the available ESF resources for objectives 3 and 4 to helping unemployed people under objective 3 for the foreseeable future.

River Dee

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the flood defence embankments of the River Dee from Connah's quay to Saltney in respect of high tides; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I am aware that these flood embankments were assessed as part of the recent sea defence survey undertaken by the National Rivers Authority and were considered to be in good order. This is due, for the most part, to the significant improvement works that have been carried out by the authority and its predecessors, in recent years. Much of this work has been undertaken with grant aid from the Department.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit the Dobshill hospital, Clwyd.

Hospital Estate

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has issued for calculation of the percentage maintenance expenditure for the annual upkeep of the hospital estate in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Guidelines on the percentage maintenance expenditure for the upkeep of the national health service estate in Wales were issued in Welsh health circular (85)30. This required health authorities to commit at least 7·5 per cent. of their total allocations—revenue and capital—to the maintenance of assets, that is buildings, land, vehicles, engineering services, plant and equipment.

Community Care Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is planned community care expenditure under his vote for each of 1994-95, 1995-96 and 1996-97 in both cash and real terms.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Government expenditure is planned in cash terms. Resources of £86 million in 1994-95, £124·4 million in 1995-96 and £149·6 million in 1996-97 are being provided through the local government revenue settlement towards local authorities' new responsibilities for community care. These amounts are in addition to local government spending on personal social services generally, and to certain specific grants including resources which may be made available through the mental handicap and mental illness strategies. It is for individual local authorities to determine how much in total they will spend on community care.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he issued the Welsh Office 1993-94 cash allocation letter to the health authorities; what further adjustments have been notified to Welsh health authorities; whether any further adjustments are planned before the end of the financial year; what proposals he has for alterations in the timing of such letters and adjustment notifications to health authorities in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to my reply on 9 December 1993 to his previous question relating to the notification and subsequent adjustments of 1993-94 allocations to health authorities, Official Report, column 305. My right hon. Friend will announce the initial revenue and capital allocations for 1994-95 to health authorities shortly. The timing of subsequent adjustments to authorities' allocations will largely depend on when provision held in reserve for centrally funded developments is claimed by authorities.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the NHS planned expenditure in cash and real terms in 1994-95, 1995-96 and 1996-97.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Planned net provision for the NHS in Wales in 1994-95 is £2,076 million; this is a cash increase of 5·1 per cent. over the comparable figure for this year.

Provision for 1995-96 and 1996-97 will be detailed in the Welsh Office departmental report, which is due to be published in March.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency concerning the proposed closure of the regional offices in Bangor, Carmarthen, Wrexham, Newport and Treforest.

Mr. Redwood: The location of its regional offices is a matter for the agency.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency in relation to contracting-out and privatisation proposals for functions of the agency; if he will list the agency functions proposed for out-sourcing in the next financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: In common with other public bodies, the Welsh Development Agency is required to keep under review the efficiency and effectiveness of its organisation and to arrange for its activities to be contracted out where this represents value for money.

HEALTH

Child Protection Committees

9. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the operation of the area child protection committees.

Mr. Bowis: Area child protection committees operate in every social services area in England to ensure close working relationships between social services departments, the police service, doctors, community health workers, the education service and others who share a common aim to protect children at risk.

Osteopathy

10. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to make osteopathy more widely available on the NHS.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to make osteopathy more widely available on the NHS.

Mr. Sackville: We believe that the professional recognition and regulation of the profession will encourage those purchasers who want to refer their patients for osteopathy to do so.

Pharmacies

11. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of pharmacies will suffer a fall in income following the imposition of her Department's pay settlement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Pharmacies are privately owned businesses, only part of whose income comes from the national health service. However, no pharmacy which dispensed more than 1,000 prescriptions a month of average value in 1992-93 should have its NHS income reduced in 1993-94. The NHS income of pharmacies dispensing less than 1,000 prescriptions a month will depend on a number of factors, not least whether they qualify for the essential small pharmacy scheme, which we have extended.

"The Health of the Nation"

13. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to update the targets in "The Health of the Nation".

Mr. Sackville: We are making good progress towards "The Health of the Nation" targets, most of which are for 2000 and beyond. They have been set to be challenging but achievable, and remain the right ones.

Drug Education

14. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to extend drug education programmes; and what discussions she has had with local authorities on this matter.

Dr. Mawhinney: We are spending £5 million per annum on campaigns to raise awareness and prevent drug and solvent misuse especially by the young. We have just launched a major new campaign to encourage and help parents to talk to their children about drug and solvent misuse. Getting the message across involves co-operation with many agencies and my officials keep in close touch with local authorities on their contribution to fighting drug misuse.

Internal Market

15. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to review the operation of the internal market in health.

Dr. Mawhinney: The benefits of the internal market are clear; more patients are now being treated than ever before; people are waiting shorter times for treatment. National health service spending is also at an all-time high. Consequently, there are no plans to review the operation of the internal market.

Child Care

16. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the way in which local authority social services are using their discretion in the treatment of children placed in their care, particularly with regard to the provision for trips abroad.

Mr. Bowis: The framework for treatment of children in care by local authorities is contained in the Children Act 1989, regulations and associated guidance. It is the responsibility of the elected members of each local authority to ensure that these are complied with and that the resources involved are properly spent. I have made it clear, however, that trips abroad for young offenders are inappropriate.

GP Fundholders

19. Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of establishing each general practitioner fundholder; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Each fundholding practice is entitled to the reimbursement of appropriate expenses incurred in the preparatory year to fundholding. The maximum level of reimbursement is £17,500 for a single practice fund and £20,000 for a grouped practice fund.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to monitor the impact of general practitioner fundholding on community care; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regional health authorities are responsible for monitoring the general practitioner fundholding scheme locally. They tell us that, as in other areas, GP fundholders are working with community health staff to improve the quality of care for patients.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many of the practices which expressed an interest in 1992-93 in becoming fundholders the following April but did not do so will become fundholders in April 1994;

(2) how many of the general practitioners practices which expressed an interest in 1991-92 in becoming fundholders the following April but did not do so subsequently became fundholding practices in 1993 or will become fundholders in April 1994;

(3) how many general practitioner practices have received the start-up allowance for potential fundholders more than once.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally. Regional health authorities manage the general practitioner fundholding scheme and are responsible for admitting practices to the scheme.

Patients Charter

20. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures have been taken to improve the amount of information available to national health service patients under the patients charter.

Dr. Mawhinney: The patients charter gives patients a right to information on local health services. Health authorities are making this information available to patients in many ways, including local charters, through the local media, leaflets, posters and public meetings. All district health authorities also publish annual reports on performance against patients charter standards. Providers are also required to display details of performance. In addition in January 1993 a national freephone service—0800 665544—was introduced which provides callers with information about local national health service services, patients charter standards, common diseases, waiting times, how to complain about national health service services as well as health advice. In June 1994 the National Health Service Management Executive will be publishing national health service performance tables for the first time.

Secretary of State (Travel)

22. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list her travel arrangements, with costs, over the last 12 months.

Mr. Sackville: Information to this level of detail could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Junior Doctors (Working Hours)

23. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the implementation of the new deal for reducing the hours worked by junior doctors.

Dr. Mawhinney: I am pleased to say that progress on implementing the new deal on junior doctors' hours has been very encouraging.

Between September 1990 and September 1993 junior doctors' posts contracted for more than 83 hours a week fell from over 13,000 to only 91, a reduction of 99 per cent. That represents a remarkable achievement.

I announced in December that we were giving priority this year to tackling hard-pressed on-call posts contracted for more than 72 hours a week. We are determined that junior doctors see real benefits from the new deal.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the extent to which measures to cut the working week of junior doctors have achieved their targets.

Dr. Mawhinney: We receive regular reports from regional task forces. Between September 1990 and September 1993 the number of junior doctors and dentists contracted for more than an average 83 hours a week fell from over 13,300 to 91, a reduction of 99 per cent. This is a remarkable achievement.

From August 1992 to September 1993 the number of those working in hard-pressed on-call posts contracted on average for between 73 and 83 hours a week fell from over 10,200 to 7,800, a 24 per cent. reduction. In December 1993 we announced that eliminating the remaining posts in this category will be a priority in 1994.

Asthma

17. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the treatment of asthmatic people.

Mr. Sackville: We attach high importance to the prompt and appropriate treatment of people with asthma. Last July the Department launched the chronic disease management programme, which is an organised programme of care run by general practitioners for people with asthma. And only last month the National Health Service Management Executive asked purchasers to reflect in contracts the professionally developed clinical guidelines produced by the British Thoracic Society on the management of asthma.

21. Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has recently received about the incidence of asthma in young people.

Mr. Sackville: In the last three months one representation has been received specifically about a young person with asthma.

24. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what work her Department is doing to secure a reduction in the incidence of asthma.

Mr. Sackville: Officials of the Department have initiated discussions with experts in the field with a view to identifying priorities for research aimed at a reduction in the incidence of asthma.

25. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals in Britain have not applied for trust status.

Dr. Mawhinney: A list of the directly managed units in England not awaiting a decision on national health service trust status is set out as follows. Information relating to Scotland and Wales are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

[1] My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has given permission for these units to submit applications in the fifth wave of NHS trusts.

Hospital Trust Boards (Meetings)

26. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital trust board meetings have been open to the press and the public since 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney: Trusts are not required to hold their board meetings in public. Each trust is required to hold an annual public meeting at which it presents its annual report, audited accounts and any report made on those accounts by the auditor.

Many trusts go beyond the minimum requirements on public access. Detailed information is not held centrally.

Social Workers (Training)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in implementing her review of the training of social workers.

Mr. Bowis: The Government are in the process of implementing the range of recommendations from the policy and financial management review of the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work—CCETSW. This includes proposals for improvements to the management structure of CCETSW and a review of the "Rules and Requirements for the Diploma in Social Work".

Mental Health Review Tribunal

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who are the members currently appointed to the mental health review tribunal.

Mr. Bowis: A list of members of the English tribunals will be placed in the Library.

Drugs and Alcohol

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations she has received as regards funding for drug and alcohol addiction treatment centres;

(2) what assessment her Department has made on the cost implications arising from shortfalls in service provision for treatment centres for drug and alcohol addiction cases;

(3) what consultations she has had regarding provision of drug and alcohol addiction treatment centres; and if she will make a statement;

(4) what monitoring her Department has done on the impact of the implementation of community care on independent providers of residential services for alcohol and drug misuse; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The Department has received a number of representations about the funding of residential services for alcohol and drug misusers under the new community care arrangements. The Department consulted both providers and purchasers of services for this vulnerable group on the preparation of guidance to local authorities to ensure that alcohol and drug misusers receive proper attention within community care. This guidance, LAC(93)2, was issued in January 1993 and copies are available in the Library.

We also commissioned Goldsmiths' college to monitor the impact of community care on residential services for alcohol and drug misusers in the first three months of community care and the report "Who Cares Now" was published in July 1993. A copy of this report is in the Library. A three-month follow-up report was commissioned by Alcohol Concern and the Standing Conference on Drug Abuse—SCODA—entitled "Vulnerable Services for Vulnerable People" and published in December 1993, copies of which will be placed in the Library. The Goldsmiths' reports make it clear that the numbers of people receiving care funded by local authorities have increased steadily over the first six months of the community care reforms, and that local authorities had specified budgets in 1993-94 totalling £20·59 million for the purchase of services for alcohol and drug misusers within community care.

We shall continue to monitor the provision of services for drug and alcohol misusers within our general monitoring of community care.

Acute Day Care

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of districts provide acute day care as an alternative to hospital admission.

Mr. Sackville: Patients are admitted as day cases within every district health authority in England.

Mental Health

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many districts have a register of the 300 or 400 most severely ill vulnerable people in their area; and how many have a care programme approach register;

(2) how many districts have a suicide register to identify potentially vulnerable people.

Mr. Bowis: Guidance to be issued to district health authorities in the next few weeks will require them to ensure that providers of mental health services have in place from 1 April 1994 registers which identify those people with severe mental illness who may be at risk to themselves or to others. The number of mentally ill people to be included on these registers will be determined locally. The terms "suicide register" and "care programme register" are not in general use in the national health service, but all providers of NHS mental health services should already be able to identify all patients subject to the care programme approach.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many districts have a mental health service plan which targets and prioritises the severely mentally ill.

Mr. Bowis: All district health authorities are developing plans to achieve "The Health of the Nation" target to reduce the suicide rate of severely mentally ill people by at least 33 per cent. by 2000.

Complementary Therapies

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the policy of the NHS on the use of complementary therapies where they are found to be cost-effective; and what criteria are in use to enable the medical professionals and the management to choose and judge;

(2) how the NHS assesses the therapies it considers complementary.

Mr. Sackville: Our policy is that the national health service should assess interventions on the basis of their effectiveness in improving or maintaining health. There are a variety of sources of information on effectiveness, and we are seeking to make such information more readily accessible to managers and clinicians who need it.

Independent Sector Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to independent sector homes of inspection by local authority arm's-length inspection units (a) per resident and (b) per year in total.

Mr. Bowis: The annual fee payable to local authorities by those running registered independent residential care homes for four or more residents is £41 per resident. Inspection by independent inspection units is among the costs reflected in that fee.

Information about the total cost of such fees per year is not available centrally.

Prescriptions

Mr. Milligan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the prevalence of fraud in prescriptions issued free of charge.

Dr. Mawhinney: Checks on eligibility for prescription charge exemption and charge remission under the national health service low income scheme indicate that the incidence of fraud is relatively low. The adequacy and operation of these checks are kept under review.

Senile Dementia

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each district health authority and trust the total number of their continual care beds designated for perons diagnosed with senile dementia.

Mr. Bowis: National health services continuing care beds are not usually designated specifically for senile dementia.

Hospitals, London

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital beds there are in the Greater London area per member of the population; what are the comparable figures under the suggestions made in the Tomlinson report; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The average daily number of hospital beds in all specialties in Greater London per thousand of the population in the financial year 1992-93 is 4·9. The Tomlinson report looked only at acute hospital beds and focused on inner London. Professor Tomlinson gave three main reasons why the need for hospital beds in inner London would fall: (i) patients from outside London would be less likely to come into London for hospital treatment; (ii) changes in medical care will lead to more day surgery; and (iii) shorter hospital stays will contribute to increased efficiency in bed usage.

Day Care Places

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of full-time day care places in day nurseries for under-fives provided in each local authority in Greater London.

Mr. Bowis: The latest available information on full-time day nursery places in London is contained in the publication "Children's day care facilities at 31 March 1992, England". Copies are available in the Library.

Community Care

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 794, if she will give the planned expenditure for the present year under the community care expenditure under the provisions of the special transitional grant; and if she will give the actual outturn expenditure for the first half-year and for each of the first three quarters.

Mr. Bowis: We have made available for 1993-94 a special transitional grant of £565·4 million, which must be spent entirely on community care. Authorities will be required to account for their expenditure at the end of the financial year.

Patient S

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what drugs and treatment were given to Patient S, who recently died following the withdrawal of food and drink, between the time when the feeding tube was removed and his death on 16 January.

Mr. Sackville: The Department does not hold confidential personal information of this nature.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether a post mortem report has been commissioned in the case of the death of Patient S on Sunday 16 January; whether an inquest will be held into that death; and if she will make it her policy to publish any medical, pathological and other reports compiled in respect of this case.

Mr. Sackville: We understand from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department that a post mortem report has been compiled and that an inquest will be held. The decision whether or not to release information put in evidence at an inquest rests with the relevant coroner.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the NHS planned expenditure in England in 1994-95, 1995-96 and 1996-97 in cash and real terms.

Mr. Sackville: The Government are honouring in full their pledge to increase year by year the level of resources committed to the national health service in real terms. Government expenditure on the national health service in England is planed to rise to £30,669 million in 1994-95, a cash increase of 5·6 per cent. over plan, or 1·6 per cent. in real terms. Details of the Government expenditure plans for 1994-95 to 1996-97 for all the Department's programmes will be published in March in the departmental report.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many hospitals and other units will start operation as NHS trusts in April.

Dr. Mawhinney: To date we have given approval to 99 hospitals and other units to become operational as national health service trusts from 1 April 1994. We will be considering further applications shortly and will make a further announcement then. An updated list of the status of all fourth wave applications has been placed in the Library.

Nursing Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of qualified nursing staff by specialty for each region in each year since 1979.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 6 December 1993]: This information will be placed in the Library. The total number of qualified nurses and midwives working in the national health service has risen by 6,490 in the period September 1989 to September 1992.

Meningitis

12. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of children are now immunised against HIB meningitis.

Dr. Mawhinney: Immunisation against Haemophilus influenae type b was added to the routine childhood immunisation programme on 1 October 1992. Preliminary figures for England and Wales show that 90 per cent. acceptance for the full course of three doses of vaccine is already being achieved.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to resource the creation of rapid response units, nationally, to combat child meningitis fatalities.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 21 January 1994]: Children with meningitis are most appropriately treated in paediatric intensive care units. A report, "The Care of Critically Ill Children", by a working party convened by the British Paediatric Association has recently been published and copies are available in the Library. This includes recommendations on how a more accessible distribution of paediatric intensive care facilities can be achieved.

We are about to issue the report to purchasers of health services for children, with the request that they ensure any planned increases in paediatric intensive care facilities proceed and that they review immediately the current level of provison in order to develop a strategic plan for the purchasing of paediatric intensive care within the overall development of children's services. Regional health authorities will oversee this process and submit an interim report on action under way to the National Health Service Management Executive by April.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Stockton-on-Tees County Court

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what future use his Department intends for Stockton-on-Tees county court.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor consented on 5 March 1993 to public consultation on the proposal by the circuit administrator for the north-eastern circuit to close Stockton-on-Tees county court. The responses to that consultation are being considered and a decision by the Lord Chancellor will be made shortly. If the court were closed, the present court building would be sold.

Barristers

Ms Lynne: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what efforts are being made to ensure that newly qualified barristers are fully utilised.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The legal profession is independent and self regulating and the Government do not control the utilisation of newly qualified, or any other, members of the profession. These are matters which are properly the province of the professional bodies to consider.

Ethnic Minority Seminars

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the purpose of the seminars on ethnic minorities to be undertaken by all judges; how many seminars are taking place; where they are held; on what dates; at what cost in each case; what are the exact topics to be discussed; and if he will name those directing the discussions.

Mr. John M. Taylor: This programme of seminars is arranged by the Judicial Studies Board. Its purpose is to enhance the awareness of judges, recorders and assistant recorders of ethnic minority issues which may assist them. The seminars will be held at locations throughout England and Wales over the next two years; a detailed programme is being prepared. The Lord Chancellor supports this programme and has allocated a sum of over £900,000.

ENVIRONMENT

Minewater Pollution

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each year since 1988 all organisations or projects investigating minewater pollution which have received, or are receiving, financial or grant aid support from his Department.

Mr. Atkins: Comprehensive information in the form required is not readily available. However, the National Rivers Authority is currently funding a pilot project at the Wheal Jane tin mine in Cornwall devoted to identifying low cost treatment options. The NRA is jointly funding, with the British Oxygen Company Foundation for Environmental and Community Research, projects to examine low cost treatment technologies for discharges from disused mines involving the River Pelena in south Wales and the Little Don in Yorkshire. The NRA is also collaborating in a study with the Welsh Development Agency into the efficiency of engineered wetlands for the removal of metals and acidity from discharges from abandoned mines.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he or his Department last held meetings with (a) the National Rivers Authority and (b) British Coal to discuss minewater pollution in the Durham coalfield.

Mr. Atkins: My Department maintains regular contact with the National Rivers Authority about this and other issues. Liaison with British Coal is a matter for the NRA, and there are well-established arrangements.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of the Wardell-Armstrong report on minewater pollution.

Mr. Atkins: Additional copies of Wardell Armstrong's final report on the potential impact of ceasing mine dewatering in the south-western part of the Durham coalfield are being produced. They will be placed in the House Library as soon as they are available.

Environmental Information Regulations 1992

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the operation of the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 since they came into force.

Mr. Atkins: The Government introduced the Environmental Information Regulations just over a year ago, and they seem to be meeting their purpose.

Radiation Monitoring Scheme

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to implement the Government's proposals for a radiation monitoring system and public warning network; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The RIMNET national radiation monitoring and nuclear emergency response system, set up as part of the national response plan for dealing with overseas nuclear accidents, has been operating since 1988. Details of the system are given in the HMSO booklet, "The National Response Plan and Radioactive Incident Monitoring Network (RIMNET). Phase 1", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. A contract to extend, automate and provide additional operational facilities for the system is currently approaching completion.

Biodiversity Convention

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 566, if he will list the 38 countries that had ratified the biodiversity convention by 29 December 1993; and if he will list the countries that have ratified the convention since then.

Mr. Atkins: Revised information from the United Nations legal office in New York shows that 41 countries had ratified the biodiversity convention by 29 December 1993, rather than the 38 we believed had done so when I answered the hon. Member's earlier question on 18 January. A further two countries have since ratified, and the following is a full list in order of ratification.

Olympic Games

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has examined the accounts for the Manchester Olympic Bid Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The Manchester Olympic Bid Committee was established under the Companies Acts as a company limited by guarantee. It has no legal link with my Department.

However, since the company received £2·2 million in grant on a pound for pound basis to cover the cost of preparing the bid, my Department carried out an internal audit to assess the adequacy of the arrangements established by the company to safeguard public funds. The report found that the accounting arrangements were generally satisfactory and the terms of the grant letter were being met.

My right hon. Friend expects to receive a copy of the final audited accounts in due course.

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost of the commitment given by the Sports Council, the Department of National Heritage and the Prime Minister, including all travel costs, of the Manchester olympic bid campaign.

Mr. Baldry: The Government committed some £75 million to support the Manchester olympic bid. This comprised £35·5 million for the arena; up to £30 million for the acquisition and clearance of the Eastlands site, which is ongoing; £6·4 million for the velodrome, plus £2 million from the Sports Council; £2·2 million to support the activities of the Manchester Olympic Bid Committee.

The Prime Minister and Ministers from a number of Government Departments met International Olympic Committee members on a number of occasions at home and overseas to discuss the olympic bid. Most of the meetings took place in the course of normal departmental business and, therefore, the costs fell within existing departmental running cost budgets. Information about these costs is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the accident rate for children living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation for the last year that figures are available;

(2) how many families with children are currently living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation in (a) England and (b) Wales.

Sir George Young: The information for England is not available centrally and my Department has no estimates.

For information about Wales, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

South-East Planning Guidance

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish regional planning guidance for the south-east.

Mr. Baldry: The regional planning guidance for the south-east will be published as soon as possible.

Council House Sales

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority in London the total discounted value of houses and flats sold by them in each year since 1980-81.

Sir George Young: The total reported discounted values of dwellings sold by local authorities in London in the years 1980-81 to 1992-93 are given in the table. Actual cash receipts in any year will depend on the extent to which sales were financed by loans from the authorities.

Rent-a-room Scheme

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the number of lettings of spare rooms which have been made available in consequence of the rent-a-room scheme under which owners receive tax relief on certain income from lodgers.

Sir George Young: Information about the number of rooms let under the rent-a-room scheme can be obtained only from housing surveys. No data are available as yet.

Housing, Wandsworth

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the London borough of Wandsworth as to the service charges that are imposed by the authority on people living in properties that they have purchased from the borough; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Service charges imposed by a local authority as a freeholder on individual leaseholders are a matter for that authority. The London borough of Wandsworth is participating in a survey of charging practice, commissioned by the Department. The findings should inform good practice guidance we propose to issue in the summer.

Home Insulation

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to institute a national programme to insulate homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My Department already operates a national programme to insulate homes. The home energy efficiency scheme—HEES—was introduced on 1 January 1991 and provides grants in England, Scotland and Wales to householders on low incomes for the installation of loft, tank and pipe insulation, draughtproofing and energy advice. There is a similar scheme in Northern Ireland. In April 1994 the provision for HEES is to be almost doubled and the scheme extended to pensioners and the disabled.

Letting Agents

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider bringing letting agents within the scope of the Estate Agents Act 1979 so as to protect the public against loss of deposits and other malpractices and to ensure that letting agents are properly regulated.

Sir George Young: The Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 already regulates the activities of letting agencies. This makes it an offence to take money for registering the name or requirements of someone seeking a tenancy of a dwelling, to charge for supplying addresses of dwellings to be let and to advertise a dwelling, without the owner's authority, as being available to let. We consulted on the value of the Act towards the end of last year and decided, in the light of responses received, to maintain it in its present form.

In addition, a number of trade associations, such as the Association of Residential Letting Agents already promote good practice throughout the industry by means of codes of practice and bonding schemes. The Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors is preparing a code of practice on the management of residential property.

Local Authority Asset Sales

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing (a) the value of sales by each local authority of (i) parks and open space and (ii) other outside sports and playing fields in (1) 1991-92 and (2) 1992-93 approximated to the nearest £1,000 and (b) the total value of assets sold in each of those service categories by all local authorities in each of those years.

Mr. Baldry: The total value of fixed assets sold in the service categories specified is summarised in the table.

	1991-92	1992-93[1]
Parks and open spaces	16,901	23,924
Golf courses	205	768
Other outside sports/playing fields	1,824	644

I am arranging for information on the sale of fixed assets in these service categories, for each local authority, to be placed in the Library of the House.

Wildlife Injuries, Lancashire

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sea birds and other wild life have been found dead or injured off the Lancashire coast in the last month; what information he has to the causes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: I have been asked to reply.

The pollution incident off the coast of Lancashire was reported to the Department of Transport's marine pollution control unit on 1 January. More than 700 sea birds have been affected, but there are no reports of other wildlife being harmed. Samples of the substance recovered from the coastline and samples from a cargo of lubricating oil additives discharged at Eastham near Liverpool on 30 December by the tanker Stolt Kestrel have been analysed by the Laboratory of the Government Chemist. They have concluded that the two samples originated from the same source.

These particular additives are category D substances —the least harmful category—under the relevant provisions of the International Maritime Organisation— "MARPOL 73/78". The owner of the Stolt Kestrel, the Stolt Nielsen Group, has said that after unloading its cargo the Stolt Kestrel washed its tanks more than 12 nautical miles offshore in the Irish sea in accordance with the International Maritime Organisation regulations for category D substances, which permit discharges of mixtures of not more than one part of substance to 10 parts of water. The permitted discharge of washings from tankers carrying noxious liquid substances in bulk is presently under discussion in the IMO with a view to making discharge provisions more stringent.

The marine pollution control unit is discussing the Laboratory of the Government Chemist report with the Stolt Nielsen Group which is considering its position. The group has already announced that it will no longer wash at sea tanks which have carried these additives.

ATTORNEY GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Attorney General, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 1049, when he expects to inform the House of the results of the survey of cases discontinued by the Crown Prosecution Service during November 1993.

The Attorney-General: I have today placed a copy of the findings in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Incitement to Racial Hatred

Mr. Peter Shore: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 1051, how many cases of alleged incitement to racial hatred under the Public Order Act 1986 were referred to the Crown Prosecution Service in each year since 1987.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service does not maintain records of files submitted to it by the police, or correspondence from members of the public, categorised by the type of offence alleged to have been committed. The information sought is therefore not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Brian Charrington

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the persons present in addition to the Solicitor-General at the meeting he chaired of defence and prosecution counsel dealing with the case of Mr. Brian Charrington.

The Attorney-General: Those present at the meeting were, in addition to the Solicitor-General and myself, leading counsel for the prosecution, leading counsel for Mr. Brian Charrington, two lawyers from HM Customs and Excise and two lawyers from my own Department.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Attorney-General what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during the current year.

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January 1994, Official Report, column 849.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Domestic Electricity

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he will agree to the proposal by the Comité Européen des Normes to standardise on the continental two-pin unfused star ring system for domestic electricity.

Mr. Eggar: CENELEC, the body responsible for European electrical standards, is working on draft standards for a future European plug and socket system. While the standards under discussion would not incorporate a fuse in the plug, an equivalent level of protection would be achieved either by a suitable fuse or circuit breaker at the consumer unit or by the incorporation of a fuse in the socket. Moreover, the CENELEC work includes provision for sleeved pins on plugs, shuttered sockets and a three-pin plug for those appliances which need earth protection.

If these discussions result in a European standard, the United Kingdom will need to consider whether to adopt it or seek a derogation. In this assessment, safety will be paramount.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what costs will accrue from standardisation to the continental two-pin unfused star ring system for domestic users.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has commissioned an independent analysis of the likely costs and benefits for the United Kingdom of adopting a future European plug and socket standard. The final report from the consultants is expected within a few weeks and will be published in the spring to form the basis for wider consultation on this issue. In assessing whether the change to the United Kingdom's present standards might be desirable, full account will be taken of the cost implications for consumers and industry.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the implications of the Government's "Back to Basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Heseltine: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Eggar: My Department does not classify consultancy contracts in terms of their activity and the information requested cannot be provided other than at disproportionate cost.

Pit Closures

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will take measures to ensure that collieries closed by British Coal are put on a care and maintenance basis until he has explored whether or not EC funds are available to help meet the cost of mothballing mines.

Mr. Eggar: British Coal applies for EC loans and grants as and when these are available on appropriate terms. For instance, loans to British Coal from the European Coal and Steel Community for financing capital expenditure at deep mines currently amount to £99 million in total. It is for British Coal to decide how to finance any particular project or activity which it might decide to undertake.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the companies granted licences to build combined cycle gas turbines and the generating capacity of the proposed plant since the EC revoked the restriction on the use of gas for electricity generation.

Mr. Eggar: Details of construction consents granted for new CCGT's are contained in tables 10.2 and 10.3 of the White Paper "The Prospects for Coal", Cmnd. 2235. Since the publication of that White Paper, my right hon. Friend has granted further consents under section 36 of the Electricity Act as follows:

Company	Location	Capacity (MW)
National Power	Deeside	Extension to 500
	Staythorpe C	1,500
	Didcot B	1,500
PowerGen	Connah's Quay	1,360
Grovehurst Energy	Kemsley	90
SCA Aylesford	Aylesford	100
Seabank Power	Seabank	1,200
Eastern Generation	King's Lynn	380
Central Power	Fort Dunlop	120
Keadby Developments	Keadby	700

Other stations with a capacity below that for which section 36 consent is necessary—above 50 MW—have received planning permission under the Town and Country Planning Acts.

Contracting Out

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will halt any further proposals to contract out information-gathering areas of his Department following the findings of the report into business attitudes to the contracting out of statistical inquiry work.

Mr. Eggar: There are no plans to contract out statistical inquiry work undertaken by my Department.

"Prospects for Coal"

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total cost including the expenses of all consultants he has commissioned to help produce the White Paper, "Prospects for Coal".

Mr. Eggar: The total cost was £1·4 million.

School Fees

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department spent on private education and boarding school allowances for the children of personnel employed by his Department in each of the last five years; and how many children had their fees paid in each of those years.

Mr. Eggar: This expenditure is not identified separately and to provide the information would entail disproportionate cost.

Power Stations

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures his Department is taking to improve the efficiency of British power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The choice of fuel and type of plant for power stations are commercial matters for generators. The major plants constructed recently or for which consent has been given use combined cycle gas turbines which operate at a higher level of energy efficiency than the old plant which they replace.

The Government support the wider use of combined heat and power plant, which can operate at very high levels of efficiency, wherever this is economic, and have a role in addressing any unnecessary barriers to such developments. On 16 December, the Government announced changes to the regulations governing on-site generation of electricity. These changes should encourage the further development of combined heat and power schemes.

Tours Direct and New Vista Travel

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether customers of Tours Direct and New Vista Travel were covered by the legislation covering package travel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 24 January 1994]: In so far as Tours Direct and New Vista Travel were offering packages, customers will have been covered by the Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what improvements in trade opportunities for British companies he expects to result from the GATT, with particular reference to trade with the United States.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 January 1994]: Improved trade opportunities for British exporters will come from higher world growth, reductions in industrial tariffs, the inclusion of services and intellectual property in the multilateral trading system for the first time, improved trade rules and a more stable international trading environment. The average cut in bound tariff rates on exports of industrial products from the European Community to the United States is 49 per cent. Tariffs will be eliminated completely on agricultural equipment, beer, construction equipment, furniture, medical equipment, paper, pharmaceuticals, certain spirits, steel and toys. The new agreement on Government procurement will open up purchases worth over £200 billion worldwide per year to United Kingdom suppliers of goods and services.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect of the GATT on the competitiveness of British industry.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 January 1994]: British industry will benefit from higher world growth and from the reduction of tariffs on imports of components and raw materials into the United Kingdom. British exporters will benefit greatly from the lifting of overseas trade barriers, improved trade rules and a more stable international trading environment.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what commitment has been given by the United States Government as part of the GATT negotiations to reduce (a) direct and (b) indirect subsidies to industries; and what was the overall percentage reduction in subsidies undertaken.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 January 1994]: In common with the other GATT signatories, the United States Government will be bound by the terms of the new subsidies agreement which will impose clearer disciplines on subsidies than the present GATT subsidies code. It is too early to say how this will affect the value of any subsidies paid out by the United States Government.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what will be the total reduction in the sum spent by European Governments in the reduction of subsidies to European industries following the GATT agreement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 January 1994]: Except in the field of agriculture, where specific reductions in domestic support and subsidised exports have been agreed, it is too early to say how the GATT agreement will affect the value of any subsidies paid out by European Governments.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax, Southampton

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the amount of uncollected VAT arrears in the area covered by the Southampton Customs and Excise office;

(2) what was the total number of Customs and Excise officers engaged in VAT inspections in the area covered by the Southampton Customs and Excise office in each year since 1983;

(3) what was the total number of VAT inspections carried out in the area covered by the Southampton Customs and Excise office in each year since 1983.

Sir John Cope: In December 1993, the outstanding VAT debt of registered businesses within the Southampton local VAT office area was just over £10 million.

Because of the restructuring of local VAT office boundaries and other operational changes, VAT visiting employment figures are not available for the whole period requested. For the years to March 1993 and March 1994, Southampton LVO assigned 43 and 45 officers respectively to such duties.

Using those staff, 3,962 visits were carried out in the period to March 1993 and it is planned to complete some 3,450 visits by March 1994. The number of visits is not, of itself, an indicator of the efficacy of the visiting programme as businesses are selected in accordance with their risk profile which may vary from year to year.

Contracting Out

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what areas of statistical work have been contracted out by the Treasury over the past three years.

Mr. Nelson: No statistical work has been contracted out by the Treasury over the past three years.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will halt any further proposals to contract out information-gathering areas of his Department following the report into "Business Attitudes to the Contracting Out of Statistical Inquiry Work".

Mr. Nelson: Any proposals for contracting out statistical work in my Departments will take the report fully into account in assessing value for money. Business concerns about confidentiality and our quality requirements for statistics would obviously be key considerations.

House Prices

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rise he expects in the price of a typical house in 1994, 1995 and 1996; and if he will provide figures for Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the English regions.

Mr. Nelson: Such forecasts are not available.

Rent-a-room Tax Relief

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people will benefit from his rent-a-room tax reliefs.

Mr. Dorrell: Information about the number of people benefiting from the rent-a-room scheme introduced in the Finance (No. 2) Act 1992 is not yet available.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue forgone in consequence of the introduction of the rent-a-room scheme under which owners of property can receive tax relief on certain income for lodgers.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that the information requested is not yet available.

Value Added Tax (Charities)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much charities are currently paying in VAT; how much benefit they receive from direct tax concessions for giving; and what plans he has to remedy any imbalance.

Sir John Cope: Direct tax reliefs on charitable giving are worth about £260 million a year to charities. Other direct tax reliefs benefiting charities are worth a further £480 million, business rates relief £390 million and VAT reliefs £150 million—a total of £1·3 billion a year. Charities estimate that they pay £350 million a year in irrecoverable VAT.

Value Added Tax (Medical Services)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on the implications for the application of VAT to the provision of medical legal services of EEC Council directive of 17 May 1977 on the harmonisation of the laws of the member states relating to turnover taxes-common system of VAT: uniform system of assessment—"the sixth directive"; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement about the application of VAT to the provision of medical services which involve no patient care, including the provision of expert evidence in medical legal cases.

Sir John Cope: The professional services of a registered medical practitioner are exempt from VAT in the United Kingdom. This ensures the simple and straightforward application of the exemption and is in accordance with the requirements of the EC sixth VAT directive.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people who will pay insurance premium tax.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 24 January 1994]: Evidence from the 1991 family expenditure survey suggests that around 16·5 million households—85 per cent. —will pay insurance premium tax.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received about the installation of traffic lights at the junction of Oak lane and the A45 near Meriden; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have received no representations about the installation of traffic lights at the junction of Oak lane and the A45 near Meriden.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Press Interviews)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) by whom and in what circumstances a journalist was given access to interview Darius Guppy in prison, for and on behalf of Hello! magazine; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the Prison Service learned that Darius Guppy was to be interviewed in prison by a journalist;

(3) on what date Darius Guppy was interviewed in prison for or on behalf of Hello! magazine;

(4) when and what action was taken by him or the Prison Service on discovering that payments had been made by Hello! magazine for rights to an interview with Darius Guppy in prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the article appearing in Hello! magazine on Darius Guppy.

We do not know when or by what means Hello! conducted the interview with Mr. Guppy, although it could not have been from a prison cell as suggested in the article. He was not given permission to be interviewed in prison, and was not visited in prison by anyone identified as a journalist. The Prison Service was not aware Mr. Guppy had been interviewed until the article was published in Hello!

I understand that the Press Complaints Commission found Hello! to be in breach of its Code of Practice in making payment for the interview. I similarly deplore such practice. However, I understand payment for the interview was not made to Mr. Guppy but to third parties. Consequently, it would not be a matter over which the prison has any jurisdiction.

Travel Documents

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (a) what is the average time currently being taken to process a travel document, (b) how this compares with the target figure in the citizens charter, (c) how many cases have exceeded this target in the last 12 months and (d) what percentage of applications this represents.

Mr. Charles Wardle: At present, applications for Home Office travel documents made by people accepted as refugees under the terms of the 1951 United Nations convention are taking up to eight weeks to be considered, and other applications about six months. These periods may be exceeded in cases which necessitate further inquiries or which raise other immigration issues. There is no target for this work in the citizens charter. Action is now in hand to process new applications more quickly and tackle the backlog.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applicants are currently awaiting the processing of travel documents; and what was the application date of the earliest dated application.

Mr. Charles Wardle: At the end of December 1993, there were 5,099 cases outstanding in the travel document section of the immigration and nationality department. The oldest unactioned travel document application from a person accepted as a refugee was made on 18 November 1993, and from a non-refugee on 14 July 1993.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the Security Service Tribunal.

Mr. Michael Howard: The current members of the Security Service Tribunal are the right hon. Lord Justice Simon Brown, president, Sheriff John McInnes QC, vice-president, and Sir Richard Gaskell.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the Interception of Communications Tribunal.

Mr. Michael Howard: The current members of the Interception of Communications Tribunal are the hon. Sir William Macpherson of Cluny, TD, president, Sir Cecil Clothier KCB QC, vice-president, Sir David Calcutt QC, Mr. Ivor Guild CBE and Mr. Peter Scott QC.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information on external consultancy contracts let by the Home Office since 1979 is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Safer Cities

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which areas of the Northumbria police force have been included in the safer cities project for 1994-95.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The safer cities project to be set up in the city of Newcastle upon Tyne will encompass the metropolitan district of Newcastle upon Tyne, which is served by four basic command units within the Northumbria police force, namely—Newcastle central, Newcastle east, Newcastle west and Newcastle north.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has received from the Union of Shop, Distributive and Allied Workers in relation to the Sunday Trading Bill; and what response he has given.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None; but we understand that USDAW wrote to all Members of Parliament in November last year, in support of partial deregulation.

Visas

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the European Commission's proposed list of countries whose nationals must be in possession of a visa when crossing the external frontiers of member states will come into force.

Mr. Charles Wardle: When it has been agreed by the Council of Ministers.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement with regard to the effect on Commonwealth countries of the European Commission's proposals to determine the list of countries whose nationals must be in possession of a visa when crossing the external frontiers of member states;

(2) if he will make it his policy, in discussions with the European Commission and in the Council of Ministers about the rights of those Commonwealth countries whose nationals are able to visit the United Kingdom without a visa, to ensure that they may continue to do so;

(3) if he will give undertakings to the Governments of those Commonwealth countries whose nationals are currently able to visit the United Kingdom without a visa that they may continue to do so.

Mr. Charles Wardle: An explanatory memorandum setting out the Government's response to the Commission's proposals will be submitted shortly.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the European Commission on maintaining the rights of those Commonwealth countries whose nationals are able to visit the United Kingdom without a visa, when drawing up the list of countries whose nationals must be in possession of a visa when crossing the external frontiers of member states.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None formally. Formal discussions of the Commission's proposal have only just started.

Juvenile Offenders

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to seek a change in the law to make it possible to identify publicly a juvenile who, having been charged with a criminal offence, is unlawfully at large.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to clause 37 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill which is now before Parliament.

Life Sentence Prisoners

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many life sentence prisoners there are in the northern region; how many have been convicted of murder; and how many have been convicted of serious rape cases.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest information is for 30 June 1992 when there were 156 persons, of whom 149 were convicted of murder and seven were convicted of rape, serving life sentences in Prison Service establishments in the northern region of England and Wales.

Accidents (Cyclists)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists involved in an accident with a cyclist were prosecuted for dangerous driving in (a) 1991, (b) 1992 and (c) 1993.

Mr. Maclean: Information on whether persons prosecuted for dangerous driving had been involved in accidents with cyclists is not available centrally.

Domestic Workers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government will now monitor the screening procedures introduced in May 1991 to facilitate the working of the 1980 concession in respect of domestic workers.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The arrangements for this scheme are kept under close review.

Charity Commission

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 947-48, what factors led the Charity Commission to believe that some of the payments made by Foundation for Business Responsibilities to Marketforce Communications Ltd. were not justified; what consideration was given to investigating how these payments had been used by Marketforce Communications Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As I explained in my answer of 17 December, it was the trustees of the foundation themselves who, during the course of the commissioners' investigation, formed the view that some of the payments made to Marketforce Communications Ltd. may not have been justified. Subsequently, these and all other payments to the company by the foundation were recovered in full. New procedures were adopted by the foundation to prevent similar concerns arising in the future.

It is for the charity commissioners to decide on the extent and nature of inquiries that are appropriate in a particular case. In this case, the commissioners were satisfied that sufficient action had been taken to protect charitable funds, and that it was not necessary to continue with their inquiries.

Prisons (Drugs and Alcohol)

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the services on drug and alcohol abuse available in each prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Lady Olga Maitland, dated 26 January 1994:

> The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the services for drug and alcohol abuse available in each prison. Detailed information about the services provided in individual prisons relating to drug and alcohol abuse is not collected centrally, and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.
> There are, however, a number of services available. Detailed information about caring for drug users is set out in Circular Instruction 12/1991 and the resource manual "Caring for Drug Users", copies of which are in the House of Commons Library.
>
> Provision is made for detoxification of drug users on reception, any necessary medical treatment, and treatment programmes. The latter vary between establishments, but include individual and group counselling work, often run by or in conjunction with voluntary agencies. Arrangements are also made for care after release through probation services and voluntary agencies. Our HIV and AIDS education and training for prisoners include particular mention of the dangers of transmission of the HIV virus for injecting drug users.
>
> Drug and alcohol abuse is a very high priority for the Prison Service and we are continuing to develop our programmes for dealing with drug and alcohol abusers.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Anguilla

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the refurbishment of the Governor's mansion in Anguilla is proceeding on time and within cost limits; what is the expected completion date and total cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The first stage of refurbishment of the governor's residence in Anguilla began in April 1993 and was completed in October 1993. The second stage began in December 1993 and is programmed for completion in July 1994. The project suffered some delay at an early stage, but is now proceeding on schedule and within the total works cost estimate of £310,000.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what complaints procedures exist for complaints of political bias or inaccuracy by the media in Anguilla.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: All complaints are referred by the Director of Information and Broadcasting to the Chief Minister of Anguilla.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what subsidy is paid to Radio Anguilla by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No subsidy is paid to Radio Anguilla by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who is responsible for the appointment and employment of staff at Radio Anguilla.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The establishments division of the Government of Anguilla, acting on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission, is responsible for the appointment and employment of staff at Radio Anguilla.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what outstanding applications exist for licences to broadcast from radio stations in Anguilla.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are no outstanding applications for licences to broadcast from radio stations in Anguilla.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the role and responsibility of the Governor of Anguilla regarding complaints against Radio Anguilla.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Complaints against Radio Anguilla fall within the portfolio of the Chief Minister, not the governor.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will issue guidelines to Radio Anguilla to ensure the political impartiality of that radio station in the forthcoming general elections and beyond.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Additional guidelines for Radio Anguilla staff are not required in the period leading up to the general election. The governor is confident that Radio Anguilla will continue to operate free from all political interference.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of the Radio Authority's guidelines regarding political coverage for radio stations in the Caribbean dependent territory of Anguilla.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I consider the guidelines to be appropriate, as they are based on the practice adopted by the BBC. These are kept under review by the Department of Information and Broadcasting and updated where necessary.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the independence of Radio Anguilla from the Government of Anguilla; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Radio Anguilla is part of the Department of Information and Broadcasting of the Government of Anguilla and, as such, is free from any form of censorship.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who is responsible for the issuing of licences for radio broadcasts on Anguilla.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Under Anguilla's Telecommunications Ordinance, the licensing authority is the telecommunications officer of the Government of Anguilla.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is prepared to set up a training programme for employees of Radio Anguilla at the BBC World Service.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A training programme with the BBC for employees of Radio Anguilla already exists.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects of a free and fair process in the forthcoming general elections in Anguilla; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I am confident that, as in the past, the forthcoming elections in Anguilla will be conducted in a fair and democratic manner.

Women Conference

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who represented Her Majesty's Government at the inter-sessional working group for the fourth world conference on women held in New York, 10 to 14 January; if he will place in the Library a copy of the draft platform for action; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At the intersessional meeting in New York the United Kingdom was represented by the following officials: Ms J. Whitaker, sex equality branch, Department of Employment, Ms J. Graham, social development division, ODA, Ms A. Grant, counsellor, United Kingdom mission in New York, and Mr. P. Tissot, second secretary, United Kingdom mission in New York. The draft platform for action will not be completed until all national reports have been submitted and all preparatory conferences have been held. This will not be before 1995. A copy of the draft platform will then be placed in the Library of the House.

Kathmandu Air Crash

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Nepal concerning publication of the official report into the air disaster at Kathmandu in September 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have not made any representations to the Nepalese Government since the final report of the investigation into the crash of PIA flight PK 268 on 28 September 1992 was circulated in August 1993 by the Nepalese Government to the interested parties including the air accidents investigation branch, which led the investigation. The air accidents investigation branch subsequently distributed copies of this report to relatives of the British victims.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Goodlad: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest position regarding peace initiatives to bring about a ceasefire in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The latest round of talks between the parties in Geneva took place on 18 and 19 January. The talks are due to resume on 10 February. All sides violated an agreed ceasefire over the Christmas period. The United Kingdom and our European Union partners remain fully behind the efforts of Lord Owen and Mr. Stoltenberg to bring the parties to a negotiated settlement.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what deadline has been set for a withdrawal of British troops from the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There is no deadline for the withdrawal of British troops. No decision has been taken on whether the current British contingent in UNPROFOR will be replaced, and none is imminent. Any such decision would be taken after consultation with our fellow troop contributors and other allies.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests Her Majesty's Government have received for additional British troops in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Britain is one of the leading contributors to UNPROFOR, with more than 2,300 troops in the former Yugoslavia. We have not been approached by the United Nations to increase this contribution.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost to date to the Exchequer of British peacekeeping operations in the former Yugoslavia; and to what extent this cost will be reimbursed for the cost from the United Nations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom share of United Nations assessed contributions to UNPROFOR is likely to total around £36·5 million for this financial year. The United Kingdom pays 6·373 per cent. of peacekeeping costs on the United Nations scale of assessment. The costs fall to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Additional Ministry of Defence costs for United Kingdom participation in UNPROFOR also fall to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. For the financial year 1993-94, this will amount to about £66·79 million, made up of Operation Grapple—Bosnia—£61·87 million; Operation Cheshire—airlift—£4·54 million; Operation Hanwood—the field ambulance which withdrew in September—£381,975. All amounts are net of standard rate of VAT.

The United Nations has paid standard rate reimbursement for troop contributions to UNPROFOR for the period to the end of October 1993, and for nations to the end of September 1993. Refunds for the financial year 1993-94 to date amount to £15·7 million. Troop costs for the month of November 1993 are due to be paid at the end of January 1994. Other claims for reimbursable items of expenditure —for example, vehicles and equipment—have been submitted to the United Nations, and reimbursement will depend on the United Nation's ability to pay.

Private Education Allowances

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent on private education and boarding school allowances for the children of personnel employed by his Department, in each of the last five years; and how many children had their fees paid in each of those years.

Mr. Goodlad: In each of the last five years expenditure on boarding school allowances, and the number of children who attended boarding schools in the United Kingdom, was as follows:

Financial year	£ million	Number of children
1992-93	7·88	744
1991-92	7·73	880
1990-91	7·58	910
1989-90	7·21	988
1988-89	7·17	998

Expenditure on fee-paying schools for children educated locally at post was as follows:

Financial year	£ million
1992-93	2·00
1991-92	1·80
1990-91	1·68
1989-90	1·58
1988-89	1·54

Details of the total number of children for whom such allowances were paid are not available.

Diplomatic Bags

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 723, when the present policy of destroying records of material carried by diplomatic bag within one year was introduced.

Mr. Goodlad: The practice of destroying bag schedules after a period of not less than six months has been part of standing instructions for over 30 years. Records of the precise date on which the policy was introduced are no longer available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 723, what are the reasons for the Government's present policy of destroying records of material carried by diplomatic bag within one year.

Mr. Goodlad: Foreign and Commonwealth Office bag schedules record the delivery of material between originator and addressee, and are considered to have served their purpose once the contents of bags have been recorded as safely received. The bag schedules are treated in the same manner as other documents considered ephemeral, which are destroyed after a minimum period of six months.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Hill Farmers

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will provide details of the basis of the sample that her Department use for determining the national average incomes of hill farmers who are in receipt of hill livestock compensatory payments; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Details of the sample, which is part of that used in the farm business survey, together with notes on the method and definitions used are set out each year in "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom", copies of which are in the Library of the House. The latest published data relate to the 1991-92 survey; details of the 1992-93 survey will be published in March.

The survey is carried out by experienced field officers who are employed by universities and agricultural colleges. They visit a sample of 2,300 farmers throughout England and record a wide range of detailed physical and financial information about the farm business. The sample of farms covers all the different types and sizes of farm businesses in the country which are considered to be full-time. Such businesses account for 98 per cent. of agricultural activity in the country as a whole and 97 per cent. on farms wholly or mainly in the less-favoured areas. Great care is taken in the analysis of the results to ensure that the averages produced fully reflect the distribution of full-time farms in the country. Similar surveys are carried out in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. I am confident that the surveys are carried out to the highest professional standards and that they provide a fair reflection of trends in the income position of full-time farm businesses.

Full time farm businesses at June 1991 census and in the complete 1990-91 to 1991-92 identical sample by country, farm type, size group and tenure

PRIME MINISTER

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will place in the Library the information note prepared by his private secretary on 3 December 1990 on options for responding to allegations published in The Sunday Times on United Kingdom assistance to the Iraqi machine tool industry;

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the chronology of United Kingdom trade with Iraq, including the export guideline milestones, prepared for his office by the Cabinet Office in November 1992;

(3) if he will place in the Library the briefing note prepared for him in support of his answer to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) of 12 November 1992, Official Report, column 990.

The Prime Minister: No. All the relevant documents have been made available to the Scott inquiry.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 456, how many official Christmas cards he sent out in 1993; and how much this cost.

The Prime Minister: Nine hundred; the direct total cost of purchase and dispatch to the Prime Minister's office was approximately £205. The cost of the other cards I send does not fall on official funds.

Trinidad Terms

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had in the last six months regarding the Trinidad terms; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Under the existing Trinidad terms, which resulted from my personal initiative, 18 countries have benefited. Over $4 billion of debt has been restructured and nearly $2 billion will be reduced over the lifetime of the individual agreements. We expect more countries to benefit over the coming months. These terms have the effect of halving the payments due to creditors and give a commitment to consider restructuring the whole stock of a country's eligible debt after a good track record of economic reform has been established. This would lead to significant additional relief for indebted countries in the medium term.

At the G7 Tokyo summit last July, I secured agreement that improved debt reduction terms should be considered for the poorest and most indebted countries, including, for the first time, earlier action case by case on reducing the whole stock of debt—a key Trinidad terms objective.

The United Kingdom is active in the Paris club and elsewhere in seeking co-ordinated action by creditors on the comprehensive debt reduction which these countries need, the Government miss no opportunity for urging other creditors to make progress.

Second World War Commemorations

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will ensure that recognition is given in the commemorations of the 50th anniversary of the Normandy landings to the contribution made by the construction of Mulberry harbours at the town of Tilbury;

(2) if he will consult on ways to commemorate the sacrifices made, and the contribution to victory given, by dock workers and dockland communities throughout the United Kingdom during the second world war.

The Prime Minister: The Government's programme for the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the D-Day landings was announced on 6 January: I have arranged for details to be placed in the House Library. Included in the programme is a dinner at the Portsmouth guild hall and representatives of those who designed and built specialised equipment such as the Mulberry harbour will be invited.

Plans are also being made for an official commemorative event in 1995 to mark the 50th anniversary of the end of world war II. This will be a national event involving not only the armed forces, but those civilian organisations which served this country during the war. It pays tribute to all those who sacrificed so much during the second world war.

Correspondence

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer on 17 January, Official Report, column 367, if he will place in the Library a copy of the unsigned letter on Mr. Adams's headed notepaper, dated 7 January, which he recently received.

The Prime Minister: I have done so.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will withdraw his appeal to the Court of Appeal against the decision of the Social Security Commissioner that the United Kingdom social security law discriminates against women being paid invalidity benefit.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to hear the result of his appeal to the Court of Appeal against the Social Security Commissioner's decision that the United Kingdom social security law discriminates against women being paid invalidity benefit.

Mr. Scott: A hearing before the Court of Appeal took place on 18 January, when the court decided to refer the case to the European Court of Justice for a preliminary ruling on questions of European law.

State Pensions

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his Department's estimate of the additional cost to the Exchequer in each year from 1980 of linking the state pension to average earnings; and if he will extend this estimate to each year up until 2000-01;

(2) what would the state old age pension for 1994-95 be, in cash terms, if the link with earnings had been maintained since 1980.

Mr. Hague: It is estimated that the weekly rate of category A retirement pension would be £75·10 from April 1994 if it had been increased in line with average earnings since 1980.

The estimated additional cash cost for the years 1980-81 to 1994-95 is shown in the table. An equivalent estimate for the years 1995-96 to 2000-01 is not available in the form requested, and depends on the assumed rate of increase of prices and earnings. However, a comparison between the cost of earnings uprating of benefits and that of prices uprating of benefits from 1990-91 to 2050-51 can be made by referring tables 13 and 14 of the "National Insurance Fund Long Term Financial Estimates—Report of the Government Actuary on the Second Quinquennial Review under Section 137 of the Social Security Act 1975" published in July 1990 as HoC 582.

Mr. Burt: The latest available information is for 1991-92. The administrative cost as a percentage of benefit expenditure is in the table, which is an extract from the 1993 departmental report.

VAT (Fuel)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what specific help with increased heating and fuel bills will be available to those using continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis as treatment for kidney disease, including help for those just above the income support threshold, after the imposition of value added tax on fuel;

(2) what specific help with increased heating and fuel bills will be available to people with already high bills as a result of necessary medical treatment, after the imposition of value added tax on fuel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: We have announced a package of measures worth around £2·5 billion over three years. Pensioners and 80 per cent. of disabled people will receive extra help, as will all those receiving income-related benefits. Those disabled people who do not qualify for extra help are likely to be younger, less severely disabled, in work or better off. In addition, from April, disabled people receiving disability living allowance will become entitled to help with insulation costs through the home energy efficiency scheme.

Income Support (Young People)

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people aged (a) 16 to 17 years and (b) 18 to 24 years were receiving supplementary benefit of income support in each year since 1978-79 and the latest month for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt: Such information as is available is in the table.

Severe Weather Payments

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the total level of severe weather payments so far triggered over the winter months 1993-94; what were the figures for each of the past two years for the same period; and if he will give this as a breakdown according to recognised weather stations.

Mr. Scott: All the available information is in the Library.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of administering unemployment benefit in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The information is not yet available. Costs for the financial year 1992-93 will be contained in the next departmental report due to be published in March. The latest available figure is £322 million for 1991-92.

Retirement Pensioners

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are in receipt of the state retirement pension; and what percentages of these (a) pay tax and (b) receive income support.

Mr. Hague: At 31 March 1993, the latest date for which figures are available, approximately 10 million people (total number of contributory and non-contributory pensions including those payable to people residing abroad) were in receipt of state retirement pension, of whom approximately 14 per cent. were also in receipt of income support.

On the basis of the 1990-91 family expenditure survey, it is estimated that approximately 68 per cent. of individuals in receipt of state retirement pension were taxpayers.

Child Maintenance

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases the maintenance assessment by the Child Support Agency has been lower than a previous maintenance agreement.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to my hon. and learned Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated 25 January 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for the number of cases in which the maintenance assessment of the Child Support Agency has been lower than a previous maintenance agreement.

The Agency does not routinely have information on the amounts of maintenance awarded, and therefore cannot make the comparsion asked for. Average court payments however, prior to 5 April 1993, when the Agency took over from the courts most of its work on assessment and collection and child maintanence, were £25 to £30 a week. Under the Agency's formula, we estimate that payments will average £45 to £50 a week.

I hope that you find this reply useful.

War Pensions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many jobs in each grade are to be transferred to Blackpool from the DSS archieves at Brunswick street, Nelson; and on what date this is scheduled to occur;

(2) what consultations have taken place with the relevant civil service unions concerning proposals to transfer staff from the Government Records Office at Brunswick street, Nelson, to Blackpool;

(3) how many and at what grade jobs are to be transferred to Blackpool from the Records Office at Brunswick street, Nelson; and when this is scheduled to occur.

Mr. Burt: The administration of war pensions is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 25 January 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the transfer of staff from DSS Archives in Nelson to Blackpool.

I understand that your question refers to staff employed within the War Pensions Unit and are working in the same premises as the DSS Archives in Nelson.

With a reducing number of claims and a new computer system in 1995 the War Pensions Unit is looking at its service delivery to see how work can be better processed.

One option is to centralise the work currently carried out at Nelson within the War Pensions main operations centre at Norcross, Blackpool. There are currently 126 staff engaged on War Pensions duties at Nelson, but as no final conclusion has been reached as to the relocation I am not in a position to comment on the precise numbers or grades of staff which may be involved in such a move, or when such a move may take place.

Full consultation has taken place with all the relevant Civil Service Unions concerning the proposals.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Azerbaijan Refugees

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance has been given by Her Majesty's Government to Iran to help refugees from Azerbaijan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have this month provided £100,000 to the appeal of the International Federation of Red Cross/Crescent Societies for relief assistance to Azerbaijan. This contribution is specifically tied to support of the Iranian Red Crescent Society's programme for the displaced people in the south of the country.

Oman

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid has been given to Oman in the last five years; and how it was spent.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Gross bilateral aid to Oman over the last five years was as follows:

1988-89	773,000
1989-90	815,000
1990-91	825,000
1991-92	1,044,000
1992-93	750,000

The bulk of this finance was spent by ODA on technical co-operation projects and training mainly in education and agriculture. Short consultancies on investment promotion, engineering safety, industrial diversification, and public administration were also provided. The figures also include a total of £211,000 over the five-year period provided under schemes administered by the diplomatic wing of the FCO, mainly in the form of scholarships.

Aid and Trade

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total aid and trade provision for each of the last five years; and how it was spent.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Total expenditure under the ATP for each of the last five years was as follows:

1988-89	58
1989-90	62
1990-91	94
1991-92	101
1992-93	93

This was used to provide grants to support successful tied aid development projects through mixed credits, soft loans and technical co-operation. A full list of projects supported under the ATP is in the Libraries of both Houses.

Malaysia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a correction to his answer of 3 November, Official Report, column 239, in the light of the statement by the Overseas Development Administration permanent secretary before the Committee of Public Accounts on 17 January.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the right hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 25 January.

Kenya

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new British aid projects in the areas of (a) agriculture and wildlife, (b) education, (c) health and family planning, (d) police and (e) transport are now under consideration in discussions with the Kenyan Government.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Projects currently under discussion include support for the national agricultural research programme; Kenya wildlife service; the Kenyan trypanosomiasis research programme; management training for head teachers; the planning function in the Ministry of Education; projects to increase the availability of family planning services; an AIDS prevention project; a project to strengthen health service management; training for the police; and possible further assistance for Kenya railways.

Projects (Ministerial Decisions)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on which occasions and what projects during his term of office he has overridden professional advice from the Overseas Development Administration that projects are not good value in aid terms and used Overseas Development Administration funds for that purpose.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has given a ministerial direction to ODA's accounting officer on one occasion, in respect of the Pergau hydro-electric project in Malaysia.

Family Planning

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many and which non-governmental organisations received support for family planning and related projects through the joint funding scheme in 1993; what these projects were and in which countries they took place.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In the financial year 1992-93, the latest year for which figures are available, a total of eight non-governmental organisations received support through the joint funding scheme for projects which were primarily for family planning and related activities. The details are set out in the table.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to encourage other member states in the European Union to start funding family planning and related projects within their development and co-operation budgets.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We are playing a leading role in pressing for concrete action to follow up the 1992 EC resolution on population. Officials participate in regular expert meetings in Brussels to strengthen co-operation among member states and the Commission. We are also helping the Commission to organise a seminar for EC member states and Commission officials on 28 February.

Natural Resources Institute

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for the future status of the Natural Resources Institute; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Government have decided that a study of options for the future ownership of the Natural Resources Institute—NRI—should be carried out. Consultants will provide advice to Ministers on a range of possibilities for transferring the NRI to the private sector. These will be considered against the option of retaining the NRI within the public sector.

This work will be undertaken against the background of Government policy explained in the 1993 "Next Steps Review", Cm 2430. The results of the study will be taken into account in the wider scrutiny of public sector research establishments which is being undertaken by the Office of Public Service and Science.

WALES

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

Live Animals (Export)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning the export of live animals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Government accept that animals can be transported provided proper welfare standards are met. The EC directive on transport sets welfare conditions for the transport of all types of animals in the Community. Agreement on a package of additional measures was blocked by the United Kingdom in December last year because they did not offer real improvements in standards of protection. In any further discussions we shall press the Community to adopt measures reflecting our own high standards.

Sheep Premium Scheme

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of claims for payment under the sheep annual premium scheme had been (a) processed and (b) paid by his Department by 17 January.

Mr. Redwood: The proportions are (a) 85 per cent.; (b) 82 per cent.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce the arrangements for leasing quotas under the sheep annual premium payments scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The arrangements for the second transfer and lease notification period for sheep quota for the 1993-1994 scheme years will be announced once all the national reserve quota has been allocated. For the 1995 scheme year, it was announced, on 15 November 1993, that notifications of transfers and leases should be submitted between 15 November 1993 and 15 September 1994.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made for farmers to have access to Ordnance Survey maps of the appropriate scale for completion of the IACS forms for hill livestock producers.

Mr. Redwood: Those hill livestock producers to whom IACS applies for the first time in 1994 can obtain copies of maps of the scale 1:2,500 from OS agents or other recognised outlets. Maps of this scale generally contain the four-figure national grid reference number of each field and the area in hectares which is required for IACS purposes. Where this information is not printed on the map, or in other areas where maps of 1:2,500 scale are not available, farmers may wish to seek professional help. The detailed requirements relating to mapping and field data, are included in a guidance note which is being sent to producers this week.

Nurses

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many nurses were employed in NHS hospitals in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what are the figures for nurses employed in the community alongside family doctors.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Detailed breakdowns of nursing staff employed by health authorities and NHS trusts into hospital and community staff are not considered reliable. However information on the whole-time equivalent numbers of all hospital and community nursing and midwifery staff is shown in the table as well as numbers of nurses employed by general medical practitioners.

Hospital and community nursing and midwifery staff[1]:
Learners[2]	3,118	3,075	2,934	1,970	1,033
Other staff[3]	24,913	25,008	24,956	25,377	25,129
Nurses employed by general medical practitioners[4]	268	459	524	519	544

[1] Staff in post as at 30 September. Excludes staff employed by the Welsh Health Common Services Authority. Figures for 1989 and 1990 include staff working in the Blood Transfusion Service but figures for subsequent years do not as these staff then transferred to the Welsh Health Common Services Authority.

[2] Since the autumn of 1991 student nurses have been classified as students and are no longer included in the NHS staff figures. Staff included here are students finishing courses begun before this date.

[3] The use of locally devised payscales from 1991 onwards may affect the comparability of figures as these staff cannot be allocated centrally to a specific staff group and are not, therefore, included above.

NHS Hospitals (Admissions)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many admissions to NHS hospitals there were in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how many of these admissions were re-admissions within a month of hospital discharge.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The available information, based on aggregate hospital returns of discharge and deaths from NHS hospitals, is given in the table:

	Numbers
1990-91	584,285
1991-92	638,873
1992-93	667,367

Information on how many of these cases were patients re-admitted within a month of hospital discharge is not available centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to monitor the levels of private practice in national health service trusts in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is the responsibility of each national health service trust in Wales to monitor any provision for private patients and ensure that this does not interfere with its obligations to national health service patients. Income generated from private practice will be monitored through audited accounts.

North Avon Training

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if his Department has awarded any training contracts to North Avon Training;

(2) What training companies have replaced North Avon Training for training contracts in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Department has not awarded any training contracts to North Avon Training.

Welsh Language

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to allow A-level students to sit examinations in Welsh if they so request.

Sir Wyn Roberts: It remains our general policy that pupils taught through the medium of Welsh should be assessed through the medium of Welsh. Pupils entry to individual subject examinations is a matter of decision by the school governing body. The range of examinations offered by an individual examining body is a matter for the board itself.

Tai Cymru Budget

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much of the 1993 Tai Cymru budget was allocated to each Welsh constituency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Housing for Wales does not allocate resources on a constituency basis.

Job Clubs

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those training companies which currently have job club contracts at Newport, Haverfordwest and Merthyr Tydfil.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Training contracts let by job clubs are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Cereals

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the average cereal yields per hectare for each of the two cereals regionalisation proposed regions in Wales for each year since 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 16 December 1993]: The information for 1989 to 1992 is shown in the table. Data for 1993 are not yet available. For the years 1987 and 1988, there is insufficient information available to produce reliable estimates.

Cereal yields in proposed cereals regionalisation regions in Wales[1]

1989	4·50	3·63
1990	5·08	4·39

Region 1—All parishes containing land classified as suitable for growing winter cereals and having an average of at least 50 hectares of wheat and winter barley during the period 1989 to 1991.

Region 2—All parishes not included in Region 1.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Tourism

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the funding of the English tourist board to each of the regional boards for 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Sproat: The allocation of this funding is for the English tourist board to decide, based on discussions with the regional tourist boards as to whether industry needs are better met by action at the centre or action at regional level. Funding levels for 1994-95 are due to be determined in the near future.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what projections have been made of the potential expansion of overseas visitors to the United Kingdom over the next three years; and what steps he is taking to guarantee adequate investment to ensure this is achieved.

Mr. Sproat: The British Tourist Authority, which receives grant aid from my Department, has forecast 5 per cent. average annual growth in visits by overseas tourists, and 6·5 per cent. growth in expenditure by overseas tourists, during the period 1992-97.

The Government will continue to support the work of the British Tourist Authority in promoting Britain overseas; indeed, an increase in planned support was announced in the recent budget. The authority's corporate plan, agreed by Ministers, also sets challenging targets for attracting non-Government funding for its promotional activities.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list those Departments that have acquired photographs or pictures for their rooms from sources for which he is responsible; and if he will list the paintings and photographs concerned.

Mr. Brooke: The principal source of pictures on loan to Departments is the Government art collection, established nearly 100 years ago under the aegis of the office of works, and now a division of my own Department. Every major Government Department borrows works from the collection. Records are maintained of all the paintings and photographs in the Government art collection and their whereabouts throughout the world, but a written record would run to several hundred pages and could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the photographs and paintings on the walls of his rooms, together with the cost of each.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend has the following paintings and photographs in his office on loan from the Government art collection:

Albatross, by Anthony Gross, cost: £37
Two Coster Girls, by W. R. Sickert, cost: £4,500
Ladder Painting No. 1, by Stephenie Bergman, cost: £1,035
In The Cellar Mirror, by Norman Blamey, cost: £2,925
The Red Cow, by John Armstrong, cost: £16,000
Citadel, Triptych, Bermondsey Street, by Harriet Mena Hill, cost: £3,500

In addition, I have two sculptures and two prints on loan from the Government art collection:

Study for "Standard Unique", by Elisabeth Frink, cost: £81
Study for "Hamstead Figure" 1/5, by Frederick E. McWilliam, cost: £135
Brenda 1984 180/200, and Saturday Morning Shopping 1984 180/200, by Glen Baxter, cost: £117 each.

Finally, there is a work from my own collection and a picture presented to my office.

Sports and Arts

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will give details of the consultations he has had with (a) regional sports councils and (b) regional arts boards, including dates and the nature of those consultations.

Mr. Brooke: I have so far had no meetings with the regional councils for sport and recreation. However, as part of the review of the Sports Council, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for National Heritage is currently meeting with the chairman of all 10 regional councils and is also visiting all 10 regions.

I have occasional meetings with the chairman of individual regional arts boards. I also met the chairman of the English Regional Arts Boards, Sir Ernest Hall, on 20 January, when a range of matters was discussed.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proportion of expenditure by his Department, and previous responsible Departments, has been for the Arts Council, the Sports Council, tourist boards and the British library in each year since 1981-82; and what is his forecast for 1993-94, 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Sproat: The information requested is as follows:

Percentage

	Arts Council	Sports Council	Tourist Boards	British Library
1981-82	26·8	7·0	8·3	13·2
1982-83	30·3	9·3	9·5	15·7
1983-84	31·5	9·0	8·5	16·7
1984-85	33·3	9·5	8·8	17·7
1985-86	26·3	7·5	6·5	13·8
1986-87	33·9	9·3	7·9	15·2
1987-88	22·1	5·9	5·3	11·5
1988-89	22·2	5·6	5·3	11·0
1989-90	21·8	5·9	5·5	13·3
1990-91	22·4	5·7	5·4	13·9
1991-92	23·1	5·3	5·0	13·8
1992-93	21·9	4·8	4·7	12·6
1993-94	22·8	5·1	4·6	11·0
1994-95	19·1	5·1	4·6	13·6
1995-96	18·8	5·0	4·4	13·1
1996-97	19·3	5·1	4·6	11·3

Notes:

1. The percentage of funding shown for the bodies in question, is based on the central government expenditure for all those activities which now fall within the DNH responsibility. It is not possible to show these figures as proportions of the expenditure of those departments who had responsibility for these functions previously.

2 From 1 April 1994 responsibility for the Scottish and Welsh Arts Councils will be transferred from the Secretary of State for National Heritage to the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales respectively. Whilst the above figures take account of all three Arts Councils for the years prior to 1994-95, from that year they represent the Arts Council of England only.

3. The figures are also distorted due to changes in the spending coverage of the Department now and in prior years, for example the inclusion of provision for funding the Welsh 4th Channel with effect from 1992-93.

4. The British Library figures include payments in relation to the building of the new British Library, St. Pancras.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, how many official christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by (a) Ministers, (b) civil servants and (c) staff of Government agencies working in or to his Department; and how much these cards cost (i) to buy, (ii) to post and (iii) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes.

Mr. Sproat [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1994, c. 656]: The chief executives of the Historic Royal Palaces and the Royal Parks agencies have now written to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Welch to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 21 January 1994:

As you know, I have been asked by the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Mr. Iain Sproat, to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of Christmas cards sent by the Royal Parks Agency, and the cost of sending them.

The only christmas cards distributed by the Agency were from Richmond Park. The printing costs were sponsored locally.

Envelopes cost £10 and they were sent at normal second class postal rate. It is not possible to quantify the cost of staff time involved in distributing them.

Letter from David Beeton to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 20 January 1994:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for National Heritage, Mr. Sproat, to reply to your Parliamentary Question regarding Historic Royal Palaces Agency christmas cards.

The Agency purchased 1,000 Christmas cards at a cost of £251·51. These, together with stocks (of about 650) remaining from the previous year, were supplied to me and my Palace and Specialist Directors and their staff, all of whom are civil servants.

All cards were despatched at normal second class postal rate, or were sent via the Government Inter Departmental Service. It is not possible to quantify the cost in staff time to sign, address and envelope the cards.

D-Day Commemorations

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the assistance his Department is giving to the Southern tourist board for its D-Day commemorations in 1994 and what additional help he plans.

Mr. Sproat: The English tourist board has given the Southern tourist board a grant totalling around £11,000 for 1993-94. The British Tourist Authority has provided both financial and administrative support for the Southern board's marketing activities on the D-day commemoration in the United States. In addition, they have provided free office space and equipment and under a joint scheme have subsidised the board's costs by 25 per cent. To date, this amounts to around £25,000.

Plans are still being drawn up for the additional funds announced by the Prime Minister on 6 January for the promotion and co-ordination of events associated with the commemoration of D-day.

Sport Facilities

Mr. Hinchliffe To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received about the effects of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 on the use of schools' and colleges' sports facilities by local sports clubs.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 25 January 1994]: None. However, I and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education have a well-established joint policy of encouraging the community use of education premises when these are not required for the purposes of the school or college concerned.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on how many occasions the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for National Heritage has been replaced by the right hon. Lady Baroness Trumpington on official engagements that he had agreed to attend.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 24 January 1994]: Since her appointment, Lady Trumpington has carried out four official engagements, which circumstances prevented me from attending as originally scheduled.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

No. 7 Millbank

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what was the cost of converting No. 7 Millbank into offices for hon. Members; and who was responsible for its design and arrangements.

Mr. Ray Powell: Accommodation in No. 7 Millbank was first acquired by the Secretary of State for the Environment for use of the House to replace St. Stephen's house which is to be demolished as part of the works associated with the Jubilee line extension. Further space was then acquired to help meet the shortfall in accommodation for Members and their staff. The estimated net cost of the conversion work is £6·3 million.

The design and arrangements were developed by the contractors together with the Parliamentary Works Directorate, and were approved by the Accommodation and Works Committee.

Lobbying Organisations

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will table a resolution to require commercial lobbying organisations to be registered.

Mr. Newton: I have nothing at present to add to what I said when this issue was debated in the House on 28 June 1993, Official Report, columns 784-86. I understand that the Select Committee on Members' Interests has subsequently resumed consideration of the topic.

Prime Minister's Question Time

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many occasions in each parliamentary Session since June 1983 the Leader of the House has deputised for the Prime Minister at Question Time.

Mr. Newton: This is a matter of public record.

Cars

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Lord President of the Council, if he will quantify the cost of the factors which led to an increase in the cost of cars for Ministers in his Department since 1990-91.

Mr. Tony Newton: The cars in question are provided by the Government car service (GCS). The increase in charges to my department largely reflects:

(i) increases averaging 12 per cent. over the period in pay and the cost of vehicles and fuel;
(ii) an increase in Value Added Tax on GCS bills on 1 April 1991 from 15 per cent. to 17·5 per cent.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Stevens Report

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Stevens report was commissioned; and which elected representatives have access to all or part of it.

Sir John Wheeler: Mr. Stevens was appointed by the Chief Constable of the RUC to conduct an inquiry into allegations of collusion between members of the security forces in Northern Ireland and loyalist paramilitaries, and to make recommendations. A copy of Mr. Stevens's report was made available to my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, and a summary of the report was placed in the Library of the House on 17 May 1990.

Schools (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he proposes to lift the current moratorium on capital expenditure on schools in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My decision to slow down the building programme for schools and colleges was taken with great regret, and only because I judged it more important to protect standards in the classroom.

Planning of projects is still proceeding, but, at this stage, I cannot give a commitment as to when the moratorium will be lifted.

Nursery Schools

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children attend nursery schools; what percentage this is of the total age group available for nursery education; what is the present expenditure per annum on nursery education; and if he will make a statement on the provision of additional nursery schools.

Mr. Ancram: A total of 7,822 pupils attended nursery schools and nursery units in the 1992-93 academic year, which was 30 per cent. of the relevant age group.

Expenditure in 1992-93 on nursery education was some £7·6 million.

The expenditure priority continues to be given to the compulsory schools sector. Additional nursery places are provided as resources allow, with priority directed at areas of greatest social need. An additional 225 places have been made available in the past three years.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time nursery school places are available in the Belvoir estate; how many of each category will be available for the year commencing September; and if he will make a statement about the provision of nursery school education in the Belvoir estate.

Mr. Ancram: The two unit nursery attached to Belvoir Park primary currently provides places for 25 full-time pupils and 50 part-time pupils. From September 1994, the school will move to a dual-day system catering for a total of 100 pupils.

There are no plans to expand nursery provision in the Belvoir estate.

Milk Marketing

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he received proposals from the Milk Marketing Board for the reform of the milk marketing schemes; what is the proposed timetable for this reform; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend received a scheme of reorganisation from the Milk Marketing Board for Northern Ireland for the reform of milk marketing arrangements on 31 December 1993. The scheme proposes a date of 1 April 1994 for the ending of the milk marketing scheme in Northern Ireland.

The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland issued a consultation document on the principles of the reorganisation scheme on 17 January. A period of five weeks until 18 February has been given for replies from interested organisations. Responses to the consultation exercise will be considered by the Department in deciding whether the scheme is a qualifying scheme under the terms of the Agriculture (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 and one which ought to be approved.

Loans

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each scheme operated by his Department under which loans are available, the objectives of the scheme, the number of unrecovered loans, the total value of unrecovered loans, the average number of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990, the average value of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990 and the annual cost of recovering loans.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 24 January 1994]: Schemes operated by the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments under which loans are available and their objectives are as follows:

Urban Development Grant (UDG)
UDG is a discretionary grant designed to foster the physical and economic regeneration of inner city areas of Belfast and Londonderry by stimulation of private enterprise and investment. Assistance can be in the form of loans.

Community Economic Regeneration Schemes (CERS)
CERS are jointly funded by the Department of the Environment and the International Fund for Ireland. The objective is to foster property led community development in areas suffering from urban decay where the public sector is unwilling to invest. Assistance with capital costs is usually in the form of 80 per cent. grant and 20 per cent. loan.

Community Regeneration and Improvement Special Programme (CRISP)
The objective of CRISP is to provide finance for community groups to develop property related economic projects in their localities. Elements of assistance may comprise loans.

Belfast Action Teams (BATs)
Loans are paid by BATs to bring about an improvement in the quality of life and an enhancement of the opportunities and prospects of people living in the Action Team areas, and improve the effectiveness with which Government expenditure is used to benefit those living in those areas.

Industrial development board—Selective Financial Assistance (SFA) Scheme
The SFA scheme is administered by the Industrial Development Board to provide loan capital to industry. Funding in various forms including loan capital may, at the discretion of the Department, be offered to approved projects to encourage the introduction and development of internationally competitive companies in the manufacturing and tradeable services sectors in Northern Ireland so as to create the conditions of growth in durable employment.

Local Enterprise Development Unit (LEDU)
LEDU offers loans to small firms throughout Northern Ireland as part of its overall package of assistance to assist the development and growth of the small business sector.

Tourism Development Scheme (TDS)
TDS's aim is to assist the improvement of the tourist accommodation and amenities which Northern Ireland can offer and thereby strengthen the competitive position of the tourism industry and improve its contribution to the economy of Northern Ireland. The range of assistance available includes loans.

Government Loans Scheme

The Government loans scheme in Northern Ireland has as its objective the funding of approved capital projects undertaken by local authorities and other prescribed bodies, including schools and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

General Medical Practitioner (GMP) Loans Scheme

This scheme was introduced to assist GMPs in improving practice premises, especially in deprived areas.

Social Fund Scheme

The Social Security Agency operates a Social Fund scheme under which people can apply for interest free loans to meet large intermittent or unexpected expenses. The scheme is intended to help people on a low income who cannot meet exceptional expenses from their regular income.

There are two types of loans available from the Social Fund, budgeting loans and crisis loans. Budgeting loans are available to people who have been receiving Income Support for at least 26 weeks to help with important expenses which are difficult to budget for out of weekly benefit. Crisis loans are available to people who need financial help to meet expenses in an emergency or disaster, whether or not they are receiving benefit. However a crisis loan can only be awarded if it is the only way to prevent serious risk, or serious damage, to their health or safety.

Information regarding unrecovered loans in the schemes for which Department of Economic Development is responsible—SFA scheme, LEDU and TDS—could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

A breakdown detailing unrecovered loans in respect of the other aforementioned schemes is as follows:

	At 31 March 1991	1992	1993
Urban Development grant
Number of unrecovered loans	1	1	1
Value of unrecovered loans —£ million	0·300	0·300	0·300

Value of unrecovered loans —£ million	0·050	0.069	0·080
Government Loans scheme
Number of unrecovered loans	12,274	12,386	12,500
Value of unrecovered loans —£ million	1,298·400	1,500·800	1,711·000
GMP Loans Scheme
Number of unrecovered loans	62	60	56
Value of unrecovered loans —£ million	4·304	4·238	4·004
Social Fund Scheme
Number of unrecovered loans	80,860	99,297	107,662
Value of unrecovered loans —£ million	10·675	13·215	14·396

There are no unrecovered loans under CERS or CRISP.

The cost of recovering loans is not recorded in all Departments and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Paramilitaries

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all members of (a) proscribed loyalist and (b) proscribed republican organisations who are convicted prisoners in custody in Northern Ireland giving, in each case, the date of their original conviction, their offence or offences, the length of sentence given and their paramilitary affiliation.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 18 January 1994]: It would not be appropriate to name or divulge details of individual prisoners.

Prison Assaults

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many assaults have been made on prison officers in each Northern Ireland prison in each of the last 24 months; how many prison officers required hospital treatment in each month; and how many assaults in each month were made by (a) loyalist prisoners, (b) republican prisoners and (c) other prisoners.

Sir John Wheeler [pursuant to the reply, 16 December 1993, columns 871-72]: The affiliations of the prisoners who carried out assaults on 278 prison officers between December 1991 and November 1993 are as follows:

	Number
Attributable to loyalists	79
Attributable to republicans	34
Attributable to other prisoners	29
Unattributable	[1]136

[1] A large number of assaults on staff occurred during attempts to break up factional fighting and therefore it is not possible to say for certain which individual prisoner caused the assaults.

Information on the number of injured officers requiring hospital treatment could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the implications of the Government's "Back to Basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

Mr. David Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what working definition of back to basics is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

EMPLOYMENT

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many official Christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by (a) Ministers, (b) civil servants and (c) staff of Government agencies working in or to his Department; and how much these cards cost (i) to buy, (ii) to post and (iii) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information as requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will produce a table showing the working population of each EC country as a percentage of the total population for the latest figures available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The available information is as follows:

Total employment as a percentage of the population aged 15 to 64, 1991[1]

	Per cent.
Denmark	76
Portugal	71
United Kingdom	69
Germany	65
Nrtherlands	63

Belgium	57
Italy	56
Greece	55
Ireland	52
Spain	49

Source: OECD, except United Kingdom (Employment Department).

[1] 1991 is the latest year for which comparable data are available.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in the United Kingdom are unemployed and are not receiving benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest estimates from the labour force survey for summer—June to August—1993 are that there were 1,099,000 people in the United Kingdom classified as unemployed on the internationally standard ILO measure of unemployment, but not claiming unemployment related benefits; these estimates include spring 1993 data for Northern Ireland. Conversely, there were 1,038,000 claimants that were not ILO unemployed, so that the level of unemployment on the internationally standard definition—2,981,000—was only 61,000 higher, not seasonally adjusted, than the level shown by the claimant count for the equivalent period—2,919,000.

Multiple Unemployment

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the number of families who experience multiple unemployment.

Miss Widdecombe: The labour force survey shows that, in summer 1993, the estimated number of families in Great Britain in which two or more people were unemployed, on the International Labour Organisation definition, was 227,000. This represented 1·5 per cent. of all families in which there were at least two people aged 16 or over.

Temporary Employees

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consideration he is giving to considering changing the rules governing the protection of temporary employees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. The employment protection rights already extend to temporary employees on the same basis as for permanent employees.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employees are classified as temporary in the United Kingdom; what percentage of the working population this represents; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest estimates from the labour force survey for summer—June to August—1993 are that 1,473,000—7 per cent.—employees in the United Kingdom are employed on a temporary basis; these estimates include spring 1993 data for Northern Ireland. Except for a seasonal increase in the summer of each year, temporary employment in the United Kingdom has remained constant over the past decade at between 5 to 6 per cent.

Access to Work

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which statute empowers him to introduce the access to work scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is empowered to introduce Access to Work by the Employment and Training Act 1973, as amended by the Employment Act 1988.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Job Clubs

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what happened to the job club contracts at Bristol, Easton, Gloucestershire, Haverfordwest, Merthyr Tydfil and Newport, Gwent, after the financial collapse of Northavon Training;

(2) what training companies held job club contracts at Bristol, Easton, Gloucestershire, Haverfordwest, Merthyr Tydfil and Newport, Gwent;

(3) whether Happy Extra Ltd., North Avon Enterprise Ltd., Northavon Training, Personal Training or Development Group Ltd. have ever held job club contracts at Bristol, Easton, Gloucestershire, Haverfordwest, Merthyr Tydfil and Newport, Gwent;

(4) if he will list those companies to which job club contracts at Bristol, Easton, Gloucestershire, Haverfordwest, Merthyr Tydfil and Newport, Gwent, were transferred to other training companies, after the collapse of Northavon Training;

(5) what financial assessments his Department has made of Northavon Training.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Paul Murphy, dated 26 January 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the effect of the financial collapse of Northavon Training on Jobclub contracts in Bristol, Easton, Gloucestershire, Haverfordwest, Merthyr Tydfil and Newport in Gwent.

You asked what happened to Jobclub contracts which were previously held by Northavon Training in the above locations and which companies took over these contracts after the collapse of this organisation. Before the company went into receivership it operated eleven Jobclub contracts in the places you mention. Information about these Jobclubs together with details of the organisations who have taken the contracts over are in Annex 1.

It is unusual for a Jobclub contract to be interrupted or terminated because of financial problems on the part of the contractor. Where this does occur, the Employment Service (ES) takes steps to ensure there is as little disruption as possible to the Jobclub members. This can mean making temporary, short-term arrangements which will later be followed by our normal, fully competitive, tendering procedures. Such a process has occurred in several of the locations involved in your question.

I have listed at Annex 2 all organisations which held Jobclub contracts in December 1993 at the locations you mention.

You also asked whether Happy Extra Ltd., Northavon Enterprise Ltd., Northavon Training, Personal Training and Development Group Ltd. have ever held Jobclub contracts in these same locations. I asked my people to check our records and I can say that Happy Extra Ltd. have never held a Jobclub contract. Northavon Training was a subsidiary company of Northavon Enterprises Ltd. which ceased trading in December 1993. Following a management buy out, Northavon Training is now operating as part of the newly formed Personal Training and Development Group. All Jobclub contracts in Annex 1 where with Northavon Training except for the Jobclub in Newport which was awarded to Northavon Enterprise Ltd.

In the past we have not required a financial assessment of prospective programme contractors. This is mainly due to the low risk nature of Jobclub contracts where payments are made monthly in arrears after the service has been delivered. These arrangements mean there is no loss to public funds where a contractor ceases trading because of financial problems. However, some checks were made in the case of Northavon Training and these gave no cause for concern. The issue of more systematic financial scrutiny of potential contractors for Jobclub and other programmes is currently being considered by people concerned with policy development in my Head Office.

I hope this is helpful.

EDUCATION

Nursery Education

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the local education authorities where fewer than half of three and four-year-olds attend a full time nursery school or class.

Mr. Robin Squire: In England in January 1993, there were no LEAs where more than half of the children aged three and four were being taught on a full-time basis in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools.

Schools

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools are (a) controlled by local education authorities, (b) voluntary aided and (c) grant-maintained in England.

Mr. Robin Squire: Figures taken from the "Index of Educational Establishments" indicate that the number of schools maintained by local education authorities in England, including maintained nursery, special and hospital schools, is 23,643, of which 4,075 are voluntary aided. In addition, there are 814 grant-maintained schools.

School Inspections

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many independent or private schools have been inspected by Her Majesty's inspectorate or the Office of Standards in Education in the last three years; and if he will list them.

Mr. Forth: The new Government Department, the Office for Standards in Education, was created on 1 September 1992. All inspections carried out by HMI or reports published since that date are a matter for OFSTED. I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

Prior to September 1992, when HMI were members of this Department, they undertook a variety of types of inspection visit to schools. Not all of these inspections were planned to lead to published reports. A list of the independent schools which received an inspection visit between 1 January 1991 and 31 August 1992 has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many grant-maintained schools have been inspected by Her Majesty's inspectorate or OFSTED in the last three years; and if he will list them.

Mr. Robin Squire: The new Government Department, the Office for Standards in Education, was created on 1 September 1992. All inspections carried out by HMI or reports published since that date are a matter for OFSTED. I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

Prior to September 1992, school inspections were carried out by HMI who were members of this Department. Up to July 1992, none of the visits to grant-maintained schools was a formal inspection intended to lead to a published report. Under the new independent inspection arrangements introduced from September 1993, schools maintained wholly or mainly from public funds, including grant-maintained schools, will be inspected every four years by registered inspectors with published reports and action plans. I will write to the hon. Member in regards to the information requested about HMI inspections before September 1992.

Private and Independent Schools

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his Department's estimate of the number of private and independent schools currently operating.

Mr. Forth: There are currently 2,294 independent schools, including 15 city technology colleges, in operation in England.

Parents Charter

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which organisations have been asked to tender for contracts to distribute the revised parents charter; and how many copies are to be distributed.

Mr. Robin Squire: Organisations have not yet been invited to tender for the contract to distribute the parents charter later in 1994. Approximately 20 million copies will be distributed.

Moral Education

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what provisions currently exist to ensure that children receive proper moral education, with particular reference to safe sex, at the primary and secondary school levels.

Mr. Forth: The new arrangements for sex education introduced by the Education Act 1993, which will come into force in September 1994, require maintained secondary schools to provide sex education and give maintained primary schools discretion whether to do so. Section 46 of the Education (No. 2) Act 1986 provides for sex education to have due regard to moral considerations and the value of family life. Section 1 of the Education Reform Act 1988 provides more generally for the maintained school curriculum to promote the moral development of pupils. We are currently consulting on a draft circular of guidance to schools on the implementation of the sex education provisions: the final version will be issued in the spring.

Student Unions

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if it is his intention, under his proposed principles to be observed in relation to student union services supported out of public funds, to prohibit student unions from funding or giving strategic support to community action schemes.

Mr. Boswell: The Government are determined to reform student unions and to secure that the principles of choice, democracy and accountability are universallly observed in their activities. It is not our intention to jeopardise student services, for which funding will remain available in institutions' budgets.

University College Fees

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish the current level of college fees agreed with his Department in respect of undergraduates in all the colleges of universities who have recognised collegiate structures; and when the levels for the next academic year will be agreed.

Mr. Boswell: The current maximum levels of college fees reimbursed through a student's mandatory award in 1993-94 are shown in the table. The levels for 1994-95 will be agreed during the course of this academic year.

Student Support

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when the report on discretionary student support currently being prepared by the Gulbenkian Foundation and the Sir John Cass Foundation with the Further Education Funding Council and his Department will (a) be completed and (b) be published.

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Tiverton (Mrs. Browning) on 7 December 1993, Official Report, column 161.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to enable local authorities to increase the number of discretionary awards available to students on access courses in further education colleges.

Mr. Boswell: Discretionary awards are made by local authorities, which meet the cost from their own resources. The Secretary of State has no power to intervene in the discretionary award policies of local authorities.

Access Courses

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether the Government intends to increase the number of places on access courses in further education colleges.

Mr. Boswell: The Government's expenditure plans for further education allow for the forecast increase of 25 per cent. in student numbers up to 1995-96 to be met in full, with an additional increase of 3 per cent. between 1995-96 and 1996-97. These plans include provision for students on access courses as defined by schedule 2 to the Further and Higher Education Act 1992. Decisions about the number of places in individual subjects or types of courses are for individual colleges, in the light of demand from students and employers and the funding available to them.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Boswell: I have placed in the Library a list of the projects on which consultants were engaged in each year since 1987. The total cost of these was £7·4 million. Information for the years prior to 1987 is not available in the form requested.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 414, how many official Christmas cards he and his junior Ministers sent out in 1993, and how much this cost.

Mr. Boswell: Ministers from the Department sent out some 820 cards in 1993, at a total approximate cost of £710.

TRANSPORT

M62 Relief Road

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total number of valid objections to the M62 relief road proposals received to date at (a) the north-west regional office, Department of Transport and (b) the Department of Transport, Marsham street.

Mr. Robert Key: So far, 5,180 representations have been received—4,850 at the north-west regional office and 330 at Marsham street. These figures include an element of duplication.

Transport Police

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 December, Official Report, columns 697-98, what amendments will be required to the British Transport Police Scheme 1963 (Amendment) Order 1992 to take effect from April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The British Transport Police Force Scheme 1963 will need to be amended to take effect from April to enable the BTP to continue to operate in the restructured railway.

The amendments are needed to allow the British Railways Board, as employer, to enter into the agreements referred to in section 132(3) of the Railways Act 1993. These agreements will enable the BR Board to provide services to other users of the police on a repayment basis.

Some minor consequential amendments will also be needed to ensure compatibility of the scheme with the Railways Act 1993.

Following consultation with the BR Board, London Underground Ltd. and the Docklands Light Railway, the amendments will be laid before Parliament in the spring.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 December, Official Report, columns 697-98, what the budgetary, funding and charging arrangements will be for the British Transport police from April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: In the restructuring railway, the employer of the British Transport police, initially the BR Board, will be responsible for the BTP budget. The budget will be drawn up as now on a regional basis, for consideration by the police committee, in consultation with the BTP and users of their services.

Costs attributable to other users will be recovered in full by the employer through charging. It will be for the employer to ensure that all the appropriate charges are collected.

A licence condition will require operators to use and pay for the services of the BTP. Operators will pay the employer of the police—British Rail—direct. Policing costs will be split between Railtrack, train operating companies, independent station operators and open access operators. Operators will also pay for any specific additional policing requirements.

Isle of Wight

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will consider appointing a special adviser for the Isle of Wight's coastal road problems and to assist the highway authority to prepare alternative routes in the event of further slippage;

(2) if he will ensure his officials visit the Isle of Wight to assess the landslip and stability problems and safety of the island's roads for holiday traffic.

Mr. Robert Key: If the Isle of Wight council needs technical advice from the Department of Transport on its road network, it should contact our south-eastern regional office and state its requirements. We shall be glad to provide any assistance we can. Should it prove necessary, officials will visit the island.

A19

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will detail his plans for improving the A19 between Peterlee and the roundabout known as Testo's; when works is expected to (a) begin and (b) end; and what plans there are to improve Testo's roundabout.

Mr. Key: The section of the A19 between Easington and Hawthorn services will be improved to modern standards by widening the carriageway by 2 m at the same time as essential maintenance work is undertaken during 1994-95.

There are no plans in the current programme for improvement to Testo's roundabout.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Norris: I regret that an answer to this question can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Rail Freight

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department expects to receive a report on the study being conducted by the piggy back consortium into conveyance of freight by rail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that this consortium expects its study to be completed by April. I look forward to examining its findings.

Rail Infrastructure (Spending)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing spending on rail infrastructure for each country in the EC per capita for the latest year available.

Mr. Freeman: No. It is difficult to make realistic spending comparisons between railway systems because of differences in areas such as accounting methods, definitions of infrastructure and terrain. However, last January, Eurostat, the statistical office of the European Community, published "Transport Annual Statistics 1970-1990" which gives, at page 14 of the publication, infrastructure spending for seven of the 12 EC countries up to 1989. A copy of this publication has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

A2

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on when the public consultation period will begin on the proposals to dual the A2 road between Lydden and Dover; and by which date he will publish those proposals.

Mr. Key: Investigation of options for the A2 Lydden —B2060—to Dover improvement is continuing and the present programme is for public consultation later this year. The scheme is included in the current review of the road programme and I will make a further announcement about the outcome of the review as soon as possible.

HEALTH

Arboviruses

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what work has been done on arboviruses in national health service hospitals by scientists from the Ministry of Defence's Porton Down chemical and biological warfare establishment since 1964; when this work was carried out; what was the conclusion of the work; if the results of the work were exchanged with the United States of America, Canada and Australia; and in which publications the results were published.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has no record of any collaborative work between national health service hospitals and the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data have been collected by her Department regarding the average length of time between the installation of national health service hospital beds and other ward furniture and their replacement.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Asbestos-related Diseases

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the number of people suffering from asbestos-related diseases and the numbers of them who do not have bilateral pleural diffuse thickening.

Mr. Sackville: Information on which to base such an estimate is not available.

Complementary Therapies

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much the NHS spent on complementary therapies in each of the last three years for which figures are available;

(2) what definition the NHS uses of the therapies regarded as complementary; and if she will list the therapies;

(3) how many NHS hospitals provide treatment considered to be complementary medicine.

Mr. Sackville: There is no common definition in use within the national health service of complementary therapies, therefore figures on how much the NHS spent and the number of NHS hospitals where treatments are given cannot be provided.

Mental Health

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many districts have a policy and practice plans to deal with those who fall out of care/contact with services.

Mr. Bowis: Information is not collected on districts which have a policy and plans to follow up those who fall out of contact with mental health services. We are planning to issue guidance on discharge arrangements for mentally disordered people which will emphasise the need for follow-up procedures under the care programme approach.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the number of beds in each district for (a) special hospitals, (b) medium secure beds, (c) acute hospital in-patient beds, (d) hospital hostel beds and (e) community beds in (i) half-way hostels, (ii) crisis care, (iii) respite care, (iv) women only, (v) 24 hours staffed community beds and (vi) day-time staffed beds.

Mr. Bowis: The numbers of long stay beds, short stay beds and medium secure beds by district are published annually in "Bed Availability in England". The latest publication relating to 1992-93 is available in the Library. The remaining information is not available centrally.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the total expenditure of (a) West Berkshire health authority and (b) each of the other health authorities in the United Kingdom is spent on activities relating to mental health; and how much this represents per capita of the population served by each health authority.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 January 1994]: This information will be placed in the Library.

Unleaded Petrol

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made by the Chief Medical Officer about the possible danger of vapour fumes from unleaded petrol; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Committees on Carcinogenicity—COC—and Medical Effects of Air Pollutants—COMEAP—set up by the Chief Medical Officer to advise him, have considered hazards to health from inhalation of benzene which is a component of vapour fumes from leaded and unleaded petrol. Benzene is an important component of leaded and unleaded petrol. It is limited by European Community directive to a maximum content of 5 per cent. by volume.

Benzene is toxic at high doses and is classified by the International Agency for Research on Cancer as a human carcinogen. Long-term occupational exposure to benzene at concentrations a thousand times greater than those typically found in urban air in the United Kingdom has been shown to increase the risk of certain types of leukaemia in adults: its use in industry is therefore strictly controlled. Although it is not possible to define an absolutely safe level of exposure to benzene, levels in outdoor air encountered in the United Kingdom are considered by COMEAP and the COC, to present a very low risk to health.

Treatment Facilities

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many districts have residential and general treatment facilities for those who have had challenging behavioural or forensic histories.

Mr. Bowis: Information on the number of beds by sector is published annually in the KHO3 summary booklet, "Bed Availability in England", a copy of which is available in the Library. The number of districts with residential and general treatment facilities of this kind is not recorded centrally, but guidance was issued to health and local authorities in October 1992, LAC(92)15 and HSG(92)42, which emphasised the need to provide a diverse range of services to meet the needs of people with learning disabilities.

Cervical Smear Tests

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will arrange for general practitioner contracts to be amended so that cervical smear tests are carried out every three years.

Mr. Sackville: Our first priority is to increase take up under the existing screening programme, as research shows that the majority of women who develop cervical cancer have not been screened.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health of she will list the management allowances payments made to GP fundholding practices and practices preparing to be fundholders (a) by wave and (b) in total for each (i) family health services authority and (ii) region.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested will be placed in the Library. General practitioner fundholding has delivered many improvements in quality of care for patients. The costs of the management allowance—at about 2 per cent. of budgets set, represents excellent value for money.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which special advisers in her Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's one special adviser is employed directly by the Department of Health.

Children (Slow Development)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children aged under 16 years suffer from developmental delay and learning difficulties where it has not been possible to establish the reason.

Mr. Bowis: Three to four per 1,000 children are known to have severe learning disabilities. In at least a quarter of these cases the cause is unknown.

Independent Sector Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of beds of an independent sector home in each year since 1979.

Mr. Bowis: The information is shown in the table. Figures for 1981 and 1982 have not been provided for residential care homes as the information held for these years is not considered reliable. No figures are available for nursing homes before 1982.

Mean number of beds available per home in the independent sector at 31 March 1979 to 1992

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 389, how many official Christmas cards she and her junior Ministers sent out in 1993; and how much this cost.

Mr. Sackville: Some 1,800 charity Christmas cards were sent out, at an estimated cost of £1,080.

Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the size and nature of the list maintained by her Department of candidates for health authority and trust appointments.

Dr. Mawhinney: Nominations for appointment to national health service authorities and trusts, which are received from hon. Members and others, including self-nominations, are forwarded to regional health authorities who are responsible for making some appointments and whose chairmen are required to propose candidates for board appointments made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Cold-related Illnesses

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what records are maintained annually as to the effect of cold weather spells on hospital admissions according to GP recommendations.

Mr. Bowis: Anonymised data from hospital patient administration systems are submitted to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in respect of each patient admitted to hospital for treatment. Extracts of the dataset are then analysed by the Department of Health. The patient record will show the condition for which admission was made and will include the date of that admission. There is no central record of the admission practice of individual general practitioners.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research has been undertaken by her Department into the effects of cold weather, hypothermia and chill-related illnesses on the overall health budget.

Mr. Bowis: None. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the most recent estimated cost to her Department of cold-related illnesses.

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available on which to base such an estimate since no precise definition of "cold-related illness" can be made.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what expenditure has been incurred by her Department to ensure public awareness of the dangers of cold weather to health and the measures required to combat them; and if she will give a breakdown by regional health authority and regional health boards.

Mr. Bowis: We spent approximately £445,000 on our "Keep Warm Keep Well" public information campaign for the winter of 1992-93. Contributions to the total cost, which approached £500,000, were also made by the Department of Social Security and the Welsh Office. A similar campaign for Scotland, "Keep Warm this Winter" is funded by the Scottish Office at a cost in 1992-93 of £103,000. These campaigns do not involve regional health authorities or regional health boards.

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out for each of the last five financial years, and for 1993-94, the amount of money spent on refurbishing and improving the Yorkshire regional health headquarters in Harrogate.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the Yorkshire regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Sir Brian Askew, for details.

NHS Beds (Private Use)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 534, what are the safeguards that constrain the opportunities for health authorities and trusts in making available authorised pay-beds.

Mr Sackville: National health service trust hospitals may make beds available for private patients providing there is no significant interference with the performance by the trust of its obligations under NHS contracts. Similar provisions apply to directly managed units. These statutory requirements ensure that NHS patients are not disadvantaged by private practice within the health service.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specific auditing or monitoring is undertaken to ensure that national health service private patient charges are calculated correctly and that all costs to the national health service are included.

Mr. Sackville: Auditors examine the adequacy of systems of financial control and compliance with them as part of their annual audit programme.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is her Department's policy on (a) collecting centrally and (b) for publishing information on the number of authorised pay-beds within the national health service since 1 April 1991;

(2) when she expects information on the number of authorised pay-beds in the national health service for the years 1991-92 and 1992-93 to become available; and what are the reasons for the delay in making public information on authorised pay-beds in the national health service for 1991-92.

Mr. Sackville: Since 1 April 1991, health authorities, on behalf of directly managed units, and trusts have, subject to certain safeguards, been able to determine their own private patient activity. Trusts record private patient income in their accounts but do not "authorise" pay-beds and therefore do not collect authorised bed numbers.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence her Department has received indicating abuses or omissions in the compilation of charges to private bed users within the national health service.

Mr. Sackville: None.

DEFENCE

Mr. Hanley: These are matters for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down—CBDE. I have asked the chief executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letters from Graham S. Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 26 January 1994:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what tests and studies have been carried by the chemical warfare establishment at Porton Down into binary reactant DF; when these tests and studies were carried out; and what was the assessment of these studies and tests (Question 9, Order Paper, 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the evaluation of British protective measures evaluated.

3. Some work was carried out in the late 1940s and early 1950s into methyl phosphonyl difluoride at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Sutton Oak in a programme of work on unitary nerve agent precursors. The difluoride was subsequently used in mixtures with the dichloride in work at Nancekuke to prepare unitary nerve agents. No work has been carried out on DF as a binary reactant. More recently a limited study was carried out in 1993 to evaluate possible analytical techniques for DF as part of a programme examining the availability of the analytical techniques required to underpin the Chemical Weapons Convention.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking if all the tests for the human volunteer programme run by the chemical warfare establishments at Porton Down since 1964 have been carried out on service personnel alone; and if all these tests have been conducted within the grounds of the establishments at either Porton Down or Nancekuke (Question 10, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. In order to carry out this work, it is necessary to use service volunteers to:

a. assess the ability of service personnel to function with new equipment and procedures,
b. develop medical countermeasures to protect Service personnel and
c. evaluate the effects of very low and medically safe concentrations of CW agents on the ability of unprotected personnel to operate normally.

No studies involving volunteers are carried out unless there is a clear military need and a detailed protocol has been reviewed and approved by an independent Ethics Committee in accordance with the guidelines laid down by the Royal College of Physicians.

3. All studies for the human volunteer programme run by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment since 1964 are carried out using Service volunteers only and the majority of the studies are conducted within the grounds of the Establishment; a few are carried out at other military establishments. No Service volunteer studies have taken place at Nancekuke.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what work has been conducted since 1964 inside NHS hospitals by scientists from the Porton Down chemical and biological warfare establishment; when this work was carried out; if this work involved NHS patients; what was the conclusion of the work; if the results of the work were exchanged with the United States of America, Canada and Australia; and in which publications the results were published (Question 13, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the evaluation of British protective measures evaluated.

3. In carrying out its programme, CBDE does work in conjunction with academic institutions and hospital departments generally involving an extramural research contract from CBDE. Occasionally, members of CBDE staff participate in the work at these academic institutions or hospitals. No records are maintained of such participation. The involvement of NHS patients would be a matter for the academic institution or hospital concerned.

4. The results of work carried out in conjunction with academic institution and hospital departments forms part of the technology base drawn upon in collaboration with the United States of America, Canada and Australia. Our records do not indicate any publications involving work carried out inside NHS hospitals by scientists from CBDE.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what was the nature of the collaborative work studied by the members of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment who were stationed for an extended period at the counterpart US military establishments in Edgewood and Fort Detrick in Maryland in recent years; and how much of this collaborative work has been published in open scientific literature (Question 16, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. I regret that our records do not provide this information in a readily accessible form. However I have consulted my staff and a small number of them have been stationed in recent years at either Edgewood or Fort Detrick. The nature of the collaborative work studied by members of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment was as follows:

(a) Detection of airborne microorganisms.
(b) Rapid identification of microorganisms by means of immunofluorescence.
(c) Theoretical studies into the penetration of protective suits by aerosol particles.
(d) Studies into the detection of chemical warfare agents focusing on the application of ion mobility spectrometry.
(e) Atmospheric Dispersion Modelling.

3. The published open literature that appeared as a result of this collaborative work was:

(a) PHILLIPS A. P., MORRIS B. C., HALL D., GLENISTER M. and WILLIAMS J. E. Identification of encapsulated and non-encapsulated Yersinia pestis by immunofluorescence tests using polyclonal and monoclonal antibodies. Epidemiol Infect 101:59-73,1988.
(b) PHILLIPS A. P. and EZZELL J. W. Identification of Bacillus anthracis by polyclonal antibodies against extracted vegetative cell antigens. J Appl Bacteriol 66:419-432, 1989.
(c) EICEMAN G. A., SNYDER A. P. and BLYTH D. A. Monitoring of airborne organic vapors using ion mobility spectrometry. Internat J Environ Anal Chem, 1990. Vol 38 part 3 pp 415-425.
(d) EICEMAN G. A., SNYDER A. P. and BLYTH D. A. Continuous atmospheric monitoring of organic vapors by ion mobility spectrometry. Instrumen Trace Org Monit, 1992.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what is the procedure for monitoring and checking on the health of service personnel who have been tested with chemical and biological warfare agents at Porton Down in the years following the tests; for how many years after the tests check-ups are made; how often the check-ups are made; if this information is automatically made available to the doctors of the service personnel, whether requested or not; and what changes have been made to this procedure since 1964 (Question 18, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the United Kingdom Armed Forces have effective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. In order to carry out this work, it is necessary to use service volunteers to:

(a) assess the ability of service personnel to function with new equipment and procedures,
(b) develop medical countermeasures to protect Service personnel and

(c) evaluate the effects of very low and medically safe concentrations of CW agents on the ability of unprotected personnel to operate normally.

No studies involving volunteers are carried out unless there is a clear military need and a detailed protocol has been reviewed and approved by an independent Ethics Committee in accordance with the guidelines laid down by the Royal College of Physicians.

3. The procedure in respect of Service volunteers is that on arrival at CBDE each volunteer is given a medical examination to see if they are fit for the proposed study. The nature of the study is explained to them and they are told that they may withdraw from the study without any explanation at any stage. At the end of the study they are given a second medical examination and the fact that they have participated at CBDE in a volunteer study is recorded on their medical records.

4. From time to time, Service volunteers have been recalled so that checks on their medical health can be made. There is no particular frequency or pattern to such recalls. In addition some volunteers return voluntarily to CBDE to take part in subsequent unrelated studies. There is no evidence that Service volunteers have had any deterioration in their health as a result of their participation as a volunteer in a human study.

5. Recently, the practice has been instituted in which all volunteers upon arrival at the Establishment have been read a lay statement by a military officer which states that "It is CBDE policy to call back some volunteer subjects for re-testing from time to time to ensure that the techniques used give consistent and reproducible results and that no changes in the way we apply the tests have occurred with time". The recall of any volunteers to CBDE is recorded on their medical records.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what was the conclusion of Porton Down's work on Coxiella Burnettii referred to in his Answer to the honourable Member of 16th July 1993, Official Report, column 714, in which years information from this research was exchanged with the United States of America; and with which United States of America military establishment this information was exchanged (Question 19, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the evaluation of British protective measures evaluated.

3. The work on Coxiella Burnettii has shown that a number of antibody reagents and gene probes could be produced which could be incorporated into test procedures for the indentification of the agent. This information was exchanged with the United States Army Research Institute for Infectious Diseases (USAMRIID) and the US Army Edgewood Research, Development and Engineering Center (ERDEC) since the last 1980s.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking from which source the QL referred to in his reply of 16th July 1993, Official Report, column 712, was obtained, what was the conclusion of the study; and if VX was produced as a result of the study into the transesterification process involving QL (Question 20, Order Paper 18 Janaury 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The QL was obtained from the United States of America and the conclusion of the study into the transesterification process confirmed that it was possible to produce VX from QL.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what studies and tests have been done by the chemical warfare establishment at Porton Down to assess a nerve agent which penetrates skin and clothes quicker than the G agents and VX; when these experiments were done; and what was the conclusion of the assessment (Question 22, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the evaluation of British protective measures evaluated.

3. Our records do not indicate that any tests or studies have been carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down to assess a nerve agent which penetrates the skin and clothing quicker than the G agents and VX.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking if he will make a statement on the considerations leading to the setting up by the Chemical and Biological Defence Board of the Defence Scientific Advisory Council of the new Biomedical Sciences Committee and Microbiology and Biotechnology Committee; and if he will name the academic members of those committees (Question 23, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The Chemical and Biological Defence Board of the Defence Scientific Advisory Council has had three committees since the early 1980s: Physical Sciencies Committee, Life Sciences Committee and Medical Committee. In the late 1980s, an additional committee called the Biotechnology Committee was established under the Chemical and Biological Defence Board and was tasked to produce a report on the implications of biotechnology for defence. The Biotechnology Committee completed its work in early 1992. At the same time some of the activities of the Medical Committee were transferred to the CBDE Ethics Committee and the three committees of the Chemical and Biological Defence Board were reorganised into the Physical Science Committee, the Biomedical Sciences Committee and the Microbiology and Biotechnology Committee.

3. The individual independent members of these committees serve in a personal capacity and it would be inappropriate for the Ministry of Defence to name them.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what experiments his Department has carried out on Rocky Mountain spotted fever; when this work was carried out; what was the purpose of the work; and when and under which defence agreements the results of this work were passed to the United States of America, Canada or Australia (Question 25, Order Paper 18 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. We have no record that any work has been carried out at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment or its precursor establishments into Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when was the last time the Ministry of Defence held discussions at a ministerial level with the United States of America concerning the production of chemical weapons; where these meetings were held; and who attended the meetings.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the dates and locations of all the meetings between his Department and the United States Government since 1979 to discuss the renewed production of chemical weapons by (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the United States of America.

Mr. Hanley: The United Kingdom abandoned its offensive chemical capability in the 1950s. Our policy emphasises the need for an effective defence against the use of chemical weapons and the implementation of international agreements on their control, destruction and eventual abolition. We have had a long-standing and continuing dialogue with the United States on a broad range of issues in the chemical warfare field, including in the 1980s United States plans to update their offensive chemical capability, which were subsequently cancelled by President Bush in May 1991. Details of all meetings where United States plans were discussed could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mutual Weapons Development Programme

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Britain and the United States of America set up the mutual weapons development programme; what was the range of the programme; why it was set up; which United Kingdom Ministry of Defence establishments were involved; and what is the current status of the programme.

Mr. Aitken: My Department is not aware of the mutual weapons development programme referred to by the hon. Member.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Mr. Nicolas Bevan, a former civil servant in his Department, has requested any special access to departmental documents in preparation for his appearance before the Scott inquiry.

Mr. Aitken: All current and former Ministry of Defence officials and Ministers called to give evidence to Lord Justice Scott's inquiry have been offered access to relevant departmental documents.

International Military Services Ltd.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all defence export sales by International Military Services Ltd. or any of its subsidiaries are subject to licensing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: All exports of defence equipment by International Military Services Ltd. and its subsidiaries are subject to the normal export licensing requirements.

Exports

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Government defence export sales are currently subject to export licensing and which are not; and what changes were made in this during the period after 1980.

Mr. Aitken: All Government defence exports have Crown status and are therefore not subject to export licensing requirements. They are, however, subject to the normal foreign and defence policy considerations.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether defence exports carried out as part of the successive Government-to-Government agreements with Jordan and Saudi Arabia were subject to export licensing.

Mr. Aitken: Sales of defence equipment to Jordan under the memoranda of understanding signed in 1985 and 1987 were subject to the normal export licensing requirements. Exports of defence equipment to Saudi Arabia under the Al Yamamah arrangement have Crown status and are therefore not subject to export licensing requirements, although they are subject to the normal foreign and defence policy considerations. All other sales of defence equipment to Saudi Arabia are subject to the normal export licensing requirements.

Mozambique (Assistance)

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance the Government have given and will give to Mozambique to assist in clearing land mines.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence has not to date assisted the Government of Mozambique with the clearance of land mines, and there are no current plans to provide this type of assistance. The United Nations operation in Mozambique has embarked on an extensive mine clearance project.

South Africa

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance his Department is giving to South Africa, following requests, for help and advice in creating a multiracial peacekeeping force.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence, in conjunction with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, is actively considering with the parties involved how the United Kingdom might best help the process of creating integrated defence forces in South Africa. Any assistance must be at the request of the sub-council for Defence of the Transitional Executive Council in South Africa. The sub-council has approved the formation of a national peacekeeping force and has approached the Commonwealth Secretary-General for assistance to the force. The Government are giving urgent consideration to the request from the Secretary-General for British personnel to form part of a commonwealth advisory team.

Tank Imports

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what model is the tank imported from the Russian Federation in 1992, as listed in the United Nations register of conventional arms.

Mr. Hanley: The model is T-80U.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what comparative study he has carried out into the search and rescue Sea Kings operating and support costs at RAF Chivenor and RAF Brawdy for each of the next five years, from 1 July 1994; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give his best estimate of the breakdown of operating and support costs for search and rescue Sea Kings from RAF Chivenor in the year commencing 1 August together with that of operating from RAF Brawdy in the same period.

Mr. Hanley:: I will write to the hon. Member.

Bases (Refurbishment)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those bases which are being refurbished in the next three years; and how much is being spent on each base.

Mr. Hanley: All defence establishments maintain a regular programme of maintenance work and, where necessary, new construction, both to maintain the operational effectiveness of the defence estate and to update facilities as defence needs change. Such planned refurbishment expenditure is the responsibility of individual budget holders; information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Government Expenditure

14. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the effect of Government spending plans on the services provided by his Department.

Mr. Lang: Within the total available for public expenditure in Scotland, I shall be imposing strict limits on what is spent directly on staff and the other costs of running the Scottish Office. All areas will be required to demonstrate greater efficiency in delivering services.

Forestry

15. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the working group established in 1993 to report on the options for the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: Ministers expect to receive the advice of the forestry review group early this year.

New Towns

16. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of the new town development corporation boards to discuss the wind-up of the new towns; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Winding up of new towns was among the issues discussed when I met the chairmen of each new town development corporation in December 1993. My right hon. Friend last met all chairmen in October 1992 and those of Livingston and Irvine last October.

Local Government Reorganisation

17. Mrs. Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government reorganisation.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (M[illegible] Hogg) and for Edinburgh, Leith (Mr. Chisholm).

30. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from those local authorities which organised referendums on local government reform; and if he will give the results of these referendums.

Mr. Stewart: A number of local authorities have conducted referendums including Clydesdale district council in the hon. Member's constituency. However, comprehensive information on the results of these is not available centrally.

36. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from local authorities concerning local government reform and the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill; and of these councils how many indicated that they had conducted referendums on both subjects.

Mr. Stewart: A wide range of representations has been received from local authorities and other organisations about our proposals for local government reform. Some have taken the form of referendum while others have taken the form of opinion polls, petitions and postcard campaigns.

A90 (Dualling)

18. Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been spent since 1979 in upgrading the newly renamed A90 from Aberdeen to dual carriageway.

Mr. James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1979, we have spent some £139 million on a major upgrading of the A90 route between Perth and Aberdeen. The opening of the Brechin bypass this spring will complete the dualling of the route and fulfil our manifesto commitment.

Tourist Boards

20. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Scottish tourist board to discuss the reduction in the number of area tourist boards in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet the chairman of the Scottish tourist board to discuss the reduction in the number of area tourist boards in Scotland.

Housing

21. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to meet representatives of tenants' groups to discuss housing needs and investment in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend does not currently have any plans to meet representatives of tenants' groups to discuss housing needs and investment in Scotland. It is for local housing authorities to consider the housing needs of their areas, and to identify their investment needs in their annual capital programmes.

School Buildings (Grampian)

22. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what account he has taken of the changes in the numbers on school rolls within each constituency in the Grampian regional council area when deciding the capital allocation for school buildings.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Capital allocations for school buildings are distributed according to our assessment of education authorities' relative needs and priorities. Several factors are taken into account, including pupil numbers. Each authority is considered as a whole, not on the basis of individual constituencies.

Roads (Strathclyde)

23. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Strathclyde regional council to discuss road network development.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I met Councillor Malcolm Waugh, chairman of Strathclyde regional council's roads and transportation committee, on Friday 3 December 1993 to discuss progress on the A77 Ayr road route.

Quarries

24. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on allowing planning applications for very large quarries.

Mr. Stewart: Current policy on very large quarries is set out in the "National Planning Guidelines: Aggregate Working", 1977. A copy is available in the House Library. New guidance is to be issued soon.

Forestry Commission

25. Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his timetable for the review of the work of the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro: I expect the forestry review group to present its advice to Ministers early this year.

Drug Addiction

26. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he has taken in order to reduce the crime rate, the increase in drug addiction and the number of drug-related deaths.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have in place a range of measures aimed at reducing both the supply of, and the demand for, drugs. These measures seek to tackle the problem on a number of fronts, including enforcement of the laws against trafficking and misuse of drugs; prevention and education; and treatment and rehabilitation. The drugs task force led by my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State is currently reviewing what is being done and considering what further steps might be taken.

More broadly, the Government continue to seek to develop initiatives to prevent and deal with crime. Our new crime prevention strategy launched in November 1992 provides a framework within which action to prevent crime can be taken forward. It is encouraging that recorded crime in Scotland fell slightly in 1992 and recent reports from Scottish police forces have indicated that the trend towards lower crime figures continued in 1993.

Bypasses (Fife)

27. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the provision of bypasses for communities in north-east Fife.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have no current plans for the construction of bypasses in north-east Fife.

Strikes

28. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what analysis he has made of the number of hours lost through strike action in Scotland in 1991 and 1992; and what comparison he has made with the comparable figures for 1978 and 1979.

Mr. Stewart: In Scotland, the number of working days lost through stoppages of work caused by industrial disputes was 28 per 1,000 employees in 1992 and 62 per thousand employees in 1991. The comparable figures for 1978 and 1979, per 1,000 employees, were 429 and 1,569 respectively.

Agriculture

29. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish National Farmers Union to discuss current problems in Scottish agriculture with particular reference to the arable sector.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend met Mr. John Ross, president of the Farmers' Union of Scotland, on Wednesday 24 November 1993 to discuss a range of issues affecting the Scottish arable sector.

European Development Fund

31. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with regional councils about European development fund grants.

Mr. Lang: Scottish Office Ministers have had a number of meetings recently with local authorities and local enterprise companies to consider cases for designation under the European structural funds. The hon. Member will be aware of the Government's success in securing designation, and therefore eligibility for European funding, for areas covering close to 85 per cent. of the Scottish population under objectives 1, 2 and 5b. Close and regular contact will continue to be maintained at official level as regional development plans for the designated areas are drawn up.

Quangos

32. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review his criteria for appointing people to quangos.

Mr. Lang: No. All public appointments must be made on the basis of aptitude and merit. I see no reason to change these criteria.

Hospital Waiting Lists

33. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the number of NHS trust hospitals in Scotland in breach of the patients charter waiting time limits.

Mr. Stewart: There were eight NHS trust hospitals which had patients on waiting lists at 30 September 1993 who had waited longer than the appropriate treatment guarantees.

Mines (Abandonment)

34. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to retain the Scottish mining abandonment plans in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: This is a matter for British Coal as custodian of the record.

Council House Sales

35. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants in Scotland since May 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is published in the Scottish Office statistical bulletin, housing series, No. HSG/1993/8, "Housing Trends in Scotland". This publication is available in the Library.

Health Care

37. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the chairpersons of health boards to discuss the provision of health care in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: My noble and learned Friend the Minister of State is due to meet health board chairmen on 25 February 1994.

Greater Glasgow Health Board (Management)

38. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to undertake a review of internal management practices at Greater Glasgow health board.

Mr. Stewart: Greater Glasgow health board faces a large agenda of change in implementing its mental health strategy and community care plan, in formulating and implementing strategies for acute and primary care services and in developing its role as purchaser.

The new chairman understands the need for effective management of the board's affairs and is responsible for ensuring that the board is as well placed as possible to undertake these important tasks. My right hon. Friend is ready to offer any necessary support.

Local Enterprise Companies

39. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about commercial confidentiality in relation to local enterprise companies.

Mr. Stewart: The local enterprise companies are required by their operating contracts with Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise to have in place arrangements to protect confidential and commercial in confidence information, including that of their own directors and others. Precise arrangements are for Scottish Enterprise Highlands and Islands Enterprise and the local enterprise companies to determine.

Tourist Boards

40. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the future of tourist boards in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish tourist board has submitted a recommendation on a new area tourist board structure to my right hon. Friend. This is being considered carefully and an announcement will be made in due course.

Hospitals (Emergency Theatres)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if each national health service hospital which carries out operations has a theatre dedicated to emergencies.

Mr. Stewart: In larger hospitals, surgical teams take turns to be responsible for emergencies, typically for 24 hours each, during which they normally have sole use of a theatre for emergency operations. Smaller hospitals cannot operate the same system but will always give precedence to emergency operations over waiting list admissions.

Speech Therapy

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the waiting time for a first appointment with a speech therapist in each health board area.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Sheriffs

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of a sheriff's time is taken on (a) civil and (b) criminal and other work.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is estimated that, on average, 30 per cent. of a sheriff's time is spent on civil work and 70 per cent. on criminal and other work.

Hospital Admissions

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many admissions to national health service hospitals for each of the last three years for which figures are available were elective admissions; and how many were emergency admissions.

Mr. Stewart: Information on elective and emergency admissions for the period 1990-92 is set out in the table.

Admissions to Scottish hospitals 1990-92.

Elective Admissions	437,538	447,635	484,142
Transfers[1]	83,286	89,344	96,818
Emergency Admissions	369,961	382,141	400,253
All Admissions	890,785	919,120	981,213

[1] Transfer Admissions are transferred from other units, specialties or consultants.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many admissions to national health service hospitals there were in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how many of these admissions were re-admissions within a month of hospital discharge.

Mr. Stewart: The total number of admissions to hospital in Scotland and the total number of re-admissions within 28 days is set out in the table.

Total admissions and re-admissions in Scotland 1990-92

Period	Admissions	Re-admissions within 28 days
1990	803,930	101,209
1991	829,260	107,484
[1]1992	655,535	87,237

[1] First 9 months.

Electricity Privatisation (Severance Schemes)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish details of the severance schemes available to employees which were in operation immediately prior to the privatisation of the South of Scotland electricity board, including details of facilities to make early payment of pensions to staff under such schemes.

Mr. Stewart: Details of the severance and pensions schemes operated by the South of Scotland electricity board until privatisation, and by Scottish Power plc since, were and are matters for the managements of these organisations.

Nurses' Cars

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cars have been allocated to national health service nurses in (a) the hospital service and (b) the community service in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

NHS Trusts

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will define the purpose of consultation as employed during the process to establish trust status units within the NHS.

Mr. Stewart: The purpose of public consultation on NHS trust applications is to allow consideration to be given to the views of interested parties before deciding whether or not to approve an application.

Greenock Prison

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the size and composition of the visitors' committee of Her Majesty's prison, Greenock; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In a reply I gave to the hon. Member on 23 March 1993, Official Report, column 474, I said that it was the intention of my right hon. Friend to appoint a visiting committee to Her Majesty's prison Greenock, when the Prisoners and Criminal Proceedings Act 1993 became law. However, since then the Prisons and Young Offenders Institutions (Scotland) Rules have been drafted and widely circulated for consultation. These rules seek, among other things, to amend the constitution of existing visiting committees and to establish new visiting committees for Her Majesty's prisons Greenock, Friarton and Longriggend. As the revised rules will be laid before the House in the spring, it seems sensible that the new visiting committees should be constituted on a basis which is consistent with them. The visiting committee appointed for Her Majesty's prison, Barlinnie will therefore continue to cover Her Majesty's prison Greenock until the new rules are approved.

Road Improvements

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been spent by each local enterprise company on road improvement programmes; how much has been spent on improvements to roundabouts; and how many roundabouts have been involved.

Mr. Stewart: Many of the local enterprise companies are likely to have been involved in road improvements where this has been an integral part of preparing and developing sites for industry; and some have been involved in the improvement of roundabouts either in this context, as part of their wider environmental and economic development responsibilities, or both.

Under the arrangements whereby responsibility for expenditure up to certain levels has been delegated to Scottish Enterprise and the local enterprise companies, the Scottish Office does not hold comprehensive details of activity and expenditure by local enterprise companies on the many specific projects in which they are involved. I have however asked the chairman of Scottish Enterprise to write to the hon. Member with relevant details held by the core body. If, however, the hon. Member is seeking information on a particular project, he may wish to write to the chairman of the local enterprise company concerned.

Scottish Enterprise

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what reports have been commissioned from outside consultants by Scottish Enterprise since its creation; what areas were covered by these reports; what action has been taken by Scottish Enterprise on these reports; and how much has been spent by Scottish Enterprise on each of these reports.

Mr. Stewart: Scottish Office approval for consultancy studies is required only for those studies which cannot be undertaken within Scottish Enterprise's delegated authorities; and no comprehensive record is therefore held by the Scottish Office of consultancies commissioned, the subjects concerned, or action taken consequent to the report findings. These are essentially operational matters; and I have therefore asked the chairman of Scottish Enterprise to respond direct to the hon. Member.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those Scottish companies operating in the electronics sector that are or have been in receipt of regional selective assistance.

Mr. Stewart: Information on individual offers of regional selective assistance, including company name, travel-to-work area and standard industrial classification, is published quarterly in the "Department of Employment Gazette" following the first payment of grant. The gazette is available in the Library.

Tourism

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received in the course of the consultation carried out on the review of tourism support in Scotland; and if he will place copies of the representations received in the Library.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: [holding answer 17 January 1994]: Responses were received from the following.

	Number
Statutory agencies	8
Tourist industry representative organisations	25
Tourism businesses	195
Area Tourist Boards and representative organisations	34
Local authorities (plus COSLA)	54
Local Enterprise Companies	17
Other organisations and individuals	88

I have arranged for a list of the non-confidential responses to be placed in the Library.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which agencies are employed by Ayrshire and Arran health board to deal with their public relations; how much this service costs; how this has changed since the establishment of Ayrshire's three NHS trusts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 24 January 1994]: The Ayrshire and Arran health board employs Alan Clark Associates to provide a public relations service. Prior to the setting up of NHS trusts in the board's area, the service cost £25,000. Subsequently, the cost has been £15,000. The board considers that this specialist service ensures that communications with other organisations and the public, which are an essential feature of the board's role as a purchaser of health services for its residents, are carried out effectively and to a high standard.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he has given to Scottish councils concerning tendering under EC directive 92/50.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 20 January 1994]: My Department has sent three letters to Scottish councils regarding EC directive 92/50. A letter dated 13 July 1993 reminded councils that the directive came into force on 1 July 1993; on 17 December 1993, councils were sent the revised threshold effective from 1 January 1994, and a letter was issued on 13 January 1994 which advised councils that the directive had been transposed into United Kingdom law by the Public Service Contract Regulations 1993, SI 3228.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cuba

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding present United Kingdom relations with Cuba.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Relations with Cuba are correct. We are in diplomatic relations with Cuba and are in favour of increased trade between the two countries.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Waldegrave: Neither of my two special advisers is serving on secondment terms.

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have no plans to buy or borrow any photographs for display in my ministerial office.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have six paintings and three engravings on the walls of my ministerial office.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Brian Charrington

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Attorney-General what contact took place between his Department and the journalist John Merry of Darlington about the case of Brian Charrington; at what level this was authorised; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: None. The contact between Mr. John Merry and my hon. Friend the Member for Stockton, South (Mr. Devlin), who had had no departmental involvement in the case at all, took place in my hon. Friend's capacity as a constituency Member of Parliament and without any reference to my Department.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Attorney-General for what reason a representative of his office met counsel for Brian Charrington; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on Wednesday 26 January to the right hon. and learned Member for Aberavon (Mr. Morris). The meeting which I held on 21 December 1992 followed a request by leading counsel for Mr. Charrington to see the Law Officers in order to make representations to them, in view of their general responsibility in relation to prosecutions, about the length of time his client had been in custody and the need for a final decision as to whether the case should proceed having regard to recent representations made by Mr. Charrington's solicitors in the light of the evidence.

The representatives of HM Customs and Excise at that meeting explained that further inquiries were already in hand. It was agreed that these should be expedited and a final advice obtained from prosecuting counsel as soon as practicable. The Commissioners of Customs and Excise, having received that advice, decided on 27 January 1993 to withdraw proceedings against Mr. Brian Charrington. Although the Attorney-General had been kept informed of progress he was not consulted about that decision.

WALES

Deeside

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his plans to improve the environment and tackle dereliction on Deeside, Clwyd.

Mr. Redwood: Considerable resources are being devoted to improving the environment of Deeside. The WDA has already completed over 40 land reclamation schemes covering almost 1,000 acres at a cost of over £13 million. A further 28 schemes costing £6·6 million are in progress or planned; these will lead to the reclamation of an additional 300 acres.

The agency also has a programme of environmental improvement projects to be carried out in partnership with the local authorities, the private sector and other bodies. Projects to be implemented this year include the landscaping of the bypasses at Bagillt and Ffynnongroyw and environmental improvements at the Greenfield business centre. Environmental enhancement will also be one of the aims of a planned joint venture currently being discussed by the agency, Alyn and Deeside district council and Clwyd county council. This will focus on north Deeside and encourage both economic and environmental regeneration.

Farm and Conservation Grant

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes there have been in the interpretation of expenditure incurred in the guidelines agreed between his Department and the Treasury for operation of the Farm and Conservation Grant (Variation) Order 1993.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Cardiology

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement regarding the instructions given by Gwynedd health authority that all future referrals for cardiological opinion of Gwynedd patients are to be made to the cardiology unit in Manchester.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is a matter for Gwynedd health authority, taking into account a number of factors, including the views of patients, the assessment of clinical quality as judged by general practitioners and consultants, the waiting time for a first diagnosis, cost and the distance between a patient's home and the hospital.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to pay interest on all overdue sheep annual premium payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: No. Most of the 17 per cent. of payments outstanding cannot be paid until queries about their eligibility are resolved.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farmers in Wales are still awaiting payments with respect to their 1993 sheep annual premium scheme; and when he expects these payments to be made.

Mr. Redwood: A total of 17,442 eligible claims were received and 3,043 remain to be paid. As in earlier years, the majority of payments outstanding are awaiting the resolution of queries or farm visits by officials.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many outstanding claims there are to be processed with respect to the 1993 sheep annual premium scheme; and when he expects the remaining claims to be processed.

Mr. Redwood: A total of 2,489 claims remain to be processed out of the 17,442 valid claims received. The balance will be paid as soon as outstanding queries about their eligibility are resolved.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the total cash amount in sheep annual premium payments that has not yet been sent out to farmers with respect to 1993 payments.

Mr. Redwood: Over £80 million has been paid already and it is estimated that a further £10 million may be paid depending on the eligibility of the remaining claims.

Machynlleth Hospital

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his response to the conclusion of the Gwynedd health authority's contract review on the elimination of the 15 consultant beds at Machynlleth hospital; and what estimate he has made of the annual savings resulting from the implementation of these recommendations.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is a matter for Gwynedd health authority and Powys health care NHS trust, following discussions with general practitioners, hospital doctors and local community health councils.

Farmers

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to pay interest on overdue headage and grant support payments made to farmers under the 1993 scheme.

Mr. Redwood: There are no such plans.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation in relation to the number of working weeks required by the corporation to comment on the financial management and policy review of the corporation; and what additional time he has allotted for consultation on the report prior to publication following the discussions.

Mr. Redwood: I have had no such discussions with the chairman. I have not set a detailed timetable: I will want the board of the corporation to have the opportunity to consider and respond to the draft report before its recommendations are published.

Valuation Panels

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many clerks to valuation panels there are in Wales and what was the budget for the panels or tribunals administration in the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are four valuation tribunal clerks. Gross provision for the Welsh tribunal service was £0·8 million for 1990-91, £0·876 million for 1991-92 and £1·921 million for 1992-93. The 1991-92 figure included a sum of about £1 million for the development and procurement of a new computer system.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current number of staffed beds for use by hospital in-patients in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There were 17,483 staffed beds in NHS hospitals in Wales at 30 September 1993.

Welshpool Bypass

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will call for a report on (a) the fatal road accident at the Welshpool bypass on 18 January and (b) all earlier accidents since the opening of that bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The fatality will be the subject of a coroner's inquest and the findings will be carefully considered by the Department. Accidents that have previously occurred on the bypass have already been investigated and additional road safety measures have been, or are being, introduced.

Vale of Glamorgan

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those representations that have been made to him favouring the inclusion of Wick, St. Brides Major and Ewenny in the proposed new unitary authority of the Vale of Glamorgan.

Mr. Redwood: I have received 16 representations in favour of my proposal to establish a Vale of Glamorgan unitary authority as set out in the White Paper, "Local Government in Wales: A Charter for the Future".

Of these, the following organisations specifically expressed support for the inclusion of Wick, St. Brides Major and Ewenny in the Vale of Glamorgan authority:

Penllyn Community Council
Colwinston Community Council
Llandough Community Council
Cowbridge and District Conservative Club
The Vale Defence Committee

Ynys Môn Borough Council

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will arrange for a copy of the file sent to him by Councillor G. O. Parry of Vallery containing allegations of corruption within Ynys Môn borough council to be sent to the chief executive of that authority.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I will be replying to the letter from Councillor Parry in due course and I am willing for him to show that to the chief executive.

Police (Finance)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what level of finance for police purposes is contained within the Welsh Office grant to each county council in Wales (a) for 1994-95, (b) for the current year and (c) for each of the past five years.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: For 1994-95, the current financial year, and for each of the last five years the level of finance is that 49 per cent. of budgeted expenditure is met by county councils from resources available to them under the annual local authority revenue settlement for Wales. Under the settlement, revenue expenditure is funded mainly from central Government sources, revenue support grant and redistributed non-domestic rates income, with the balance coming from council tax payers. None of this settlement funding is earmarked for police spending. Expenditure on police and other services is determined by county councils in the light of their statutory responsibilities, local needs and available resources. Fifty-one per cent. of actual police expenditure is met by Home Office police grant.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the standard spending assessment set for each police authority in Wales (a) for 1994-95, (b) for the current year and (c) for each of the past five years.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The standard spending assessments for county councils in Wales includes provision for police services.

Development Agency

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the Welsh Development Agency has been asked for a reference by the Further Education Funding Council for applicants to the post of property controller.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I understand that the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency was asked to be a referee and provided information accordingly.

Housing Policy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his housing policy.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Our policy is set out in "Housing in Wales: An Agenda for Action".

Homelessness

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he proposes to tackle homelessness.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In keeping with the policy framework set out in "Housing for Wales: An Agenda for Action" I have recently invited local authorities to bid against a £4 million reserve to complement their homelessness capital projects in 1994-95.

In addition the Welsh Office consultation paper of 20 January 1993, "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies" has initiated discussion on the way local authorities should approach homelessness in the future.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to lessen reliance upon bed-and-breakfast accommodation where young families who are homeless are concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest available figures are those for 30 September 1993. These show a significant reduction compared with September 1992 in the number of statutorily homeless families temporarily accommodated in bed and breakfast, from 331 to 176.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he or anyone in his Department has been asked for a reference by the Further Education Funding Council for applicants to the post of property controller.

Sir Wyn Roberts: A senior official in the Department was asked to provide a reference and did so.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce his decision on the 1994-95 local government revenue settlement.

Mr. Redwood: I have given careful consideration to the representations I have received on the provisional settlement proposals I announced on 30 November. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has met the Assembly of Welsh Counties, and I chaired a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance, at which settlement issues were discussed.

Having taken account of all the representations, I remain of the view that my proposals provide local authorities with an adequate level of funding for 1994-95, given the Government's view that local government should continue to pursue efficiency savings and meet the cost of pay increases from improved performance. I have therefore decided to set total standard spending—TSS—at £2,704·8 million and aggregate external finance—AEF—at £2,419·2 million for 1994-95. The settlement will increase the level of resources available to local government by over £100 million compared with 1993-94.

AEF will comprise £1,740·1 million in revenue support grant, £464·0 million in distributable non-domestic rates, and £215·1 million in specific and supplementary grants. My decisions are subject to the approval of the House.

The TSS I have announced for 1994-95 represents an increase of 4·2 per cent. on 1993-94, including £86·0 million for care in the community. My plans mean that 89 per cent. of all local authority revenue expenditure in Wales would be met by central Government and should ensure a reasonable level of council tax for local taxpayers in Wales.

I trust that local authorities will budget prudently and play their part in restraining public expenditure.

I propose to lay the Local Government Finance Report (Wales) 1994-95 before the House, for its approval, early next week. At the same time, I will be laying for the House's approval, the Local Government Finance (Amendment) Report (Wales) 1993-94. The amending report rectifies a deficiency in the description of the basis for distributing the distributable amount from the non-domestic rating account contained in the Local Government Finance Report (Wales) 1993-94—HC 412 of 1 February 1993. The amendment does not affect payments under the original report which have been made in the intended manner.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates

Dr. Howells: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action is available to him in respect of magistrates who allow party political considerations to determine penalties.

Mr. John M. Taylor: In the declaration and undertaking made on appointment magistrates certify that they understand and agree that their conduct must be free from any sexual, racial, political or other bias. The Lord Chancellor may reprimand a magistrate for his conduct or remove him from office, as appropriate, if there is evidence to show that he appears to be allowing party political considerations improperly to determine penalties.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidelines are issued to magistrates in respect of the making of political comments in (a) assessing penalties and (b) delivering judgments.

Mr. John M. Taylor: No specific guidelines are issued. The judicial oath taken by all magistrates requires them to > "do right to all manner of people after the laws and usages of the realm without fear or favour, affection or ill will".

On appointment magistrates declare that they accept their conduct should be free from any sexual, racial, political or other bias. This is reinforced in the training given to magistrates. The clerk to the justices will also advise them on the need to avoid bringing their impartiality into question.

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidelines are issued to magistrates by his Department on speeches in mitigation with particular reference to political objectives.

Mr. John M. Taylor: No specific guidelines are issued by the Lord Chancellor but magistrates are advised on the law by their clerks. Magistrates on appointment undertake to conduct themselves in a manner which is free from sexual, racial, political or other bias; this is also covered in the training given to magistrates.

Common Hold

Mr. Pike: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects to legislate to introduce commonhold; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government intend to introduce this legislation as soon as parliamentary time allows.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding reply 20 January 1994]: I refer to the answer given by the Prime Minister on 21 January at column 849.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding reply 20 January 1994]: I refer to the answer by the Prime Minister on 21 January at column 849.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Vehicle Registration Marks

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if owners of new cars requiring registration marks in Northern Ireland later this year will have the right to purchase all registration marks with the DAZ prefix; and what arrangements will be made for new car owners who do not wish to use that mark;

(2) what negotiations are taking place with commercial organisations about the use of the prefix DAZ in vehicle registration marks;

(3) what statutory provisions govern the withdrawal of motor vehicle registration marks from availability to the Northern Ireland public and offering these registration marks to the highest bidder.

Mr. Tim Smith: At present, there is no scheme in operation for the sale of registration marks in Northern Ireland and no arrangement could be made with any person or organisation for the use of any specific marks in issue by the Belfast local vehicle licensing office of Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland. When CAZ is exhausted later this year, new vehicles registered at that office will be assigned registration marks from the DAZ series.

Each of the eight local vehicle licensing offices in Northern Ireland allocates registration marks within a different series. The owner of a new vehicle can register it at any local office and, in this way, exercise a degree of choice over the registration mark assigned to the vehicle. An owner wishing to avoid a registration mark in the DAZ series need only apply to another local office other than Belfast whilst DAZ marks are being issued by that office.

The first registration number which will be issued from this new series will be DAZ 1000. In 1985 the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland, which was then responsible for the administration of vehicle registration, introduced a policy of withholding from issue the first 99 numbers in each new series. This was extended to the first 999 marks in 1989. These unissued marks would be available for sale to the public should a scheme for the sale of registration marks be introduced in Northern Ireland in the future.

Under the provisions of section 19 of the Vehicles (Excise) Act 1971 and regulation 10 of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1973, the form of any registration mark issued to a vehicle being registered for the first time is a matter for the Secretary of State for Transport. There is no statutory obligation to assign any specific mark or to use any specific series of marks.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 404, how many official Christmas cards he and his junior Ministers sent out in 1993; and how much this cost.

Sir John Wheeler: The total number of official Christmas cards issued was 2,266. The total cost of purchasing and postage was £2,909·10.

"Crime and the Community"

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he proposes to take following consultation on his discussion paper "Crime and the Community"; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler: I have considered carefully the response to the discussion paper "Crime and the Community" and am today placing in the Library of the House the details of my proposals for implementing a wide-ranging strategy for dealing with crime in Northern Ireland. In the light of the positive and constructive comments I received on the discussion paper, I propose to commence implementation of the key recommendations in each of the areas identified in the paper. The resulting programme will improve the effectiveness of the criminal justice system in responding to the problem of crime in the years ahead. It will provide a sound statutory framework and will encourage a range of measures for preventing crime, challenging offending, and protecting victims.

Among the measures with which I propose to proceed are:

- a community safety strategy encouraging local crime prevention initiatives with community involvement;
- a pilot scheme for voluntary offence mediation;
- measures to ensure the appropriate use of cautioning;
- further action to reduce pre-trial delays;
- a statutory framework within which a wider range of penalties for adults and juveniles will be available to the courts;
- new arrangements aimed at securing better service to the public through improved co-ordination in the criminal justice system; and
- the publication of more information about the criminal justice system.

Together the measures represent an effective, integrated and relevant response to the problem of crime in Northern Ireland. Their implementation will require the active co-operation and support of a wide range of people both within and beyond the criminal justice system. I intend to continue the process of consultation as the details of these proposals are developed, building on the broad measure of support for the ideas set out in "Crime and Community".

HOME DEPARTMENT

Channel Tunnel (Fire Services)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision has been made for special training for fire service personnel likely to be required to provide service to the channel tunnel; how many such personnel have received specialist training; whether such training has included paramedic instruction; what is the expected reaction time for the fire service in the event of an emergency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Fifty-three specially trained members of the Kent fire brigade will permanently man the emergency centre at the United Kingdom terminal. They will respond immediately to calls for assistance in the tunnel. About 1,000 other brigade personnel are trained to support them if necessary. All the brigade receive first aid or advanced first aid training. Support from the fire station at Folkestone would take not more than five minutes to arrive from receipt of the call at brigade headquarters.

Police (Standard Spending Assessments)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the standard spending assessment for each police force in England and Wales, (a) for 1994-95, (b) for the current year and (c) for each of the past five years.

Mr. Howard: Standard spending assessments—SSAs—were introduced in 1990. Previously assessments of local authority spending needs were expressed as grant related expenditure assessments—GREs. Police components of GREs or SSAs from 1988-89 to 1993-94, and of the provisional SSAs for 1994-95, for English police authorities are shown in the table.

SSAs for Welsh local authorities are a matter for the Secretary of State for Wales.

Departmental Employees (Immigration Status)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports he has received concerning the immigration status of those employed directly or indirectly by his Department; and what actions he has taken upon such reports.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I am aware of only one such report. This was in connection with a recent joint Immigration Service and Metropolitan police operation to establish the immigration status of cleaners employed on a contract basis at the Passport Agency, Clive house. A number of people were interviewed on 22 December 1993, but no immigration offenders were detected.

ULE966

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the name of the charter company retained by his Department to supply a flight to Kingston from Gatwick on 25 December.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Air Holland.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children who arrived at Gatwick on 21 December on flight ULE966 were (a) refused entry to the United Kingdom, (b) given temporary admission pending further inquiry or (c) removed or deported from the United Kingdom; and how many are to be removed or deported from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Fourteen children aged 16 years or under who arrived on flight ULE966 were refused entry, one of whom was given temporary admission pending further inquiries and refused entry on 2 January. Ten have been removed from the United Kingdom. Four are still liable to be removed, one of whom has absconded from temporary admission. The other three are the subject of further consideration.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what decisions have been taken on applications to visit the United Kingdom by those passengers on flight ULE966 at Gatwick on 21 December who were given temporary admission pending their removal; how many (a) have been allowed to visit the United Kingdom, (b) have been refused a visit, (c) have had temporary admission extended, (d) are in detention and (e) have been or are to be deported.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information is as follows. Thirty-seven passengers on ULE966 were refused entry and granted temporary admission pending removal, of whom three were removed on 12 January and 24 left on 17 January. Ten others, none of whom is detained, remain liable for removal. Four of them had their temporary admission extended beyond 17 January pending further consideration of their cases and six have absconded from temporary admission.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department against whom penalty payments are being sought, under the Immigration (Carriers' Liability) Act 1987, for passengers on a British Caledonian charter flight arriving at Gatwick on 14 December and flight ULE966 arriving at Gatwick on 21 December, who were refused entry to the United Kingdom; whether the liability in each case is being sought because the passengers had defective travel documentation; and what representations he has received against liability for such penalty payments.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No charges under the Immigration (Carriers' Liability) Act 1987 were levied in respect of either flight.

Immigration Service, London

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what internal inquiry he has authorised into the immigration service in London; when he authorised that inquiry; what are the terms of reference of the inquiry; who is conducting the inquiry; how many immigration officers have been suspended pending the outcome of the inquiry; and when the findings of the inquiry are expected.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Senior Home Office officials are investigating the possibility that unauthorised disclosure of information to a newspaper may have taken place. The investigation began in December 1993 and will be concluded as soon as possible. No member of the Immigration Service has been suspended from duty.

Leytonstone Fire Station

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals the London fire and civil defence authority has for reducing the effect of diesel exhaust emissions from fire appliances turning out from Leytonstone fire station on that fire station's personnel.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have been informed by the chief fire officer that the emissions of diesel exhaust from London fire brigade fire appliances at Leytonstone fire station, which are inspected quarterly, are within the levels permitted by the Health and Safety Executive guidance on occupational exposure levels. Consideration is, however, being given to improvements in the layout of the station which would reduce exposure to such emissions.

Badgers

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to ensure that all perpetrators of attacks on badgers are brought to justice.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Badgers receive more protection in law than any other unendangered animal. The Protection of Badgers Act 1992 makes it an offence to kill, injure, ill-treat or take a badger, or attempt to do so, or to dig for one, except under licence or in certain particular circumstances defined in the Act. The baiting of any animal is prohibited by the Protection of Animals Act 1911.

The enforcement of the law is a matter for the police.

Dangerous Dogs

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many dogs, registered with the index of exempt dogs, have been notified to the index as having been voluntarily destroyed;

(2) how many dogs were registered with the index of exempt dogs, in accordance with section 1 of the Dangerous Dogs Act, by 30 November 1991; how many were registered by 1 March 1992; and how many remained registered by 30 November 1993;

(3) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Antrim, East (Mr. Beggs) of 14 January, Official Report, columns 334-36, how many defendants prosecuted under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 pleaded (a) guilty or (b) not guilty.

(4) how many individuals have been prosecuted under section 1 of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 since its inception;

(5) how many compensation payments were made under the Dangerous Dogs Compensation and Exemption Schemes Order 1991—SI., 1991, No. 1744; and how many dogs have been destroyed under this order;

(6) how many forms were applied for to register dogs with the index of exempt dogs; and how many of these were returned (a) complete and (b) incomplete; and how many have not been returned to the index.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Index of Exempted Dogs issued 8,573 application forms to applicants, of which 7,015 were returned to the index: of these 5,223 were complete and resulted in the issue of a certificate of exemption. Of the remaining 1,792 applications, 709 were incomplete.

Information is not available on the number of certificates of exemption in force on the various dates mentioned. As at 25 January 1994 there were 4,584 certificates remaining in force.

The number of dogs destroyed under the compensation scheme was 294; payments were made in each case. The index has been notified of 576 dogs which have been voluntarily destroyed.

Information is not collected on how defendants pleaded in Dangerous Dogs Act proceedings. Information on the number of prosecutions under section 1 of the 1991 Act has been collected since 1 January 1992 and I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Antrim, East (Mr. Beggs) on 14 January at columns 334-36. Statistics for 1993 are expected to be available in autumn 1994.

Neighbourhood Watch

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether parish councils are offered grants from his Department for neighbourhood watch schemes.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Home Office does not provide direct funding to support individual neighbourhood watch schemes. The neighbourhood watch movement is essentially local in character with co-ordination provided by police forces. The Home Office provides support through the production of leaflets and posters together with grant in aid to Crime Concern which supports neighbourhood watch activities. For example, the Home Office provided funding towards the cost of a neighbourhood watch co-ordinators handbook which was published by Crime Concern last October.

Correspondence

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters addressed to Ministers in his Department in the last 12 months by (a) hon. Members and (b) others have been forwarded for reply to each agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: In the period from 1 January 1993 to 31 December 1993, 736 letters from hon. Members addressed to myself and my right hon. and hon. Friends were forwarded to Home Office agencies for reply. Of these, 666 were forwarded to the Prison Service Agency, 66 to the United Kingdom Passport Agency and four to the Forensic Science Service Agency. Information is not available for similar letters received from others.

Fire Service

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the changing pattern or special service calls on the fire service over the last 10 years; how such calls are financed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The number of special service incidents attended by the fire service in England and Wales for each year from 1983 to 1992 is shown in the table. Fire authorities have been able to provide these services from within their existing resources.

Total number of special service calls for 1983 to 1992

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with which organisation he has discussed the future of the fire service over the last 18 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The former Home Secretary, my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, addressed the annual general meeting of the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers' Association—CACFOA—on 1 May 1993. I addressed the Fire '93 conference in September. I have also received delegations from West Glamorgan, Dyfed and Powys county councils to discuss the future of the fire service in Wales. In addition, I chair the central Fire Brigades Advisory Council for England and Wales, which meets twice a year, and which offers advice on any matter pertaining to the fire service. I continue to receive advice from a sub-committee of the council on the fire service implications of the recommendations of the Local Government Commission.

I also met representatives of the Fire Brigades Union in October 1993 and a range of issues relating to the future of the fire service were discussed.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the implications for the fire service of (a) privatisation of the coal mining industry and (b) deregulation legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Home Office is discussing with the Health and Safety Executive the possible need to issue guidance to chief fire officers on the implications for the fire service of developments in the coal industry. We have recently completed a review of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 and are considering its findings and possible implications for business and the fire service.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the number of (a) fire stations, (b) fire service personnel and (c) pumps and other fire appliances in each fire brigade at the latest date for which figures are available; what the position was on the same basis 10 years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The latest date for which information is available is 1 January 1993. Figures comparing the position on that date with that on 1 January 1984 are given in the following tables.

Data Protection

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make regulations with respect to sensitive personal information under the Data Protection Act 1984.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no such plans.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January at column 849.

ENVIRONMENT

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Baldry: Consultancy work awarded to accountancy firms during 1992 and 1993 is detailed below with a total value respectively of £1·6 million and £886,000. No merchant banks were awarded consultancy work during the period in question. It is not our policy to reveal the cost of individual contracts.

Police Reform

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the means by which the Government will determine the share which the new police authorities proposed in the White Paper on policereforms—Cm. 2281, June 1993—will have of non-domestic rate revenues.

Mr. Baldry: In England, the non-domestic rates pool is distributed to local authorities as an amount per head of resident population. Currently, where more than one authority provides services in an area, this amount per head is shared among the authorities in line with the national shares of standard spending assessments for the services which each provides. Our current intention is to determine the share of the pool to be received by the new police authorities in the same way. The arrangements in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Cetaceans (Acoustic Disturbance)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will place in the Library a copy of the draft guidelines prepared by the sea mammal research unit on precautions to minimise acoustic disturbance to small cetaceans;

(2) which bodies or organisations his Department has consulted about proposed guidelines on minimising acoustic disturbance to small cetaceans; when it began consultations; and when he expects the guidelines to be published;

(3) what plans he has to consult non-governmental organisations on draft guidelines prepared by the sea mammal research unit on precautions to minimise acoustic disturbance to small cetaceans.

Mr. Atkins: No decision has yet been taken on publication of the draft guidelines.

The draft has yet to be agreed by the working party, drawn from the interdepartmental group on the implementation of the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas, tasked with developing the guidelines which includes representatives of the Department of Trade and Industry, the British geological survey and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and the Joint Nature Conservation Committee. A member of the sea mammal research unit is the chairman.

The draft guidelines will be discussed by other Government Departments with an interest in seismic testing and the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas. A decision on whether to consult more widely will be taken at that stage.

I will ensure that when the guidelines are issued, either in draft or in their final form, a copy is placed in the Library of the House.

Waste Disposal

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of rate support grant for waste disposal purposes in North Yorkshire for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Baldry: Rate support grant—up to 1989-90—and revenue support grant, which replaced it from 1990-91, are unhypothecated block grants and do not contain specific amounts for particular services.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the outcome of consultation on the local government finance settlement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I am today laying before the House the "Local Government Finance Report (England) 1994-95", the "Limitation of Council Tax and Precepts (Relevant Notional Amounts) Report (England) 1994-95", and the "Special Grant Report (No. 9)". These reports establish the amounts of revenue support grant—RSG—and non-domestic rates—NDR—to be paid to local authorities in 1994-95, and the basis of their distribution; specify the amounts which are to be used as the basis of comparison for measuring increases in certain local authorities' budgets in 1994-95 for the purposes of capping; and provide for two special grants to be paid to certain local authorities for 1994-95.

I shall be sending copies of these reports to all authorities as soon as possible, together with a table showing each authority's standard spending assessment and its entitlement to RSG, NDR and special grants. I have also placed copies of the reports and the table in the Library and the Vote Office.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he proposes to reflect the principles of sustainable development and biodiversity in the arrangements for the conservation of nature and the countryside in England.

Mr. Gummer: The launch on 25 January of the sustainable development strategy and biodiversity action plan represents a major step in taking forward the environmental commitments entered into at the 1992 Rio conference. These developments emphasise the importance of considering our environmental policies in the widest context and ensuring that individual elements are not treated in isolation. I therefore propose, as part of the process of ensuring the Rio commitments will be fully and effectively implemented, to give early consideration to bringing together the institutional arrangements for the delivery of nature and landscape conservation and the public's appreciation and enjoyment of the countryside in England.

The administration of nature and countryside conservation was brought together in Scotland and Wales when these functions were reorganised into three national agencies. The Countryside Council for Wales and Scottish National Heritage have rapidly established themselves as effective deliverers of these aspects of our environmental policies. Our 1990 White Paper, "This Common Inheritance", said that we would keep arrangements in England under review.

Since their inception, English Nature and the Countryside Commission have provided a first-class service to the nation within their separate areas of responsibility. However, I now believe it is time to consider bringing them together in one new body. Before taking a final decision I have asked my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside to carry out an urgent study of the issues involved.

The study will be carried out with the co-operation of the two bodies, and there will be a full opportunity for the many people with an interest in these matters to give their views. The study will address the advantages and disadvantages, if any, of integration as well as issues of cost, implications for staff, timing, and the production of a set of forward-looking objectives for a new body.

An official-level steering group, led by the Department of the Environment, and involving both bodies, will supervise the day to day work. Legislation will be required for formal merger and I therefore propose that the study also looks at how closer working could be achieved in the interim or in the circumstances that formal merger was not proceeded with.

Buying Agency

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what performance targets he has set the Buying Agency for 1994.

Mr. Baldry: In support of the objectives set out in the agency's latest corporate and business plans, I have set financial, productivity, customer satisfaction and environmental targets for 1994.

The financial targets are:

to increase total sales by 14 per cent. from an expected £144·5 million in 1993 to £165 million; and to achieve an overall surplus, after interest, of £1·5 million on total sales.

The customer satisfaction targets are:

to ensure delivery by the due date of at least 90 per cent. of orders handled directly; and to resolve 80 per cent. of customer complaints within one month and the rest within three months.

The productivity targets are:

to increase the sales: staff ratio from £1·3 million per employee in 1993 to £1·375 million per employee; and to reduce the cost of each £1 of sales achieved from an expected 2·8p in 1993 to 2·6p.

The environmental target is:

to require all suppliers to provide details of their environmental policies and practices as a first step towards establishing appropriate encouragement of best practice.

These targets will require the agency to sustain yet further improvements in growth, efficiency and service to its customers in 1994. They are challenging, but realistic, and I am confident of the agency's ability to meet them.

Regional Offices

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the regional and area offices of his Department, of the Property Services Agency—and its successors—the pollution inspectorate, the National Rivers Authority, the Countryside Commission, the Housing Corporation, the Audit Commission, the Rural Development Commission, the Nature Conservancy Council, and of other inspectorate, agencies and other public bodies for which he is responsible.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 11 January 1994, columns 16-17]: The list of regional and area offices of the Department of the Environment inadvertently omitted the following:

Property Holdings Directorate: London, Edinburgh, Birmingham, Bristol, Harlow, Leeds, London, Manchester and Tunbridge Wells.

Property and Buildings Directorate (Contractor Management Information System): London, Edinburgh, Birmingham, Bristol and Manchester.

Sulphur Dioxide

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the cost of an 80 per cent. reduction on 1980 levels of United Kingdon emissions of sulphur dioxide if achieved by (a) 2000, (b) 2005, and (c) 2010; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Any estimates are uncertain since they depend on what is assumed about the future commercial decisions of the electricity supply industry and others as well as underlying assumptions about long-term economic growth and fuel prices. The Government have considered a variety of scenarios giving rise to a wide range of costs. We have not estimated the cost of meeting an 80 per cent. reduction target in 2000 since this target would not be feasible. Our estimates however suggest that, taking account of the anticipated refurbishment and replacement needs for relevant plant, 80 per cent. reductions by 2010 is an economically more practicable target, which will result in considerably fewer areas where critical loads are exceeded.

Trading Standards Departments

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make a statement about the plans he has for trading standards departments currently in county councils in areas where the Local Government Commission recommends unitary authorities smaller than county councils;

(2) if he will make it his policy to set up a national Her Majesty's inspectorate of tradings standards, organised regionally, to replace all tradings standards departments currently operated by local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 17 January 1994]: I have been asked to reply.

The Government consider that trading standards should remain a local authority function. Smaller authorities may wish to consider the option of collaborative arrangements.

The Local Government Commission has been asked to make recommendations for shared arrangements for particular functions in cases where a satisfactory structure is unlikely to be achieved without them. The Government will give careful consideration to any such recommendations.

SCOTLAND

Stammerers

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the percentage of children who are likely to grow into adult stammerers.

Mr. Stewart: It is estimated that about 80 per cent. of children who stammer overcome their condition by adulthood. However, dysfluency affects about 1 per cent. of the population.

Speech Therapy

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will investigate the provision of speech therapy in each health board area.

Mr. Stewart: Education authorities have a statutory responsibility to ensure speech therapy services are available to children with a recorded special educational need. An additional £3 million has been made available to local authorities over the two years 1993-95 to enable them to purchase speech therapy services from health service providers who are the principal employers for speech therapists.

Speech therapy for non-recorded children and adults are the responsibility of health boards whose function it is, in the light of the assessed needs of their population, to determine the volume. pattern and quality of services required and through contracts with providers ensure that these standards are met.

My right hon. Friend has, at present, no specific plans to investigate the provision of speech therapy services.

NHS Trust Hospitals

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost of employing managers, advisers, adminstrators and clerical staff in national health service hospitals in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Stewart: The information is set out in the table. Two factors have largely contributed to the increase shown. As part of the NHS reforms, Scottish health boards have devolved many of their functions to directly managed units and NHS trusts. The figures also include those senior nurses and clinicians who have transferred to the general-senior manager's pay scales, particularly in latter years

National Health Service

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of total national health service expenditure has been spent on the employment of managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff within the whole of the NHS in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Stewart: The information is set out in the table. The figures for salaries include those senior nurses and clinicians who have transferred from clinical to general-senior managers pay scales particularly in later years.

Sheriff Court Fees Amendment (No. 2) Order 1993

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultation, advice and representation he has received from the Scottish Legal Aid Board regarding the Sheriff Court Fees Amendment (No. 2) Order 1993.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The implications of the order for legal aid expenditure have been the subject of correspondence and discussion between the Scottish Legal Aid Board and the Scottish Office Home and Health Department on a number of recent occasions.

Prescriptions

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prescriptions were issued in each health board area in Scotland in each year since 1990 for (a) temazepam, (b) dihydrocodeine, (c) methadone and (d) buprenorphine.

Mr. Stewart: The information by health board is not available prior to 1992.

The information for each health board for the calendar years 1992 and 1993 and totals for Scotland for 1990 and 1991 are set out in the tables:

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether access agreements entered into with a new owner when a portion of Forestry Commission land is sold are binding on (a) the original purchaser alone or (b) all subsequent owners of the land.

Sir Hector Monro: Access agreements made between the Forestry Commission and local authorities prior to the sale of commission land are binding on all subsequent owners.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Lang: I have no special advisers on secondment.

Greenock Prison

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons have been detained in Her Majesty's prison, Greenock, whilst awaiting deportation in each of the past four years; what extra financial assistance has been given to the prison governor and his staff in relation to such persons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 January 1994]: I have asked Mr. E. W. Frizzell, the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service, to arrange for a reply to be given to the hon. Member.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 27 January 1994.

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about how many persons have been detained in HM Prison, Greenock whilst awaiting deportation in each of the past four years and what extra financial assistance has been given to the prison governor and his staff.

The number of persons who have been detained in the past four financial years are as follows:

1990-91	15
1991-92	37
1992-93	60
1993-94	50 (to 21 January 1994 only)

The annual budget for Greenock Prison takes account of the strategic priorities of the establishment, and the resources available to the Scottish Prison Service as a whole, but does not differentiate between types of prisoner or detainee.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the designated capacity of Her Majesty's prison, Greenock; and what was the total number of persons detained therein on 1 September in each of the past four years.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 January 1994]: I have asked Mr. E. W. Frizzell, the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service, to arrange for a reply to be given to the hon. Member.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 27 January 1994.

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about the design capacity of HM Prison Greenock; and what was the total number of persons detained therein on 1 September in each of the past four years.

The information is as follows:

Design capacity	179
Population
1 September 1990	157
1 September 1991	186
1 September 1992	222
1 September 1993	300

The population of HM Prison Greenock on 14 January 1994 was 189. The reduction was due in part to the implementation of the Prisoner and Criminal Proceedings (Scotland) Act 1993 on 1 October 1993.

Roads Directorate

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about possible executive agency status for the roads directorate of the Scottish Office Industry Department.

Mr. Lang: I have decided that the roads directorate of the Scottish Office should be considered as a candidate for executive agency status, under the next steps initiative. A "prior options" study will be undertaken to establish whether agency status or other options would be appropriate. I would welcome comments from interested parties. Comments should be sent by 1 June 1994 to:

Livestock Improvement Schemes

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the result of the review of the livestock improvement schemes for crofters; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: The livestock improvement schemes are among the special forms of help available to crofters and others of similar status in the former crofting counties. The aim of the review was to assess the current arrangements and to consider alternative ways of providing assistance which might achieve better value for money. Careful consideration was given to the varying needs of the different crofting areas and to the particular requirements of cattle and sheep production.

In the light of the findings of the review, including the responses to the consultation paper issued last year, I have decided to retain the bull supply scheme for crofting townships. This is a unique scheme which provides quality pedigree bulls purchased by my Department on loan to crofting township committees which, in most cases, return the bulls to the Department's stud farm at Inverness for over-wintering. The review has identified that this scheme plays an important role, particularly in the remoter areas, in helping crofters to continue in cattle production which, in turn, has significant social and environmental benefits. I have also decided that my Department should continue to provide an artificial insemination service for crofters' cattle in Lewis and Harris, providing there continues to be sufficient demand and no other suitable alternative is available, since this is particularly appropriate to the circumstances there.

However, for sheep, instead of hiring out rams, my Department will in future purchase suitable rams of the Blackface and Cheviot breeds and sell them at a subsidised price to those crofting townships who wish to participate in the scheme. The intention is to provide rams of at least equivalent quality to the previous scheme.

For the forthcoming year, the cost to crofting townships of new rams delivered to the crofting areas will be £115 per ram. For this price, the crofting townships will be able to acquire a ram which, with suitable care, should provide useful service for up to three years. This is a much better bargain than the existing scheme under which crofting townships would pay over £175 for an equivalent period of time.

The new scheme will also ensure that assistance is provided in a more cost-effective way than at present since it will no longer be necessary for the Department to maintain a stock of rams. This should reduce the annual net deficit associated with the livestock schemes by approximately 25 per cent.

In conjunction with this new scheme, the existing Shetland sheep scheme will be continued but the new arrangements will supersede the Outer Isles ram lamb scheme which will be discontinued. The livestock purchase loan scheme, for which there is very limited take-up, will also be closed.

These new arrangements will ensure that an attractive package of assistance is available for crofting townships who wish to improve the quality of their livestock and thereby help to maintain the traditional crofting lifestyle and environment. They will be introduced in time for new applications for the 1994-95 season and the detailed administrative rules for the various schemes, together with the relevant charges, will be publicised to potential applicants in due course.

Forestry

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his policy objectives for private commercial woodlands and forestry.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 24 January 1994]: The Government's forestry policy objectives are described in the booklet "Forestry Policy for Great Britain", a copy of which is in the Library.

Consultants

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Lang: The information required could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

NATIONAL FINANCE

CCT Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the loss of invoices by the Compulsory Competitive Tendering Agency that was discovered after the transfer of responsibility to the Cabinet Office.

Mr. Nelson: In 1984-85 CCTA introduced charges to cover part of the cost of the work which it carried out on behalf of other Departments. The coverage of these charges was subsequently extended by the agency until full cost recovery for all services provided directly to Departments was introduced on 1 April 1992. It came to light in 1991-92 that invoices to other Departments totalling just over £1 million relating to the period 1984-85 to 1989-90 remained uncleared. Attempts were made to link these to payments received, but this was not possible because of changes to the billing arrangements and accounting procedures.

Since the invoices related to transactions between Departments and no funds have been lost to the Exchequer, the Cabinet Office decided that the outstanding invoices should be written off. The same treatment would have been required had responsibility for CCTA remained with the Treasury.

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Nelson: The following table lists merchant banks and those companies which have accountancy arms who have carried out work for Her Majesty's Treasury during 1992 and 1993.

Income and Tax Statistics

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 12 January, Official Report, columns 190-93, if he will provide the same information on income and tax levels for the United Kingdom for (a) 1980-81, (b) 1989-90, (c) 1991-92, (d) 1992-93 and (e) 1993-94.

Mr. Dorrell: Estimates based on the survey of personal incomes are in the tables. For 1980-81 and 1989-90, married couples are counted as one taxpayer and their incomes are combined. Following the introduction of independent taxation, for 1990-91 onwards, husbands and wives are counted separately. The estimates of total income relate to income tax and exclude non-taxable income such as certain social security benefits.

Duty Free Goods

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the concession that duty-free goods purchased on both the outward and return journeys on carriers within the single market should be legitimately imported into the country where the travellers' journey started is the subject of an EC agreement; and if he will make it his policy to ensure that the applicable duty-free regime should be decided by each member state in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity.

Sir John Cope: EC law permits, but does not require, member states to continue with duty-free shopping for a transitional period until 30 June 1999. Like other EC countries the United Kingdom has allowed duty-free shopping to continue, to avoid an adverse effect of the single market on the duty-free industry in the United Kingdom which is the biggest in the EC.

In the single market, there are no routine fiscal checks at frontiers, and the duty-free system now operates by controls on what the vendor sells, rather than what the traveller imports. EC law envisages that the vendor will sell no more than the previous "allowance" to a passenger on an intra-EC journey, so it is legitimate for a passenger to acquire one "allowance" on each leg of a return journey.

Excise Duties (Alcohol)

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what level of trade, in terms of money and jobs, has been lost in the United Kingdom as a result of the differential in excise duties on alcoholic beverages and tobacco as levied by France and by the United Kingdom since the creation of the single market.

Sir John Cope: Customs do not maintain records in these terms. However, duty receipts for alcoholic beverages and tobacco are generally up on previous years, as detailed below. This suggests that much cross-border shopping represents new consumption.

£ million

Product	1991	1992	1993
Tobacco products	5,963	6,417	7,394
Spirits	1,681	1,675	1,724
Wines	899	967	1,043
Beer	2,282	2,376	[1]2,228
Cider/Perry	74	85	100

[1] The change to end-product duty entailed a one-off cash flow loss in 1993 of about £200 million (indicating an underlying increase of about 2 per cent.).

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many prosecutions there have been, and what was the value of goods involved, where persons have been prosecuted for importing excisable beverages or tobacco products purporting to be for their personal use, over the last 12 months.

Sir John Cope: During 1993 Customs and Excise prosecutions have been concluded in 51 cases involving the illegal disposal of excise goods purported to have been imported for personal use. The estimated value of the goods involved was about £500,000. A further 76 cases are in the prosecution system but have not yet been concluded.

In the 11 months to 30 November 1993, Customs made 1,016 detections of illicit practices involving £1,624,543 revenue, equating approximately to a retail value of about £2·7 million. In addition to the prosecutions mentioned above, Customs limited their action in 338 cases to seizure only of the goods, of which 161 of those cases involved also the seizure of vehicles. The balance of 551 cases have been settled under Customs' power to compound proceedings on payment of penalties in lieu of prosecution or are awaiting the outcome of considerations as to the course of action to be taken.

Contraband

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each of the last 10 years the quantities and estimated value of contraband seized, categorised by type, and indicate how it has been disposed of.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 25 January 1994]: Customs and Excise have records for contraband seizures for the period from 1 April 1991. An analysis of these years can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Smuggling, South Coast

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many front-line anti-smuggling staff are currently deployed at each port on the south coast; and how many were deployed at each south coast port in each year since 1983.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 26 January 1994]: This information is not gathered centrally and the cost of supplying staffing figures for all south coast ports is considered to be disproportionate. However, the number of staff years deployed on anti-smuggling duties for the main south coast ports are as follows.

Numbers for earlier years are no longer available as the records have now been destroyed. The figures for 1992-93 and 1993-94 relate purely to anti-smuggling staff but the numbers for earlier years also cover other duties which include collection of duty and other fiscal work. The figures were not sub-divided between anti-smuggling and other tasks for those earlier years.

[1] The re-organisation to separate anti-smuggling and demand-led staff started earlier in Dover than in the other ports.

[2] This does not include anti-smuggling staff who will be working at Channel Tunnel locations.

The deployment of anti-smuggling staff at any given time in a port can vary according to the perceived risk. They can also be augmented, when necessary, by staff from elsewhere in the executive units.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the additional cost to the average first-time buyer would have been for the latest financial year for which figures are available had mortgage interest relief been restricted in that year to (a) 20 per cent. and (b) 15 per cent.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: It is not possible to provide an estimate since accurate information on the mortgage interest rates paid by first-time buyers is not available. The average new loan for first-time buyers in 1993-94 was over £30,000.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average interest rate payable on mortgages qualifying for mortgage interest relief is expected to be in 1993-94, 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Interest rates will continue to be set to achieve the Government's objectives for low inflation and sustainable growth.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what working assumption has been used for interest rates to calculate forecasts of the cost of changes to the rate of mortgage interest relief published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95."

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Using the conventional assumption of mortgage interest rates remaining at their then current level, 8 per cent. was used.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of mortgage interest relief would be in 1994-95 and 1995-96 if the rate at which it were available were unchanged from 1993-94.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: The estimated costs if mortgage interest relief were given at 25 per cent. are £4·3 billion in 1994-95 and £4·7 billion in 1995-96. These estimates are based on the conventional assumption that mortgage interest rates remain at their current levels.

Business Support

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total budget of the European Community's support for small and medium-sized enterprises under (a) Eurotech capital, (b) the venture consort scheme, and (c) seed capital funds in each year since their establishment; and what was the total allocation of each to (i) the northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. McLoughlin: I have been asked to reply.

Most of the separate annual figures are not readily available, but the information available from the European Commission of the total budgets for these schemes is as follows:

Eurotech Capital

Eurotech Capital expenditure by the Commission since the inception of the programme mid-1991 is around 8·5 MECUs (approximately £6·3 million).

Separate figures for expenditure in the nothern region or in the United Kingdom are not available.

The Venture Consort Scheme

The European Commnity spent a total of 10·4 MECUs —approximately £8 million—on the scheme, which ran from 1985-1993. Of this, 2·1 MECUs—approximately £1·6 million—was spent in the United Kingdom. Separate figures for expenditure in the nothern region are not available.

Seed Capital Funds

Between 1989 and 1992 the Community budget was 4·381 MECU—approximately £3·3 million. In 1993 the budget was £1·498 MECU—£1·1 million—and in 1994 it is 2·16 MECU—£1·6 million.

Separate figures for expenditure in the United Kingdom or the northern region are not available.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total budget of the European Community scheme to create a network of business and innovation centres in each year since their establishment; and what was the total budget awarded under this scheme to (a) the northern region and (b) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr McLoughlin: I have been asked to reply.

The total European Community budget available for business and innovation centres since the network was established in 1984 is as follows

Year	MECU	£ million
1984	1·5	0·9
1985	0·8	0·5
1986	2·8	1·9
1987	2·4	1·7

1991	7·9	5·5
1992	7·0	5·1
1993	7·0	5·3
1994	8·0	6·0

Separate figures for expenditure in the northern region or the United Kingdom are not readily available.

EDUCATION

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education in which publications, over what period, and at what cost, the current advertisement, or advertisements, for grant-maintained schools are being placed; and what is the cost of the associated freephone information service.

Mr. Robin Squire: The advertisements providing factual information on grant-maintained status will run for five weeks from 20 January in a range of publications at a cost of some £200,000. They coincide with the introduction of the relevant provisions of the Education Act 1993. Requests for booklets arising from the advertisements will be fielded through the Department's distribution arrangements for GM information, which include a freephone service; it is not possible at this time to disaggregate the costs related to telephone calls prompted specifically by the advertising campaign.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what representations he has received on the appointment of Phillip Head, the former chief executive of the Welsh Development Agency as property controller of the Further Education Funding Council;

(2) whether the Further Education Funding Council takes up references before formally appointing senior executives;

(3) how many candidates were shortlisted for the post of property controller for the Further Education Funding Council.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend has received no representations about the appointment by the Further Education Funding Council to the post of head of property services. I understand that the council advertised the post on two separate occasions. Twelve candidates were interviewed before a final appointment was made. It is the council's policy to take up references before formally appointing senior executives. My right hon. Friend is satisfied that this appointment was made on the basis of fair and open competition.

EMPLOYMENT

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the estimated costs for the administration of the access to work scheme in its first year of operation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlilse) on the 24 January 1994, Official Report, column 100.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will produce a table showing unemployment levels as a percentage of the working population for each of European Community countries for the latest years available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested can be found in the "Unemployment Bulletin" published by the Statistical Office of the European Community. The Organisation of Economic Co-operation and Development also publishes similar information in its publication "Monthly Economic Indicators", although on a slightly different basis and not for all countries. Copies of both these publications can be found in the Library.

Unemployment Benefit

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for the United Kingdom in total, and by standard region including Greater London, the number of households claiming unemployment benefit for each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 21 January 1994]: Estimates from the labour force survey—LFS—of the number of households where either the head, or the cohabiting partner of the head, is claiming unemployment related benefits are given in the following table, for each spring since 1983. Prior to this, the monthly administrative unemployment figures were based upon a registrant count rather than a claimant count. As a result, no complete information about those claiming unemployment-related benefits is available from the labour force survey before 1983.

Industrial Inquiry

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what amount was recovered, under section 22 of the Social Security Act 1989, from the damages paid to victims of industrial injury for Durham for each year since 1989.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Numbers of injuries for County Durham, as reported to the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division and local authorities—who enforce the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 for certain premises—for each year since 1989 are:

Year	Number of injuries
1988-89	2,916
1989-90	2,890
1990-91	2,932
1991-92	2,679
1992-93	2,344

This does not include numbers of reported injuries in mines and on railways which are not available in the form requested.

The Health and Safety Executive does not hold, and has no access to, information relating to payments as a result of industrial injury.

Misbehaviour Dismissals

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what instructions are provided to unemployment benefit offices on the rules regarding reduction of unemployment benefit for dismissal for misbehaviour and the number of weeks that any reduction should be imposed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Bob Cryer, dated 27 January 1994.

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding the reduction of unemployment benefit for dismissal for misbehaviour.

The Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 Section 28 (1) (a) contains provisions for disqualification from receiving unemployment benefit if employment is lost through misconduct.

Copies of the legislation are held in all Employment Service Offices responsible for paying unemployment benefit, and adjudication offices.

When a client has been dismissed from their employment, payment of benefit is suspended whilst enquiries are made of the employer. The Benefits Agency (BA) is informed and if Income Support is claimed it may be payable at a reduced rate. It is for BA to decide the percentage of any reduction in accordance with Income Support Regulations 1987.10, and Income Support (General) Regulations 1987.22. Copies of these Regulations are held in Benefits Agency Offices.

If the reply from the employer indicates that employment was lost through the employee's misconduct the claim is referred to an adjudication officer, as it is a matter for the independent adjudication authorities to decide the length of any disqualification arising from misconduct. The current maximum period of disqualification is 26 weeks.

I hope this is helpful.

Job Interviews (Travel Expenses)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what regulations prevent the payment of travel allowance for job interviews to unemployed persons unless they have been unemployed for at least four weeks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Bob Cryer, dated 27 January 1994.

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the four week unemployment regulation which excludes people from assistance to travel to job interviews.

I assume you are asking about one of the Travel to Interview Scheme (TIS) eligibility rules. One of the TIS rules, is as you suggest, that people need to be unemployed for four weeks before they can become eligible. This eligibility condition is not a statutory requirement but part of the arrangements of the scheme. The reason for this is that there would be no advantage in spending money on encouraging people to broaden their jobsearch if there were jobs available locally. The qualifying period helps target the assistance on those who have explored their locality for work but who now have a need to look further afield.

The Travel to Interview Scheme was introduced in 1986 to help with the travel costs of unemployed people attending job interviews beyond daily travelling distance of their home area, thus widening the applicant's jobsearch improving their chances of obtaining work and encouraging labour mobility. During 1992-93 the scheme helped over 45,000 applicants at a cost of £1·5 million. A few basic conditions must be met before assistance can be granted, to ensure that the funds available are concentrated on those unemployed people in most need. A leaflet outlining the scope of the scheme is enclose.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister how many files marked, "Not for NAO eyes", relating to the Pergau hydro-electric project in Malaysia are held by his secretariat and the Cabinet Office.

The Prime Minister: None.

One-Parent Families

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if the comments made by the Secretary of State for Wales on 10 January, with regard to one-parent families, reflect Government policy; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 January 1994]: My right hon. Friend was correct in saying that the single parent issue is important to the Government. The growth in single parent families inevitably has an impact on Government policies. For example, rates of pregnancy among 13 to 15-year-old girls have risen substantially in recent years, which is why my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has adopted a target of a minimum reduction of 50 per cent. on the 1989 rates by 2000. Similarly, the Child Support Agency was established because of concern about absent fathers and support for children in single parent families.

British Legion Medal

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will recommend Her Majesty the Queen that her permission be granted for any uniformed members of the public services and armed forces who did national service to wear on their uniforms the medal struck for ex-national service men by the Royal British Legion, or the related ribbon.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 26 January 1994]: The medal struck on behalf of the Royal British Legion is unofficial and produced as a commercial venture to raise funds for their Poppy appeal. It would not therefore be appropriate for me to approach Her Majesty the Queen as requested. People who served on national service were eligible for the various official medals approved by the sovereign at the time.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Agencies (Letters)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many letters addressed to Ministers in his Department in the last 12 months by (a) hon. Members and (b) others have been forwarded for reply to each agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The number of letters from hon. Members forwarded to each executive agency during 1993 is in the table.

	Number
Benefits Agency	1,820
Contributions Agency	189
Child Support Agency[1]	548
Resettlement Agency	2
Information Technology Services Agency	1

[1] April-December 1993 after achieving agency status.

Information on letters from other people which have been forwarded to agencies is not available.

Heating Equipment

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what supplementary help is to be made available to pensioners and benefit receivers for extra heating equipment necessitated by the reduction in voltage in electricity supplies.

Mr. Burt: The effect on the output of electrical heating equipment in making the change to a nominal voltage of 230 volts in accordance with the time scales and tolerances required for EC voltage harmonisation will be insignificant. Additional supplementary help is not appropriate.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support recipients have been subject to a benefit penalty as a result of awards made by the Child Support Agency since April 1993.

Mr. Burt: A reduced benefit direction is issued by a child support officer to the Benefits Agency only where a parent with care has refused to co-operate in pursuing child support maintenance without good cause.

The Child Support Agency issued 81 reduced benefit directions in the period 5 April 1993 to 30 November 1993. These include parents with care on income support, family credit, and disability working allowance. Separate figures for income support are not available.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if instructions have been given to officials of the Child Support Agency on requests from community groups for a speaker to address public meetings and answer questions from the audience.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mrs. Maria Fyfe, dated 27 January 1994.

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security on whether instructions have been given to Child Support Agency staff in respect of the provision of speakers for public meetings.

No general instructions have been issued about the provision of speakers for meetings. Since the formation of the Agency, it has been a function of Agency Customer Services Managers to provide help and information to organisations and groups representing our clients. Liaison with many such organisations is now extensive, and requests for speakers at meetings are considered locally.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford will receive a reply from the chief executive of the Child Support Agency to her letters concerning (a) B. Lawrence, (b) P. Bennett, (c) C. S. Chaplin, (d) A. Hawkins, (e) M. Smith and (f) T. Rickward; and what is the reason for the delay.

Mr. Burt: Recent press interest has stimulated a great deal of correspondence from constituents and the necessary steps are being taken to ensure that correspondence from hon. Members will be answered as promptly as possible. I am sorry that the responses have been slower than usual from this Department. However, I replied to the hon. Member concerning Mr. M. Smith on 25 January, and Mr. B. Lawrence today. The other cases are in an advanced state of preparation, and the chief executive of the Child Support Agency will reply to the hon. Lady shortly.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what instructions his Department has given the chief executive of the Child Support Agency to expedite answers to letters from hon. Members about constituents' problems on child maintenance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: All letters from hon. Members addressed to the chief executive of the Child Support Agency are acknowledged and she aims to respond within an average of 20 working days. Recent press interest has stimulated a great deal of correspondence from constituents and although that target is not being met at the moment, the necessary steps are being taken to ensure that correspondence from hon. Members will be answered as promptly as possible.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing what the retirement pension for a single person and a couple would be in April if it had continued to be uprated with earnings or prices, whichever the higher, since this link was broken.

Mr. Hague: It is estimated that the weekly rate of category A retirement pension would be £76·70 from April 1994 and the combined rate of category A pension and category B pension payable to a couple would be £122·75.

Children (Statistics)

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 836, if he will recalculate the last column of figures to show the number of children in families getting income support as percentages of the number for whom child benefit was being paid.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table and is for Great Britain only.

Supplementary Benefit/Income Support Recipients and Dependants

2. The figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand. Percentages are correct to one decimal place.
3. The number of dependant children is expressed as a percentage of the number of children for whom child benefit was in payment.
4. The figures are for dependant children under the age of 19.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the latest figures showing how many (a) families with children are living on income support and (b) how many children are living on income support; and how these figures compare with 1979.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Income support supplementary benefit cases with children

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no such plans.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) paintaings and (b) photographs there are on the walls on his rooms.

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has 10 paintings on the walls of his rooms of which four were painted and provided by his wife. He has one photograph.

Weather Stations

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what records he has maintained, or intends to maintain, on the number of weather stations which record temperatures of 0°C or less for three, four, five and six nights in any given week.

Mr. Scott: The administration of cold weather payments is a matter for Mr Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. he will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mrs. Margaret Ewing, dated 26 January 1994.

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recently Parliamentary Question about what records are currently maintained, and what records it is intended will be maintained on the number of weather stations which record temperatures of 0 degrees Centrigade or less for three, four, five and six nights in any given week.

As I stated in my letter to you of 2 December 1993 [OR Vol 233 Cols 811-812] data provided by the Meteorological office does not include information on those Meteorological stations which have registered an average of 0 degrees Centrigade for three, four, five or six nights. This is because the regulations relating to cold weather payments define a period of cold weather as a consecutive period of seven days during which the average mean temperature is 0 degrees Centigrade or less.

The Agency therefore, has no plans to begin requesting this information from the Meteorological Office, and will not be compiling and maintaining records relating to the information you require.

I hope this reply has been helpful.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will modify the regulations relating to the independent living fund in order to enable local authorities to make direct payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

We have currently no plans to enable social services authorities to make direct cash payments.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Licences

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has in regard to the application for export licences from (a) Heckler and Koch, (b) Royal Ordnance and (c) GEC for exporting military equipment to the former Yugoslavia since July 1992.

Mr. Needham: It has been the practice of successive administrations not to disclose information about export licence applications from individual companies. A mandatory UN arms embargo was imposed in September 1991; export licences have been issued in respect of equipment for UN and EC peacekeeping activities, and for the protection of those undertaking humanitarian and media work.

EC Business Support

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total budget of the European Community's scheme to support business under (a) BC-NET, (b) EUROPARTENARIAT and (c) SPRINT in each year since their establishment; and what was the total allocation of each to (i) the northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. McLoughlin:

BC-NET (Business co-operation network) and Europartenariat

BC-Net and Europartenariat are part of the Community's action programme for small and medium-sized enterprises. Separate information on budgets for them is not readily available, but the total budget for the action programme since its commencement in 1989 is as follows:

Year	Mecu	£ million
1989	18·0	12·1
1990	21·3	15·2
1991	20·4	14·2
1992	24·7	18·2
1993	24·8	18·7
1994	26·8	20·2

Separate figures for expenditure in the northern region and the United Kingdom are not available.

SPRINT (Strategic Programme for Innovation and Technology Transfer)

Prior to 1989, SPRINT was an experimental programme with a comparatively small budget of 18·6 mecu over the period 1983-89.

The main phase of the programme started in 1989 and the annual expenditure since then is as follows:

Year	Mecu	£ million
1989	5·1	3·4
1990	17·5	12·5
1991	22·8	16·0
1992	22·0	16·2
1993	23·0	17·4
1994	19·0	14·3

Again separate figures for the northern region and the United Kingdom are not available.

Comité Européen des Normes

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the composition of the Comité Européen des Normes by nationality to give the names and backgrounds of the British members.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Comité Européen de Normalisation—CEN—consists of the national standards organisations of the 17 countries of the European economic area and Switzerland. The United Kingdom member is the British Standards Institution—BSI—which was founded in 1901 and is an independent body incorporated under royal charter.

The United Kingdom delegation to the CEN General Assembly is led by the director and general manager of BSI Standards and normally comprises appropriate BSI staff, together with representatives of industrial and other economic interests. The BSI divisional director, Standards International represents the organisation on the CEN technical board which is responsible for overall control of the CEN technical programme. The United Kingdom delegation to each of the seven CEN sector technical boards usually comprises two representatives from the sector together with a member of the BSI staff. CEN prepares individual standards in technical committees. The United Kingdom representatives on these committees are usually experts from industry: they are appointed by the relevant BSI committees and are accompanied when appropriate by BSI staff.

Off-shore Fabrication Yards

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many full-time employees were registered at each offshore fabrication yard in the United Kingdom for each of the past five financial years.

Mr. Eggar: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many fabrication orders relating to the United Kingdom continental shelf gas and oil industry have been allocated per company to United Kingdom-based fabrication yards in each of the past five financial years; and how many orders from operators in the United Kingdom continental shelf area have been allocated to (a) EU countries and (b) Korea.

Mr. Eggar: Information on major orders for the calendar years 1988-1993 is contained in the table:

Yard	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993

Jewellery Industry

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what cost-benefit assessments have been made of the impact of the proposed EC directive 76/769/EEC: Restrictions on the marketing and use of dangerous substances and preparations; and what assessment he has of the effect of consequential job losses in the jewellery industry.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information on the possible costs to affected United Kingdom industries—in particular the suppliers of costume jewellery, certain suppliers of items to the clothing industry, such as buttons, and the makers of spectacle frames—as well as potential cost savings in treatment of nickel dermatitis arising from this proposal were set out in the Department's supplementary explanatory memorandum dated 9 December 1993 reference 5916/93. It should be noted that when political agreement on a common position was reached at the subsequent Internal Market Council meeting of 16 December it was decided to delete spectacle frames and ordinary buttons from the text of the proposal.

Post Offices

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish figures which show the level of balancing losses for (a) franchised post offices and (b) Crown post offices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: This is an operational matter for the Post Office.

Deregulation

Ms Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the proposals in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill with existing obligations under European Community legislation currently in force.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I am satisfied that the proposals in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill, if enacted, would be consistent with the United Kingdom's European Community obligations.

Regional Development Funds

Mr. Hicks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the outcome of the negotiations between the European Commission and United Kingdom Government over the designations of Saltash and Torpoint for eligibility for European regional development funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The European Commission eventually agreed to my request to include these areas among the United Kingdom's objective 5(b) areas.

As a result the whole of Cornwall is eligible under objective 5(b). Together with the coverage of much of Devon and part of Somerset, this is an excellent result for the south-west.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Cryer: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the current state of negotiations in the GATT, listing the tariffs concessions so far agreed.

Mr. Needham: The GATT Uruguay round of multilateral trade negotiations was substantively concluded on 15 December. Tariff concessions tabled at that date cannot be withdrawn but may be improved up to 15 February, the deadline for the submission to the GATT secretariat of final schedules of tariff reductions. The European Community is seeking improvements where possible in the concessions offered by other countries and in particular from India, Pakistan and Indonesia on textiles and clothing.

Eighty-seven participants in the round, including the European Community, have so far lodged draft schedules of tariff concessions with the GATT secretariat in Geneva where comprehensive details, which are too extensive to list, are held. My Department's international trade policy division has received some schedules. Inquiries about particular concessions may be addressed to it.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 25 January concerning Christmas cards sent out in 1993 by the Minister for Trade, how many Christmas cards were sent at public expense in 1993 by himself and by each of the other Ministers in his Department; and for each Minister, how much this cost.

Mr. Eggar: Other DTI Ministers did not send out Christmas cards at public expense last year.

Iron and Steel Industry Employees

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he will make a statement on the transitional arrangements to apply to the termination of the iron and steel employees readaptation benefit scheme—ISERBS.

Mr. Sainsbury: A statutory instrument was laid today and comes into force tomorrow.

When I announced the termination of the scheme on 29 October 1993 I said that permanent closures, capacity cuts or changes in activities at steel companies which were imminent would be considered under transitional arrangements. The proposals for those arrangements, that closures and capacity cuts occurring on or after 1 January 1994 should not be eligible for consideration, were issued in a consultation paper and all the comments received have been considered.

The regulations provide that, subject to the other provisions of the scheme, benefits may still be paid where such events have occurred before 28 January 1994 and the transfer or redundancy relating to those events, including any period of notice, occurs on or before 1 May 1994; providing that the European Commission approves the provision of aid in respect of those events and the individual concerned.

Where such events have already been accepted by the Commission as justifying payments under the ECSC treaty, the regulations provide that, subject to the other provisions of the scheme, payments may be made to any steel employee whose redundancy or transfer—whenever it occurs—relates to those events, provided that the Commission also approves the provision of aid in respect of that individual.

One-stop Shops

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the estimates he has made since 1 July 1992 of the number of first-stop shops, one-stop shops or business links he wished to see established with the dates on which his estimates changed; and if he will give reasons for the changes in the estimates.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 19 January 1994]: When I announced in July 1992 our intention to run a competition for pilot one-stop shops, I said that in the longer term I wished to see a network of about 200 such shops established across England. My estimate has not changed since then. I expect a national network of over 200 business links to be established over the next two to three years.

Already, approval in principle has been given to 16 business link plans which will lead eventually to the establishment of 54 business link outlets. Four of these outlets are already open, in Birmingham, Congleton, Leicester and Macclesfield. Plans are at an advanced stage of preparation in many other areas and the national assessment panel, which I have appointed to advise me on the quality of proposals, will shortly consider plans from a further five areas involving 18 business link outlets.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has on the number of facilities equivalent to first-stop shops, one-stop shops or business links currently provided in Germany.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 19 January 1994]: In Germany there is no equivalent to the business link programme.

Business support activities are carried out by a number of different agencies including the Federal Government, the individual landers and municipalities. Policy for smaller firms in relation to education and training is the responsibility of the 83 chambers of industry and commerce—which have public law status—and the 57 chambers of handwerk. The chambers are responsible for vocational training and organise skill centres and examinations under statutory federal training regulations. The landers are responsible for start-up, investment promotion, company consultancy and apprenticeships.

In England our intention is that the business link will provide one place for companies to obtain access to the full range of available business support services.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the budget provided for the establishing of first-stop shops, one-stop shops or business links in each year for 1992 to 1995; how much has actually been spent; and what proportion this is of the sum allocated.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 19 January 1994]: There was no DTI expenditure on the business link programme in the financial year 1992-93. The forecast for DTI expenditure on the programme in the financial year 1993-94 is £2·9 million, £496,000 of which has now been spent. This is 14·6 per cent. of the original 1993-94 budget of £3·4 million. In 1994-95 the budget is £17·1 million.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to accelerate the establishing of more first-stop shops, one-stop shops or business links.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 19 January 1994]: Since the initial one-stop shop competition for pilots in March 1993, we have moved to create a national network through a rolling programme of assessment panels which are scheduled on a quarterly basis: November 1993, February 1994, June 1994 and November 1994. My Department is working closely with local partnerships, to help them put proposals together and to implement them.

I am keen to complete the national network as soon as possible, but we must put quality first. In addition, we have to recognise that it takes time to achieve such a radical step change in the provision of business support services.

Warrants

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects the Director General of Fair Trading to report on the warrants provided to consumers by manufacturers and retailers.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 25 January 1994]: The Office of Fair Trading is gathering information from the suppliers of extended warranties and the director general will make his views known shortly.

Office of Water Services

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the criteria used by the Director General of the Office of Water Services, in appointing or reappointing to the role of chairman of regional customer service committees.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 24 January 1994]: This is a matter for the director general of Water Services.

Angola

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the policy of Her Majesty's Government on arms shipments and weapons sales to the Government of the Republic of Angola.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 January 1994]: Under the Angola (United Nations Sanctions) Order 1993 (SI 1993 No. 2355)—made in pursuance of the United Nation Security Council Resolution No. 864—it is prohibitied to export arms to Angola without licence issued by the Department of Trade and Industry. The Department considers each application for a licence on a case-by-case basis.

Nora Heeren

Mr. Nicholas Winterton; To ask the President of the Board of Trade what cargo is being carried by the German registered vessel Nora Heeren; for where that cargo is destined; whether the cargo manifest is in order; whether he is aware of any breach of either United Kingdom or international law in connection with this vessel and its cargo; why the vessel is being held by his Department at Plymouth; when the vessel will be allowed to continue to its destination; if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 January 1994]: It has been the practice of successive Administrations to control the transhipment of licensable goods in accordance with procedures agreed with COCOM partners; it has also been the practice not to disclose information about such licences. My officials are currently reviewing the basis of United Kingdom transhipment controls with other interested Departments.

Post Office Review

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to date of the review of the Post Office conducted by Kleinwort Benson.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 24 January 1994]: The cost of work undertaken by individual contractors is commercially confidential.

"Prospects for Coal"

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all the consultants commissioned by him to help produce the White Paper, "Prospects for Coal"; what were their terms of reference; when each piece of work was commissioned; and when it was completed.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Details of the consultants appointed by the Department to assist in production of the White Paper were:

Consultant	Date	Scope of work	Completion
John T. Boyd	20 November 1992	Viability of the 21 pits identified for closure by British Coal	22 January 1993
Caminus Energy	20 November 1992	Study of the markets for coal	22 January 1993
Ernst and Young	20 November 1993	Study of British Coal's competitiveness	22 January 1993
Ernst and Young	1 December 1993	Study of the costs of nuclear generation	8 February 1993
PIMS Associates	20 November 1993	Study of British Coal's cost structure and productivity in relation to international comparators	22 January 1993

In addition, the Department commissioned other pieces of analysis that, in the event, were not directly relevant to the conclusions in the White Paper and were pursued no further.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Heseltine: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on Friday 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

HEALTH

Disability Information Projects

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what direct contribution her Department makes to disability information projects in the west midlands; and if she will make a statement on the changes proposed as a result of the plans to abolish the regional health authorities.

Dr. Mawhinney: Since October 1991 the Department of Health has provided funding of over £314,000 to disability information projects in the west midlands as part of the national disability information project.

A rigorous analysis of the functions carried out in the national health service is currently being undertaken to determine how the new structure will operate in practice. Functions provided by regional health authorities and the NHS management executive are being considered to establish what can be more appropriately dealt with at local level.

Decisions on this matter have yet to be reached.

Mental Health

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) health personnel were attacked by patients and (b) patients were attacked by doctors and other health personnel in each year since 1973.

Mr. Sackville: In line with the recommendations of the Lord Skelmersdale "Advisory Committee on Violence to Staff—Report 1988", copies of which are available in the Library, the collection of data has not been centralised but all health care organisations have been recommended to have a system of reporting and recording of incidents to enable the development of an accurate data base on their cause and nature of the problems which arise. If the hon. Member has an interest in data for a particular locality he may wish to approach the individual national health service unit direct.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 30 November, Official Report, columns 457-58, if she will publish figures showing the percentage of calls to which the London ambulance service failed to respond within its 14-minute call-out standard time in November and December.

Mr. Sackville: The percentage of calls to which the London ambulance service failed to respond within 14 minutes in both November and December was 43 per cent. The information was supplied by the London ambulance service. On 15 December 1993, Official Report, column 721, we announced the further investment of £14·8 million in the London ambulance service which will be tied to firm targets for improving ambulance performance.

Portable Oxygen Containers

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances a patient is entitled to a portable oxygen container for use in a car; what arrangements are made to issue the container on prescription; what is the cost of this service; and what special regulations apply to this provision.

Mr. Sackville: Consultants may prescribe portable oxygen cylinders to patients which can be topped up from standard 1,360 litre cylinders supplied against a general practitioner's prescription. Information on the cost of this service is not separately identifiable. If a portable oxygen container was for use in a motor vehicle the driver would be required to be fit at all times to drive the vehicle safely. The safety aspect would fall to the police to enforce. A driver using oxygen in a motor vehicle must not have a relevant disability within the meaning of section 92 of the Road Traffic Act 1988. Such a disability might include obstructive airways disease causing sleep apnoea. Drivers suffering such disabilities are required by law to notify the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency.

Nurses

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses were employed in NHS hospitals by region in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what are the corresponding figures for nurses employed in the community alongside family doctors.

Mr. Sackville: The number of nurses and midwives employed within NHS hospitals are shown in the table:

Nursing and midwifery staff in NHS hospitals by regional health authority at 30 September

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to nearest 10 whole-time equivalents.
2. The tables show that, in England, during the period 1988 to 1992 there was a 5·3 per cent. decrease in the numbers of nurses and midwives employed within NHS hospitals; this decrease was mainly a result of the exclusion of Project 2000 student nurses from workforce statistics. Project 2000 learners are regarded as supernumerary and are not included in workforce numbers. In 1992 there were 18,300 Project 2000 students. In addition a number of senior nurses have transferred to senior management grades. During the same period there was an insignificant decrease of 1·4 per cent. in nursing and midwifery staff in the community and a 162 per cent. rise in the number of practice nurses.

Parents' Visiting Costs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will issue a guidance circular to general practitioners and health authorities classifying the right of medical practitioners to specify visiting costs incurred by parents in visiting their children in hospital as an integral part of the cost of medical treatment, when that is appropriate and necessary; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: I have undertaken to keep under review the arrangements for helping parents participate in the treatment of children admitted to hospital.

Day Care (Children)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish the report of the survey on day care services for children carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in 1991.

Mr. Bowis: The preparation of the report is nearing completion and we expect it to be published in the early summer.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers she or the Medicines Control Agency has to terminate or vary a product licence held by a pharmaceutical manufacturer; and under what circumstances those powers may be used.

Mr. Sackville: Section 28 of the Medicines Act 1968 sets out the powers of the licensing authority—United Kingdom Health Ministers—to suspend, revoke or vary a medicinal product licence. Section 28 also specifies the grounds on which the powers can be used. The procedures to be followed when the licensing authority proposes such action are contained in section 29 and schedule 2 of the Medicines Act. The licensing authority also complies with the requirements of the European Directive 65/65.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of dentists under contract with family health services authorities in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has funded into the possible effects of non-human somatotropins on diabetics and people with liver complaints.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is not at present undertaking research into the possible effects of non-human somatotropins on diabetics and people with liver complaints. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Tickhill Road Hospital

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the long-term plans of the Doncaster Healthcare Trust for continuing care of the elderly at the Tickhill Road hospital.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animals (Transport)

13. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a further statement on efforts to achieve common EC rules on the transport of live food animals.

Mr. Soames: In December the United Kingdom blocked the introduction of a European Community package of further measures on the transport of animals because they did not offer real improvements in standards of protection.

We shall continue to press for the United Kingdom's high standards to become the norm throughout the Community.

Milk Marque

14. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received recently about the proposed creation of the Milk Marque.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I received a number of representations on the board's reorganisation scheme in response to our recent consultation on it.

Field Drainage

15. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action she is taking to advise farmers of the need to ensure that run-off water from fields does not inundate property; and what help is available to farmers to pay for drainage work.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Farmers have access to a range of advice from our regional offices and the Agricultural Development Advisory Service.

Free Trade Agreement

17. Mr. Ward: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment she has made of the implications for British agricultural exports of the North American free trade agreement; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The North American free trade agreement principally removes tariffs in trade between the three participating countries.

In so far as it leads to increased economic activity in north America it should benefit all exports to these markets.

United Kingdom Enterprises

18. Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken to generate opportunities for United Kingdom agricultural enterprises in the developing world.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My Department's trade promotion programme in 1993 included ministerial-led business missions to six countries in the developing world as such.

We also target the developing markets of central and eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and China, where plans this year include attendance at trade fairs in China, the Baltic States, Russia and Poland.

In total, the Ministry promoted United Kingdom industry at four overseas exhibitions, generating some 500 business inquiries.

Apple Juice

20. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she next expects to meet apple growers in East Anglia to discuss output of apple juice.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend and I meet apple growers regularly to discuss a wide range of issues.

Park Land

21. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sales of Forestry Commission land in England have involved park land since the start of the current programme of sales.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Forestry Commission owns very little park land and does not identify it separately in its disposal records. The information requested is therefore not available.

Mushrooms

23. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to have a meeting with her Irish counterparts to discuss the question of subsidies on the production of mushrooms.

Mr. Jack: Responsibility for enforcing the EC rules relating to state aids rests with the Commission with whom we have raised the legality of assistance to Irish mushrooms growers.

Wages Board

24. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people are covered by the agricultural wages board.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: All agricultural workers in England and Wales are covered by the provisions of the Agricultural Wages Orders produced by the agricultural wages board.

The total number of regular family and hired workers, including seasonal and casual workers, at 1 June 1993 was 217,770.

Fishing

25. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals she has for reducing the British fishing effort to the multi-annual guidance levels.

Mr. Jack: As I explained on 14 December to my hon. Friend the Member for Cornwall, South-East (Mr. Hicks) our decision to suspend the implementation of controls on days at sea means that we have to review the means by which we can work towards our MAGP targets—which require action on fishing activity as well as on capacity.

Fishery Discussions

26. Mr. Mans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she plans to meet her French counterpart to discuss fishery issues.

Mr. Jack: I meet my French counterpart regularly at meetings of the Council of EU Fisheries Ministers, the next meeting of which is scheduled for 12 April.

Forestry Review Group

27. Ms Eagle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Scotland about the forestry review group.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have not had any recent formal discussions with my right hon. Friend about the forestry review group.

Organic Aid Scheme

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she expects to launch the organic aid scheme in England; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Our proposals for the organic aid scheme in England are currently with the European Commission.

I expect to make an announcement on the starting date for the scheme in the near future.

Fisheries Council

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment she has made of the outcome of the meeting of the EC Council of Fisheries Ministers in Brussels on 20-21 December 1993; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for St. Ives (Mr. Harris) on 12 January at column 226-28.

Equine Exports

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how she ensures that minimum values apply to all equines leaving the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The Animal Health Act 1981, and orders made under the Act, require a minimum valuation to be provided for specified categories of equines before a welfare export licence is issued. There are exemptions for thoroughbred horses certified by the Jockey Club and other horses intended for breeding, riding, exhibition, jumping and polo are also exempted.

EC Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total budget awarded to the EC's guidance section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund in each year since its establishment; and what proportion of this was granted to (i) the northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Jack: Total EC payments from the guidance section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, and the proportion of this received by the United Kingdom since its accession to the EC, is set out in the table. The reduction in the proportion of total payments received by the United Kingdom since 1981 is due in part to the accession to the EC of Greece in 1981, and of Spain and Portugal in 1986. I regret that figures for the proportion of these payments received by the northern region could be provided only at disproportionate cost, as information on the various schemes subject to funding by guidance section is not kept on regional basis.

Rabies

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to reduce the British quarantine period for animals with rabies vaccination certificates imported from rabies-free countries; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The Government have no plans to reduce the present six months quarantine requirement for imported pet dogs, cats and a wide range of other rabies susceptible animals. Separate arrangements were agreed under the Balai directive (92/65/EEC) for commercially traded animals from other member states in the European Community. A statement on those changes was given in the reply to the hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) by my right hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk Coastal (Mr. Gummer) on 16 June 1992, Official Report, column 455-56.

Biodiversity Objectives

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action she intends to take to develop clear biodiversity objectives for the range of schemes available for the positive management of farming habitats.

Mr. Jack: The steps we are taking to apply environmental conditions to agricultural support will help maintain farming habitats.

The objectives of the environmentally sensitive areas schemes include the conservation, enhancement and restoration of specific wildlife habitats and, where appropriate, increases in species diversity. Similar objectives are being developed for the proposed habitat scheme and moorland scheme.

TRANSPORT

Mr. Kenneth Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing, for a number of typical aircraft, the landing charges expressed per passenger, on the assumption that the aircraft are 80 per cent. full, at peak times at Gatwick, Stansted, Manchester, Birmingham and East Midlands airports.

Mr. Norris: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Charges are based on the assumption that the aircraft concerned meets ICAO chapter 3 noise standards and qualify for any noise rebates available at the airports concerned. The following aircraft assumptions also apply:

London-Warsaw Flights

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when and on what basis Ministers were involved in negotiations with their Polish counterparts and representatives of Lot Airlines during October;

(2) why Lot airlines has been forbidden to land at Heathrow with effect from 1 November;

(3) what representations the Government have received from Lot Airlines or the Polish Government on the number of winter flights to Warsaw by British Airways originating in (a) London and (b) North America, and on the summer schedules;

(4) when and in what circumstances agreement was made between Her Majesty's Government and the Polish Government and Lot Airlines on the winter flights schedule; and what is his policy on the number of British Airways flights between London and Warsaw;

(5) on what occasions over the past 10 years a dispute has occurred between British Airways and the national carriers of other countries about the increase in the number of flights from London to the other countries' principal airports where (a) Her Majesty's Government have been involved and (b) the sanction of removing the permit for the other national carriers to land at Heathrow has been imposed;

(6) what is the policy underlying Her Majesty's Government's support for British Airways to increase the frequency of its winter flights between London and Warsaw; and what impact he expects the increase to have on transatlantic flights made by United Kingdom and Polish air carriers;

(7) what intergovernmental agreements govern flights between London and Warsaw.

Mr. Norris: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 4 November 1993 and the subsequent letter I wrote to him on 16 November which was deposited in the Library. Since then there has been continuing contact between the United Kingdom and Polish Governments and between the airlines concerned and I hope that it will be possible to reach agreement on the resumption of services soon.

Trunk Road Assessment

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 December, Official Report, column 714, when he expects the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment to finish looking into the question of generated traffic and report to his Department.

Mr. Key: I understand the standing advisory committee on trunk road assessment is aiming to submit its report on generated traffic to Ministers in the spring of this year.

Traffic Area Office Network

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy on executive agency status for the traffic area office network.

Mr. Key: We are considering the traffic area offices as possible candidates for executive agency status.

Goods Vehicles

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prohibition notices were issued in respect of large goods vehicles in 1992-93; and how many were (a) immediate, (b) delayed or (c) defect notices.

Mr. Key: During 1992-93, the vehicle inspectorate examined 196,475 large goods vehicles. The examinations resulted in 11,041 immediate prohibitions, 11,040 delayed prohibitions and 18,379 defect notices being issued.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by traffic area office (a) the number of goods vehicle operator licences and (b) renewal applications for goods vehicle operator licences refused on environmental grounds over the last five years.

Mr. Key: The number of goods vehicle operator licences and renewal applications for goods vehicle operator licences which were refused over the last five years are listed in order of traffic area office:

Traffic Area Office	Applications refused (1988-89—1992-93)
North Eastern	158

Figures for applications refused on environmental grounds are not available and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by traffic area office the number of objections received from members of the public, local authorities and the police to the renewal of goods vehicle operator licences during the last two years.

Mr. Key: The number of objections received from members of the public, local authorities and the police to applications for goods vehicle operator licences during the last two years—1991-92 and 1992-93—are listed in order of traffic area office:

Traffic Area Office	Number of objections and representations (1991-92—1992-93)

Figures for the number of objections that were made to applications for the renewal of goods vehicle operator licences are not available and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by traffic area office the number of renewal applications for goods vehicle and passenger carrying vehicle operator licences that have been refused due to (a) poor maintánance records or (b) poor conduct or repute.

Mr. Key: The number of renewal applications for goods vehicle and passenger carrying vehicle operator licences which were refused during 1992-93 are listed in order of traffic area office:

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley) of 15 December, Official Report, column 709, on how many of the 132,000 cheques DVLA took prosecution action; and on how many of these the DVLA recovered money.

Mr. Robert Key: A total of 13,205, of which 12,842 resulted in revenue recovery.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which functions of the traffic area office network are intended for market testing.

Mr. Key: I keep all parts of my Department under review with the aim of identifying scope for market testing including the traffic area offices.

Deregulation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect of the deregulation of goods and passenger operator licensing and the staffing levels of traffic area offices.

Mr. Norris: It is not possible at this stage to make a detailed assessment of the likely effect of the deregulation proposals for goods and passenger operator licensing on the levels of staff in the traffic area offices. Our best estimate is that the effect of deregulation and changes to the fee system will be broadly neutral in terms of staffing.

Prohibition Notices

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prohibition notices were issued against passenger carrying vehicles in 1992-93; and how many of them were (a) immediate prohibitions, (b) delayed prohibitions and (c) defect notices.

Mr. Key: In the financial year 1992-93 the vehicle inspectorate examined 39,065 public service and other passenger carying vehicles. The examinations resulted in these vehicles being issued with 1,825 immediate prohibitions, 1,363 delayed and 4,275 defect notices.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by traffic area office the number by grade of staff employed and the salary costs.

Mr. Key: The total number of staff employed in the traffic area offices is 447·5 and the total salary cost is £6·3 million. The number of traffic area office staff by grade and salary cost is as follows:

School Transport

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to bring forward to help prevent or mitigate accidents involving school transport.

Mr. Key: Draft regulations, which will make the display of a distinctive sign on buses carrying children to or from school mandatory, are currently being finalised. They will also allow vehicles displaying the sign to use their hazard warning lights, when stationary, to indicate to other road users that children are boarding or alighting or are in the vicinity of the vehicle.

We are also reviewing the full technical and cost implications of seat belts in minibuses and coaches, irrespective of their use. Until this review is complete we do not feel that it would be wise to introduce new legislation in this area.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the electrification of the Leeds, Bradford, Ilkley and Skipton railway lines to be completed; and what rolling stock will be provided.

Mr. Freeman: These are matters for British Rail and the West Yorkshire passenger transport executive. However, I understand that electrification is expected to be completed next winter, and that this will be followed by a phased introduction of local electric services. A full service is expected to start in May 1995. It is planned to use refurbished class 308 rolling stock initially; the PTE is still examining possible arrangements for the leasing of new rolling stock in the longer term.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received from the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders regarding prohibition of use of vehicles older than 10 years; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what proposals he has to introduce legislation to curtail the use of motor vehicles manufactured prior to 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: No representations have been received from the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders. There are no proposals being considered by the Department to curtail the use of motor vehicles which are more than 10 years old.

High Speed Rail Link

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the total amount of public expenditure used for (a) the King's Cross project and (b) the now abandoned south London route for the channel tunnel high speed link.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail's accounts show £332 million cumulative expenditure on the channel tunnel rail link project up to 31 March 1993 £252 million net of interest payments. Of this net cost Union Railways assign some £46 million to Kings Cross and £89 million to the abandoned section of the southerly route. A more detailed assessment is not possible because the Kings Cross project was not conceived solely for the rail link and a proportion of the southerly approach is still part of the route. It also remains to be seen what additional reduction in net cost will be achieved through further property sales.

Channel Tunnel Stations

Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the Stratford Promoter Group to discuss the proposal prepared by the group for the siting of an international channel tunnel station at Stratford.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. I suggest that the promoter group first study Union Railways' report published on 24 January, in the light of my right hon. Friend's statement on the same day; have further discussions with Union Railways; then contact my office to arrange a mutually convenient time.

Airport Passengers

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing the total number of passengers leaving from United Kingdom airports for each year since 1989 and as a total over the same period, broken down into passengers travelling to (i) destinations within the United Kingdom or elsewhere in the EC including the Channel islands and Isle of Man and (ii) elsewhere.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics' policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Members to the Prime Minister's answer to the Member for Southwark and Bermondsey on 21 January at column 849.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Attachment of Earnings

Mr. Betts: To ask the Lord President of the Council which legislation allowing for the attachment of earnings includes an exemption for (a) hon. Members or (b) Ministers of the Crown; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton The Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 includes no specific exemptions for hon. Members or Ministers and I am not aware of any exemptions in any other legislation. But attachment of earnings orders can be served only on a debtor's employer, and there is no employer for this purpose in the case of hon. Members and Ministers.

DEFENCE

Porton Down

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what work his Department has carried out on the alcohol-amine binary reactant OPA; when and at which establishment these experiments were carried out; and what was the assessment of this work;

(2) when the chemical and biological warfare establishment at Porton Down and Nancekuke carried out experiments on (a) sea wasp toxin, (b) ricin toxin and (c) abrin toxin; what was the purpose of the work; and what were the conclusions and assessments of each toxin;

(3) how many liaison officers from the former military establishment at Nancekuke were stationed at United States military chemical and biological warfare establishments before Nancekuke was dismantled; what were the functions of these officers; at which US establishments they were stationed; and through which defence agreement these liaison officers were arranged;

(4) what studies and trials the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down has carried out into the dissemination of agent aerosols at sea; what are the names of these experiments; when and where these experiments took place; and what was the conclusion of each of the experiments;

(5) in which year the Department's research into phencyclidine referred to in his answer of 20 July 1993, Official Report, column 171, ended; when the results of the research were first shared with the United States of America; with which United States military establishment the information was exchanged; and in what form this exchange occurred;

(6) pursuant to his answer of 20 July 1993, Official Report, columns 170-74, what tests and studies Porton Down has carried out on (a) trytamines and (b) mescaline sulphate; if these experiments involved animals and service personnel; and where the results were published;

(7) when staff from the chemical warfare establishment at Porton Down and Nancekuke visited or were stationed at the United States Department of Defence naval weapons centre in China Lake, California; what was the purpose of these visits; how many staff were involved; and through which defence agreement the visits were organised;

(8) in which years the chemical and biological warfare establishment at Porton Down and Nancekuke carried out research into saxitoxin/shellfish poison; how many animals and service personnel were involved in the research; what was the conclusion of the research; when the results of the work were exchanged with the United States of America, Canada or Australia; and under which defence agreement this exchange was arranged.

Mr. Hanley: These matters are for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letters from Graham S. Pearson to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 27 January 1994.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what work his Department has carried out on the alcohol-amine binary reactant OPA; when and at which establishment these experiments were carried out; and what was the assessment of this work (Question 13, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. In order to carry out this work, it is necessary to have available small quantities of the materials which may be used as chemical or biological warfare agents by a potential aggressor.

3. The alcohol-amine binary reactant (OPA) consists of isopropylalcohol and isopropylamine. Our records indicate that no work has been carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment or its precursor establishments on the binary reactant (OPA) although isopropylalcohol has been used as a precursor in the preparation of the unitary nerve agent, Sarin (GB), at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down, at Nancekuke and at Sutton Oak.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking when the chemical and biological warfare establishment at Porton Down and Nancekuke carried out experiments on (a) sea wasp toxin, (b) ricin toxin and (c) abrin toxin; what was the purpose of the work; and what were the conclusions and assessments of each toxin (Question 18, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the United Kingdom Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the effectiveness of British protective measures evaluated.

3. Our records indicate that no work has been carried out on sea wasp toxin by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment or its precursor establishments.

4. Ricin has long been recognised as a potential chemical warfare agent and experiments involving ricin were first carried out during World War II. Since then ricin has been considered as appropriate in studies of the potential hazards to the United Kingdom Armed Forces experimental work on ricin aimed at medical countermeasures started in the early 1990s.

5. Abrin is structurally related to ricin and work on medical countermeasures to abrin also began in the early 1990s.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many liaison officers from the former military establishment at Nancekuke were stationed at United States military chemical and biological warfare establishments before Nancekuke was dismantled; what were the functions of these officers; at which United States establishments they were stationed; and through which defence agreements these liaison officers were arranged (Question 19, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. Our records indicate that no liaison officers from Nancekuke were stationed at United States military chemical and biological warfare establishments before Nancekuke was dismantled.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what studies and trials the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down has carried out into the dissemination of agent aerosols at sea; what are the names of these experients; when and where these experiments took place; and what was the conclusion of each of the experients (Question 20, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. Studies into the potential hazard to the UK Armed Forces resulting from the use of chemical or biological agents are carried out on a continuing basis in order to ensure that effective protective measures are taken against the threat of chemical or biological weapon attacks.

3. Trials into the dissemination of agent aerosols at sea have taken place over a number of years. These are as follows:

(a) Scapa Flow trials carried out in 1923 which examined the vulnerability of Naval vessels to attack with a toxic chemical particulate agent.

(b) Operation HARNESS which took place in Caribbean waters off the Behamas from December 1948 to February 1949 to determine the practicability of conducting biological warfare trials at sea.

(c) Operation CAULDRON in Scottish waters off Stornaway in the Isles of Lewis in May-December 1952 which established that several pathogens could constitute a hazard if used as BW agents.

(d) Operation HESPERUS in Scottish waters in May-August 1953 which aimed to consolidate data and compare several dissemination and collection methods.

(e) Operation OZONE in Caribbean waters at a site 20 miles off Nassau in February-May 1954 when data on the decay of viability at longer ranges was obtained.

(f) Operation NEGATION again in Caribbean waters off the Bahamas in November 1954-March 1955 which consolidated data from the previous trials.

4. The United Kingdom abandoned offensive chemical and biological weapons in the late 1950s and since then the role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment has been to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking in which year the Department's research into phencyclidine referred to in his Answer of 20th July 1993, Official Report column 171, ended; when the results of the research were first shared with the United States of America; with which US military establishment the information was exchanged; and in what form this exchange occurred (Question 21, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the effectiveness of British protective measures evaluated.

3. As stated in the Answer of 20 July 1993, Official Report, column 171, this work was carried out in the early 1960s. Information gained was then drawn upon in subsequent years as required by the chemical defence programme and additional work carried out when necessary. It is therefore not possible to say when research ended as the information obtained continues to be drawn upon as required. Likewise, it forms part of the technical database drawn upon in cooperation with the United States of America under the Memorandum of Understanding on Chemical and Biological Defence, the Technical Cooperation Programme and its predecessors.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking pursuant to his Answer to the honourable Member for Leyton on 20th July 1993, Official Report, column 171, what tests and studies Porton Down has carried out on (a) trytamines and (b) mescaline sulphate; if these experiments involved animals and service personnel; and where the results were published (Question 22, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the effectiveness of British protective measures evaluated.

3. Tryptamines are indole derivatives, some of which produce psychotomimetic effects similar to those produced by lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD_{25}). In the early 1960s a series of tests were carried out to determine structure activity relationships and all the tryptamines synthesised were found to be less potent than LSD_{25} and were therefore regarded as a less serious toxic hazard than LSD_{25}. These tests involved the use of animals but did not involve the use of Service volunteers. The following publication was published following this research:

BRIMBLECOMBE R W, DOWNING D F, GREEN D M and HUNT R R (1964). Some pharmacological effects of series of tryptamine derivatives. Brit J Pharmacol 23, 43-54.

4. Mescaline is a substituted phenylalkylamine compound possessing similar psychotomimetic activity to that produced by LSD_{25} and tests and studies were carried out in the 1960s and early 1970s to determine whether or not mescaline might be used by an aggressor as an incapacitating agent. The studies showed that mescaline was considerably less potent than LSD. The tests involved the use of animals but did not involve the use of Service volunteers. The work on mescaline resulted in the following publications:

a. BRIMBLECOMBE R W (1963). Effects of psychotropic drugs on open field behaviour in rats. Psychopharmacologia, 4, 139-147.
b. ALDOUS F A B, BARRASS B C, BREWSTER K, BUXTON D A, GREEN D M, PINDER R M, RICH P, SKEELS M AND TUTT K T (1974). Structure-activity relationships in psychotomimetic phenylalkylamines. Journal of Medicinal Chemistry, 17, 110-1111.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking when staff from the chemical warfare establishment at Porton Down and Nancekuke visited or were stationed at the US Department of Defence Naval Weapons Center in China Lake, California; what was the purpose of these visits; how many staff were involved; and through which defence agreement the vists were organised (Question 24, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. Our records do not indicate that staff from the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down or Nancekuke have visited or been stationed at the US Department of Defense Naval Weapons Center in China Lake, California. Some members of staff, however, may have visited the US Naval Weapons Center before or after their period of duty at CBDE Porton Down or Nancekuke.

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking in which years the chemical and biological warfare establishment at Porton Down and Nancekuke carried out research into saxitoxin/shellfish poison; how many animals and service personnel were involved in the research; what was the conclusion of the research; when the results of the work were exchanged with the United States of America, Canada or Australia; and under which defence agreement this exchange was arranged (Question 30, Order Paper 19 January 1994) has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work it is necessary to investigate the effectiveness of protective measures against the range of potential agents.

3. A study on saxitoxin was carried out in 1982 to determine whether such toxins have any effect on medical countermeasures against nerve agents. This study involved the use of about 90 mice but did not involve the use of Service volunteers. This study indicated that futher work on the interaction between saxitoxin and nerve agents was not required.

4. Information arising from this study was part of the chemical and biological defence programme and would therefore be part of the technical database drawn upon in cooperation with the United States of America, Canada and Australia under the international agreements referred to by the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the Rt. Hon. Archie Hamilton, MP in his answer of 21 May 1992, Official Report, columns 255-256.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence has advertised for a chief executive of a new private sector organisation which will own and manage the defence married quarters estate of some 68,000 properties in Great Britain. An appointment to the post has not yet been made. The post was advertised at a salary level of circa £100,000. There are no housing associations with housing stock of a similar size.

[1] (1 October) Latest available figures.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the rank of the commanding officer of each of the military districts; and if he will make a statement on the reasons underlying variations.

Mr. Hanley: United Kingdom Land Forces—UKLF—is divided into five military districts; Southern, Eastern, Wales and Western, London and Scotland. With the exception of Southern district, each General Officer Commanding—GOC—is a major general (2 star). The GOC of Southern district is a Lieutenant General (3 star). The variation is a consequence of the comparative size of the district, measured in terms of units under command.

Mr. Dennis Thomas

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Mr. Dennis Thomas, a constituent of the hon. Member for Ilford, South, will receive the campaign stars and medals earned by his service in the second world war with the British Army in India and Malaya; and when he first applied to the Army medal office for these decorations.

Mr. Hanley: Mr. Thomas applied to the Army medal office for his medals in November 1992. That office expects to issue Mr. Thomas with his full medal entitlement in the very near future. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member to advise him of the outcome of Mr. Thomas's claim, as soon as his full entitlement of awards is known.

Contracts (Prices)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those Ministry of Defence contracts in the past year which cost over the contract price, giving the figures for bid price and final cost for each contract.

Mr. Aitken: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Court Clerks

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement concerning fixed-term contracts and performance-related pay for magistrates court clerks.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Fixed-term contracts and performance-related pay have a role to play in the effective provision of all public services, including the magistrates courts service. A number of magistrates courts committees have already chosen to introduce fixed-term contracts.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consideration he has given to buying or borrowing photographs for the walls of his office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Most of the works of art in my office are on loan from the Government art collection, which includes 190 photographs. I considered, but did not select, a photograph from the collection's reserve to hang in my office.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many paintings and/or photographs there are on the walls of his office.

Mr. Brooke: I have six paintings on loan from the Government art collection in my office, and one engraving of my own.

Royal Parks

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans there are to hold major events in the Royal Parks in the future.

Mr. Sproat: The Royal Parks are a very important part of the capital. Londoners and visitors alike draw huge benefit from them. Summer entertainment for the public has long been a key part of this success and forms part of the character and the tradition of all the Royal Parks. The Royal Parks will soon be unveiling its largest-ever programme of summer entertainment. To complement this, I intend to encourage medium to large-scale events that would add to the public's enjoyment of the Royal Parks, while not detracting from their unique character. The chief executive of the Royal Parks would be pleased to hear from anyone who has innovative ideas or proposals.

Sport

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has for changes in the structures for sport at United Kingdom and home country levels.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 27 January 1994]: I hope to be able to announce proposals for the organisation of sport at United Kingdom level and in England by Easter. The structure of sport in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is the responsibility of the appropriate Secretaries of State.

Proscribed Organisations (Broadcasts)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consideration he has given to the ban on broadcasting the voices of members of proscribed organisations following the Irish Government's decision not to continue to impose a ban.

Mr. Brooke: Broadcasting in the Republic of Ireland is a matter for the Irish Government. A review of the broadcasting restrictions in the United Kingdom is in progress.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the number of those aged (a) 16 to 18 years, (b) 18 and 19 years and (c) 16 to 24 years unemployed in the London borough of Newham; what percentages they are of the cohort; how many people under the age of 25 years in the London borough of Newham have never worked; and what percentage of those aged 16 years in the London borough of Newham (i) stayed on at school, (ii) went into jobs or (iii) went into youth training.

Miss Widdecombe: In October 1993 unadjusted claimant unemployment in the London borough of Newham stood at 259 16 to 18-year-olds, 575 18 and 19-year-olds and 2,252 16 to 24-year-olds.

This represents the extent of the available information.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the most recent residence-based unemployment rates for each appropriate area of Durham constituency, giving the figures overall and broken down for male and female; what is the change in the number of unemployed claimants in Durham for the same month in each of the last six years; and what has been the percentage change since 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: Information on residence-based unemployment rates are available from the labour force survey, LFS, and are based on the internationally standard International Labour Organisation definition. At present, these are not available below the level of standard region except for training and enterprise councils, TECs, and local enterprise companies. The residence-based ILO unemployment rate for the County Durham TEC area in summer —June to August—1993, was 7 per cent. for all persons and 16·2 per cent. for men, not seasonally adjusted. The LFS sample size was not large enough to provide equivalent rates for women.

Data on the numbers of unemployed claimants in the Durham local authority district are on the unadjusted basis and are not available prior to 1983. Those data are given for December of each year.

Date	Number of unemployed claimants
1983	4,248
1988	3,215
1989	2,571
1990	2,764
1991	3,238
1992	3,590
1993	3,467

Apprenticeships

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are his objectives for the modern apprenticeships scheme.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made it clear that modern apprenticeships will improve our economic competitiveness by increasing the number of young people qualifying to the key technician and supervisor levels. When the scheme is fully operational, it is envisaged that up to 150,000 young people in England will be in modern apprentice training at any one time. The Government want modern apprenticeships to increase to over 40,000 the number of young people reaching national vocational qualification level 3 through training in England each year—roughly tripling the current number.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide a table showing, for each TEC in Greater London, the amount of funding (a) allocated and (b) paid under each block of expenditure for 1991-92 and 1992-93 and the amounts allocated for 1993-94.

Miss Widdecombe: The table shows the amount of funding allocated and paid under each block of expenditure for training and enterprise councils in the Greater London area for the period 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Youth Employment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many jobs are at present available for youth employment in (a) the Houghton and Washington constituency and (b) the city of Sunderland; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The Employment Department does not carry a breakdown of vacancy figures by their suitability for different age groups. Listed in the table are the total number of unfilled vacancies in the jobcentres of Houghton, Washington and Sunderland for December 1993. Nationally, jobcentre vacancies account for about a third of all vacancies in the economy as a whole.

PRIME MINISTER

Charterline Pilot Scheme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received (a) in favour of and (b) against the Charterline pilot scheme.

The Prime Minister: I have received numerous representations on charter issues.

Advisory Panel on Environmental Policy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what criteria he used in choosing the members of his advisory panel on environmental policy announced on 25 January.

The Prime Minister: The members of the panel have been chosen for their wide-ranging knowledge and practical experience in matters relevant to protection of the environment and economic development.

Sustainable Development Strategy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with his Cabinet colleagues prior to drafting his foreword to the report on the sustainable development strategy for the United Kingdom regarding the content of the report.

The Prime Minister: I have had full discussions with my ministerial colleagues about the content of the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister how many visits the Prime Minister has made to Scotland since he took office; and if he will list the dates of these visits and locations visited.

The Prime Minister: Since I took office I have made 13 visits to various locations in Scotland.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electricity Supplies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his policy on the proposal for a reduction in voltage of electricity supplies; and what powers he has to stop it being introduced in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: All EC countries are changing their low voltage supply systems to a nominal voltage of 230/400 volts to provide voltage harmonisation throughout the EC. My policy is to endorse this standardisation following extensive consultation.

This will remove a perceived barrier to trade and so further the objectives of the single market. Consumers will have greater choice and flexibility in the purchase and use of electrical applicances. The Secretary of State will be using his powers under the Electricity Act 1989 to amend the Electricity Supply Regulations 1988 in order to effect this standardisation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what savings will be made on consumer costs of electricity supply from France when the agreed reduction in voltage comes into effect.

Mr. Eggar: The change in voltage to a standardised nominal low voltage of 230/400 volts throughout the EC has no relevance to the cost of electricity supplies to or from France over the sub-sea cables. The electricity exchanged with France is done at extremely high voltage direct current and the costs associated with those arrangements are not a function of consumer voltages and will not be affected by the proposed standardisation.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultation took place with (a) industry, (b) domestic users and (c) the electricity supply industry before the reduction in voltage was accepted.

Mr. Eggar: Consultations took place with 36 different organisations representing the United Kingdom electricity companies, equipment manufacturers and consumers.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what increased costs will attend consumer costs of electricity supplies from the United Kingdom and France when the agreed reduction in voltage comes into effect.

Mr. Eggar: I do not expect that consumers of electricity will face any increases in the cost of their electricity as a result of standardisation.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what compensation will be paid to industrial users of electricity who have purchased heating equipment appropriate to their factory size and are now required to buy extra equipment to heat the same space after the reduction in voltage.

Mr. Eggar: It is not intended to pay compensation to industrial users of electricity in respect of the purchasing of additional heating equipment. The performance of some electrical appliances will be reduced in making the change to 230 volts from 240, but the effect will be minimal and will be offset by the wider benefits to consumers of standardisation.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the reduction in voltage in electricity supplies agreed with the European Community comes into effect.

Mr. Eggar: The change from a nominal supply voltage of 240 to 230 volts will come into effect on 1 January 1995. An amendment to the Electricity Supply Regulations 1988 will be needed to take effect from the same date.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what reasons underlay his decision to agree to reduce the voltage on electricity supplies from 400 volts to 280 volts and from 240 volts to 230 volts for domestic purposes.

Mr. Eggar: In 1988, the European Committee for Electrotechnical Standardisation proposed the harmonisation of the existing low voltage supplies in the EC countries. In Great Britain the majority of the manufacturers consulted were strongly in favour of a move to 230 volts in order to avoid confusion within the Community, while providing the considerable advantages of single product ranges and certifying procedures for the Community as a whole.

This move is seen as a means of optimising designs leading to simpler production procedures, and uniformity of safety standards as well as reducing barriers to trade.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates he has made of the increase in hypothermia consequent on the reduced output of heating equipment because of the reduction in voltage.

Mr. Eggar: The effect on output of electrical heating equipment in making the change to a nominal voltage of 230 volts in accordance with the time scales and tolerances required for EC voltage harmonisation will be insignificant and is therefore not a relevant consideration in the incidence of hypothermia.

Insurance Market

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made as to the solvency of the Lloyd's insurance market; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The solvency of the Lloyd's insurance market remains as described in my answer to my hon. Friend on 9 December, Official Report, column 346.

Coal Industry

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the amount of financial subsidy he will make available to British Coal to settle extra sales of coal on top of the main contracts with the generators in the current financial year as outlined in "Prospects for Coal"; how many tonnes of extra sales this involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The amount of subsidy paid will depend on how successful British Coal and the private sector are at securing additional sales. Details of the total amount of subsidy paid will be made available to Parliament in the normal way.

Dr. Hampson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the proposed timetable for the sale of Coal Products Ltd. by British Coal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The future of Coal Products Ltd. is a matter for British Coal.

Shipbuilding Intervention Fund

Mr. Coe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's policy on the level of shipbuilding intervention funding during 1994.

Mr. Sainsbury: Following a decision of the European Commission, notified to member states on 21 December 1993, I have decided that the United Kingdom's maximum level of support for large ships from 1 January 1994 should continue to be 9 per cent. This is inclusive of shipbuilder's relief at 2 per cent.

I have similarly decided that maximum support for small ships from 1 January 1994 should continue to be 4·5 per cent, inclusive of the shipbuilder's relief of 2 per cent.

These levels are at the maximum permitted by the EC shipbuilding regime. They are subject to review in the light of the outcome of the current OECD negotiations on an agreement on shipbuilding subsidies.

Structural Funds

Mr. Streeter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he is yet able to inform the House of the final outcome of the negotiations with the European Communities on the designation under the structural funds of objective 2 and 5(b) areas.

Mr. Sainsbury [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1994, Official Report, columns 252-54]: The Commission has now announced that it has decided to make no changes to the initial list of areas it announced on 21 December. I have placed a copy of the final list, which includes details where appropriate at ward level, in the Library of the House. It will appear in the Official Journal in due course.

The Commission has also announced that the indicative allocation to the United Kingdom for objective 2 for the period 1994-1996 is 2,142 million ecu.

I hope to be able to provide the final objective 5(b) list in the near future when it has been finally decided by the Commission.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Eel Fisheries

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the location of each eel fishery in Northern Ireland together with the rateable value of each and the body to which the rates are paid.

Mr. Tim Smith: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Rate Collection Agency under its chief executive, Mr. D. W. Gallagher. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. W. Gallagher to Mr. William Ross, dated 26 January 1994:

You recently asked a Parliamentary Question about the locations and rateable values of eel fisheries in Northern Ireland. As I am responsible for the Rate Collection Agency (RCA), the body to which the rates are paid, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply.

There are three entries in the Valuation List relating to eel fisheries, all of which refer to Toome Eel Fishery (NI) Ltd., but which fall into three separate districts.

Under Article 17 of the Rates (Northern Ireland) Order 1977, Eel and Salmon Fisheries are currently derated by 60 per cent. which in effect means that rates are chargeable on only 40 per cent. of the Net Annual Value. This is outlined in the table below—

Address	Net annual value £	RV on which rates are chargeable £	District council area
Toome Eel Fishery (NI) Ltd. Toome Eel Fishery (PT) Portna & Movanagher	4,800	1,920	Ballymoney
Toome Eel Fishery (NI) Ltd. Toome Eel Fishery (PT) Portna & Toome	12,500	5,000	Magherafelt
Toome Eel Fishery (NI) Ltd. Toome Eel Fishery (PT) Movanagher	500	200	Coleraine

Should you require any further information please do not hesitate to contact me.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Upland Areas (Assistance)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the total value of all assistance to agriculture in the upland areas of England in each year since 1987, including environmental assistance, capital grants and sheep and livestock subsidies.

Mr. Jack: The information is set out in the table. For the purposes of this exercise "upland areas" are defined as less-favoured areas.

[2] January to October.

[3] Under the sheep annual premium scheme, SAPs, premium is payable to farmers in both uplands and lowlands areas. It is not possible to ascertain how much of the premium expenditure for years prior to 1991 went to farmers in upland areas, as the less-favoured area—LFA supplement was not introduced until the 1991 scheme. The figures for the sheep annual premium scheme relate to payments for that year's scheme. Payments are staged and extend into the following year.

[4] The various schemes under which grant has been paid are: agriculture and horticulture development scheme, farm and horticulture development scheme, agriculture and horticulture development scheme, agriculture improvement scheme, farm diversification scheme, farm and conservation grant scheme.

[5] Estimated expenditure

[6] Includes, Pennine Dales, Clun, North Peak, Exmoor, Lake District, Southwest Peak, West Penwith ESAs. Payments relate to the cost of agreements made on the basis of applications submitted in the year shown.

[7] For 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1993 assistance given to upland areas is not separately identifiable.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on which occasions since 1979 her Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if she will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Jack: The annual costs of external consultants employed by the Department—excluding agencies—since 1984-85 are set out. The precise number of contracts, details of the purposes for which they were employed and data for earlier years can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Wool Marketing Scheme

Sir David Steel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the future of the British wool marketing scheme.

Mr. Jack: The Government believe that the British wool marketing scheme continues to operate in the interests of producers, consumers and the industry and consequently are not planning to abolish it. The British Wool Marketing Board is currently considering amendments to the operation of scheme following the ending of the wool guarantee. These amendments will have to be approved by producers before the Government can arrange for their enactment in secondary legislation.

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the numbers of applications and the area applied for under the arable area payments scheme in England in 1993; how the total area applied for compares with the regional base area; and whether there are any plans for changes in the regional base area for 1994.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Over 46,000 applications covering over 3·5 million hectares were received. Details of the applications and a comparison with the base area are set out.

We are asking the Commission to establish a separate base area for maize, excluding sweetcorn, in England in 1994. This would mean that arable producers would not be penalised by the recent and continuing expansion in production of forage maize for silage by livestock producers. Should maize production exceed the base area, maize producers would be subject to an in-year reduction in arable area payments and additional uncompensated set-aside the following year, if they wished to continue to claim under the main scheme.

The changes to the rules on base area I negotiated at the December Agriculture Council mean that maize producers would be penalised only if both the regional maize base area and the total of the regional base areas for both maize and for other crops were exceeded.

Arable area payments are, of course intended to compensate farmers for the reductions in cereal prices agreed as part of common agricultural policy reform. Producers of forage maize for silage have not suffered from the reductions. Indeed, as livestock producers, they have benefited as cereals are a major input into feed. Many will also be in receipt of livestock subsidies.

Further changes to the base area will need to include linseed, which comes fully into the arable area payments scheme in 1994, and to exclude vining peas, which are no longer eligible for aid. The expected base area figures are shown in the table:

Flash Floods

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice her department gives to farmers to avoid soil erosion in flash floods.

Mrs. Shephard: My Department published the code of good agricultural practice for the protection of soil in December last year.

The code provides practical guidance to help farmers and growers avoid causing long-term damage to the soil and specifically deals with techniques to combat soil erosion caused by water.

Copies of the soil code have been placed in the Library of the House.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Technology Foresight

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many technology foresight panels he expects to appoint; what industrial or technological sectors they will cover; what their timetable is for reporting to the technology foresight steering group; and when he expects their final report to be published.

Mr. Waldegrave: The foresight steering group, chaired by the chief scientific adviser, is meeting on 11 February to decide its advice to me on these issues. I will make an announcement soon after that about how the technology foresight programme will be taken forward during 1994.

Research and Development

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the timetable for the completion and publication of the 1994 forward look and annual review of Government-funded research and development.

Mr. Waldegrave: The 1994 forward look of Government-funded science and technology will be published in April. Statistical tables previously produced in the annual review of Government-funded research and development will continue to be published in the form of a statistical supplement to the new forward look.

EDUCATION

Education Support and Training Grants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what total amount of funding has been made available over the last year under the grants for education support and training.

Mr. Forth: The 1993-94 grants for education support and training GEST programme supports local education authority expenditure of £320·2 million. Central Government grant is in most cases paid at the rate of 60 per cent. of this expenditure.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of grants for education support and training, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Voluntary-aided Schools (Capital Grants)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what amount and percentage of underspending or overspending has occurred on capital grants to voluntary-aided schools for building work in each of the last three completed financial years; whether his Department has reviewed the reasons for any marked or persistent underspending; and whether there are reasons to expect either underspending or overspending to be reported for 1993-94;

(2) what amount and percentage of underspending or overspending has occurred on capital grants to voluntary-aided schools for repair work in each of the last three completed financial years; whether his Department has reviewed the reasons for any marked or persistent underspending; and whether there are reasons to expect either underspending or overspending to be reported for 1993-94.

Mr. Forth: Details of aided school capital and repair grant estimates, final outturn and percentage under-overspend from 1990-91 to 1992-93 are as follows:

Year	Estimate £ million	Outturn £ million	Percentage under/ overspend
Repairs
1990-91	35·0	41·8	19 overspend
1991-92	47·5	49·1	3 overspend
1992-93	55·0	36·8	33 underspend
	Capital
1990-91	71·0	64·0	10 underspend
1991-92	84·2	63·9	24 underspend
1992-93	96·6	81·3	16 underspend

The overall outturn for both programmes for 1990-91 and the two previous years was broadly in balance with the estimate. The main reasons for the recent underspend on the capital programme appear to be attributable to the economic recession, in particular the inability of some governing bodies to fund their 15 per cent. contribution, lower than estimated tender costs and delays caused by contractor liquidations.

The Department is revising its approval, monitoring and in-year reallocation procedures. Expenditure in 1993-94 so far suggests a small overspend on the capital progamme balanced by a corresponding underspend on repairs. However, the predictive value of expenditure so far is limited because a very high proportion of claims are usually submitted in the last two months of the financial year.

School Transport (Accidents)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what measures he intends to bring forward to help prevent or mitigate accidents involving school transport.

Mr. Forth: Advice on this matter is available in the 1991 report from the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents, endorsed by this Department and distributed to all local education authorities and schools. We are keeping relevant issues under review, in close collaboration with the Department of Transport, which also has relevant responsibilities, but have no immediate proposals for further action.

Further Education Funding Council

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, columns 545-48, if he will publish further details of the preparatory costs incurred in the establishment of the Further Education Funding Council.

Mr. Boswell: The information is follows:

	£ million
Running costs	4·0
Consultancies	1·8
Payments to assist colleges' preparation for independence	18·6
Total	24·4

HEALTH

Junior Doctors

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to provide guidelines for accommodation for junior doctors.

Dr. Mawhinney: Advice on living conditions for junior doctors was issued as part of the new deal guidance in June 1991, copies of which are available in the Library. I have asked the national health service to treat improvements in this area as a priority. We have no plans to issue further guidance.

Health Service Employees

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what disciplinary measures are available against health service employees responsible for making unauthorised payments.

Dr. Mawhinney: Disciplinary procedures for health service staff employed on national terms and conditions of service are governed by section 40 of the General Whitley Council handbook, a copy of which is available in the Library. This provides a framework within which employing authorities determine local disciplinary procedures. Under the 1990 National Health Service and Community Care Act, NHS trusts have the freedom to establish their own disciplinary procedures.

The question of whether or not to take disciplinary action, and its severity, is entirely a matter for each health employer.

Departmental Cars

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines are applied to the use of official cars for personal purposes by Department of Health staff or Ministers; and who originate these guidelines;

(2) what arrangements exist within her Department for reimbursement by Ministers of the cost of private use of official cars.

Mr. Sackville: Official cars may not be used for personal purposes except during the working week when the effect is a saving of time for use on official duties or for security reasons.

Mental Health

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many districts have a 24-hour, seven-day crisis intervention service provided by experienced mental health workers.

Mr. Bowis: All district health authorities are required to have psychiatrists approved under section 12 of the Mental Health Act 1983 available and similarly all local authorities are required to have approved social workers. Dedicated crisis intervention services are in place where assessed needs suggest this is a cost-effective way of providing services.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of staff in mental health units are trained to provide (a) case management, (b) community crisis intervention, (c) home-based care and (d) normalised day care.

Mr. Bowis: Mental health staff are expected to be able to work in a variety of service settings and to provide a range of services to patients. It is a matter for local health authorities to decide on training strategies.

Hospital Hostel Beds

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many districts have hospital hostel beds.

Mr. Bowis: We encourage the provision of hospital hostels where they are appropriate for local needs but we do not record their provision centrally.

Respite Beds

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many districts provide crisis diversion and respite beds in the community or in the hospital.

Mr. Bowis: Health authorities do not usually earmark beds. It is more efficient to use them in a flexible way.

NHS Private Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to collect and publish data on private beds in the NHS in the years after 1990-91;

(2) how many individual NHS/pay bed units there were in each region including special health authorities in each of the last five years; and how many pay beds there were in these units in each of those regions in each of the last five years;

(3) how many authorised pay beds there were in 1991-92 in (a) special health authorities, (b) in each region and (c) in England as a whole.

Mr. Sackville: Trusts do not "authorise" pay beds and therefore we no longer collect authorised pay bed numbers. Private patient income is recorded in the summarised accounts of health authorities and trusts. This information is used to monitor the extent of private patient activity.

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the time scale for producing finally audited figures on fundholding expenditure for 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: Arrangements for audit are made locally. It is for family health services authorities and the Audit Commission to agree the timetable for completing the audit of general practitioner fundholder accounts.

GP Fundholding

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many non-fund-holding practices operating in the area covered by the Macclesfield constituency have declared an interest in becoming fundholding;

(2) how many (a) fundholding and (b) non-fundholding general practitioner practices operate in the area covered by the Macclesfield parliamentary constituency.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regional health authorities are responsible for managing the general practitioner fundholding scheme in their areas. Nationally, 25 per cent. of the population is covered by GP fundholders. In Mersey region, this is 35 per cent. Information by constituency is not available and could be determined only at disproportionate cost.

Child Minding

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set up an investigation into the adequacy of current child minding regulations and the competence of Surrey county council's social services department following the verdict in the case of Thomas Harrison v. Surrey county council and Mrs. Christine Walton; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The events in this case took place in 1989, and the Children Act 1989, which came into force in October 1991, contains updated and effective provisions which enable local authorities to regulate childminders, so that children are protected from harm. I understand that Surrey county council has now reorganised its registration service, and has asked the area child protection committee to conduct a multi-agency review into all the circumstances surrounding the case to ensure that all the lessons have been learned. The Department's social services inspectorate is monitoring this.

Hospitals

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals there were in England in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993.

Mr. Sackville: The available information is shown in the table. Prior to April 1991, a count of the number of individual units supplying activity data provided an estimate of the number of hospitals. The creation of trusts and directly managed units means that from 1991-92 this information is no longer held centrally.

Number of providers submitting data for 1991-92 and 1992-93

	1991-92	1992-93
Directly managed units	389	278
NHS trusts	53	141
Special health authorities	8	8
Total	450	427

Note: The count includes all providers who submitted data for wards open day and night, 24 hours, and/or wards open in the day only.

Birth Defects

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information is currently available about the environmental pollution or other causes which might provide an explanation of the incidence of babies being born with deformed or missing hands;

(2) what resources she has made available to local health authorities or to the Medical Research Council, or both, in their examination of babies born with deformed or missing hands;

(3) if she will order a full Government investigation into the incidence of babies being born with deformed or missing hands in coastal areas; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Limb deformities which have occurred in babies born in coastal areas have been the subject of preliminary local investigation. Local inquiries of this kind form part of the public health functions of the health authorities concerned, which are funded as a matter of course. There is no evidence to suggest that the incidence of limb defects in these places is any higher than might occur by chance. Nor is there any information to suggest that environmental pollution might be the cause. Clinicians in Hampshire have been in touch informally with officers of the Medical Research Council's epidemiology unit at Southampton. Any further developments will be monitored closely.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will institute an investigation into the problem of children being born with one hand only; if she will institute an investigation into the problems of children with any other generalised deformities of the body; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: A national system for monitoring and detecting any increase in the prevalence of congenital malformations co-ordinated by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys has been in place for the last 30 years. We are aware of particular local investigations which are taking place into the reasons for limb deformities. It would be inappropriate to speculate further until these have been completed.

Form AG3

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to simplify form AG3, with regard to sight tests, glasses and contact lenses; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The style and content of form AG3 are kept under review and changes to improve effectiveness and clarity are made whenever it is feasible to do so.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who are the members currently appointed to the Pharmacists Review Body.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Pharmacists Review Panel is chaired by Mr. J. Keir QC, a former joint secretary of Unilever plc. Its members are Mr. W. G. K. Carter CBE, partner, Price Waterhouse and Co.; Mr. J. F. H. Pease-Watkin, former personnel director, Bowater Corporation; and Mr. J. R. Sargent CBE, former group economic adviser, Midland bank.

Vicky Rimmer

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information has been sought by officials of her Department from doctors treating Vicky Rimmer at the Walton hospital in Liverpool.

Mr. Sackville: It is not our practice to make such inquiries. The treatment of individual patients is a matter for their clinicians.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what scientific research is being funded by her Department into possible links between Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and bovine spongiform encephalopathy;

(2) whether she will establish an independent inquiry into possible links between Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and BSE.

Mr. Sackville: Doctors are asked to report every suspected case of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, (CJD), to the national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit in Edinburgh, funded jointly by the Department and the Scottish Office. The unit is headed by Dr. Robert Will, consultant neurologist at Edinburgh's Western general hospital. The circumstances of each case are recorded fully and in particular all cases are examined for possible sources of transmission and any occupational factor. The unit was established in 1990 and provided reports in 1992 and 1993, copies of which are readily available to the medical and scientific community and are available in the Library.

The Government are already advised by the independent spongiform encephalopathy advisory committee, chaired by Dr. David Tyrrell FRS, which considers issues relating to spongiform encephalopathies—including CJD and bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

In the circumstances that every case of the very rare disease, CJD, is being fully monitored, that the medical and scientific community is alert to the need to learn more about the causes of CJD, and that the Government have in place an expert committee to give advice, it is not easy to see what would be added by holding an inquiry.

In response to recent media reports, the Chief Medical Officer stated:

> "I am concerned about the recent spate of irresponsible scare stories in the press suggesting that people are at risk of contracting the fatal Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease from eating beef. These sensational and alarmist reports must inevitably frighten large numbers of ordinary people—and for no good reason.
>
> The facts are clear. Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease is extremely rare —only one person in a million gets it—and those unfortunate people who do get it have contracted it for a variety of reasons. There is no evidence at all that eating infected meat is one of them.
>
> Newspaper reports have been commenting on the sad case of one 16-year-old girl—yet no one knows what illness she is suffering from.
>
> We do not ignore any suggestions about the causes of diseases of this seriousness, and the Government have invested considerable resources on the research issues in recent years looking at:
>
> the incidence of CJD;
> the causes of each individual case;
> any possible links with BSE.
>
> On the basis of the work done so far, there is no evidence whatever that BSE causes CJD and, similarly, not the slightest evidence that eating beef or hamburgers causes CJD.
>
> My position as the Government's Chief Medical Officer means that I must provide the best advice to the public, whatever the consequences. If there was any evidence that suggested a link, then I would regard it as my responsibility to bring it to public attention."

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with Ministers at the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food regarding the possibility of a link between BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

Mr. Sackville: Ministers and officials in both departments are in regular contact on these and other matters of mutual interest.

NHS Hospitals (Private Medical Companies)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department has issued to NHS hospitals about leasing or selling part of their premises to house the facilities of private medical companies.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS hospitals have leased or sold part of their premises to house the facilities of private medical companies by region.

Mr. Sackville: This is a local matter for national health service trusts and health authorities.

TRANSPORT

Driving Offences

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he is proposing to the present arrangements for disciplining drivers of large goods and passenger-carrying vehicles who commit offences.

Mr. Key: The traffic commissioners are responsible for deciding whether drivers are fit persons to hold an entitlement to drive large goods and passenger carrying vehicles.

It must remain the responsibility of the traffic commissioners to deal with each case which comes to their notice on its merits. I am, however, recommending to the traffic commissioners that, in cases where no aggravating circumstances apply, they should follow the guidelines set out:

(i) a first-time disqualification of 12 months or less should normally be dealt with by a warning letter, with no further disqualification of the driver's LGV or PCV entitlement;

(ii) a disqualification of longer than 12 months should result in the driver appearing before a traffic commissioner and a period of one to three months' further suspension of the LGV/PCV entitlement should be considered to give the driver an opportunity to regain his or her driving skills and road sense in an ordinary car before starting to drive LGVs or PCVs again;

(iii) where two or more disqualifications of more than eight weeks have been imposed within the last five years, and the combined total exceeds 12 months, the driver should normally be required to attend a hearing. A period of three to six months' further suspension of the LGV/PCV entitlement should normally be applied;

(iv) Traffic commissioners should continue to deal on a case by case basis with drivers convicted of relevant non-endorsable offences—for example, drivers' hours —endorsable offences such as bad accidents and others which come to their notice and—in the case of PCV drivers—relevant criminal convictions; and

(v) for new applicants for LGV/PCV entitlement, if the applicant has nine or more penalty points, traffic commissioners should consider either issuing a warning or asking the applicant to resubmit his/her application when the penalty points had been reduced.

River Crossings (London)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representation he has received about proposals for the construction of a rail tunnel from the existing electrified north London link line in the Silvertown-North Woolwich area to the London Bridge to Gravesend line south of the Thames at Woolwich; what estimate he has made of the approximate cost of (i) single and (ii) double bore tunnels; and what assessment he has made of the priority and value for money of (1) the proposed tunnel, (2) the projected east London river crossing and (3) the proposed Blackwall bridge;

(2) pursuant to his oral answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 9, concerning studies of cross-Thames rail links in east London, what is the estimated cost of constructing a tunnel of about one mile between North Woolwich and Woolwich Arsenal (a) of one bore and (b) of two bores; and what is the approximate capacity of persons per hour in both directions that each would provide.

Mr. Norris; London Transport, the London Docklands development corporation and Network SouthEast have recently published a report of their joint study of the options for a rail tunnel between the royal docks and Woolwich. Provisional engineering feasibility work has established that the preferred option for the tunnel might be immersed tube, which could provide for a twin-track tunnel with a capacity of perhaps up to 24,000 passengers per hour in each direction. Depending upon the nature of the preferred scheme, capital costs, including rolling stock, are estimated at between £160 million and £250 million. A full study is to be undertaken during 1994.

This rail crossing, the east London river crossing, and Blackwall bridges are all at different stages of development and it is too soon to assess priorities; but each appears to justify further study.

Deregulation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether operators of passenger and goods vehicles will still be required to advertise in the local press when they wish to renew their licences under the proposals in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Norris: Yes.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to introduce to ensure that regular maintenance checks are carried out of goods and public service vehicle operating centres following his proposals in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Norris: There will be no change to the present system. Operators will still be required to satisfy the traffic commissioner that they have adequate maintenance arrangements for their vehicles.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether goods and public service operators will be able to increase their vehicle fleet size without the authority of the traffic commissioners under the proposals set out in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Norris: No.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what measures he intends to introduce to ensure that the environmental safeguards currently provided under current goods vehicle operating licensing laws are protected following the introduction of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill;

(2) whether operators of passenger and goods vehicles will still be required to advertise in the local press when they wish to renew their licences under the proposals in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Norris: Operators will no longer be required to renew their licences. Under the system of continuous licensing, an operator's licence would last for the lifetime of the holder, provided there was no breach of the conditions under which the licence was granted and payment of fees associated with the licence were paid. The system will allow for periodic checks to be made on operators, and an opportunity for goods vehicle operating centres to be reviewed at five-yearly intervals to ensure that they remain suitable.

DEFENCE

Pornography Magazines

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions his Department has purchased soft pornography magazines for distribution or sale to members of the armed forces in each year since 1980; how many magazines have been purchased; and what has been the cost to his Department.

Mr. Hanley: My Department is not aware that any public funds have been or are being used for the purchase of such magazines for distribution or sale to members of the armed forces.

Cyprus Bases

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Greek Cypriots and (b) Turkish Cypriots are employed at each of the two sovereign bases in Cyprus.

Mr. Hanley: A total of 2,327 Cypriots are employed in the sovereign bases in Cyprus. In the western sovereign base area, SBA, the MOD employs 1,414 Greek Cypriots. In the eastern sovereign base area there are 596 Greek Cypriot employees and 307 from the Turkish Cypriot community. In addition to those in the SBAs, we employ 93 Greek Cypriots and one Turkish Cypriot at other sites in the Republic of Cyprus.

Ministry of Defence Flights

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 14 January, Official Report, columns 347-48, and 20 January, Official Report, column 826, what payments he has received from non-MOD sources for the use by non-MOD personnel of the weekly scheduled defence-specific flights to Washington, Belize and Decimomannu; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Further to my answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 826, the payments received from the use of scheduled flights to Washington, Belize and Decimomannu by non-MOD staff over the last 12 months amounts to £232,000.

Anti-personnel Mines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the dangers to civilians created by the placement of anti-personnel mines that have (i) self-destructing mechanisms, and (ii) self-neutralising mechanisms and (iii) that do not have self-destructing or self-neutralising mechanisms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Anti-personnel mines are inherently dangerous to civilians. However, they are legitimate defensive military weapons if used properly and in accordance with the laws of war, as our armed forces are trained to do. The extra controls provided by self-destructing or self-neutralising mechanisms help to ensure that mines with such capabilities are likely to be less dangerous to civilians than those without them.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effect the recent UN resolution calling for a moratorium on the export of anti-personnel land mines has had on the policies of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The resolution has had no direct effect, since the United Kingdom has not produced or exported conventional anti-personnel land mines in the category covered by the resolution for over a decade.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect of the recent UN resolution calling for a moratorium on the export of anti-personnel land mines on the need for de-mining operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The UN resolution has no direct effect on the need for de-mining operations.

Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on service morale of his policy on the provision of telephone services for personnel deployed in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: We are fully conscious of the importance to service morale of regular telephone contacts with relatives and friends. For this reason, we have set up arrangements in Bosnia whereby service personnel at all major locations can make personal calls using commercial networks or, where these are not available, the military operational network. All British troops serving in the forner Yugoslavia receive a telephone allowance of £13·50 per month.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements (a) existed prior to 11 January and (b) currently exist to enable British service personnel in Bosnia to make use of London-based operator services to place reverse charge calls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Where commercial telephone lines are not available, service personnel in Bosnia are permitted to make personal calls using the military network. Calls to the United Kingdom on the military network are routed via an operator in London and the costs within the United Kingdom are billed by means of reverse charges. Since this is an operational network, its use is however limited to times at the local commander's discretion depending upon the operational circumstances. Since 11 January, following the installation of six British Telecom cardphones at Vitez, access to the military network there for personal calls has been withdrawn. These BT telephones take United Kingdom phonecards which can be purchased at reduced rates in the local NAAFI or can be sent by relatives in the post. The call charge rate is cheaper than the normal BT rate for calls from the United Kingdom to Yugoslavia.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to the policy of other Governments contributing troops to UNPROFOR in Bosnia concerning the retention or passing on of United Nations payments to their personnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: We have no such information.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what rate per day per soldier the United Nations pays the United Kingdom for stationing service personnel in Bosnia;

(2) what payments the British Government receive from the United Nations to cover salary costs of British service personnel in Bosnia;

(3) what payments the British Government receive from the United Nations for stationing their troops in Bosnia; and if he will give a detailed breakdown of those payments.

Mr. Hanley: The United Nations pays a standard troop cost of $988 per person per month irrespective of rank, plus a supplementary amount of $291 for a limited number of specialists as a contribution towards salary and allowances. The United Nations also pays $65 per person per month to cover personal clothing, and equipment and $5 per person per month for personal weapons and ammunition. Other claims for reimbursable items of expenditure—for example, vehicles, equipment—depend on the United Nations' ability to pay.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British service personnel are currently stationed in Bosnia; what is the total pay bill for those personnel; and what supplementary payments or allowances they receive, on top of normal salary (a) from the British Government and (b) from the United Nations.

Mr. Hanley: There are currently some 2,300 British service personnel stationed in Bosnia. The total pay bill varies with the rotation of personnel in theatre who are paid according to their rank, their personal circumstances and the location from which they were posted. In addition to their normal salary, and subject to eligibility, they receive from the British Government a separation allowance of £3·50 per day after 30 days and a proportion of local overseas allowance—70 per cent. for married personnel, 40 per cent. for single personnel. They also receive a telephone allowance of £13·50 per month. All service personnel serving under United Nations auspices in Bosnia receive a United Nations set allowance of $1·28 per day for incidental expenses an a lump sum of $73·50 to cover the first seven days of rest and recreation leave.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether payments received by the British Government from the United Nations for stationing service personnel in Bosnia are (a) retained entirely by the Ministry of Defence or (b) passed on in whole, or in part to United Kingdom soldiers.

Mr. Hanley: In accordance with an inter-departmental arrangement, the MOD recovers the cost of United Kingdom participation in peacekeeping operations from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. United Nations receipts to Her Majesty's Government are used by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to offest the overall cost of United Nations peacekeeping. All United Nations troops in Bosnia, irrespective of nationality, are entitled to receive the same United Nations allowances, which currently stand at $1·28 a day each and a lump sum of $73·50 per person to cover rest and recreation; all United Kingdom service personnel serving in the former Yugoslavia receive these United Nations allowances in full.

Training

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 824, if he will provide details of the special United Nations training programme for personnel in Bosnia, including what personnel provide this training, where the training is carried out, what is the source of funding for it, how long is the training and any other relevant information.

Mr. Hanley: The training package for personnel warned off for deployment to the former Yugoslavia consists of a 12-day special-to-mission package. The training is carried out by specialist training advisory teams at the Army's combined arms training centre at Warminster and, for Germany-based units, at Sennelager. Overall training costs are borne mainly by the Defence budget apart from some minor incidental costs which the Foreign and Commonwealth Office cover.

Mercenaries

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he first became aware the Azeri Government were hiring British mercenaries; and what steps he took.

Mr. Hanley: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

HMS Valiant

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of HMS Valiant's most recent refit; when she was recommissioned; whether she remains operational; and when she is due to pay off.

Mr. Aitken: HMS Valiant's most recent refit was carried out in Rosyth and was completed in July 1989. The refit straddled the introduction of commercial management into the dockyards in April 1987 and that part of the refit which took place under commercial management cost around £77 million. There has also been a routine docking and essential defect period in 1992-93 at a cost of around £13 million although the final cost certificates have not yet been submitted. Refitting expenditure prior to the introduction of commercial management could only be identified at disproportionate cost. The vessel re-entered service on completion of the refit and currently remains in full time service with the Royal Navy; it is not our practice to discuss pay-off dates for individual vessels.

Vacant Dwellings

Dr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vacant dwellings are owned by his Department in each parliamentary constituency in Avon, Somerset, Wiltshire and Gloucestershire; and what the figures were for January 1992.

Mr. Hanley: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Young Offenders

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with whom he discussed the increased powers that he has granted to adjudicating governors within the Prison Service to sentence young offenders from three days to seven days' cellular confinement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The maximum periods for the punishment of cellular confinement were increased for both adult prisoners and young offenders on 1 January this year. My right hon. and learned Friend has previously discussed the proposal with ministerial colleagues and with the Director General of the Prison Service and informed the House of his intention to make the change on 10 December last year in replying to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence), Official Report, column 419.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons he agreed to increase from three days to seven days the punishment of cellular confinement that can be given by prison governors to young offenders and juveniles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Maximum periods for the punishment of cellular confinement were increased for both adult prisoners and young offenders on 1 January this year. The purpose was to strengthen the disciplinary powers of governors, which was particularly desirable in the light of increased offending in prison establishments.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women are being held in custody in England and Wales and are seeking political asylum into the United Kingdom as of 20 January.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information shows that on 24 January a total of 557 male and 44 female asylum seekers were being held in detention in England and Wales.

Bail Hostels

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the bail hostel expansion programme which was announced in February 1992; and to what extent the programme has been revised as a consequence of the latest public expenditure survey.

Mr. Maclean: When the February 1992 announcement was made there were 2,400 approved hostel places. At the end of this financial year there should be 2,730 places. Our current spending plans provide for 2,680 places in April 1996.

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the projected bail hostel population in England and Wales for each of the next five years.

Mr. Maclean: On the basis of 83 per cent. planned occupancy, as set out in the Home Office annual report 1993, the average number of approved probation-bail hostel residents will be as follows:

	Number
1994-95	2,067
1995-96	2,150
1996-97	2,249
1997-98	2,249
1998-99	2,249

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the projected average bail population for each of the next five years in England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: No such projections are made.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the projected remand population for England and Wales for each of the next five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Projections of long-term trends in the prison population covering the next five years were published in the Home Office statistical bulletin 6/93 on 30 March 1993 on the basis of the legislation then in force. These projections have been revised on an interim basis, reflecting the changes expected to result from the Criminal Justice Act 1993. A revised remand projection was not prepared. The interim projection is subject to a considerable margin of uncertainty. The revised figures for the total population were given in a reply to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms Ruddock) on 18 October 1993, Official Report, column 118-19.

Right to Silence

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the implications for the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill relating to the defendant's right to silence of the ruling by the European Commission of Human Rights on 18 January in the case of John Murray; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: This was not a decision on the merits of the case. The Commission has simply concluded, as a preliminary matter, that the application is not "manifestly ill-founded", an abuse of the right of petition, or otherwise incompatible with the European convention on human rights. The Government have made it clear in their observations to the Commission that they believe that the Northern Ireland legislation is fully in conformity with the provisions of the convention. The Government believe that the same is true of the similar legislation for England and Wales which is now included in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill.

Probation Service

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what cuts as a result of the public expenditure survey will be made to the probation service budget which was originally published in the three-year plan for the probation service 1994 to 1997; and what the effect will be on staffing levels and service delivery.

Mr. Maclean: The Government's spending plans for the probation service as set out in the three-year planning document for the service 1994-97 are as shown below. The spending plans set out in the 1993-96 planning document published after the 1992 public expenditure survey are shown in parentheses. It will be for area probation committees and management to decide how best to provide services and what staff to employ from within the total resources available.

	£ million
1994-95	374·3 (382·0)
1995-96	378·0 (402·0)
1996-97	389·7

Visas

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the European Commission's proposals to determine the list of countries whose national must be in possession of a visa when crossing the external frontiers of member states will be formally received.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) on 24 January 1994, Official Report, column 42.

Police Resources

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what changes his Department has made in the last five years in the method of calculating the resource needs of police authorities in England and Wales;

(2) what changes his Department has made in the last five years in the designation of areas as urban or rural in the assessment of their needs in terms of police resources and in the differential that results in terms of resource allocation.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In response to the recommendations of a joint Home Office and Treasury study, a formula was introduced in 1989 to inform the professional assessment by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary of applications for increases in police free establishments. This formula compared the existing position of forces across a range of relevant indicators. One of these indicators takes account of the concentration of population in particular areas.

Work is now in hand on the preparation of a new formula for the allocation of police grant to forces as from 1995-96.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the precise value of each of the 25 awards of over £10,000 for fatal injury under the criminal injuries compensation scheme in 1991-92.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 24 January 1994]: The case sampling survey undertaken to establish "tariff" rates examined 238 of the fatal cases resolved in 1991-92. These 238 cases gave rise to 162 awards, of which 16 exceeded £10,000. The awards made in the 162 cases were then grossed up to produce equivalent figures for the 252 fatal awards which it was estimated had been made in total in the 1991-92 financial year. Applying a similar grossing up factor to the 16 awards exceeding £10,000 produced the estimated figure of 25 such awards in total. The 16 awards actually identified—each of which included an element for funeral expenses—were for sums of £12,000: £12,671: £13,665: £14,539: £15,000: £20,000: £21,490: £22,169: £28,451: £31,704: £33,187: £41,995: £57,072: £88,230: £100,600: £260,178.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the survey of criminal injuries compensation board awards used in drawing up his proposed tariff of compensation for victims of violent crime.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 24 January 1994]: No. The survey data contain information which would make it possible to identify individual recipients of awards. Publication of such data would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1988 and to the board's policy of confidentiality.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what staff and other resources, expressed in full-time equivalents and in cash value, were devoted to the review of standard spending assessments in 1993; and what levels of resources he expects to use to review standard spending assessments in 1994.

Mr. Gummer: In the financial year 1993-94 my Department will have devoted about 10 man years' work to the review of standard spending assessments. This represents a pay cost of about £300,000. It is difficult to assess precisely the value of the other resources devoted to the review, but the non-pay running costs involved are in the region of £45,000 in 1993-94. Officials in other Government Departments were also involved in the review.

In the financial year 1994-95, my Department plans to devote six man years to development work on the standard spending assessments system.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many authorities have made (a) written responses to and (b) requests for a meeting with Ministers about his proposals for local government finance for 1994-95;

(2) if he will list those authorities which have made oral representations to Ministers as part of the consultation on his proposals for local government finance for 1994-95, showing in each case the Minister seen by the authority, the duration of the meeting and the main topics raised;

(3) if he will place in the Library his Department's notes of each of the delegations received by Ministers as part of the consultation on his proposals for local government finance for 1994-95.

Mr. Gummer: During the consultation period on my proposals for the local government finance settlement for 1994-95, which ended on 10 January, we received representations from 143 local authorities and authority groupings, and 60 requests for meetings.

The table shows the meetings held by each Minister. Also shown are four meetings which it was not possible for a Minister to attend, and at which delegations made oral representations to officials. No records are kept of the duration of meetings.

Such meetings are private, having been requested by individual authorities, and it is not my Department's custom to publish details of what was discussed at them.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which issues arising from the responses to his proposals for local government finance for 1994-95 will be discussed with the local authority associations as possible changes to the system of local government finance for 1995-96; and if he will make a statement on the continuing review of standard spending assessments.

Mr. Gummer: We are willing to discuss any issues which the local authority associations may wish to raise arising from the proposals for local government finance for 1994-95. As part of the usual round of discussions on standard spending assessments, we will wish to consider the treatment of the police element in the light of the changes in financial arrangements to take place for 1995-96. The associations will, no doubt, wish to bring forward their own agenda for discussion.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest available figures of capital receipts, including receipts set aside to meet credit liabilities, for each local authority, and in total for England.

Mr. Gummer: Capital receipts information falls into two categories: receipts received during the financial year, and usable receipts held at a particular time, usually the end of the year. Receipts received during the year are divided into usable and reserved parts. The reserved parts are set aside as provision to meet credit liabilities and once set aside are no longer distinguishable from other amounts set aside, such as, for example, the statutory minimum amount set aside each year from the revenue account.

The latest forecast of gross receipts received in 1993-94, based on local authorities' first quarter returns, is £2·2 billion. Of this amount £1·8 billion is forecast to be usable and £400 million reserved.

The balance of usable receipts held at 31 March 1993 was £1 billion.

The latest estimate for the total amount held by local authorities as provision for credit liabilities is £6·1 billion as at 31 March 1993. As indicated, this figure will include, among other things, a notional amount of capital receipts which have been set aside but not yet used to redeem debt.

I am arranging for the latest available figures for each local authority to be placed in the Library of the House.

Environmental Information Regulations 1992

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what complaints he has received in regard to the failure or delay in reply by the appropriate authorities to requests for information disclosure under the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 since 1 January 1993.

Mr. Atkins: Two people have written to my right hon. Friend: the Campaign for Freedom of Information about a refusal by the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee to supply information about the thermal oxide reprocessing plant; and an environmental sciences student who was concerned at Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's delay in replying to her request.

Biodiversity Convention

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 566, if he will make a statement on the nature of United Kingdom concerns about the financial provisions of the biodiversity convention and the safeguards which the United Kingdom is seeking.

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom is concerned to ensure that donor countries retain the right to determine their financial contribution under the biodiversity convention. We will continue to pursue safeguards to ensure this objective.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is not held centrally by my Department and is obtainable only at disproportionate cost.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 244, on the Touche Ross report on THORP, whether his Department ever requested a copy of the report from Touche Ross or British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Atkins: No.

Local Authorities (Security)

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities spent money on security under the provisions of section 137 of the Local Government Act 1972 in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not available centrally.

Water Charges

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the (a) average percentage increases in water and sewerage rates and (b) increases in the retail prices index used for upratings of income support, for each year since April 1988.

Mr. Atkins: The information requested is given in the tables:

(a) Increase in domestic water and sewerage average bills

Year	Water Per cent.	Sewerage Per cent.
1988-89 to 1989-90	14·8	9·8
1989-90 to 1990-91	15·4	10·7
1990-91 to 1991-92	16·4	15·0
1991-92 to 1992-93	9·1	10·1
1992-93 to 1993-94	8·2	9·0

Source: CRI statistics series—"Charges For Water Services".

(b) Increase in the Rossi index used to uprate income support

Year	Per cent.
1989	4·7
1990	5·2
1991	8·1
1992	7·0
1993	3·6
1994	3·5

Notes:

1. The Rossi index is based on the retail prices index, which takes account of the rise and fall in the price of individual commodities excluding most housing costs.

2. From the 1992 uprating the Rossi index was adjusted to include, water and sewerage charges, dwelling insurance, ground rent, repair and maintenance charges, do-it-yourself materials and for 1992-93 only, 20 per cent. of the community charge.

3. Source: Information supplied by the Central Statistical Office.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bristol, East (Ms Corston) of 6 December, Official Report, column 9, whether water companies will be permitted to use council tax banding to calculate water charges.

Mr. Atkins: Subject to the non-discrimination requirements in its licence conditions and copyright and data protection requirements, a water company may use any legally obtained information as a basis for the calculation of water charges save that after 31 March 2000 it may not use rateable values. However, we stand by the assurances we have given in the past that local authorities should not be permitted to sell council tax valuation lists for use for other purposes.

Rents Statistics

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 1 December, Official Report, columns 551-52, if he will now update the tables showing (a) average local authority unrebated rents, (b) mean housing association annual registered fair rents and (c) mean annual registered fair rents for private tenancies for each London borough, by providing figures and the index for 1993-94.

Sir George Young: I have today placed in the Library an updated table showing the average local authority weekly unrebated rent for each London borough for each financial year since 1988-89, including provisional figures for 1993-94. As in the earlier table, the rents are also expressed as an index with 1988-89 equal to 100.

Information for 1993-94 on average registered fair rents for housing association and private sector tenancies is not yet available. Information is, however, available for the first quarter of 1993-94 and can be found in the publication "Rent Officer Statistics", a copy of which is in the Library.

Solid Fuel

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce regulations to require high-sulphur solid fuel and fuel not authorised for use in smoke control areas to be clearly labelled as such.

Mr. Aitken: No.

Homelessness

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities or other bodies which made representations to him seeking restrictions on the rights of access of homeless persons to social housing, before October 1993.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he or his Department have received about the categories of people deemed to have priority need under the provision of part III of the Housing Act 1985.

Sir George Young: In the normal course of business —for example, meetings and presentations about housing investment programme submissions—Ministers and officials have talked to a range of people in local authorities of all political complexions; we have also talked to people in the housing association movement, and in the private rented sector. These encounters have been helpful to us in preparing the consultation paper "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies".

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many single-parent families were classified as statutorily homeless in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) London for each year from 1979;

(2) how many single-parent families have been accommodated in (a) bed-and-breakfast accommodation, (b) temporary housing, (c) permanent local authority housing and (d) private sector housing since January 1991;

(3) how many single-parent homeless families have (a) one or more, (b) two or more or (c) three or more children under 16 years of age.

Sir George Young: Local authorities in England report details of the number of households for which they accept responsibility to secure permanent accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the housing acts in their quarterly P1(E) returns. These returns do not distinguish between one and two-parent households.

For information about other parts of the United Kingdom I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Tenancies

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will explain how local authorities can satisfy the proposed obligation in paragraph 18.2 (i) of his consultation paper on access to local authority and housing association accommodation and at the same time accommodate existing tenants seeking a transfer while following paragraph 20.4 of the consultation paper under which waiting lists may be restricted to people who are not currently tenants and who are seeking a tenancy.

Sir George Young: The consultation paper invites views, in paragraph 20.4, on whether the names of people seeking a transfer should appear on the housing waiting list along with the names of people seeking a tenancy for the first time. If, in the light of responses to the consultation exercise, we conclude that people seeking transfers should not be included on the waiting list, they will be the subject of separate provisions.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new arrangements he proposes to create for short-term tenancies within local authority housing stock.

Sir George Young: Paragraph 19.2 of the consultation paper "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies" raises the possibility of giving local authorities greater flexibility in the types of tenancy they can offer. I would welcome views on the form that this flexibility might take.

Housing

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he or his Department have received about the implications of the House of Lords decision in the case of Din v. London borough of Wandsworth;

(2) what representations he or his Department have received about the operation of section 63 of the Housing Act 1985.

Sir George Young: The representations we receive about the operation of part III of the 1985 Act cover a range of issues.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis he considers that someone asked to leave accommodation by family or friends automatically qualifies for assistance under part III of the Housing Act 1985.

Sir George Young: Section 58 of the 1985 Act states that a person is homeless if, inter alia, there is no accommodation which he has a licence to occupy. Being asked to leave by relatives or friends would amount to the revocation of a licence.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the additional housing benefit costs which will be incurred in consequence of the implementation of the proposals in his consultation paper on changes to arrangements for access to local authority and housing association accommodation.

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 27·1 of the consultation paper.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Social Security and the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the additional housing benefit costs likely to arise from the proposals in the consultation paper on proposed changes to access to local authority and housing association accommodation.

Sir George Young: The proposals in the consultation paper represent the views of the Government.

Power Station Emissions

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each power station in Britain the most recent emissions data submitted to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Atkins: The emissions data for power stations in England and Wales, not Scotland authorised by HMIP are placed on the public register in HMIP offices in Bedford, Bristol and Leeds as appropriate. The national plan emissions inventory is also placed on the public registers and I have placed a copy of the inventory for 1993, which has recently been received, in the Library of the House.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis and frequency power stations are obliged to submit emissions data to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Atkins: For all power stations in England and Wales operated by National Power and PowerGen and authorised by HMIP, the operator is required to send to the chief inspector, within 28 days of the end of the reporting period to which the results refer, the mass releases into the air from the authorised process of sulphur dioxide and oxides of nitrogen for that reporting period together with the operational data from which the releases have been calculated.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each power station in Britain the reporting period stipulated in the authorisation for purposes of submitting emissions data to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Atkins: For all power stations in England and Wales operated by National Power and PowerGen and authorised by HMIP, the reporting period is each of the 12 periods of either four or five weeks which correspond approximately to calender months in any year for which reports are compiled.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who are the members currently appointed to the Office of Water Services national customer council.

Mr. Atkins: The OFWAT national customer council's members are the 10 chairpersons of OFWAT's 10 customer service committees and the Director General of Water Services.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who are the members currently appointed to each of the customer service committees of OFWAT.

Mr. Atkins: The members of OFWAT's 10 customer service committees as at 31 March 1993 are listed in appendix one to the director general's annual report 1992, a copy of which is in the Library. New members and reappointments are announced in OFWAT news releases from time to time.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to involve the Minister for Local Government when considering the Government's response to the final recommendations of the Local Government Commission on Yorkshire, Humberside and Lincolnshire.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 29 November 1993, Official Report, column 325.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the occasions when either he or Ministers in his Department have publicly advocated specific changes in the local government map of England when the Local Government Commission was in the process of reviewing that area.

Mr. Curry: It is the policy of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and Ministers in this Department who will be involved in decisions on changes to local government structure, not to comment on specific changes in an area which the Local Government Commission is in the process of reviewing. I am not aware of any breaches of this policy.

National Rivers Authority (Laboratories)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which laboratories of the National Rivers Authority are scheduled for (a) market testing and (b) closure.

Mr. Atkins: The market testing and closure of its laboratories is primarily a management matter for the National Rivers Authority, which advises me that:

(a) all NRA's 11 chemical laboratories were subject to an internal review of cost-effectiveness and efficiency; and

(b) as a result, the NRA laboratories at Caernarfon Carlisle, Peterborough, Warrington and Washington have been closed and the work transferred to the NRA laboratories at Exeter, Leeds, Llanelli, Nottingham, Reading and Waterlooville.

Water Industry (Regulatory Bodies)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the annual cost to public funds of the activities of the Audit Commission and the regulatory bodies, in relation to the water industry.

Mr. Atkins: The Audit Commission has no responsibilities in connection with the water industry, and the costs of the Office of Water Services are fully recoverable from licence fees. Costs of other water industry regulators, attributable to public funds, for 1992-93, were £56·71 million distributed as follows:

Drinking water inspectorate	£1·35 million.
National Rivers Authority	£55 million.
Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution	£360,000.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress made in implementing a strategy for sustainable development by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: The Government published on 25 January 1994 the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development, together with the United Kingdom's climate change programme, biodiversity action plan and forestry programme, as announced on 20 January, Official Report, column 844. Copies have been laid before the House.

Radioactive Clinical Waste (Hillingdon Hospital)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will call for a report from Her Majesty's inspector of pollution in respect of the hospitals whose radioactive clinical waste is being incinerated at Hillingdon hospital incineration plant; and what estimate he has made as to the hazard to health resulting from the incineration of such waste.

Mr. Atkins: HMIP has authorised the transfer and the incineration of very low-level radioactive waste at the clinical energy incinerator at Hillingdon hospital from the following hospitals:

The Hillingdon hospital
Mount Vernon hospital
Harefield hospital

In addition, it is authorised to receive low-level radioactive waste from Brunel university.

In setting the discharge limits, HMIP is satisfied that any effect is environmentally acceptable and that no national or international dose limits applicable to members of the public would be exceeded.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many district authorities have been granted provisional increases in their standard spending assessments of more than 10 per cent. in 1994-95; and how that was provided for in his Budget statement that the growth in total standard spending in England for local authorities will be limited to 2·3 per cent. next year.

Mr. Baldry: There were 99 district authorities with provisional increases of more than 10 per cent. in their standard spending assessments for 1994-95. After excluding the additional resources provided for community care and making adjustments for changes in function the overall increase in total standard spending between 1993-94 and 1994-95 will be 2·3 per cent. and the equivalent increase in the total of SSAs will be 2·2 per cent. The review of SSAs and the introduction of information from the 1991 census has led to a number of authorities having large increases between 1993-94 and 1994-95, while other authorities have had decreases.

Small Properties

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what directives he has given to local authorities regarding the treatment of small shops, and other small properties which are used for both business and domestic purposes, as single units for taxation purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Properties are liable for council tax only where the occupier works from home, but the part of the premises used for business reverts to domestic use at the end of the day. Composite properties are treated as two units for local taxation purposes. The domestic part is liable for council tax, the business premises are liable for non-domestic rates. The domestic part will attract council tax transitional relief, where applicable, in the ordinary way. Composite properties have been afforded greater transitional protection than other properties from any adverse impact of the 1990 rating changes, and it is proposed that no such property should face a real rate increase in 1994-95. Government guidelines to local authorities on hardship relief for ratepayers draw attention to the special circumstances of composite properties, but it is for authorities to decide whether to grant any relief.

Curtain Walling Contract

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in his Department's inquiry into the exclusion of United Kingdom firms from the shortlist for the curtain walling contract at the Ministry of Defence procurement headquarters in Bristol.

Mr. Baldry: My officials have met with the MoD, the main contractor and the supply company which made the original complaint. I am satisfied that the choice of curtain wall contractor was a matter for the main contractor, and not the Ministry of Defence.

We are reviewing with the industry what lessons can be learnt from this experience.

Groundwork Trusts

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funds are made available to the groundwork trusts; what consideration he has given to making these available equally to existing environmental trusts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Groundwork Foundation's grant in aid for 1993-94 is £5·5 million, which enables the foundation to support the existing network of 32 groundwork trusts and provide for the establishment of new trusts. Groundwork trusts bring together in partnership local authorities, private companies, voluntary organisations and local people to tackle environmental problems in the community. There is a wide range of grants available from this Department to support the environmental activities of local voluntary groups.

Bed-and-breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the local authorities using bed-and-breakfast accommodation, and numbers in that accommodation, at the end of September.

Sir George Young: The numbers of households reported by local authorities in bed-and-breakfast accommodation at the end of September appear in the supplementary table of the information bulletin "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Statistics for the third quarter of 1993", a copy of which is in the Library.

Vacant Properties

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the locations of the empty properties he wishes to return to the affordable rented housing sector;

(2) how many of the empty properties he wishes to return to the affordable rented housing sector he estimates would have (a) bed-sitter accommodation, (b) one bedroom, (c) two bedrooms or (d) three or more bedrooms;

(3) how many (a) flats, (b) terraced houses, (c) semi-detached houses and (d) detached houses are among the empty properties he wishes to return to the affordable rented sector.

Sir George Young: The HIP returns submitted by local authorities show that they estimate that there are 765,000 vacant private sector properties as at 1 April 1993. These estimates are not broken down into the categories requested. The Government aim to create the conditions which will encourage landlords to make their empty properties available for sale or rent. I have no specific targets, but even if only a proportion could be returned to use that would be a valuable contribution to meeting housing need.

Waste Disposal, Yorkshire

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will give details of rate support grant for waste disposal purposes in west Yorkshire for each of the last 10 years;

(2) if he will give details of rate support grant for waste disposal purposes in south Yorkshire for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on Thursday 27 January.

Climate Change Convention

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 579, what was the voting record of the other member states on the European Community ratification of the climate change convention.

Mr. Atkins: The Council decision was adopted unopposed, with the United Kingdom abstaining on the grounds that it did not support the choice of legal base.

Fair Rents

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the findings of his Department's consultation exercise on fair rents; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I announced on 15 July last year that following careful consideration of the representations received in response to our consultation paper on fair rents, we did not consider it would be desirable to make any changes to the existing legislation. To provide further legislative controls over rents would hinder efforts to promote the revival of the private rented sector.

We are keen, however, to encourage greater exchange of information and views between rent officers and rent assessment panels. The educational trust of the Institute of Rent Officers has established a working party, made up of rent officers and rent assessment panel members, to look into how this might be achieved. The group aims to publish its report in the spring.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Gummer: None.

Severence Schemes

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will publish details of the severance schemes available to employees which were in operation immediately prior to the privatisation of the Thames water authority, including details of facilities to make early payment of pensions to staff under such schemes.

Mr. Atkins: The severance scheme used was the water industry security and severance scheme as adapted by the Thames water authority. I have no plans to publish the scheme but the text is available from the National Rivers Authority. The early payment of pension benefits was subject to the provisions of the Local Government Superannuation Scheme Regulations 1986, as amended.

Air Quality

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the report on air quality undertaken for him by Professor Roy Harrison.

Mr. Atkins [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1994, c. 837]: I am pleased to announce the publication earlier today of the second report of the quality of urban air review group "Diesel Vehicle Emissions and Urban Air Quality".

Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, and are available free of charge from the QUARG secretariat, Institute of Public and Environmental Health, university of Birmingham, Edgbaston, Birmingham, B15 2TT.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested.

Elderly People

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's estimate of the number of people who will be aged (a) 65 years and over and (b) 80 years and over for each year to 2010.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table.

thousands

1992	8,933	2,174
1993	8,961	2,227

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. Hague: None.

Families (Income Levels)

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the answer given to the then right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham, Official Report, 29 November 1991, columns 667-70, showing the numbers of working and out-of-work families with children at different levels of income, according to family size, distinguishing between one-parent families and two-parent families and showing the benefits on which the out-of-work families depended.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables.

Some of the estimates in the tables are based on small sample sizes and are therefore subject to a wide margin of error.

The figures are based on estimates taken from 1990 and 1991 family expenditure surveys, using the income reported in the survey year. They are not adjusted to a common price base and therefore should not be used for comparison over time.

1. The figures are estimates derived from the 1990 and 1991 family expenditure surveys combined. All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10,000 and because of this rows and columns may not exactly sum to totals. All estimates are subject to sampling error.
2. Gross weekly income is the income reported in the year of the survey, either 1990 or 1991, with no adjustment for inflation.
3. A "working family" is one where at least one parent/partner is in full-time employment or self-employment and working 30 hours or more.
4. A "two wage family" is where the second wage exceeds £5 per week.
5. The figures include only families in private households.

Children (Statistics)

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the latest figures showing (a) the number of children living in families with an unemployed head and (b) the number of children living in families with a long-term unemployed head of household.

Mr. Burt: The labour force survey estimates that 1,133,000 dependent children live in families with an unemployed[1] head and that 452,000 dependent children[2] live in families with a long-term[3] unemployed head.

Income Support

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give figures for the Durham area showing how many (a) families with children are living on income support and (b) how many children are living on income support; and what were the figures in 1979.

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the numbers of people receiving supplementary benefit in Wales for each year since 1979.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table. Income support replaced supplementary benefit in April 1988.

Child Support Act 1991

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many reduced benefit directives have been issued to lone parents since the Child Support Act 1991 came into operation.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for East Kilbride (Mr. Ingram) on 27 January at column 363.

Compensation Recovery Unit

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money the compensation recovery unit recovered in the financial year 1992-93 by recoupment of benefits from awards of damages in personal injury claims; and how much money the compensation recovery unit estimated in the same year it would recover by recoupment of benefit.

Mr. Hague: The administration of the compensation recovery unit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from M. Bichard to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 27 January 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the performance of the Compensation Recovery Unit.

In the 1992-93 financial year the Compensation Recovery Unit recovered over £51 million from awards of damages in personal injury claims. The estimated recovery for the same period was almost £49 million.

I hope you will find my reply helpful.

Benefit Overpayments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when instructions were first issued to local offices of his Department regarding the right to recover overpayments of benefits under common law in cases not covered by statutory provisions for recovery of overpayments.

Mr. Burt: The administration of benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from M. Bichard to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 27 January 1994.

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the instructions issued to the Department's Local Offices about the recovery of overpayments under common law.

The Benefits Agency (BA) seeks recovery under Section 71 and Section 74 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992. Under Section 71 the recovery is sought if the overpayment has been the result of "misrepresentation" or "failure to disclose" a material fact by the beneficiary. Section 74 applies where there has been a duplicaiton of Income Support and another benefit.

Recoveries under Sections 71 and 74 are dependant on determinations made by the independent adjudicating authorities. Under Section 71 they decide whether benefit is overpaid and the amount. For Section 74 they decide the amount that is recoverable.

There may be occasions where neither Section 71 nor Section 74 applies but benefit has been paid incorrectly and on the facts of the particular case the beneficiary ought to have realised that too much benefit was being paid. As there has been no misrepresentation or failure to disclose a material fact, and other considerations of Section 74 do not apply, there is no basis for the adjudication officer to decide on the overpayment. Nevertheless the BA is entitled to seek repayment of the money overpaid in such circumstances under the established principle of common law that where a person has received money to which he is not entitled, then he should repay it. This arrangement has existed for many years and has always been contained in instructions issued to Local Offices. No recent changes in instructions have therefore been necessary.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

WALES

Smoking

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken and what further action he plans to discourage smoking among (a) children of school age and (b) adults; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Particular campaigns aimed at children of school age include the highly successful life education centres and the anti-smoking club Smokebusters Wales. A number of new projects aimed specifically at children are also being planned.

In relation to other groups, Health Promotion Wales' future plans include action to reduce the incidence of smoking by teenage girls, a pilot project to help smokers aged 15 to 19 to give up, and the development of materials for use in youth settings. These initiatives are the direct result of needs identified through research activity. In addition, the Welsh Office continues to support local health promotion units; each of which are carrying out their own local smoking cessation projects.

The Government have set and are determined to meet the challenging targets set out in Health Promotion Wales' document "Plans for Action 3—The Agenda for 1992-94".

National Curriculum (Changes)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to publish guidelines for education authorities in Wales regarding changes to the national curriculum in primary schools.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I announced on 5 January that the national curriculum in Wales would be slimmed down to allow schools more time to use at their discretion. Proposals for national curriculum orders, setting out the new requirements, will be issued for consultation around Easter. Schools and local education authorities in Wales will receive details of the revised national curriculum requirements at each key stage during the spring term in 1995. The revised curriculum will come into force for the 1995-96 school year.

Modern Apprenticeships Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his objectives for the modern apprenticeships scheme in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: The aim of modern apprenticeships in Wales is to increase our economic competitiveness by increasing the number of young people qualifying to the key technician and supervisor levels. The main emphasis in 1994-95 will be on manufacturing engineering in order to support Wales' growing reputation as a manufacturing centre. Modern apprenticeships will be extended to other sectors in 1995-96.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give (a) the maximum, (b) the minimum and (c) the average amount paid out under the arable area payments scheme in Wales in the latest available year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Amounts paid under the 1992-93 scheme are in the order of:

	£
Maximum payment	34,300·00
Minimum payment	70·00
Average payment	1,700·00

These figures do not include payments for oilseeds because the final instalment is not due to be paid until early 1994.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Insurance Premium Tax

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a full breakdown of the 35p weekly increase in tax for the average family which will result from the introduction of the insurance premium tax which he identified in his autumn Budget; and if he will outline the assumptions on which it was based.

Sir John Cope: The 35p figure can be broken down as follows:

	Pence per week
Motor	20
Building	10
Contents	5
Total	35

These figures are based on the 1991 family expenditure survey, uprated to 1994-95. The figures cover expenditure by those households which have some insurance in each of the three main types of insurance.

Interest Charges

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he proposes to relieve small businesses and farms from paying interest charges considerably in excess of base rates.

Mr. Nelson: The Government have reduced base rates by 6·5 per cent. over the last 16 months and are committed to maintaining a competitive market for lending. The particular rates paid by individual borrowers is a matter for negotiation between them and their lenders.

Land

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many landowners and estates in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland have made unsuccessful applications to benefit under the tax procedures by which tax liability is reduced on condition that there is an undertaking to manage and protect the land from development and allow reasonable public access.

Mr. Dorrell: Information is not available in the form requested. Under 5 per cent. of applications for conditional exemption from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax are wholly rejected or withdrawn. Applications may relate to a number of properties and some of the applications which have been accepted will have been accepted only in part.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many landowners and estates in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland have benefited under the tax procedures by which tax liability is reduced on condition that there is an undertaking to manage and protect the land from development and allow reasonable public access.

Mr. Dorrell: There have been 126 designations of land for conditional exemption from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax in England; five designations in Wales; and 26 designations in Scotland. In addition, there have been 106 designations of historic buildings in England; five designations in Wales; and 39 designations in Scotland. Some of the designations of historic buildings will have extended to surrounding land. Some designations of historic buildings have been for the purposes of the tax exemptions for maintenance funds rather than for exemption of the buildings themselves.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the approximate value of the tax forgone in each year since 1976 in the cases where landowners and estates have benefited under the tax procedures by which tax liability is reduced on condition that there is an undertaking to manage and protect the land from development and allow reasonable public access.

Mr. Dorrell: The annual average cost of inheritance tax conditional exemption for land and buildings is estimated to have been between £5 million and £10 million over the period 1983-84 to 1992-93. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Works of Art

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that estates claiming exemption from inheritance tax make available to the public details of the works of art to which they have a right of access.

Mr. Dorrell: Public access to works of art granted exemption from inheritance tax may be provided in a number of ways. The publicity arrangements will differ depending on the way chosen.

The owner may arrange to exhibit the object in a house or room which is open to the public for an agreed number of days each year; appropriate publicity for the opening of the house would be required. The owner may lend the object to a public collection for display on a long-term basis; publicity would then be the responsibility of the curator of this collection.

Alternatively, the owner may arrange viewing by appointment provided he is also willing to lend the object on request to a public collection. All objects which can be viewed by appointment are publicised by means of an entry in the computerised register of conditionally exempt property held by the national art library in the Victoria and Albert museum in London. Copies of the register are also available for consultation in the national library of Scotland in Edinburgh, the national museum of Wales in Cardiff and the Ulster museum in Belfast. Copies of the register on computer disc can be purchased from the capital taxes office at a price of £10 each. The register is updated quarterly and the Inland Revenue issues quarterly press releases giving details of recent additions to the register.

Unicorn Heritage

Mr. Enright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what total tax relief was given to investors in Unicorn Heritage plc under Treasury business expansion schemes when that company went bankrupt; and under what guidelines it was given.

Mr. Dorrell: For reasons of taxpayer confidentiality, details of tax relief, if any, given to individuals in any particular instance are not disclosed.

Income Tax

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update table 2.3 of Inland Revenue Statistics 1993 with data for 1994-95 on the basis of his budget proposals for income tax.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The information is given in the table. Estimates for 1992-93 onwards are based on a projection of the 1991-92 survey of personal incomes.

SCOTLAND

Teacher Training Costs

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has of the total cost involved in training (a) a secondary and (b) a primary school teacher in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information set out in the table is based upon returns from teacher training institutions, other than the university of Stirling, detailing course costs in 1991-92. The figures include also an estimate of student support costs, assuming entitlement to full maintenance grant and loan at the "home" rates.

Course	Estimated cost per student 1991-92 £
BEd primary four-year course	26,200
PGCE Primary one-year postgraduate course	7,220
BEd Secondary four-year course	26,390
PGCE Secondary one-year postgraduate course	7,290

Procurators Fiscal

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases were reported to each procurator fiscal by the police in each year since 1990.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Procurators fiscal receive reports from over 50 reporting agencies including the police. The total numbers of such reports for each year since 1990 are given in the table. Separate statistics are not kept of the number of reports submitted by the police, but their reports will account for approximately 90 per cent. of the totals given.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what procedures are in operation to monitor the way in which procurators fiscal deal with cases reported to them by the police; and what account is taken of the results of such monitoring in the rewarding or career patterns of procurators fiscal and in the allocation of financial resources.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Procurators fiscal prepare monthly reports of workload and performance. The information is analysed centrally in Crown Office for senior management. The work of local offices is monitored regularly by regional procurators fiscal and by the management services group in the Crown Office, which is engaged in a continuing programme of review. Procurators fiscal are subject to the directions of my noble and learned Friend, the Lord Advocate and must report serious cases for the instructions of his Deputes.

Financial resources are allocated on the basis of the workload of each office and the allocation takes account of the demands made by different types of case. A procurator fiscal is a civil servant. His competence is systematically appraised each year and he has the opportunity to earn performance pay. His performance is not measured in terms of results in court or by the number of convictions he obtains. The development of a procurate fiscal's career depends on how well he carries out a wide range of duties, and to advance he must be successful at promotion boards, which form part of the service's rigorous selection process.

Nurses

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nurses were employed in national health service hospitals in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what are the figures for nurses employed in the community alongside family doctors.

Mr. Stewart: The numbers of qualified nursing staff employed in hospitals and directly employed by GP practices are shown in the table. This also gives data for qualified staff working in the community who are employed by health boards and NHS trusts; these include those who work closely with GPs, like health visitors and district nurses, and others who may not, such as clinic or school nurses.

Numbers of qualified nurses, WTE, working in the NHS in Scotland.[1]

	Hospital Staff	Community Staff[2]	Staff employed in GP practices
1989	29,412·0	5,210·7	295·3
1990	29,478·0	5,261·1	583·5
1991	29,731·6	[3]5,525·7	646·8
1992	29,714·6	5,432·8	695·3
1993	[4]29,510·4	[4]5,392·9	735·5

[1] Includes midwives and only staff who are registered or enrolled. Bank nurses, staff in training or staff who are unqualified such as auxiliaries or nursery nurses are not included. Data for hospital and community staff are at 30 September and for GP practice staff at 1 April.

[2] Includes both staff who work closely with GPs and those who may not.

[3] The increase in community staff between 1990 and 1991 is the result of a reclassification of staff previously classified as hospital staff.

Scottish Power (Fraud)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Serious Fraud Squad has concluded its investigation into alleged complaints of fraud in the supply of coal to Scottish Power, and with what results.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The investigation by Fife constabulary is not yet concluded.

Scottish Legal Aid Board

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total cost incurred by the Scottish Legal Aid Board in connection with market testing of its operations; if these costs have been met from the board's current budget; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In common with other non-departmental public bodies, the Scottish Legal Aid Board is undertaking a programme of market testing of certain of its activities. Separately identifiable costs to date amount to £30,000. These have been met from within the board's adminstrative budget of £7·862 million for 1993-94.

Director of Information

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the salary grading and scale attaching to the post of director of information at the Scottish Office; what are the duties and responsibilities of the office; and to whom the office holder is responsible.

Mr. Lang: The post of director of the Scottish Office information directorate is graded at unified grade 5 within the civil service grading structure. At present the national rate of pay for the grade is within the range £36,019-£53,740 progression being dependent on performance.

The director is responsible for the provision of advice to Ministers and all departments of the Scottish Office on the public presentation, through press, radio and television, of Government policy and the work of the Ministers and the departments of the Scottish Office.

The post also carries responsibility for paid publicity, including advertising and publications, media arrangements for royal visits to Scotland, organising programmes and providing escorts for Foreign and Commonwealth Office-sponsored VIP visitors to Scotland, and the provision of news and radio tapes for overseas markets on behalf of the Central Office of Information.

The director is directly responsible to Ministers as regards the professional advice provided by the information directorate. Management oversight of the directorate is exercised by the deputy secretary in charge of central services within the Scottish Office.

Forestry

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to publish a strategy for woodlands and forestry to implement his policy objectives.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 24 January 1994]: We published on Tuesday 25 January "Sustainable Forestry: The UK Programme" which explains how the forest principles will be implemented in the United Kingdom under our existing forestry policy.

NHS (Non-executive Directors)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of attendances, and the maximum possible of attendances, of non-executive directors at (1) national health service trust board meetings, and (2) health boards, in the latest 12 months or part thereof for which information is available.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The information requested is not recorded centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure that non-executive members of national health service boards (a) visit a representative sample of the units under their control to observe service delivery in action, (b) take part in joint training and development with executive members and (c) receive training in how the national health service is financed.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1994]: All members of health boards and national health service trusts are invited on appointment to attend national conferences to develop their understanding of the strategy, structure and finance of the national health service in Scotland. Boards are also strongly encouraged to provide induction programmes covering all local issues, including site visits to a range of facilities. The management development group also actively promotes joint training and development locally for non-executive and executive members, and they are given the opportunity to participate in a range of training programmes, including corporate management and financial responsibility.

Paediatric Care

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make it his policy to increase the number and availability of paediatric intensive care unit beds;

(2) if he will order a review in each health board area of the provision of children's intensive care; and if he will consider designating sites as area paediatric intensive care units;

(3) what is his policy on the ratio of paediatric intensive care unit beds to the population of children aged under 14 years;

(4) if he will require purchasers and providers to meet agreed standards for the provision of paediatric intensive care beds.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1994]: It is a matter for health boards to purchase paediatric intensive care based on their assessment of local needs.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the extent of the shortfall of paediatric intensive care unit beds.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 10 December 1993, Official Report, column 353.

Council Housing

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much from (a) grants, (b) consent to borrow and (c) capital receipts was spent in 1991-92 and 1992-93 on (i) council housing stock, (ii) owner-occupied stock, (iii) housing associations' stock and (iv) Scottish Homes stock; and how much of these sums, in each category of financial contribution and type of stock, was devoted to eradication of dampness and condensation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 January 1994]: Information in the form requested is not held centrally. Decisions on whether particular expenditure is financed from grants, borrowing, capital receipts or from other revenue is a matter for individual housing authorities. Similarly housing resource allocations are not generally earmarked for specific purposes and it is up to individual housing authorities to decide on the balance of investment in specific areas, including tackling dampness and condensation. Local authorities and Scottish Homes have, however, been asked to give priority to eliminating dampness and condensation in preparing their capital programmes for future years.

Development Corporations (Rent Increases)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the rent increases announced by Irvine development corporation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The house rent increases announced by Irvine development corporation, which will come into effect on 28 March, provide for a rise in management and maintenance costs above the rate of inflation and are expected to be broadly in line with the average set by other private sector landlords.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what rent increases have been announced by Irvine, Cumbernauld, Livingston, East Kilbride and Glenrothes development corporations; and what guidelines the Scottish Office issued to the development corporations prior to a decision being taken on the level of rent increase.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1994]: Irvine, Livingston and East Kilbride development corporations have each announced a 5 per cent. increase in house rents from the beginning of 1994-95. Glenrothes and Cumbernauld have yet to announce the level of rent increase which will apply. These increases are in line with my right hon. Friend's advice to corporations that present house rents should, on average, be increased by between 5 per cent. and 7 per cent. from the beginning of the new financial year.

Inquiry Line

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the cost of setting up the Scottish Office inquiry line and the cost to date, the cost of administering the service, the number of staff employed and the salary of the head of the Scottish Office inquiry line.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The set-up costs for the Scottish Office inquiry line amount to £176,871. This includes initial publicity costs of £150,000 necessarily incurred to make the new arrangements known to the public. The estimated annual cost of operating the information line is £28,500; the costs to date are approximately £7,125.

The Scottish Office central inquiry unit has responsibility for the new information line and the unit was augmented by one to handle the new initiative. The unit is currently headed by a senior librarian whose annual salary is in the range of £19,215 to £24,780.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of calls received from each region between 1 October and 13 December 1993 to the Scottish Office inquiry line.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 January 1994]: Statistics on the number of Scottish callers to the inquiry line are divided into three catchment areas plus a fourth covering England and Wales.

The number of calls received for the period 1 October to 13 December 1993 were:

	Number
Aberdeen	297
Edinburgh	579
Glasgow	864
England and Wales—various locations	98

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of calls received between 1 October and 13 December 1993 to the Scottish Office inquiry line.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The Scottish Office inquiry line received 1,838 calls between 1 October and 13 December 1993.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the subject matter of calls received by the Scottish Office inquiry line; and which of his departments has been involved in each case.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 January 1994]: No specific record is kept of the subject matter of each call received through the Scottish Office inquiry line but topics of inquiry have included trust hospitals, the opting out of schools, road building programmes, social services provision, planning and environmental issues.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Yugoslavia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has regarding the country of manufacture of guns obtained by Serbian forces since July 1992 which have been used against (a) British service men and (b) Bosnian civilians in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Serbia has an extensive arms manufacturing capability. Most weapons held by Serb forces are produced domestically, although it is possible that they may have procured guns from other countries since July 1992.

We have no information that Serb forces have used foreign-manufactured weapons either against British service men or Bosnian civilians.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) financial help and (b) technical and professional help his Department is contributing to the United Nations Human Rights Commission investigation into alleged war crimes in former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom provides financial assistance to the United Nations commission of experts through its contributions to the United Nations regular budget. We have also submitted to the commission three batches of substantiated evidence on war crimes, including a requested report on rape, collated by the Ministry of Defence's defence debriefing team.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department passed on to the United Nations Human Rights Commission all the testimonies of witnesses to and victims of alleged war crimes in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Ministry of Defence's debriefing team has inteviewed over 4,000 entrants to the United Kingdom from the former Yugoslavia since the conflict began. This material has been collated and substantiated evidence submitted to the commission of experts in three separate batches. We will continue to submit such evidence as it becomes available.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how his Department is co-operating with the UN Human Rights Commission investigation into alleged war crimes in former Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom co-sponsored Security Council resolution 780 of 6 October 1992 which established the UN commission of experts. Since its establishment we have submitted to the commission three batches of substantiated evidence, including a requested report on rape. Later this year we will submit further evidence following a request from the commission for information on specific regions.

Arms Exports

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy regarding arms exports to Israel.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 1 December 1993, Official Report, column 534.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy regarding arms exports to Iran.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We apply the following criteria in considering applications for the export of licensable goods to Iran:

(i) With two exceptions we should not approve licences for any goods or technology on the military or atomic energy lists—schedule 1, part 3, group 1 and 2—of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1992, as amended. The exceptions are:

(a) goods essential for the safety of civil aircraft and air traffic control systems;

(b) radioactive material in the form of sources for medical equipment and deuterium labelled compounds for medical use.

(ii) We should not approve licences for any equipment—including the exceptions to the complete ban mentioned above—where there was knowledge or reason to suspect that it would go to a military end-user or be used for military purposes.

Existing export licenses, approved under the old guidelines, will remain valid. As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Trade announced in his written reply to the hon. Member for Croydon, Central (Sir P. Beresford) on 18 January 1994, Official Report, column 509, an exception has been made in one case to date. We shall support efforts among supplier countries, in particular the G7 and our European partners, to promote a harmonised approach to effective controls on the export of dual use goods to countries of particular concern.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy regarding arms exports to Syria.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We do not sell arms to Syria.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy regarding arms exports to Kuwait.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We consider applications for the export of arms to Kuwait on a case by case basis. We refuse applications for exports which in our view would not be consistent with our established criteria, including the common criteria for arms transfers agreed with European Union partners at Luxembourg in 1991 and at Lisbon in 1992, the guidelines agreed by the Permanent Five in London in 1991 and the principles governing conventional arms transfers adopted by the forum for security co-operation of the conference on security and co-operation in Europe in November 1993.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy regarding arms exports to Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We consider applications for the export of arms to Saudi Arabia on a case-by-case basis. We refuse applications for exports which in our view would not be consistent with our established criteria, including the common criteria for arms transfers agreed with European Union partners at Luxembourg in 1991 and at Lisbon in 1992, the guidelines agreed by the permanent five in London in 1991 and the principles governing conventional arms transfers adopted by the forum for security co-operation of the conference on security and co-operation in Europe in November 1993.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy regarding arms exports to Jordan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We consider applications for the export of arms to Jordan on a case by case basis. We refuse applications for exports which in our view would not be consistent with our established criteria, including the common criteria for arms transfers agreed with European Union partners at Luxembourg in 1991 and at Lisbon in 1992, the guidelines agreed by the permanent five in London in 1991 and the principles governing conventional arms transfers adopted by the forum for security co-operation of the conference on security and co-operation in Europe in November 1993.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy regarding arms exports to Egypt.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We consider applications for the export of arms to Egypt on a case by case basis. We refuse applications for exports which in our view would not be consistent with our established criteria, including the common criteria for arms transfers agreed with European Union partners at Luxembourg in 1991 and at Lisbon in 1992, the guidelines agreed by the Permanent five in London in 1991 and the principles governing conventional arms transfers adopted by the forum for security co-operation of the conference on security and co-operation in Europe in November 1993.

Iran

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government will take to persuade the Government of Iran to investigate the disappearance of the General Secretary of the Iranian Assemblies of God, the Reverend Haik Hovsepian Mehr.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are concerned at Reverend Hovsepian's disappearance. According to the local press, the Iranian authorities are investigating. The EU presidency are seeking clarification in Iran on behalf of European partners.

North Korea

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress in implementing the nuclear safeguards inspections at facilities in North Korea; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the safeguards measures list drawn up by the International Atomic Energy Agency for North Korea, pursuant to a decision of the United Nations Security Council.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: North Korea is still refusing to agree to International Atomic Energy Agency inspection of the two undeclared sites which led to its referral to the United Nations Security Council last April. The IAEA is currently discussing with North Korea arrangements for the next routine inspections of its declared sites. Details of specific measures required to ensure compliance with safeguards are not released by the IAEA. However, a copy of North Korea's safeguards agreement with the IAEA —INFCIRC 403—to which such measures are pursuant, has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Bosnia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited Bosnia on 21 and 22 January to see at first hand the contribution British troops and civilian aid workers are making to the international aid effort. He was enormously impressed by their professionalism and dedication. His visit will inform our consideration, with fellow troop contributors and other allies, of the future of UNPROFOR.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the second preparatory committee meeting for the review and renewal conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty held in New York from 17 January; and if he will place in the Library copies of those documents circulated at the preparatory committee meeting making reference to the United Kingdom policy on the non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The second meeting of the preparatory committee for the 1995 non-proliferation treaty extension and review conference was largely concerned with organisational issues and the committee made good progress towards its task of preparing for the conference. The leader of the United Kingdom delegation also delivered a short statement in which he reaffirmed our commitment to our treaty obligations and our aim of securing the treaty's unconditional and indefinite extension in 1995. A copy of this statement has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Defence Sales

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was (a) the gross national product of, (b) the amount of United Kingdom Government aid to and (c) the aggregate value of United Kingdom defence sales to (i) Jordan, (ii) Pakistan and (iii) India in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The latest available gross national product and United Kingdom bilateral aid figures for Jordan, Pakistan and India are set out in the table. It is not Government policy to publish defence sales figures of the nature requested, which are commercially confidential between the suppliers and the customer Government. I refer the hon. Gentleman to table 1.11 of "UK Defence Statistics 1993" for defence sales information. A copy of this is available in the House of Commons Library.

Mercenaries

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he first became aware that the Azeri Government were hiring British mercenaries; and what steps he took.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I first became aware of the allegations published in The Independent on 24 January. We have as yet no evidence to support these allegations, but my officials are looking into them. It would be a serious matter if a British company were found to be breaking the conference on security and co-operation in Europe arms embargo against parties to the conflict in Nagorno-Karabakh.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 26 January to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Meriden for answer on 29 November, if he will make a statement on the reasons for the delay in supplying his answer.

Mr. Waldegrave: I apologise to my hon. Friend for the inordinate delay in answering his question, and for the inconvenience this caused to him. This delay was a result of the question having been overlooked when it was first tabled.

Duchy Benevolent Fund

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the membership of the board of the Duchy of Lancaster benevolent fund, their dates of appointment; and what criteria were used in selecting appointees.

Mr. Waldegrave: The trustees of the Duchy of Lancaster benevolent fund are:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster: The right hon. William Waldegrave, MP
The Duchy Attorney General: Mr. Timothy Lloyd, Q.C.
The Duchy Receiver General: Major Sir Shane Blewitt, KCVO
The Vice Chancellor of the County Palatine: The hon. Justice Morritt
Sir Michael Bunbury, Bt
Sir Simon Towneley, KCVO, JP
Professor Christopher Howes, CB
Mr. John Sclater
Clerk of the Council of the Duchy of Lancaster: Mr. Michael Ridley, CVO

All were appointed on 1 October 1993 when the benevolent fund was made a charitable trust. All trustees are members of the Duchy Council and are distinguished in various fields relating to Duchy matters. For example, Sir Simon Towneley is the Lord-Lieutenant of Lancashire.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the advisers within the County Palatine who advise the Duchy's benevolent fund on applications it receives for financial assistance.

Mr. Waldegrave: The principal advisers are the Lords-Lieutenant of Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside. The secretary of the fund also keeps in contact with organisations which advise on charitable giving, for example the charities advice and information service of the community council of Lancashire, and makes use of his own extensive contacts in the County Palatine to evaluate applications for assistance.

Civil Servants

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which of the provisions in sections 4.1, 4.1 annex A, 4.2 and 4.3 annex A of the civil service management categories of civil servant are exempt.

Mr. Waldegrave: These provisions apply to all civil servants. Exceptionally, special advisers are not covered by the rules on the acceptance of outside appointments —annex A to section 4.3—as the rules themselves make clear.

Public Appointments (Women)

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what targets have been set for an increased percentage of women in public appointments for all Departments as following the 1989 Cabinet Office review of the public appointments process; and what is the current progress towards them.

Mr. David Davis: Departmental plans and goals for the increased representation of women on public bodies were published on 16 November 1992. A summary of these is in the Library of the House. The percentage of public appointments held by women has risen from 23 per cent. in 1991 to 26 per cent. in 1992 and 28 per cent. in 1993. Further details are available in the 1993 edition of "Public Bodies", a copy of which is also available in the Library of the House.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. David Davis: The number of staff covered by statutory sick pay in the Cabinet Office and the Office of Public Service and Science is 1,340.

ENVIRONMENT

Agencies

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters addressed to Ministers in his Department in the last 12 months by (a) hon. Members and (b) others have been forwarded for reply to each agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Some 295 letters from hon. Members addressed to Ministers in my Department have been replied to directly, by the Planning Inspectorate agency, during 1993. No other agencies in my Department have replied to such letters. Information about letters from other correspondents is not available.

Urban Deprivation Index

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will produce the newly revised indicators of poverty to be used in the new urban deprivation index; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: We hope to finalise the indicators to be used in the census-based index of local conditions shortly.

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have no such plans.

Environmental Approach (Launch Meeting)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which hon. and right hon. Members who are not Ministers were invited to attend the meeting in the Banqueting House to launch the Government's environmental approach.

Mr. Atkins: Members of the House were not invited to attend the meeting in the Banqueting House, which was a press conference in the presence of people who had been associated with preparation of the documents, but all four reports are Command papers which were presented to Parliament in the usual way.

Water Supply (Lead Levels)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to identify the areas most at risk from lead levels in water supply; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A direction has been made requiring water supply companies annually to provide information on the risk that drinking water might breach the standard for lead. This information for 1989 and 1990 was published in the report "Nitrate, Pesticides and Lead" issued by the drinking water inspectorate in 1992. A report for 1991 and 1992 will be published in due course.

CCT Evaluation Reports

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department's compulsory competitive tendering evaluation reports will be published.

Mr. Baldry: In July 1993 my Department published two reports of research on the results of CCT carried out by the University of Birmingham Institute of Local Government Studies, following publication of preliminary research in 1991. This independent research showed that CCT had led to an average cost reduction of 6·5 per cent., and up to 20 per cent. for certain services; higher standards and more systematic monitoring of delivery; and better management and improved staff morale. Copies of the two reports were placed in the Library of the House. The Department is now carrying out further research to evaluate the private sector's experience of CCT, reports on which we expect to publish later this year.

Administration Expenditure

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of city challenge, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed;

(2) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of housing action trusts, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed;

(3) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of inner-city task forces, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed;

(4) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of estate action, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed;

(5) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the Urban Regeneration Agency, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed;

(6) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the urban programmes, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last 15 years and (b) since the scheme was developed;

(7) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the city action teams, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed;

(8) if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the urban development corporations, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Mr. Baldry: Detailed information on my Department's administration expenditure is not readily available in the form requested. But a breakdown of departmental staff effort by function is available in the DOE's annual published MINIS return.

Deregulation Task Forces

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his response to paragraphs 190 to 319 of the recommendations of the proposals for reform of the deregulation task forces, as they affect his Department's policy.

Mr. Gummer: The substantial deregulation action that my Department is taking to reduce unnecessary controls on business while safeguarding environmental and public safety is fully set out at pages 36 to 44 of the DTI publication "Deregulation—Cutting Red Tape" that was issued on 19 January together with the complete list of the task force's proposals for reform.

Fire and Civil Defence Services

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the expenditure and standard spending assessment for fire and civil defence purposes in each fire authority area as expenditure of standard spending assessment per 1,000 population served for (a) 1991-92, (b) 1992-93 and, so far as standard spending assessment is concerned, for 1993-94.

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is given in the table.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of funding made available over the last year by (a) estate action, (b) housing action trusts, (c) city challenge, (d) the urban programme, (e) the Urban Regeneration Agency, (f) urban development corporations, (g) inner-city task forces and (h) city action teams.

Mr. Baldry: The total amount of funding provided by my Department under each of these programmes for the financial year ending March 1994 is forecast to be:

	1993-94 Forecast Outturn £ million
(a) Estate Action	356·0
(b) Housing Action Trusts	86·8
(c) City Challenge	223·2
(d) Urban Programme	173·0

	1993-94 Forecast Outturn £ million
(e) Urban Regeneration Agency (URA)	[1]58·0
(f) Urban Development Corporations	380·8
(g) Inner City Task Forces	18·0
(h) City Action Teams	3·4

[1] Includes city grant provision up to 10 November 1993 when responsibility transferred to English Partnerships (the URA).

Stray Dogs

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the most recent estimate for the number of stray dogs recovered by local authorities for each year since 1991.

Mr. Atkins: The National Dog Wardens Association estimates that the number of dogs picked up by or taken to local authorities in Great Britain was 90,000 in 1991 and 140,000 in 1992. A figure for 1993 is not yet available. These figures do not reflect the total number of stray dogs as some may be returned directly to their owners or be taken to the police or to animal charities.

Correspondence

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to the letter of 22 December 1993 from the hon. Member for Leicester, East.

Mr. Baldry: I replied to the hon. Member on 27 January.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment as to the number of district authorities which would be granted a provisional increase in their standard spending assessments of more than 10 per cent. in 1994-95 was made in reaching his determination, expressed in his Budget statement, that the growth in spending in England in 1994-95 would be limited to 2·3 per cent.

Mr. Baldry: The figure for total standard spending for 1994-95 represents the Government's view of an appropriate level of net revenue expenditure by local authorities taking account of the pressures on local authorities and general economic conditions. The distribution of the total of standard spending assessments will be determined according to the formulae set out in the local government finance report laid before the House on 27 January. As a result of the extensive review of the method of calculating SSAs for 1994-95 some authorities will find their SSAs increasing between years while others will face a reduction.

Leeds Development Corporation

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by financial year, each contract worth more than £100,000 entered into by Leeds development corporation for the purchase or sale of land and buildings.

Mr. Baldry: All details of commercial contracts entered into between a vendor and a purchaser are commercial in confidence and releasing such information would require the agreement of both of the parties concerned. Development corporations are required to obtain independent valuations before entering into contracts for the sale or purchase of land or buildings to ensure that the proper market valuation is paid.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out for each financial year since its inception (a) the amount of money spent on acquiring land and buildings and (b) the amount of money received for the sale of land and buildings by Leeds development corporation.

Mr. Baldry: Expenditure and receipts in respect of the acquisition and sale of land and buildings by Leeds development corporation from inception until 31 March 1993 are as follows:

	Expenditure (£000)	Receipts (£000)
1988-89	935	0
1989-90	5,671	0
1990-91	7,542	7
1991-92	3,377	1,861
1992-93	6,393	4,041

Parish Councils

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to celebrate the centenary of the Local Government Act 1894 and to mark the social contribution made by parish councils to their communities.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend is considering what actions to take to celebrate the centenary of the Local Government Act 1894. We greatly value the contribution parish and town councils have made to their local communities.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Gummer: The number of staff in the Department and its agencies covered by statutory sick pay at 31 December 1993 was 7,421.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 674, what are the additional costs, net of any reduction in employer's national insurance contributions, to his departmental budget for the financial year 1994-95 of the changes in statutory sick pay provision.

Mr. Gummer: There should be no net costs to my departmental budget.

Sea Bathing

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the final report into the health effects of sea bathing will be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Water Research Centre is today publishing the final report of the four-year programme of research into the health effects of sea bathing. The research was jointly funded by my own Department, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Health, and the National Rivers Authority.

I welcome the report. The Government have funded this independent research because of concerns expressed about the possibility of contracting illnesses from swimming at our holiday beaches. It will provide reassurance for the many people who enjoy sea bathing.

The work has demonstrated for the first time that sea water itself has effects on sea bathers, causing an increase in reported symptoms such as eye irritations, sore ears and skin rashes. It has also confirmed the relationship which was already known between the level of particular micro-organisms in sea water and the reporting of gastro-intestinal symptoms and diarrhoea. However, the report concludes that the current mandatory EC standards give adequate health protection.

I and colleagues in the other Departments agree with this assessment and believe that any additional benefit to be gained by tightening EC standards is likely to be insignificant.

The Government are committed to securing improvements in our bathing waters. A £2 billion programme is in hand to bring virtually all United Kingdom bathing waters up to the mandatory standards of the EC bathing water directive by the end of 1995. Already 80 per cent. of our 458 bathing waters meet or exceed these standards. The forthcoming very large expenditures to implement the urban waste water treatment directive will improve further the quality of our coastal water.

Copies of the full report have been placed in the Library of the House.

Right-to-repair Scheme

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the final details of the new right-to-repair scheme for council tenants.

Sir George Young: I have today laid before the House the Secure Tenants of Local Housing Authorities (Right to Repair) Regulations 1994—SI 1994/133—which will introduce an improved right-to-repair scheme for council tenants from 1 April 1994. Copies of the regulations and an explanatory circular are being sent to all housing authorities in England.

This citizens charter initiative will give council tenants the right to have certain urgent repairs carried out at no cost to themselves, and will provide a simple and reliable way of getting the work done when the council fails to complete a qualifying repair within a specified period.

The improved right-to-repair scheme will be far more effective in ensuring that councils get repairs done quickly at no cost to the tenant. Where the scheme fails to work, tenants will be compensated for the inconvenience caused to them.

The regulations set out which small urgent repairs, costing up to £250, are included in the scheme, and how long councils will have to complete them. If a repair is not carried out within the specified period the tenant will be able to ask the council to instruct a second contractor to complete the repair, with the cost being met by the council.

If the second contractor fails to complete the repair within a second specified period the tenant will be entitled to compensation of £10, plus £2 per day for every day that the repair remains outstanding, up to a maximum payment of £50.

The repair times in the regulations will apply to all new contracts let after 1 April 1994. Transitional arrangements will apply for councils whose existing contract have longer repair times. However, all councils must comply with the repair times in the regulations by 1 April 1996.

Irish Sea Science

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made by the Irish sea science co-ordinator in reviewing Irish sea science since his appointment was announced on 11 March 1992.

Mr. Atkins: The co-ordinator prepared an inventory of "Research and Monitoring on the Irish Sea" with the assistance of organisations on both sides of the Irish sea. The inventory was submitted to the United Kingdom and Irish Governments as the "First Report of the Irish Sea Science Co-ordinator". I am placing copies in the Library of the House today. The co-ordinator is now undertaking a review based on the inventory to identify possible gaps and overlaps in current programmes. A further report will be made available to the House once the review has been completed.

Car Hire

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost of hiring private cars in 1992-93; and for what purposes they were hired.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 24 January 1994]: The total cost to the Department, including Property Holdings and the Property Services Agency, of vehicle hire in 1992-93 was some £1·16 million. This figure includes some expenditure on the Government car service.

The major use of private cars is for site inspections or visits by staff. Private vehicles are also used for regional visits.

Vehicles are also hired on an ad hoc basis for travelling to conferences or meetings, for collecting equipment from suppliers and for journeys connected with the maintenance and installation of security systems.

Landfill Pricing

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will take action on the report published in 1993 on "Landfill Pricing: Correcting Possible Market Distortions"; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has to introduce a tax on waste to landfill; and if he will make a statement;

Mr. Atkins: The Government are examining the idea of introducing a landfill levy. To inform our decisions, we published reports in 1993 on "Landfill Pricing: Correcting Possible Market Distortions" and "Externalities from Landfill and Incineration". We invited comments on both reports. The deadline for comments on the second report was 7 January 1994. We are now considering the reports and comments received on them and will announce our decisions in due course.

Waste Recycling

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what further initiatives he intends to introduce to increase the recycling of waste; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what recycling initiatives he has introduced to reduce waste to landfill.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Full details of the Government's recycling initiatives are given in the annual reports on the White Paper "This Common Inheritance"; copies are in the Library. Initiatives involving my Department in the past year include: the development of producer responsibility schemes under which industries contributing to major waste streams have been asked to develop plans for the recovery of significantly higher levels of their waste; the allocation of some £15 million in supplementary credit approvals to encourage the development of recycling initiatives by local authorities; and changing the basis of payment for recycling credits from 50 per cent. of the long-run marginal cost of disposal to 100 per cent. with effect from 1 April 1994. We keep our recycling policies under review and will introduce further initiatives where appropriate.

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the results of his industry waste recovery plan.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Under our producer responsibility initiative we are asking industry to take responsibility for ensuring that a significantly higher proportion of the wastes it produces is recovered for beneficial uses. In July 1993 we challenged the packaging industry to devise a plan to secure the recovery of between 50 per cent. and 75 per cent. of all packaging waste by the year 2000, compared with 34 per cent. currently being achieved; we also asked it to take immediate steps to safeguard the United Kingdom recycling infrastructure for waste paper and board and plastics. In November, the producer responsibility group presented an interim report which committed the industry to providing support for these sectors until its full plan is implemented. PRG submitted a draft of its full plan for official consideration before Christmas. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment expects to receive a final version of the plan shortly.

The producer responsibility concept embraces industries responsible for a wide range of waste streams. In addition to the packaging industry, the Government have asked the newspaper, tyre, battery, electronic equipment and motor vehicle industries to devise plans.

Tyne and Wear Development Corporation

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) jobs and (b) jobs for youth have been created by the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation;

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Up to the end of December 1993, Tyne and Wear development corporation created 12,230 gross jobs. The corporation does not keep information which would enable "jobs for youth" to be separately identified.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of inward investment has been attracted by the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 January 1994]: The total private sector investment attracted by the corporation into the urban development area, to the end of December 1993, is almost £600 million. Expenditure by companies moving into the UDA from elsewhere in the United Kingdom or overseas is estimated at £65 million.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Diplomatic Relations

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with which countries the United Kingdom has no diplomatic relations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The following are the states recognised by Her Majesty's Government with which the Government do not currently have diplomatic relations:

Bhutan
Iraq
Korea (North)
Libya

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries of the former USSR to which the United Kingdom has not appointed ambassadors.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom has appointed ambassadors to all the countries of the former Soviet Union, some resident and some non-resident. Our ambassador in Moscow is at present accredited to Armenia, Georgia, Moldova, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Turkmenistan as well as Russia. He will shortly be giving up his responsibilities for Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, to which our ambassadors in Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan respectively will be cross-accredited. We also have resident ambassadors in Azerbaijan, Belarus, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Ukraine.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress he has made in appointing a person, under section 10(3AA) of the Asylum and Immigration Appeal Act 1993, to monitor refusals of entry clearance where there is no right of appeal by virtue of section 10(3A) of the Act; and in what manner the person appointed will discharge his or her functions.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have appointed Elizabeth Anson to be the first independent monitor. Lady Anson has been appointed for a period of three years; she took up her duties with effect from 1 December and will make her first report before 30 November 1994, which I will lay before Parliament.

The monitor will look at a random sample of refusals of entry clearance where there is no statutory right of appeal as a result of the 1993 Act. She will consider whether the standards required by legislation or administrative practice, by which decisions are reached, are being applied correctly and fairly. During the early part of each year, she will visit a number of posts to assist her understanding of practice and procedure at overseas posts.

The review will be undertaken in London and will encompass all entry clearance posts. The sample will be drawn randomly and posts will not know in advance which cases have been chosen for review.

It is not intended that the review should become an alternative appeals system; nor will it be a procedure for applicants or sponsors to seek to have their decisions reviewed in individual cases. The monitor will have no powers to overturn decisions. It will be a further check on the standards which are being applied to decisions in entry clearance posts.

World Community

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussion he has had with his French, German and American counterparts to improve the cohesion and effectiveness of the world community.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend is in frequent contact with his French, German and American counterparts on issues which could contribute to this cohesion and effectiveness. One of the most important is the Uruguay round trade negotiations, the successful conclusions of which will make a major contribution to economic growth in developing and developed countries alike.

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the methods by which NATO intends to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction; and what is the definition of weapons of mass destruction agreed in this strategy.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The alliance's approach to proliferation of weapons of mass destruction does not seek to duplicate traditional preventive non-proliferation policies to which the United Kingdom Government remain committed. It will review what steps are necessary for the alliance to protect against and deter any threat to it from the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, which in this context, include chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what policy proposals the United Kingdom plans to put to the resumed negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty within the framework of the United Nations committee on disarmament, beginning in Geneva on 24 January; what is the composition of the United Kingdom delegation; and what is the timetable for the negotiations.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A detailed statement of our approach to the negotiations was made by Sir Michael Weston, the head of the United Kingdom delegation to the conference on disarmament, on 25 January. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House. Our aim will be to make good speed towards the conclusion of an effective treaty.

The conference on disarmament proceeds by consensus, and the timetable for negotiations will therefore depend on the speed with which agreement can be reached on the key elements of the treaty. But we continue to doubt that fixing a firm deadline for the achievement of a treaty will promote the chances of a successful outcome to the negotiations. Our delegation will be supported as necessary by officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence, and staff from the Atomic Weapons Establishment.

Mehdi Dibaj

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with the Iranian ambassador the decision of the Iranian Government to execute Mehdi Dibaj for converting to Christianity; and if he will strongly urge the Iranian Government to reverse this decision.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The European Union, with our full support, has raised the case of Rev. Mehdi Dibaj with the Iranian authorities in Tehran and Geneva. We have also made clear to the Iranian embassy in London our concern at the death sentence passed on him. We understand that Rev. Dibaj has been released on bail but that his case is still before the Iranian supreme court. The European Union will continue to follow his case closely.

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: None. On behalf of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the British Council regularly organises and supports exhibitions of British photography. It has 16 such exhibitions already scheduled for this year and another five under preparation. It has also bought a large number of photographs for the British Council collection.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Goodlad: The rooms of the Secretary of State in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office comprise his own office, his private offices and a waiting room. There are 45 paintings or prints and 21 photographs on the walls of these rooms.

Visitor's Passport

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which members of the European Union accept the British visitor's passport as a travel document for entry into their country.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: All members of the European Union currently accept the British visitor's passport for entry into their countries, except Ireland which forms part of a common travel area with the United Kingdom.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the kingdom of Spain about the future acceptance of the British visitor's passport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British embassy in Madrid expressed concern to the Spanish authorities at the time they announced their intention to withdraw recognition of the British visitor's passport. Further representations will shortly be made by Her Majesty's ambassador. I shall write to the right hon. Member when the outcome of these representations is known.

Malaysia

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the protocol signed with the Government of Malaysia in March 1988 which included references to aid and defence equipment sales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: It is established practice that confidential documents exchanged between Governments on such matters as defence sales should not be published. The Government will co-operate fully with the Select Committee on Foreign Affairs in the inquiry which it announced on 26 January.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government began discussions with the Government of Malaysia about the construction of a military base at Mersing in Malaysia; whether such discussions took place concurrently with talks about his Department's funding for the Pergau dam project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Discussions between the two Governments about a military base at Mersing first took place in July 1987.

The application from the British consortium for support from the aid and trade provision for the Pergau hydro-electric project was received in November 1988.

Discussions of the two issues were entirely independent of each other and have remained so.

Azerbaijan

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he has taken to ensure that military equipment or assistance is not supplied by British-registered companies to Azerbaijan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe's embargo on the supply of arms to the parties to the Nagorno-Karabakh dispute still applies. We adhere to this fully and have not approved licences for the export of any military equipment to Azerbaijan or Armenia. Nor will we do so.

Mr. Tipping: To as[illegible]he Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth [illegible]airs what policies exist over the supplying of arms a[illegible] military equipment to Azerbaijan and Armenia; when such policies were implemented; whether there have been changes in policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Since February 1992, a voluntary CSCE embargo has been in place on the supply of military equipment to the parties in the Nagorno-Karabakh. We have stood by the terms of this embargo and will continue to do so.

As I made clear in my answer to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 28 January, Official Report, column 468, it would be a serious matter if a British company were found to be breaking this embargo.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with (a) United Kingdom companies and (b) persons acting as their representatives or consultants about the possible supply of arms and mercenaries to Azerbaijan; if he will name each such company or persons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am not aware of any discussions with United Kingdom companies, their representatives or consultants about the possible supply of arms and mercenaries to Azerbaijan.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) of 17 January, Official Report, columns 354-55, if he will list for each Council of Europe convention and agreement mentioned the lead Department in the British Government.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 21 January 1994]: The table shows the lead Government Department for each of the conventions referred to in the question.

Nigeria

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what plans he has for an embargo on military supplies to Nigeria;

(2) what action he has taken to express Her Majesty's Government's view about the continued military dictatorship in Nigeria; and what international action he is urging.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I refer the hon. Member to the written reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State on 2 December, at column 680.

The measures aimed at the Nigerian military announced then, in concert with our partners in the European Union, remain in force. We continue to consult closely with our partners and are keeping these measures under review.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost of advertising by his Department has been for each year since 1979 and for each of the last 12 months.

Mr. Goodlad: The cost of advertising in the United Kingdom by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for recruitment in 1992-93, the last financial year for which information is available, was:

	FCO Diplomatic Wing £	FCO ODA Wing £
1992-93	150,787	238,033

The corresponding figures for 1979-80 and 1985-86 are:

	FCO Diplomatic Wing £	FCO ODA Wing £
1979-80	100,266	214,739
1985-86	160,535	271,084

Costs for each of the last 12 months are:

	FCO Diplomatic Wing £	FCO ODA Wing £
1992
December	521	0
1993
January	3,560	15,668
February	35,656	9,546
March	11,870	26,647
April	1,704	37,152
May	2,938	32,196
June	1,455	9,783
July	0	2,250
August	0	18,142
September	1,192	10,587
October	613	30,680
November	0	3,987

The compilation of these figures for intervening years and of the cost of advertising overseas would incur disproportionate cost.

Outer Space

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the progress in the discussions in the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, in relation to the benefit of all as set out in article 1 of the outer space treaty.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: This topic is debated by the committee and its legal sub-committee during their annual meetings.

The most recent development is the production of a working paper by a number of member states on the consideration of the legal aspects related to the application of one of the principles in article 1 of the 1967 outer space treaty:

> "The exploration and use of outer space . . . shall be carried out for the benefit and in the interests of all countries".

The Prime Minister: Our strategy includes regular consultation when considering new legislation or policy initiatives concerning children, between the originating Department and all other Departments with an interest. Several interdepartmental groups have been set up which meet regularly to discuss matters of mutual concern about children. I have no current plans to publish my response to the letter from National Children's Home Action for Children; that will be a matter for that organisation.

Lebanon

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Prime Minister when he will be able to report to the House on his recent conversations with the President of the Republic of Lebanon.

The Prime Minister [Pursuant to his answer, 25 January, c.159]: I would like to report on the recent visit by the Lebanese Prime Minister, Rafic Hariri, and on our discussions on 24 January.

Mr. Hariri visited Britain from 23-27 January. He was accompanied by a delegation which included his Minister for Defence, Minister of the Interior, Minister of State for Financial Affairs, Minister without Portfolio and the governor of the central bank.

Mr. Hariri and his team met a wide range of representatives of political, commercial and financial interests in the United Kingdom, to explore the role that the United Kingdom might play in Lebanon's programme of reconstruction.

This was a central theme in my discussions with Mr. Hariri. I am keen to see British companies playing an active role, in particular in the water, power and gas sectors. I informed him that we had decided to restore ECGD medium/long-term cover to a ceiling of £50 million. I also discussed with him the possibility of British companies helping to re-equip Lebanon's internal security forces and the Lebanese armed forces.

This was the first visit to Britain by a Lebanese Prime Minister for 20 years. It provided us with the opportunity to reaffirm the long-standing links between Britain and Lebanon. Lebanon is now back on its feet and ready to do business. British companies are in an excellent position to exploit the opportunities that exist there.

Prisoners (Christmas Leave)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria he uses when deciding which prisoners may be granted Christmas leave.

Sir John Wheeler: Under the terms of the 1993 Christmas home leave scheme applications were considered from the following prisoners, other than those in the top risk category:

(i) all prisoners who would have served at least 11 years of their sentence by 23 December 1993;

(ii) all indeterminate sentence prisoners whose cases were at consultation with the judiciary, or who had been given provisional release dates;

(iii) "star" class determinate sentence prisoners—that is those serving their first sentence or who are particularly well behaved—committed under sentence on or before 31 October 1993 and who were in the last year of their sentences at 31 December 1993;

(iv) "ordinary" class determinate sentence prisoners—that is, those on second or subsequent sentences—who were sentenced to 10 years or more and who were in the last year of their sentences at 31 December 1993;

(v) inmates in the young offenders centre in both "star" and "ordinary" class committed under sentence on or before 31 October 1993 and who were in the last year of their sentences at 31 December 1993.

A decision on each case was reached after consideration of the Governor's recommendation, the prisoner's/inmate's attitude and behaviour while in prison/YOC and relevant security issues.

Life Sentences

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors determine whether or not a prisoner's sentence is reviewed by the Life Sentence Review Board.

Sir John Wheeler: All life sentences are reviewed by the Life Sentence Review Board normally after 10 years in custody. Prisoners serving detention during the pleasure of the Secretary of State have their sentences reviewed at the eight-year stage. Thereafter cases are reviewed at intervals determined by the board.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners he expects to have their sentences reviewed by the Life Sentence Review Board in 1994.

Sir John Wheeler: Forty-five.

Kashmir

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to increase aid to Kashmir.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are no plans to increase aid for Kashmir.

Aid (Developing Countries)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how British aid can be used to help stimulate enterprise and trade in the developing countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: British aid is used to promote policies and an institutional and infrastructural environment in aid recipients conducive to the development of enterprise and trade. This may be done through assistance in support of economic reforms and through projects to promote the rehabilitation, development and effective management of transport and communications infrastructure and of public utilities. We also provide aid to prepare for and facilitate the privatisation of public enterprises and to develop the financial sector and financial markets.

British aid also helps enterprises in aid recipients more directly through know-how and technology transfer to help overcome their production and commercial problems and thus to become more competitive in external markets. The aid programme pays particular attention through research and technical assistance to solving production problems arising in the renewable natural resource sectors. It also has a growing number of projects to encourage the development of small enterprises.

The aid programme supports the Commonwealth Development Corporation, which provides equity investment and loan finance predominantly to private sector enterprises in developing countries. Many of its projects produce commodities for export.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations he has made into acquiring a shuttle vessel for St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Extensive international investigations into the possibilities of acquiring or chartering a suitable shuttle vessel for operation between St. Helena and Ascension island have been made since late 1989. Over 30 ships have been considered, but so far all have been found unsuitable on grounds of cost, technical unsuitability or economic non-viability. A further ship is being investigated currently.

Textile and Clothing Industries

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all bilateral and multilateral assistance given by the Overseas Development Administration to help the development of textile and clothing industries and the amounts given in the period since 1988.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 24 January 1994]: Bilateral aid for the development of textiles and clothing—and investment by the Commonwealth Development Corporation—is shown in a table which I have arranged to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. There is no centrally compiled source of data on aid for textiles and clothing provided by various multilateral agencies. Information on these agencies' support—and thus on ODA's share of this—could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Multi-fibre Arrangement Quotas

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all countries in receipt of United Kingdom aid against whom the European Union multi-fibre arrangement quotas operate and the extent of United Kingdom aid to each of those countries in the period since 1988.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 24 January 1994]: The countries which have European Union multi-fibre arrangement quotas and which also receive United Kingdom aid are shown in a table which I have arranged to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. This table also shows their receipts of bilateral aid from the ODA over the last six years.

TRANSPORT

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make arrangements for the Data Protection Registrar to inspect relevant contracts with suppliers of IT services that involve the use of personal data held by his Department in order to check whether all appropriate arrangements in relation to the Data Protetion Act 1984 have been made, and whether such contracts make provisions for the registrar to make random inspections in order to check the suppliers' compliance in with the eighth data protection principle.

Mr. Norris: The Data Protection Registrar has a wide range of powers, under the Data Protection Act 1984, to ensure that all individuals and organisations holding personal data on computer systems are registered and observe the data protection principles as required by the Act. When IT services are contracted out by the data user, the contractor and the user will be subject to the application of the data protection principles, and to the registrars powers to promote compliance with them, as provided for in the Act. It is for the registrar to decide how he will use his powers under the Act, and I do not consider that any further arrangements are necessary for him to discharge his duties effectively.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which his Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

A1 and A1(M)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current position in respect of the A1 and A1(M) trunk road improvements.

Mr. Key: We are conducting a review of the trunk road programme in preparation for the launch in April of the Highways Agency. I shall write to the hon. Member when the outcome of that review is known.

Cycle Lanes

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated cost of a mile of cycle lane on the average road; and what the cost would be of instituting cycle lanes on all trunk roads in England.

Mr. Key: The cost of constructing a two-way 3 m wide cycle lane on one side of the road is in the order of £400,000 per mile. This cost will vary considerably depending on local conditions and excludes the cost of land acquisition.

There are approximately 10,000 miles of trunk roads including motorways. Because of varying local conditions it is not possible to provide an accurate estimate of the cost of installing cycle lanes on all these roads.

Diesel Fuel (Buses)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with representatives of bus operators the change in the amount of rebate received in respect of duty on diesel fuel following the Budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Following preliminary discussions with my officials, the Bus and Coach Council is preparing a paper on the effects of the recent changes in the payment of fuel duty rebate which I shall be happy to discuss with it in due course.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish details of the duty payable on diesel fuel used by local bus operators before and after the recent Budget, together with the corresponding proportions of duty as a percentage of overall cost of diesel fuel.

Mr. Freeman: The duty payable on diesel fuel before and after the recent Budget was 25·14p per litre and 27·70p per litre respectively. Duty as a percentage of typical retail pump prices was 50 per cent. before the Budget and about 53 per cent. afterwards. Before the Budget all duty paid by local bus operators was rebated. After the Budget, operators will continue to receive rebate at pre-Budget levels, which will mean that 2·56p per litre in duty will not be recoverable.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to ensure that local bus operators continue to receive rebate in full in respect of duties on diesel fuel.

Mr. Freeman: The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 30 November that fuel duty rebate would be held at pre-Budget levels during the lifetime of this Parliament.

Birmingham Airport

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current position of negotiations with the United States Government regarding additional flights into Birmingham airport.

Mr. Norris: Liberalisation of routes from the United States to United Kingdom regional airports has been a consistent priority. In December the United Kingdom tabled a proposal which would give immediate open access to regional routes, including to Birmingham. We hope that the United States Government will consider our proposal seriously.

Driving Standards Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assistance has been provided to the Driving Standards Agency in-house bid team which is involved in the market test of the booking of driving tests and the proposing of test fees; and what has been the cost of such assistance.

Mr. Key: The in-house bid team has been offered assistance to develop its bid. To date, the in-house bid manager has been provided with training on bid formulation and with travel and subsistence costs to visit staff involved. The agency is now in the process of agreeing with the in-house bidders what further help they need, including from external management consultants, in line with the principles set out in "The Government's Guide to Market Testing". Costs are therefore not yet available.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) of 15 December, Official Report, column 713, how many vehicle excise duty offences reports have been generated for the current financial year; and how many VED offences reports were received by the DVLA in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Key: The number of vehicles reported to DVLA for alleged VED offences in 1992-93 was 1·8 million. For this financial year to December the figure was 1·4 million.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff were employed on enforcement duties; and what amount was raised in enforcement revenue by the DVLA local office network in each year from 1979-80.

Mr. Key: The information requested, from 1981-82, is as follows:

Year	Number of staff in local office network (man years)	Revenue raised £ million
1981-82	800	6·5
1982-83	833	11·8
1983-84	843	15·6
1984-85	908	18·2
1985-86	908	21·0
1986-87	945	23·1
1987-88	952	23·6
1988-89	943	25·6
1989-90	947	25·9
1990-91	922	27·5
1991-92	909	34·3
1992-93	936	37·5
[1]1993-94	948	34·3

[1] Figures to end December 1993.

Driving Test Fees

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will happen to those staff in the Driving Standards Agency not affected by the market test of the booking of driving tests and the proposing of test fees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The aim of the market test is to improve value for money. The precise effects on staff not directly involved will not be known until bids have been evaluated, but the agency will aim to minimise the disruption to staff.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost in the financial year 1992-93 of the booking of driving tests and the receiving and processing of the driving test fees.

Mr. Key: The agency's 1993-94 business plan, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, gives details of the total estimated costs of the agency's regional offices, which include the functions to be market tested.

Goods Vehicle Licensing

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the Police Federation was consulted on the proposals to change the rules relating to passenger and goods vehicle operating licensing.

Mr. Norris: The Department did not send a copy of its consultation document to the Police Federation. Following normal practice, consultation with the police was through the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Minibus Permits

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what maintenance checks, other than the regular Ministry of Transport test, are carried out by his Department before a minibus permit is issued to an organisation.

Mr. Key: Before a minibus permit is issued by the Traffic Commissioner, the person authorised by the body applying for the permit must sign a declaration on behalf of its members that > "the body will make proper arrangements so that any vehicle used under the permit will comply with the appropriate construction requirements and conditions of fitness, will be kept fit and serviceable and that regular maintenance inspections will be carried out".

In addition, the person must provide the name and address of the person(s) or garage who will maintain and service the vehicle and attach a written maintenance contract or letter of agreement from the person or garage doing the work and indicate how often safety checks will be made on the vehicle.

The issuing of permits by designated bodies and local authorities is their own responsibility.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what checks are carried out by his Department on the conduct and repute of applicants for minibus permits before such permits are issued.

Mr. Key: Minibus permits are not issued by the Department. They may be issued from three sources: bodies designated by the Secretary of State by statutory instrument, which are national voluntary bodies and may issue permits only to their own branches and affiliated organisations; local authorities which may issue permits to their own departments or schools under their control; and the Traffic Commissioners who may issue them to other eligible local bodies concerned with education, religion, recreation or social welfare.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many minibus permits issued by the traffic area office network were revoked for poor maintenance during the last three years.

Mr. Key: None.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many minibus permits were issued by traffic area offices in 1993.

Mr. Key: A total of 1,407.

Public Carriage Office

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has initiated and concluded, and what proposals he has made, concerning the transfer of the functions and staff of the public carriage office of the Metropolitan police to his Department; and if he will list those bodies and individuals from whom he has received support for this proposal.

Mr. Norris: This proposal is one of the matters covered by the consultation paper on the future of taxi and private hire services issued by my Department. About 4,500 copies were sent to organisations and individuals who have an interest in the subject. These include local authority associations and all individual county and district councils, local and national taxi and private hire vehicle organisations, the licensing officers organisation, the police, organisations concerned with people who have mobility problems and vulnerable members of society, consumer groups, transport interests, the press, car, taxi and taxi-meter manufacturers and those concerned with tourists. Copies were available in the Lobby of this House and in another place. The paper was also published in a trade newspaper. The consultation period last until 1 March 1994.

It is not our practice to identify those organisations or individuals who responded to consultation exercises.

M25

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review his decision on the widening of the M25; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The national road programme is under review as part of our preparations for the setting up of the Highways Agency. Subject to anything that emerges from that exercise I have no reason to reconsider the policy for the M25 announced by my right hon. Friend last July.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 601, how many official Christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by Ministers in his Department; and how much these cards cost to buy.

Mr. Norris: Some 650 official Christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by Ministers of the Department of Transport, at a cost of £645. All were cards for which a proportion of the cost went to charity.

Signal Failures

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, columns 807-808, if he will tabulate the total number of reported signal failures on (a) the British Railways Board and (b) London Underground Ltd., together with the number of wrong side failures on (i) normal passenger lines and other lines, (ii) yards and (iii) sidings for each year since 1990.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not available in this format. However, the Health and Safety Executive's HM railway inspectorate is informed by the railway operator of all wrong side failures annually. A breakdown of these figures is available in the "Annual Report on Railway Safety in Great Britain", copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

High-speed Rail Link

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 29, concerning the financing of an international station at Stratford on the channel tunnel rail link, what is (a) the estimated cost of the rail route as presently planned from the River Lea to Maryland station and (b) the estimated cost of providing additional station facilities of at least four platform faces capable of dealing with intended tracks.

Mr. Freeman: The cost of the London section of the route is estimated to be £670 million—fourth quarter 1992 prices—that is, £645 million for the base route plus £25 million for a package of options including a short box at Stratford. Union Railways estimates that the additional capital cost, including station works, access roads, parking, land and property and management costs, of providing a combined international and domestic station at Stratford is £105 million, while an international only station would cost £93 million. Further information is available in Union Railways' October 1993 report, published on 24 January 1994.

Rail Freight and Coastal Shipping

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out his plans and targets for increasing the amount of (a) rail freight and (b) coastal shipping over the next five years.

Mr. Freeman: The choice of transport mode for moving freight is primarily a commercial matter. However, we encourage freight users to consider the merits of rail and water as an alternative to road where this is practical. As part of that commitment, we have announced measures, to be introduced shortly, which will assist rail—Hansard, 2 February 1993, columns 164-65—and shipping—Hansard, 15 December 1993, columns 698-99—and we will monitor their progress closely.

Trainload Freight

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will make available information to prospective purchasers prospectus details regarding the three successor trainload freight companies.

Mr. Freeman: The three successor trainload freight businesses will be vested as individual subsidiary companies of the British Railways Board in September 1994. The board will issue information to prospective purchasers of the new companies after a subsequent period of "shadow running". Further background information is available in the Department of Transport publication "Rail freight privatisation—the Government's proposals", published in May 1993.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what grounds he decided not to accept the proposal for a tunnel through the Boxley valley on the channel tunnel rail link route; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Government considered very carefully the representations received and an updated comparative assessment by Union Railways' environmental consultants. The long tunnel option through the Boxley valley has significant environmental advantages, but the Government decided that these did not justify spending an additional £65 million, plus a further cost risk of £50 million.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements he has made to implement the purchasing policy for properties within the safeguarded corridor of the channel tunnel rail link; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Secretary of State for Transport will issue directions to safeguard the route of the rail link in around three weeks' time. This will trigger Union Railways' voluntary purchase scheme for homes within the safeguarded zone. The scheme will be backed by statutory blight compensation provisions.

Spofforth Bypass

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated cost of the construction of the bypass in the village of Spofforth in north Yorkshire.

Mr. Key: North Yorkshire county council estimates the cost of its Spofforth bypass proposal at £3·22 million.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to enforce the installation of the traffic alerts and collision avoidance systems in all British-based commercial airliners and all similar aircraft using United Kingdom airspace; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The traffic alert and collision avoidance system is a complex safety device, which is currently being evaluated for use in United Kingdom airspace by National Air Traffic Services, part of the Civil Aviation Authority, which is responsible for air traffic safety. This evaluation is being undertaken as part of a Europe-wide evaluation programme, which is ultimately under the aegis of the International Civil Aviation Organisation.

As this is primarily an air traffic management issue, I have passed the hon. Member's question to the chairman of the CAA and asked him to send a comprehensive response to the hon. Member.

Severn Tunnel (Accident)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Seymour inquiry report on the Severn tunnel accident was concluded; what is the reason for the delay in publishing the Seymour inquiry report on the Severn tunnel accident; and when the inspector who conducted the Seymour inquiry retired.

Mr. Freeman: I understand from the Health and Safety Executive's HM railway inspector that the inquiry into the Severn tunnel accident is now concluded and the report should be published by March.

Mr. Seymour held two separate public hearings. This was due to the amount of evidence given and the need to hear winesses that were not available for the first session. He was not able to complete his investigations because of the reluctance of a key witness to give evidence.

Mr. Seymour retired in February 1993. However, he agreed to complete his inquiry on a consultancy basis.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Norris: The total number of staff on the Department's payroll is at present 15,270; of that number, 14,370 are covered by SSP.

West Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest position in discussions between the West Yorkshire PTE, his Department and the franchising director over the PTE leasing new rolling stock for the west Yorkshire electrification project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: It is for the West Yorkshire passenger transport authority to reach a decision on the leasing of new rolling stock for this project. My Department is assisting. For example, we are participating in discussions with the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising about the role which the franchising director might be able to play in giving assurances about the future use of the rolling stock.

Rail Franchises

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to clarify the procedures to be followed by management-employee buy-outs for rail franchises.

Mr. Freeman: The British Railways Board has already provided guidance to its staff on how they might develop management/employee buy-outs, and will be issuing supplementary guidance very soon.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing, separately for men and women and as an overall total, the number of incidents of (a) violent crime and (b) sexual assault on London Underground for 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Norris: The figures for violent crimes and sexual offences on London Underground, for the years 1992 and 1993, are set out in the table. Figures for violent crimes are not normally differentiated by gender; instead they are broken down into the two categories of robbery and assault. These are shown separately in the table.

	Violent crimes		Sexual offences		Overall total
Year	Robbery	Assault	Male	Female
1992	479	607	11	251	1,348
1993	376	464	5	187	1,032

Source: British Transport police figures supplied to London Underground.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing, by standard region, separately for men and women and as an overall total, the number of incidents of (a) violent crime and (b) sexual assault at major bus and coach stations for 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Transport Safety

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of all organisations to which his Department sent, and from which it has received responses regarding the consultation paper on proposed railway drink and drugs legislation, together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 18 January 1994]: My Department initially issued copies of the consultation paper to 212 associations or individual organisations representing the aviation industry and users, environmental and related non-aviation bodies, local authorities, airports, aiport consultative committees; and individuals. At least 1,000 further copies were distributed on request. We received 188 responses from organisations and 387 from individuals.

Night Flights

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a full list of the names and addresses of all organisations to which his Department sent, and from which it has received, responses regarding the consultation paper on revised restrictions on night flights at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports, together with the addresses of each such organisation.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 18 January 1994]: My Department initially issued copies of the consultation paper to a total of 284 local environmental and other groups, local authorities and local authority organisations, airports and other aviation bodies, airport consultative committees, airlines, airline organisations, airport users and other aviation interests and to about 1,500 individuals. Further copies were distributed on request. We have so far received 96 responses from organisations and 149 from individuals.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all (i) political consultants, (ii) public relations companies, (iii) management consultants, (iv) survey organisations and (v) other outside bodies or individuals currently employed by his Department together with the date on which the contract was awarded, the length of the contract and the total amount spent by his Department on each contract; whether the contract was based on a fixed-fee or fee-plus man-hours basis; what was the name of the individual or organisation to which the contract was awarded; what are the services which were required by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I am placing the information in the Library.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a list of all contracts for which invitations to bid are planned to be issued by his Department from (i) political consultants, (ii) public relations companies, (iii) management consultants, (iv) survey organisations and (v) other outside bodies or individuals together with the date on which it is planned to issue invitations to bid, the length of the contract and the total amount allocated by his Department for each contract; whether the contract is based on a fixed-fee or fee-plus man-hours basis; what are the services which are required by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 20 January 1994]: The information is as follows:

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a list for each of the past five years and as a total over the same of all (i) political consultants, (ii) public relations companies, (iii) management consultants, (iv) survey organisations and (v) other outside bodies or individuals employed by his Department together with the date on which the contract was awarded, the length of the contract and the total amount spent by his Department on each contract; whether the contract was based on a fixed-fee or fee-plus man-hours basis; what was the name of the individual or organisation to which the contract was awarded; what are the services which were required by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I am placing the information in the Library.

Railway Lines

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the incident involving a contractor's vehicle which took place on 17 January, on railway lines in the area of Burton-on-Trent and Clay Mills.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 28 January 1994]: I understand from the Health and Safety Executive's Her Majesty's railway inspectorate that it has received a report of an incident involving a contractor's road-rail vehicle at Elford which occurred on 16 January 1994. British Rail is investigating the incident and the inspectorate is holding discussions with BR to seek means of preventing a recurrence.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to the adequacy of levels of training given to the employees of private contractors before they are allowed to operate vehicles on public railway lines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Primary responsibility rests with the railway operator. However, the Health and Safety Executive's Her Majesty's railway inspectorate monitors safety on the railways, and as part of its routine inspections programme undertakes random checks on contractors.

Deregulation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the environmental organisations consulted on the proposals to deregulate goods and passenger operator licensing.

Mr. Norris: The following environmental organisations were consulted during our consultation last year:

Council for the Protection of Rural England
The Environment Council
Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution
Rural Development Commission

Cones Hotline

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of staff employed on the cones hotline.

Mr. Key: No staff are engaged exclusively on the cones hotline. Two additional staff have been temporarily employed since December to assist the hotline but are not working solely on that activity. All follow-up work related to hotline inquiries has been undertaken within existing resources.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is (a) the current cost of operating the cones hotline and (b) how many calls have been made to it since its inception.

Mr. Key: The cost of operating the cones hotline has been met within existing budgets. Two additional staff have been temporarily employed since December to assist the hotline but are not working solely on that activity.

Since its introduction in June 1992 until 25 January 1994, 478 calls registered as formal inquiries have been received by the cones hotline. Until recently other calls received by the hotline have not been recorded, but they are currently running at two to three times the number of formal inquiries about specific schemes.

Dunstable Bypass

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now announce the date for the beginning of the public inquiry into the A5 north-south Dunstable bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The need for a public inquiry will depend on the weight and nature of objections to draft orders for the scheme which, subject to the present review of the trunk road programme, we hope to publish this autumn. An inquiry would not be held before 1995.

Road Deaths and Serious Injuries

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last published and next intends to publish a detailed report on the achievements towards the target of reducing the road deaths and serious injuries by a third by the year 2000; and whether he will reconsider the setting of the same targets for slight injuries.

Mr. Key: The road safety report 1990-91 was published in November 1991 and we intend to issue a new report towards the end of this year. The casualty statistics for the third quarter of 1993, published on 13 January, included a table showing the progress made towards achieving the road safety target. The basis for the target is widely understood and I would therefore be reluctant to change it.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing, by standard region, separately for men and women and as an overall total, the number of incidents of (a) violent crime and (b) sexual assault at British Rail stations for 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the following tables show, by BR business sectors, the recorded incidents of violent crime and sexual assault at British Rail stations for 1992 and 1993. A breakdown of figures, by gender, for violent crime could be provided only at disproportionate cost. For the purposes of the table, violent crime includes murder, manslaughter, grievous bodily harm, malicious wounding, firearms and explosives offences and robberies.

Violent crime	1992	1993
InterCity	276	341
Regional	611	496
Network SouthEast	1,311	1,447
Other Sectors	41	161
Total	2,239	2,466

All sexual assaults (against males in brackets)	1992		1993
Intercity	57	(7)	37	(2)
Regional	63	(3)	63	(7)
Network SouthEast	151	(13)	161	(11)
Other Sectors	3	—	11	(1)
Total	274	(23)	272	(21)

The increase in violent crime in Network SouthEast is mainly attributable to robberies in south London, which is not unique to the railways. The British Transport police, working closely with the Metropolitan police, have targeted the problem, a policy which is starting to have an impact.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Palaces

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what accommodation at the occupied royal palaces is designated for Prince Charles and Prince Edward; and what staff and ancillary accommodation each has.

Mr. Sproat: The information is as follows:

The Prince of Wales
- (a) His Royal Highness' apartment in St. James's palace which comprises three reception rooms, one principal bedroom and two staff bedrooms, together with ancillary accommodation.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 651, regarding accommodation for members of the royal family in occupied royal palaces, how much staff and ancillary accommodation is provided in each case.

Mr. Sproat: The staff and ancillary accommodation, on which rent is paid, or which is taken into account in salary and wage levels, is as follows:

HRH Princess Margaret
- 8 bedrooms
- 4 bathrooms
- 2 reception rooms
- 2 kitchens
- 2 utility rooms

Grace and Favour Accommodation

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many grace and favour apartments there are in Buckingham palace; and to whom they are allocated.

Mr. Sproat: There are no grace and favour apartments at Buckingham Palace. There are two service apartments. One is allocated to the chief housekeeper and one to the person who is responsible for the pages, footmen, craftsmen and porters located at Buckingham palace. The Princess Royal, the Duke of York and Prince Edward use rooms at Buckingham palace, but do not have self-contained apartments.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 652, what offices were held at the time of their retirement by the military knights, pensioners, who occupy grace and favour accommodation at the occupied royal palaces.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Of the 13 military knights, one was a major general—GOC midlands district—three were brigadiers—two from the Royal Signals (2) and one from the Royal Artillery—three were lieutenant colonels—17th/21st Lancers, King's Own Scottish Borderers and Queen's Lancashire Regiment—and six were majors—Life Guards, Royal Army Service Corps, Manchester Regiment, Royal Signals, Scots Guards and Coldstream Guards.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 652, what positions were held prior to retirement by the remaining four pensioners granted accommodation in the past on a grace and favour basis who were neither employees nor widows of employees of the royal household.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 26 January 1994]: One pensioner is a former nanny to the Queen's children, the second is the retired principal of St. Catherine's house, the third is a cousin of the Queen and the fourth is an unmarried daughter of a former Chief of the General Staff whose widow was originally provided with grace and favour accommodation.

Deregulation

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if he will give the likely date of conclusion for his review of regulations relevant to tourism, as referred to in the Department of Trade and Industry's deregulation document as published with the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill; if he will also provide a cost-benefit estimate of the review, with a separate section for each item of legislation he has examined; and what consultations he or officials have held in the course of the review;

(2) if he will give the intended start date, finish date and cost-benefit estimate of his Department's review of the Tourism (Sleeping Accommodation Price) Order 1977 as outlined in the Department of Trade and Industry document on deregulation, published with the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill;

(3) if he will give the intended start date, finish date and a cost-benefit estimate for his Department's review of the Hotel Proprietors Act 1956, as outlined in the Department of Trade and Industry document on deregulation published with the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Sproat: My Department's inquiry into regulations affecting tourism is designed to complement the Government's wider deregulation initiative by examining in detail the burdens on tourism-related businesses. This separate examination is warranted because of the highly important contribution which the tourism and hospitality industry makes to the economy and to employment, and will continue as long as regulatory burdens remain a matter of concern to the industry. I announced the preliminary findings of my inquiry to the House on 27 July, 1993, Official Report, columns 768-71, and a progress report will be issued in due course. The review has been conducted, at no additional cost, as part of the normal day-to-day work of my Department. During the course of the inquiry I have spoken to many individuals and organisations, both local and national, within the industry. I have received written representations from a great many more. My Department does not have primary responsibility for the regulations indentified during the inquiry, with the exception of the Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 and the Tourism (Sleeping Accommodation Price Display) Order 1977. These are currently being examined by officials. We intend to begin a public consultation exercise shortly and to complete it as quickly as possible.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will give a likely start date, finish date and his cost-benefit estimate for his Department's review into the scope for consolidating or simplifying the legislation on sports ground safety as outlined in the Department of Trade and Industry document on deregulation published with the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Sproat: An informal consultation exercise in line with deregulation guidance will commence as soon as is practicable. I hope to consider the responses during the summer.

Cultural Services (VAT)

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consideration he has given to EC directives on VAT giving exemptions to certain cultural services and goods.

Mr. Sproat: Discussions are continuing between my officials and those of Customs and Excise about the scope of such an exemption.

Public Libraries (Review)

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is (a) the full cost of the review of public libraries and (b) the cost of the consultant to the review.

Mr. Sproat: The review of public libraries is expected to cost in the region of £100,000, exclusive of the DNH's own staffing costs. The bulk of this expenditure is likely to be accounted for by the cost of the consultants.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which consultant has been appointed to advise the review of public libraries.

Mr. Sproat: We expect to appoint a consultant very shortly.

Battersea Power Station

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will take urgent action to secure the future of Battersea power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I understand that the building remains structurally sound. It was inspected by officers of English Heritage on 21 January.

I am aware from press reports that there is a dispute about girders inserted in the building which may result in legal action. Listed building consent would of course be required for any demolition or alteration of the building falling within section 7 of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on which occasions since it was established his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Sproat: Since April 1992, my Department and its two agencies have let contracts to external consultants valued at approximately £6 million. Consultants have been used for advice, information and as a management resource in the following areas: to assist in the setting up of the Department, including advice on financial and personnel management, and project management for the new headquarters; to review the Arts Council and to examine local authority management of arts facilities; to undertake preparatory work for the national lottery; to study the activities of library authorities; to review the British library St. Pancras project; to advise on the BBC and the television licence fee; to undertake reviews relating to the British film industry; to review the effectiveness of press self-regulation; to report on sports sponsorship activities; to look at the economic effects of listing buildings of historic interest; to advise on royal estate management responsibilities; to inquire into fire safety at royal palaces; to provide statistical data on tourism; various tasks on behalf of the Historic Royal Palaces agency; and various tasks on behalf of the Royal Parks agency.

National Lottery

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the names and addresses of the consortia which have so far bid to run the national lottery.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 26 January 1994]: The names and addresses of those organisations which have publicly announced their intention to apply for the main licence to run the national lottery are as follows:

EDUCATION

Nursery Education

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many three and four-year-olds attended maintained nursery schools or nursery classes in maintained primary schools in each local education authority in January 1993.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 21 January 1994, Official Report, columns 857-59.

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: I have no such plans.

Surplus School Places

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the numbers and percentages of surplus places in each local education authority; if he will list in rank order the local authorities according to the proportion of surplus places in (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) special schools; and what estimate he has made of the percentage of surplus school places in grant-maintained schools in each of the local education authorities.

Mr. Forth: The tables show the number and percentage of surplus places in each local education authority in England, in primary and secondary schools respectively, as at January 1991, the latest date for which comprehensive information is available. No information is available centrally on surplus places in special schools.

The information set out in the tables was provided by LEAs in response to a survey by the Department and includes all primary and secondary schools which were LEA maintained at the survey date. Numbers of grant-maintained schools have increased significantly since that date and no estimate has been made of the current level of surplus school places in grant-maintained schools in each LEA. We intend, however, to make regulations under section 21 of the Education Act 1993 which will require both LEAs and the new Funding Agency for Schools to submit annual information on the numbers of surplus places in LEA-maintained and grant-maintained schools respectively, beginning this year. LEAs and the FAS will shortly be consulted about this requirement.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Patten: There are six drawings by Augustus John, Royal Academy; one oil painting, "Tobias and the Angel" —late 18th century north Italian school—and one engraving of Beata Beatrice by D. G. Rossetti. I look forward to showing these to the hon. Member at an early opportunity; he is welcome to bring his camera.

Lecturers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what changes have taken place in the past three years in the totals and proportion of (a) part-time and (b) full-time lecturers currently employed in further and higher education; and what are the financial consequences;

(2) what is his latest calculation on the proportion of (a) part-time and (b) full-time lecturers currently employed in further and higher education in England.

Mr. Boswell: The information is not available in the form requested, but table A gives details of full and part-time lecturer numbers in England. Table B gives details of expenditure on lecturers' salaries since 1990-91.

It is for individual institutions to determine their staffing levels and to meet the consequent costs within the total funding available to them from all sources.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Boswell: A total of 2,127 at 1 January 1994.

Lowestoft Middle School

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects to announce a decision on the Suffolk county council application to build a new middle school at Lowestoft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: Suffolk's proposals are currently under consideration. My right hon. Friend will announce a decision on them as soon as possible.

Muslim Girls School, Bradford

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he received an application from the Muslim Girls community school in Bradford for voluntary-aided status; what further information he requires about the application before reaching a decision; when he expects to announce a decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: We have received no such application. Because of the Secretary of State's role in these matters, it is not appropriate to comment on any proposals which may come before him for decision.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Staff

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will publish details of the number of people working full and part time at the House of Commons.

Mr. Beith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 18 January 1994, Official Report, column 520.

Committee of Selection

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chairman of the Committee of Selection what criteria the Committee of Selection uses to fulfil the requirement of paragraph 2 of Standing Order No. 86 (Nomination of Standing Committees) to have regard to the qualifications of hon. Members nominated to serve on Standing Committees.

Sir Fergus Montomery: In nominating hon. Members to serve on Standing Committees, the Committee of Selection is required to have regard not only to the qualifications of hon. Members, but also to the composition of the House. For Bills certified by the Speaker as relating exclusively to Scotland, the Committee is required to nominate not fewer than 16 Members representing Scottish constituencies. Hon. Members interested in serving on particular Standing Committees may submit their names to the Committee for its consideration.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will (a) list the number of statutory instruments passed and (b) what percentage of these were subjet to the affirmative procedure for each year since 1977-78.

Mr. Newton: This information is available under the delegated legislation section of the Sessional Returns.

WALES

Council House Sales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will free from restrictions the cash held by local authorities from council house sales receipts for a phased programme of construction of homes to rent and for a phased programme of modernisation and refurbishment; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will permit an increase in the percentage of council house sales receipts being made available for use by local authorities.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No changes are planned. The rules already allow all capital receipts from council house sales to be used for new capital spending where there is no outstanding loan debt. Changing the requirements of section 59 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 would increase public borrowing.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mink Farms

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 181, what was the result of the application for a licence in respect of a mink farm at Llanybydder, Dyfed, established in February 1988; when that farm was in operation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The application for a licence was withdrawn.

Welsh Language

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what level of funding will be available for the training of teachers to enable them to teach Welsh as a second language; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: £176,000 has been made available for 1993-94 by the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales to help colleges meet the criteria for primary initial teacher training courses. These require that students must have the opportunity to learn Welsh. The council has yet to decide on the level of funds for 1994-95.

Student teachers on one or two-year initial teacher training courses in Welsh receive a bursary of £1,000 under the Department for Education trainee teacher bursary scheme. This financial incentive is aimed at maintaining teacher supply in the shortage areas, including Welsh.

The sum of £3 million has been made available in 1993-94 through the grants for education support and training programme for the in-service training and support of teachers of Welsh as a first and second language. Local education authorities have been directed to target the majority of these funds towards the training of teachers responsible for teaching Welsh as a second language. I am currently considering authority bids for 1994-95 and expect to make an announcement on the level of funding shortly.

In deciding on the future level of funds to be made available account will continue to be taken of the supply, demand and training needs of teachers of Welsh as a second language.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funding will be available to finance the training of teachers to a level of teaching proficiency through the medium of the Welsh language; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Mainstream funding for teaching provided by the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales does not distinguish between Welsh medium and English medium teaching.

The Department has put in place an incentive supplement scheme aimed at increasing the supply of teachers trained to teach through the medium of the Welsh language. Expenditure under this scheme will amount to some £160,000 in 1993-94. I intend to make a similar level of funding available for 1994-95.

The sum of £264,400 has been made available in 1993-94 under the grants for education support and training programme for training to enable teachers to transfer from English medium to Welsh medium teaching. In addition, £12 million has been made available through the programme in 1993-94 for the in-service training and support for teachers on subject teaching. Local education authorities have been directed to target the majority of these funds, in both English and Welsh medium schools, towards the training needs of teachers in the national curriculum subjects requirements. I am currently considering authority bids for 1994-95 and expect to make an announcement on the level of funding shortly.

In deciding on the future level of funds to be made available account will continue to be taken of the supply, demand and training needs for Welsh medium teachers.

Business Statistics

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the numbers of business start-ups and bankruptcies in Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Official estimates of bankruptcy orders are compiled for Wales and England combined and are not separately available for Wales. The best available guide to trends in numbers of business starts comes from VAT data. The number of VAT registrations in Wales is available for each year from 1980 onwards and is as follows:

Wales—VAT registrations

	Number
1980	7,100
1981	7,100
1982	7,700
1983	8,000
1984	7,600
1985	7,300
1986	7,800
1987	8,700
1988	10,900
1989	10,900
1990	10,200
1991	8,400
1992	[1]7,400

[1] The estimate for 1992 is not compatible with those for earlier years due to the effects of the increase in the VAT threshold from £25,400 to £35,000 introduced in the March 1991 Budget.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his assessment of the performance and effectiveness of TECs in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The performance of Welsh TECs is closely monitored against the targets agreed in their business plans and they are also subject to two formal reviews of performance each year. It is my intention to publish information on Welsh TEC performance in the context of the quartile tables of key performance indicators prepared for TECs in England. This information will be available in the early part of the 1994-95 financial year.

Lecturers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what changes have taken place in the past three years in the totals and proportion of (a) part-time and (b) full-time lecturers currently employed in further and higher education; and what are the financial consequences;

(2) what is his latest calculation on the proportion of (a) part-time and (b) full-time lecturers currently employed in further and higher education.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Except for the university of Wales, information on part-time lecturers in the further and higher education sectors is not available. Academic staff of all grades may undertake lecturing duties, and the tables which follow give the available information on numbers of all academic staff and those in the lecturer grades at the university of Wales and at other publicly funded institutions in both sectors in Wales. Staff of the Open university are excluded.

Magor-Castleton Motorway

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many submissions were received in the consultation exercise on the proposed Magor to Castleton motorway; and how many were (a) in favour and (b) opposed to the proposal.

Sir Wyn Roberts: A report on the results of the consultation and the issues raised is in preparation. The information requested will be made public when a decision is taken on whether or not to proceed with any of the published routes.

Milk

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many gallons of milk were consumed in Wales in the most recent year for which figures are available; and how many gallons of milk were produced in Wales in that year.

Mr. Redwood: Milk Marketing Board statistics for milk production in Wales are published in Welsh Agricultural Statistics. The volume of milk produced and sold through milk marketing schemes in Wales in 1992 was 1,455 million litres or 320 million gallons. Total liquid milk consumption figures are not separately available for Wales.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Redwood: The head count of Welsh Office staff eligible to receive statutory sick pay is 2,430.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Independent Review Tribunal

40. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what discussion he has had with the Home Office regarding the proposed independent review tribunal for dealing with alleged miscarriages of justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: None. Officials in my Department and the Home Office are working together on the proposed new arrangements for considering alleged miscarriages of justice.

Legal Aid

41. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has to improve the legal aid system.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The legal aid scheme is kept under constant scrutiny to ensure that it is operating as efficienty and effectively as possible. In addition, it is part of the subject matter of the fundamental review of my Department's expenditure which is curently under way.

Judges and Barristers

42. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to broaden the social background of (a) judges and (b) barristers.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor's policy is to appoint to judicial office entirely on merit those members of the legal profession who satisfy the relevant statutory conditions for appointment and are best qualified to fill the posts. However, the Bar is an independent profession and the selection of prospective barristers is therefore a matter for the Bar Council and not an area in which the Government can directly intervene.

Commercial Leases

43. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has to amend the current law relating to privity of contract in commercial leases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government will implement the recommendations in the Law Commission's report "Landlord and Tenant Law: Privity of Contract and Estate"—Law Com. No. 174—for all future leases including commercial leases, as soon as there is a suitable legislative opportunity.

Medical Ethics

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the work of the Law Commission in relation to medical ethics.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Law Commission is reviewing the law and procedures relating to decision making on behalf of mentally incapacitated adults, which involves consideration of ethical questions in relation to medical treatment and research.

Leasehold Flats

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to introduce legislation to create a commonhold tenure for occupiers of leasehold flats.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government intend to introduce the commonhold legislation as soon as parliamentary time allows. The commonhold system will not be restricted to flats, but will be available for use with other types of property.

HEALTH

NHS Trusts (Salaries)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish details of the code of practice in relation to salaries and pay rises of NHS trust chief executives.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance on determing rates of pay for executives in national health service trusts was set out in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's letter of 22 January 1991 to all NHS trust chairmen. That is the standing advice and copies are available in the Library. The chief executive of the National Health Service Management Executive also wrote to chairmen of all third wave trusts on 20 January 1993 explaining how the 1992 public sector pay restraint affected executive pay appointments at that time. Copies of that letter are also available in the Library. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State issued draft codes of conduct and accountability on 13 January to the NHS for its views and, subject to consultation, these will be put into effect from 1 April 1994. One of the main new features will be the publication, in annual reports, of the total remuneration from NHS sources of chairmen, executive and non-executive board members.

Loans

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each scheme operated by her Department under which loans are available, the objectives of the scheme, the number of unrecovered loans, the total value of unrecovered loans, the average number of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990, the average value of unrecovered loans for each year since 1990 and the annual cost of recovering loans.

Mr. Sackville: The table gives information on schemes operated by the Department under which loans are available. It also provides information on any unrecovered loans. It excludes loans to staff, which are recovered through their salaries. It is not possible except at disproportionate cost to provide information on the annual cost of recovering loans.

Departmental loans

Loans	Objective
Loans repayable to DH when children's homes close or change use	Under section 58 of the Children Act 1989, providers of some children's homes (which were formerly approved schools) are required to repay past grants and loans to the Department of Health when the home closes or changes its use. Central Government capital was invested under section 104 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 for the establishment and refurbishment of approved schools and this continues to be recoverable under the Act. We hold no records of any unrecovered loans.
Loans under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968	To support the agreed national activities of the voluntary sector in relation to the health and personal social services. This is achieved by providing grants to voluntary organisations towards their administrative (core) costs and for certain national projects and, exceptionally, for well defined regional and local activities. While the section 64 power allows loans to be made, none has been made under the section 64 general scheme to date. Any proposal to make a loan would require approval of the Treasury.
Loans to the Medicines Control Agency	There are potentially two kinds of loan which the Department can make to the Medicines Control Agency. When the MCA became a trading fund its net assets were financed by public dividend capital and originating debt. The originating debt is to be repaid to the Department over a five-year period in instalments. The MCA was given the option, which it has taken up, to re-borrow an equivalent amount to that repaid – this amounts to £330,000 in the current financial year. As regards its recurrent and capital costs, the MCA is a self-financing agency which recovers its costs through licensing fees. However, loans may be made to the MCA for effective management of cash flow. All loan repayments would be recovered as they fall due.
Loans to NHS Trusts	The objective of the trust loans system is to provide finance for capital expenditure and for the effective management of cash flow at NHS trusts. All loan repayments are recovered as they fall due. None of the loans can be categorised as unrecovered.

Family Health Services Authorities

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 394, what was the number of secretaries, receptionists, administrators and practice managers in each of the 12 family health services authority areas which fell wholly or partly within the London initiative zone in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information is shown in the table.

Staff type	1 October 1989	1 October 1990	1 October 1991	1 October 1992	1 April 1993
Management and Administration[1]	n/a	573·8	676·3	772·1	758·4
Secretary/Clerical[2]	405·5	3,620·2	1,297·0	1,319·2	[illegible]
Receptionist[3]	2,612·1	—	2,530·6	2,497·7	2,396·7

The data relate to whole-time equivalent staff.

[1] No data are available for management and administrative staff for 1989; the figure for 1990 relates only to practice managers.

[2] The figure for the secretary/clerical category for 1989 relates to staff employed only as secretaries; the receptionist category relates to staff employed as receptionists, and as secretary/receptionists.

[3] The figure for secretary/clerical category for 1990 includes receptionists.

Hepatitis B

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what target she has received from the World Health Organisation in relation to hepatitis B universal vaccination; and what plans she has to meet that target;

(2) what plans she has to implement a hepatitis B universal vaccination strategy; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Targets for the introduction of hepatitis B vaccine into national immunisation programmes were set by the global advisory group of the World Health Organisation's expanded programme on immunisation in 1991, the recommendations being endorsed by the World Health Assembly in 1992. These targets called for countries with a prevalence of hepatitis B virus carriers of 8 per cent. or greater to include hepatitis B immunisation into their national immunisation programmes by 1995 and for all countries to include the vaccine by 1997. Target groups and strategies may vary with local epidemiology. The carrier rate in the United Kingdom is significantly below 1 per cent.

Hepatitis B vaccine was introduced into the United Kingdom in 1982 and is recommended for those at high risk of infection. Immunisation strategy is kept under review in the light of a range of factors, including the current low prevalence of the disease in this country.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the bodies and individuals from whom she has received representations calling for a universal hepatitis B vaccination programme in children.

Mr. Sackville: No recent representations have been received from organisations. We are aware that some professional interests favour universal immunisation. Policy is kept under review in the light of a range of factors including current prevalence.

Occasional letters have been received from interested individuals. These cannot be listed for reasons of confidentiality.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies her Department has undertaken of (a) the most common method of transmission of hepatitis B and (b) the causes of primary liver cancer.

Mr. Sackville: In the United Kingdom the most common form of acquisition of hepatitis B is known to be through unprotected sexual activity both between men and women and between men. This accounts for perhaps 60 per cent. of those cases in which a cause is identified. Transmission routes for hepatitis B are well understood. The Department has not received recent proposals for further study in this area or of the causes of primary liver cancer.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has commissioned into the duration of antibody responses to hepatitis B vaccination in children.

Mr. Sackville: None, but the possibility of the need for booster doses of vaccine continues to be kept under review.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the incidence of hepatitis B in each EC country in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: The available information on reported cases among European Community countries which have submitted data to the World Health Organisation is:

	1991	1992
Denmark	71	51
Germany	5,081	5,987
Italy	3,262	2,985
Netherlands	264	252
Portugal	609	738
England and Wales	488	489

Differences in populations and surveillance systems should be borne in mind in assessing these figures.

NHS Private Income

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the total private income in the NHS for 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93;

(2) what was the private income of the NHS in each region and special health authority in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Mr. Sackville: The information available is shown in the table. Information on private patients for 1992-93 is not yet available.

Community Care Grants

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 794, if she will specify the aggregate level of special grants and care in the community over the present financial year and each of the next three years.

Mr. Bowis: The special transitional grants for community care are planned to be:

	£ million
1993-94	565·4
1994-95	735·9
1995-96	647·6

In each case, the majority of the resources within the special transitional grant will be incorporated into the following year's local authority revenue support grant, so that the cumulative additional resource available for community care will be:

	£ million
1994-95	1,274·5
1995-96	1,838·0

We propose to make available a further £418 million in 1996-97, and will determine nearer the time how much of that will be included within the special transitional grant, and how much within the revenue support grant.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to require local authorities to spend a specific percentage of special transitional community care grant in the private and voluntary sector during the next financial year.

Mr. Bowis: We shall shortly be announcing the conditions which we propose to apply to the special transitional grant in 1994-95.

NHS Regional Authorities

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she has reached decisions on the boundaries for the new NHS regional health authorities to be established on 1 April.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Following consultation, I have decided that the number of regional health authorities should be reduced to eight from 1 April 1994. The boundaries for the regions will, with one exception, be as set out in the consultation document "Managing the new NHS: Proposal to determine the new NHS regions and establish new Regional Health Authorities". The exception is the districts of East and West Cumbria which, in response to local representations, will be part of the new Northern and Yorkshire region and not North West region as originally proposed.

I shall be laying statutory instruments before the House early in March to implement the required changes to regional boundaries.

The chairmen of the eight regions will be:

Anglia and Oxford (originally East Anglian and Oxford)
Dr. Stuart Burgess CBE

Northern and Yorkshire (originally North East and Yorkshire)
Mr. John Greetham CBE

Trent
Sir Michael Carlisle until end of July 1994 when he will be succeeded by
Mr. Keith Ackroyd

North Thames
Sir William Staveley GCB

South Thames
Mr. William Wells

South and West (originally South West)
Ms Rennie Fritchie

West Midlands
Mr. Bryan Baker

North West
Sir Donald Wilson DL

Community Nurses

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the consultation exercise undertaken by the United Kingdom Central Council concerning proposals to amend the criteria for community nurse status; and what action her Department has taken on the conclusions of the consultation exercise.

Mr. Sackville: The United Kingdom Central Council is reviewing its proposal for post-registration education and practice as a consequence of its consultation exercise. We have not received its revised proposals.

NHS Supplies Authority

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out the names and the professional background of the current members of the NHS Supplies Authority.

Mr. Sackville: The chairman is Sir Robin Buchanan, who was previously chairman of Wessex regional health authority, and is a chartered accountant and company director. the other non-executive members are:

Drug Overdoses

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people die each year from deliberate or accidental overdoses of prescribed drugs.

Mr. Sackville: In 1991, 1,783 people were recorded as having died from accidental, self-inflicted or undetermined, whether accidentally or purposely inflicted, poisoning by drugs, medicaments and biological substances. Whether or not these were prescribed is not recorded at death. However, most categories of these substances are only available on prescription. Major exceptions are "analgesics, antipyretics and antirheumatics" which accounted for 753 of the deaths and "other unspecified drugs and medicaments" which accounted for a further 294 of the total.

Detailed data about these deaths and the substances involved are published each year in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys "Mortality Statistics Series DH2 and DH4", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the 10 prescribed drugs used in the largest numbers of deliberate or accidental fatal overdoses.

Mr. Sackville: Table 10 in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys "Series DH4 Mortality" statistics, injury and poisoning, shows the substances involved where deaths were recorded as accidental, self-inflicted or undetermined whether accidentally or purposely inflicted. Whether or not these were prescribed is not recorded at death.

Copies of the relevant OPCS publications are available in the Library.

Cannabis

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the medical ill-effects of cannabis on users.

Mr. Bowis: Consideration of the short and long-term effects of cannabis use is part of the normal medical assessment of any drug-taking individual who presents for treatment. In general, concentration, short-term memory and manual dexterity tend to be impaired during intoxication. Long-term, regular and heavy cannabis smoking may also cause respiratory diseases such as bronchitis or lung cancer.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the medical applications of cannabis in the treatment or prevention of (a) glaucoma, (b) multiple sclerosis and (c) Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. Sackville: Cannabis is known to lower intraocular pressure in glaucoma and to relieve muscle spasms associated with multiple sclerosis, although in neither case is it as effective as other drugs. We are not aware that cannabis has any benefit to patients with Alzheimer's disease.

Drug Prescriptions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the annual cost to the NHS of the medical service provided to those patients addicted to prescribed drugs.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally in the form requested. However, since 1986-87 top sliced funds have been made available to health authorities for the development of drug misuse services, including services for people addicted to prescribed drugs. This allocation, which totals over £24 million in 1993-94 represents a minimum that health authorities will spend on drug misuse services.

Heroin

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the annual cost to the NHS per prescription, of providing prescribed heroin to a patient.

Dr. Mawhinney: The average net ingredient cost per prescription item for all diamorphine products dispensed in the family health services authorities in England in 1992 was £27·16.

Prescriptions for diamorphine products are issued both to drug addicts and to patients with terminal illness as part of their symptom control.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to reduce the numbers of deaths resulting from variation in purity of heroin.

Mr. Bowis: On 6 January we launched a £2·6 million media campaign on the dangers of drug and solvent misuse. The campaign is supported by leaflets for young people, parents, professionals and others giving the facts and advice on drug misuse. This includes the fact that the strength of drugs made illegally or without medical supervision is unpredictable and dangerous.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the Mid Essex area were waiting over one year for hospital admissions in (a) March 1991 and (b) the latest available month.

Dr. Mawhinney: The area covered by Mid Essex and West Essex district health authorities in March 1991 is now covered by Mid Essex hospital services trust and North Essex district health authority.

At March 1991 in Mid and West Essex district health authorities 3,143 patients had waited more than a year for treatment and 1,018 of these had waited more than two years. At September 1993 in the Mid Essex hospital services trust and North Essex district health authority the number waiting over one year had fallen by 56 per cent. to 1,379 and no one had waited more than two years.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of hospital admissions in the Mid Essex area are (a) immediate, (b) within five weeks, (c) within three months and (d) longer than a year; and what the figures were in March 1991;

(2) what was the average waiting time for admission to hospital in the Mid Essex area in (a) 1988, (b) March 1991 and (c) the latest available month.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is available only on a national or regional basis rather than district health authority or trust.

Chelmsford Hospitals

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list all those services provided for patient care at Broomfield and St. John's hospitals, Chelmsford that have been enhanced since May 1979; and if she will make a statement;

(2) if she will list any totally new services for patient care provided by Broomfield hospital, Chelmsford and St. John's hospital, Chelmsford since May 1979.

Mr. Sackville: We are aware of a number of new or enhanced services at these hospitals.

My hon. Friend may wish to contact Sir Jeffrey Bowman, chairman of Mid Essex hospital services national health service trust, for full details.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money in cash terms at current prices, has been spent on capital projects at Broomfield hospital, Chelmsford and St. John's hospital, Chelmsford, since May 1979.

Mr. Sackville: During the last 15 years, more than £25 million has been spent on various developments and improvements at Chelmsford. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Sir Jeffrey Bowman, chairman of Mid Essex hospital services national health service trust, for details of the schemes.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all those new services in health care which have been recommended or are being considered for moving to Broomfield hospital, Chelmsford from other hospital sites outside the Chelmsford area.

Mr. Sackville: Statutory consultation is taking place on a proposal to transfer the regional plastic surgery and burns unit from St. Andrew's hospital, Billericay to Broomfield hospital.

Health Spending

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent on the national health service in pounds sterling per head of the population in Mid Essex in (a) May 1979, (b) April 1991 and (c) the expected spending level in April 1994.

Mr. Sackville: Information is not available centrally in this form. However, Mid Essex's revenue outturn increased from £35,554,483 in 1982-83—1982-83 cash —to £93,892,755 in 1991-92—1991-92 cash. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Mr. Alec Sexton, the chairman of North Essex health authority, for full details.

Patients, Mid-Essex

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in the Mid Essex area have been treated in the latest month available for every 100 patients treated in March 1991.

Mr. Sackville: For every 100 finished consultation periods—ordinary admissions plus day cases—in the general and acute sector in national health service hospitals in the Mid Essex district in the financial year 1990-91, there were 105 in 1992-93.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide a figure for the number of staff in her Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Sackville: As at 31 December 1993 the Department of Health had 5,379 staff entitled to statutory sick pay.

Continuing Care

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rights a patient has to receive continuing care in NHS hospitals for (a) dementia and (b) other chronic conditions; and what regulations and guidance her Department has issued on this matter.

Mr. Bowis: The "Caring for People" White Paper—Cm 849—sets out clearly that all health authorities have a responsibility to secure continuing care for people who require it for reasons of ill-health.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to ensure that there are sufficient long-stay beds for people wishing to receive continuing care in hospital.

Mr. Bowis: The White Paper "Caring for People" made it clear that the national health service has a continuing responsibility to secure long-term care for those who need it for reasons of ill-health. Health authorities as purchasers are encouraged to consider the range of options which may be available for the long-term care needs of their resident populations: whether by placing contracts for services with their own directly managed units or by other district health authorities, NHS trusts, or the independent sector.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department has taken to publicise to patients and their relatives the options available to them for continuing care.

Mr. Bowis: The Government have made it clear to health authorities and local authority social services departments that they should explain to all people who may require continuing care the options available to them. Under the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 local authorities are expected to publish community care plans in collaboration with health authorities which take into account the needs of the local population. The Department has produced a leaflet, "Community Care changes in April 1993", on community care services, which was made generally available to the public, and an information pack for voluntary and private sector providers explaining the new arrangements. These were also sent to voluntary organisations who represent patients/residents and their relatives.

Hospital Charges

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in what circumstances a person with the right to permanent residence in the United Kingdom is classed as an overseas visitor and liable to charges for treatment in hospital;

(2) in what circumstances a British citizen is classed as an overseas visitor and liable to charges for treatment in hospital.

Mr. Sackville: The services of the national health service are intended for people ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom regardless of nationality or origin. The NHS (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989—1989 SI No. 306—as amended by the NHS (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Amendment Regulations 1991—1991 SI No. 438—apply.

Efficiency Savings

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where she expects to identify efficiency savings in the national health service for 1994-95 in addition to the 2·25 per cent. announced in the budget for spending on direct patient care.

Dr. Mawhinney: Hospital and community health services will be required to demonstrate efficiency improvements of at least 2¼ per cent. in 1994-95. How these are achieved is a matter for local decision in the light of local circumstances.

NHS Productivity

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued or plans to issue to health authorities and trusts about improved productivity in the service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Specific guidance on productivity is not issued by the Department. However, health authorities and national health service trusts are assisted in their efforts to improve productivity by the National Audit Office, the Audit Commission and the value for money unit of the NHS Management Executive, which report on key areas and make appropriate recommendations. The NHS reforms have also given an incentive to improve productivity as providers have to compete for contracts.

NHS Pay

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been given to health authorities and trusts about pay levels for 1994-95.

Dr. Mawhinney: The chief executive of the national health service management executive wrote to general managers of health authorities and chief executives of NHS trusts on 30 November 1993 about the increase in public spending on health in 1994-95. The letter set out the implications for real growth, efficiency targets and pay rises. A copy of the letter EL(93)110 will be placed in the Library.

AIDS

Mr. Peter Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of AIDS in the age groups (a) 16 to 18, (b) 18 to 21 and (c) over 21 years were notified to the Department in each year since 1987.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested for the United Kingdom is shown in the table.

"Food—a Fact of Life"

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice her Department gave to the British Nutrition Foundation in developing the material for "Food—a Fact of Life"; and what steps she took to ensure the content was consistent with the advice of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy and "Dietary Reference Values for Food Energy and Nutrients" for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sackville: The Department participates in the group monitoring the progress of the project and seeks to ensure consistency with departmental policy where relevant.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to her Department of the British Nutrition Foundation's "Food—a Fact of Life".

Mr. Sackville: The costs to the Department for the two years 1991-92 and 1992-93 was £170,000 and for the current year £50,000.

Selected List

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will make a final decision about the selected list.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs maintains a continual review of the drugs in the categories covered by the selected list scheme. It will produce recommendations about drugs in these categories within the next few months for Ministers to consider.

NHS Trust Federation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 898, what action has been taken to correct the answer given on 26 July 1993, Official Report, column 546, concerning money received by the NHS Trust Federation from her Department; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: No correction is necessary. The National Health Service Trust Federation does not receive funding from the Department to meet its running costs. The payment without statutory authority was made in the financial year 1991-92 and has since been recovered. The Department has also provided funds to the federation to meet the costs incurred in organising conferences on information on behalf of the Department. These conferences were open to all NHS trusts, whether or not they were members of the federation.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the known party-political affiliations of trust chairs and non-executive directors.

Dr. Mawhinney: We do not seek information on political affiliation. Some appointees' political affiliation may be a matter of public record, but it would be inappropriate for us to maintain our own records on the basis of political allegiance.

Nuts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has about the number of people suffering from an allergy to nuts and the number of deaths that have resulted in recent years.

Mr. Sackville [pursuant to his reply, 17 January 1994, c. 391]: I regret that my previous reply could give rise to a misunderstanding on the extent of information held centrally on cause of death. While there is no information centrally available on the number of people suffering from an allergy to nuts, the information held centrally on number of deaths is that for the latest 10 years, 1983-1992, for which data are available, there were no deaths registered where allergy to nuts was the assigned underlying cause.

EMPLOYMENT

Sex Discrimination

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average award of industrial tribunals for sex discrimination cases.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest available information relates to 1992-93, when the average award made by industrial tribunals in cases where sex discrimination was the main complaint was £1,416.

Administration Costs

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the teacher placement service, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the administration of the teacher placement scheme rests with training and enterprise councils. The Department does not hold details of the administrative costs involved.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of TEC challenge, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the administration of TEC challenge rests with training and enterprise councils. The Department does not hold details of the administrative costs involved.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the programme development fund, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 31 January 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the expenditure on the administration of the Programme Development Fund (PDF).

We do not collect the information that you have requested.

It may help if I explain a little about the background to PDF and the way it is administered.

The Programme Development Fund is a fund held by all ES Regional Directors and by Directors for Scotland and Wales. It is there to support local initiatives for assisting people who need special help to get back to work.

These initiatives run alongside the mainstream work of ES offices and are a small, but important part of an overall total. Since, in the main, staff who administer PDF are also involved in a range of other activities it is impossible to separate out costs.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the business start-up scheme, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the administration of the business start-up scheme rests with training and enterprise councils. The Department does not hold details of the administrative costs involved.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the local initiative fund, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the administration of the local initiative fund rests with training and enterprise councils. The Department does not hold details of the administrative costs involved.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of compacts and inner-city compacts, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the administration of compacts and inner-city compacts rests with training and enterprise councils. The Department does not hold details of the administrative costs involved.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of the education-business partnerships, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the administration of the education business partnerships rests with training and enterprise councils. The Department does not hold details of the administrative costs involved.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many cases have been brought before industrial tribunals since 1983; how many and what percentage of cases have been successful; and how many and what percentage of cases were about race discrimination.

Miss Widddecombe: The details are as follows:

All Jurisdictions		Racial Discrimination (where this is the main complaint)
	Cases heard	Number/ per cent. successful	Number/ per cent. of cases heard
1983	10,381	3,229 (31·1)	166 (1·6)

1992-93	17,836	9,351 (52·4)	345 (1·9)

Programme Funding

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total amount of funding made available over the last year by (a) the programme development fund, (b) education business partnerships, (c) the teacher placement service, (d) compacts and inner-city compacts, (e) the business start-up scheme, (f) the local initiative fund and (g) TEC challenge.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 30 November 1993, Official Report, column 512. This lists the funding made available for 1993-94 by (a) the programme development fund, (b) education business partnerships, (c) the teacher placement service, (d) compacts and inner-city compacts, (e) the business start-up scheme, (f) the local initiative fund.

In addition, £16·9 million has been made available for training and enterprise councils for TEC challenge in the current year.

Race Discrimination

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average award of industrial tribunals for race discrimination cases.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest available information relates to 1992-93, when the average award made by industrial tribunals in cases where race discrimination was the main complaint was £3,333.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recruitment of staff is planned by the Health and Safety Executive before April 1994.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Health and Safety Executive is considering plans to announce recruitment competitions for certain groups of specialist inspectors such as railways inspectors. The timing of any such recruitments has not been decided.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many people in receipt of unemployment benefit within the Cunninghame, South parliamentary constituency have been unemployed for (a) more than six months, (b) more than 12 months and (c) more than two years; and if he will give these figures for (i) men and (ii) women for each month since April 1992;

(2) how many people in receipt of unemployment benefit within the Irvine travel-to-work area have been unemployed for (a) more than six months, (b) more than 12 months and (c) more than two years; and if he will give these figures for (i) men and (ii) women for each month since April 1992.

Miss Widdecombe: Figures on the numbers of people claiming unemployment and related benefits, by duration, are available on the unadjusted basis only, for the months of January, April, July and October and can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those companies giving statutory notice of redundancies to his Department within the Irvine travel-to-work area from April 1992 to date; how many job losses were notified by each of the companies; and when statutory notice was given.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information given to the Department under the redundancy handling provisions of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 is provided in confidence.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many vacancies were listed in (a) Irvine jobcentre and (b) Kilwinning jobcentre during December; and what was the nature of these vacancies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 31 January 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of vacancies listed in Irvine and Kilwinning Jobcentres in December.

I attach a table showing the notified vacancies for both offices.

Vacancies notified to Jobcentres are displayed in the self-service area of the office for selection by job seekers. This display will also include suitable vacancies from Jobcentres in the surrounding area. I have therefore included in the table the average number of vacancies on display in Irvine and Kilwinning Jobcentres in December 1993.

You asked for information about the nature of the vacancies which were notified and the table gives a breakdown according to whether they were permanent or temporary, full-time or part-time. Because this was the Christmas period the number of temporary vacancies notified was high.

You may also be interested to know that during December Irvine Jobcentre found jobs for 219 people and Kilwinning Jobcentre for 44 people.

I hope this is helpful.

	Notified vacancies December 1993					Average Number of vacancies displayed
	Permanent Full Time	Permanent Part Time	Temporary Full Time	Temporary Part Time	Total
Irvine Jobcentre	77	51	99	1	228	260
Kilwinning Jobcentre	13	9	10	0	32	165

Amosite Asbestos

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list previous changes in Health and Safety Executive guidelines on the level of brown amosite asbestos considered to be safe.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Health and Safety Executive has not issued specific guidelines on the level of amosite which is considered safe; a safe level of exposure to any type of asbestos has yet to be identified. However, there is a practical level of exposure below which an increased risk of contracting an asbestos-related disease cannot be detected.

The guidelines which have applied to workplace exposure to amosite are listed in the table. These standards were used by Her Majesty's inspectors of factories to establish whether satisfacory control had been achieved under the Asbestos Regulations 1969. The exposure standards are expressed as fibres per millilitre of air averaged over a continuous period of four hours and were:

(a) 2 fibres per millilitre with effect from May 1970,
(b) 0·5 fibres per millilitre with effect from 1 January 1983,
(c) 0·2 fibres per millilitre with effect from 1 August 1984.

The value of 0·2 fibres per millilitre of air became the statutory control limit for amosite, on the advice of the Health and Safety Commission, when the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987 came into effect on 1 March 1988.

Women's Earnings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the number of women who have earnings below (a) the tax threshold and (b) the national insurance threshold, broken down into married women, lone parents and single women at the latest date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Broad estimates, based on the new earnings survey and estimates of the number of employees in employment, are as follows: in April 1993 there were 2·6 million women employees earning less than the PAYE threshold, of whom 2·3 million earned less than the national insurance lower earnings limit. Using the results of the family expenditure survey it is estimated that approximately 75 per cent. of each of these categories were married women, 5 per cent. lone parents and 20 per cent. single women.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total number of staff in the Department of Employment eligible for statutory sick pay is 53,082.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current level of youth unemployment in the city of Sunderland.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Claimant unemployment data by age are available quarterly for the months of January, April, July and October and are on the unadjusted basis. On 14 October 1993, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of unemployed claimants under 25 years of age in the Sunderland local authority district was 5,463, 4 per cent. lower than in the same month a year earlier.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Redundant Churches

31. Mr. Dickens: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, how many redundant churches are being preserved by use of the redundant churches fund; and if he will make a statement on the flexibility exercised by the Church Commissioners regarding the sale of redundant churches for alternative use.

Mr. Alison: At the end of 1993, 289 redundant churches were vested in the redundant churches fund.

When a Church of England church is closed for regular public worship, the Pastoral Measure requires that a suitable alternative use be sought for it. The Commissioners make the final decision and regard as suitable a use which is consonant with the former use of the building as a place of worship, and with its historic and architectural qualities and which has planning permission.

Housing Investment

34. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what is the Church Commissioners' policy on investing in providing low-cost family homes to rent.

Mr. Alison: The Commissioners' primary responsibility is to produce a proper return on their assets for the support of the clergy, so financial considerations must take priority in investments decisions. Furthermore, they are not a housing charity. However, the Commissioners are sensitive to the needs in this area and are, therefore, alert to opportunities to dispose of land for the provision of affordable housing where this does not conflict with their duty as trustees. Furthermore, their Octavia Hill residential estates in central London provide about 1,500 homes for people on modest incomes.

Clergy (Pay)

32. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, how many (a) incumbents and (b) assistant clergy are currently in the pay of the Church Commissioners; how much money is involved during the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alison: There are about 10,500 stipendary clergy; I will write to my hon. Friend with the precise breakdown. The total annual cost of paying clergy stipends last year, including senior clergy, was approximately £155 million, of which the Commissioners met £63 million. An increasing proportion of this cost will fall on parishes as the Commissioners reduce their support to a more sustainable level. The active ministry will therefore depend far more on the giving of Church members.

Ethical Investment

Ms Lynne: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what efforts are made to ensure that investments made conform to the ideals of ethical investment.

Mr. Alison: The Commissioners' primary responsibility is to produce a proper return on their assets for the support of the clergy, so financial considerations must take priority in investment decisions. However, the Commissioners have always operated, and regularly reviewed, a strong ethical policy which takes account of social, ethical and environmental issues and which is sensitive to the views of Church people. They do not, for example, invest directly in companies whose main business is armaments, gambling, alcohol or tobacco. I have arranged for the hon. Member to receive a copy of the Commissioners' leaflet "A Question of Ethics".

SCOTLAND

NHS Staff Costs

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost of employing managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff in the NHS in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to his previous question on this subject on 27 January, Official Report, column 345.

Development Corporations

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contacts his Department plans to have with Ayrshire and Scottish Enterprise, Irvine development corporation and Cunninghame district council concerning the transition of the development corporation's economic powers.

Mr. Stewart: The guidance issued by the Scottish Office Industry Department places the responsibility on the development corporation to prepare successor arrangements for economic development. Corporations are to consult fully the local enterprise company and local authorities about the preparation of proposals appropriate to their area. I understand that local discussions are going on at present between the development corporation and Enterprise Ayrshire. The development corporation is required to submit proposals for consideration by my right hon. Friend.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the additional costs involved in winding up Irvine development corporation and Livingston development corporation before their original wind-up dates; and if the costs of winding up Irvine and Livingston new towns were accounted for in the Touche Ross report "Structure of Local Government in Scotland: Advice on Financial and Qualitative Appraisal of 'Options for Change'".

Mr. Stewart: I am satisfied that there are no additional costs in bringing forward the winding p dates of Irvine and Livingston development corporations. There will be transfers of resources between new town and local government programmes to reflect the transfer of functions and these will be effective from the dates on which the transfers are made. The Touche Ross report did not examine the costs of winding up the new town development corporations.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff currently employed by Irvine development corporation will be transferred to the bodies taking over the development corporation's economic and housing functions.

Mr. Stewart: Discussions towards establishing successor arrangements for economic development are taking place between Irvine development corporation and Enterprise Ayrshire. I hope that it will be possible to retain the expertise of appropriate staff, but it is for those bodies to make recommendations on this matter as part of the proposals the development corporation is required to submit to my right hon. Friend. In respect of the corporation's housing function, the successor bodies will not be determined until the outcome of the ballots are known. Again, it is too early to say how many staff may transfer.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contact there has been between his Department and Scottish companies concerning the current review of the Forestry Commission's status.

Sir Hector Monro: Officials have, from time to time, had useful discussions with wood processors and companies which have interests relevant to the work of the Forestry Review Group.

Private Nursing Homes

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many persons in each health board area, admitted to private residential or nursing homes since 1 April 1993 (a) are paying the full cost and (b) have had charges recovered from their estate following their death;

(2) if he will conduct a survey of how many residents of private residential or nursing homes have sold their homes to meet the charges for their residential care.

Mr. Stewart: Information relating to numbers of people paying the full cost of accommodation in residential care and nursing homes is not held centrally, nor is information about the numbers of residents who have had charges recovered from their estate following their death.

Information concerning the number of people who have sold their homes to meet the charges for their residential care is not held centrally, nor do I intend to conduct a survey on this.

Hospitals (Car Parking)

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the income from car parking charges implemented by hospitals for each health board in Scotland for each year since 1990.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 26 January 1994]: There are two health boards whose hospitals receive income from car parking. The information available is as follows:

	Financial Year
Health Board	1990-91 £	1991-92 £	1992-93 £	1993-94[1] £
Greater Glasgow	—	—	1,750	1,750
Lothian	—	—	—	65,000

[1] estimated.

New Towns

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual budget and turnover of each of Scotland's new towns for each year since their establishment.

Mr. Stewart: The information on development corporations' income and expenditure is contained in their annual reports, which are available in the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Wormhoudt Murders

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the titles and general details of the 20 files released by his Department into the investigations of the murder of British service men on 28 May 1940 at Wormhoudt.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

BAOR War Crimes Group

WO309/26-27 —Investigation papers (Wormhoudt)
WO309/28-31 —Investigation papers (Wormhoudt/Le Paradis)
WO309/1801-1803—Correspondence etc. on wanted persons
WO309/1804-1812—Statements, interrogation reports etc.
WO309/1813 —Lt. Col. Scotland's report on investigation
WO309/1814 —As WO309/1813 (later, updated version)

Military Deputy Judge Advocate-General's Papers

WO311/100 —MD/JAG file on Wormhoudt case
WO311/680 —Visit of survivors to scene, in connection with investigation

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what further records his Department retains following the release of his Department's records on the investigation of the murder of British service men at Wormhoudt on 28 May 1940; and whether they are covered by (a) the 75-year or (b) the 30-year rule;

(2) if his Department retains any files which show the results of the requests to the Russian authorities in 1947 from British war crimes investigators for the return of General Willem Mohnke for questioning about the murder of British service men on 28 May 1940 at Wormhoudt.

Mr. Hanley: All surviving files on the original investigation of the killing of British soldiers at Wormhoudt on 28 May 1940 have now been released. Records created within the last 30 years are covered by the Public Records Act, including any raised on this subject since the case was reopened in 1988. These records are subject to the Department's normal review procedures and the revised criteria contained in the White Paper on openness, Cm 2290.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Aitken: The Department's central contracts branch has placed in excess of 500 contracts with consultants in each of the last few years. In addition to this figure, consultancy contracts are placed as part of specific projects and as low value orders of under £10,000. Under the Department's arrangements for the delegation of contractual authority, such contracts are placed without reference to the central contracts branch and so cannot be identified separately.

In view of this and the large number of centrally placed contracts involved over the last 15 years, an answer to this question could be provided only at disproportionate cost and effort.

Tank Shells

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what date British tank regiments were supplied with shells fitted with fin stabilised discarding sabots.

Mr. Hanley: The Army was first supplied with armour-piercing fin-stabilised discarding sabot rounds in January 1982. The rounds are stored centrally, and issued to individual tank regiments only when they deploy on operations.

Boards of Inquiry

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what manner, and by whom, serving soldiers due to appear before a regimental board of inquiry are given verbal and written details of the procedure to be followed, including their right of representation; and who is responsible for selecting any such representative.

Mr. Hanley: Witnesses or persons who, in the opinion of either the convening officer or the president of the board, may be affected by a board of inquiry or regimental inquiry are notified of the proceedings and are given the opportunity to be present and to be represented if they so wish. Such notification is not required to be in writing, but the convening order for all boards of inquiry and for most regimental inquiries will be published and displayed throughout the unit.

Such witnesses or persons may, if they wish, be present at the proceedings and give evidence, question witnesses, or produce witnesses to give evidence on matters affecting them. In addition, if represented, their representative may question witnesses and, with permission of the president, address the board of inquiry.

Selection of a representative is a matter of choice for the witness or person concerned. That representative may be an officer, solicitor or barrister.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Hanley: As at January 1994, just over 130,000 staff at the Ministry of Defence were covered by statutory sick pay regulations. This figure excludes some 1,500 casual staff, some of whom may be covered by these regulations.

South Africa

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the British military personnel who have undertaken official visits to South Africa in each year since 1990.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1990, British Ministry of Defence personnel have made official visits to the South African authorities on three occasions as follows:

October 1993
1 Assistant Under-Secretary of State, 1 Assistant Secretary and 1 Principal (all civilian members of the MOD)

December 1993
1 Brigadier

January 1994
1 Rear Admiral, 1 Commander and 1 Principal (MOD civilian)

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the forthcoming visit of the Royal Navy frigate HMS Norfolk to South Africa from 27 to 31 January; and if the Transitional Executive Council of South Africa or the European Union were consulted over arrangements for the visit.

Mr. Hanley: HMS Norfolk, accompanied by the Royal Fleet Auxiliary Grey Rover, is visiting South Africa from 27 January to 1 February. The purpose of the visit was to re-establish relations between the Royal Navy and the South African navy. The Transitional Executive Council and our European Union partners were fully aware of the visit and raised no objections. The visit has been welcomed by a broad range of opinion in South Africa.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretaryof State for Defence if he will make a statement on the appointment of the British military attaché to the Republic of South Africa; what are his functions, responsibilities and activities; and how these are restricted by the European Union's criteria for the relaxation on the exchange of military attachés with South Africa.

Mr. Hanley: The British defence attaché in Pretoria took up his post on 22 November 1993. His primary role is to establish contacts with the defence forces of the new South Africa and to advise Her Majesty's ambassador on defence issues. European Union sanctions concerning the exchange of attachés were lifted on 4 October 1993.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all South African defence force personnel who have made official visits to the United Kingdom in each year since 1990.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1990, South African defence force personnel have made official visits to the United Kingdom at the invitation of the Government as follows:

May 1993—the Chief of the South African navy and the ship's company of the Drakensberg, a South African naval support vessel, to take part in ceremonies to mark the Battle of the Atlantic.

July 1993—the South African Chief of Air Staff to attend celebrations marking the 75th annniversary of the RAF.

Special exceptions to the embargo on defence contacts then in force were made in view of the particular historical circumstances of both visits.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) all visits by British military personnel to South Africa and (b) all visits by South African defence force personnel to the United Kingdom expected between 1 February and 27 April.

Mr. Hanley: On current plans, official visits by British Ministry of Defence personnel at the invitation of the South African authorities in the period between 1 February and 27 April will take place as follows:

Early February—1 Brigadier, 1 Lieutenant Colonel and 1 Principal (MOD civilian)

No visits to the United Kingdom by South African defence force personnel in that period are currently planned.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there will be any co-reprocessing of military and civil materials in THORP at Sellafield.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply. No.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animal Feeding Stuffs (Salmonella)

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs which were found on first sampling in each year since 1981, to be salmonella positive (a) gave subsequent positive samples and (b) were prosecuted.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The numbers of plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs where salmonella was isolated both on the first official sampling of each year and subsequently during the year were as follows:

	Number
1981	[1]—
1982	13
1983	10
1984	7
1985	10
1986	9
1987	6
1988	3
1989	2
1990	1
1991	2
1992	1
1993	—

[1] Figures not available.

Where salmonella contamination is found the serving of notices preventing the movement of material until it is shown to be free of salmonella contamination is considered the appropriate action rather than prosecution.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many inspections were carried out by her officials of processing plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs in each year from 1981; and how many of the plants gave samples which were found to be salmonella-positive.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Details of inspections of plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs and the number of plants which gave samples positive for salmonella were as follows:

	Inspections	Number of plants where positive salmonella was isolated
1981	[1]—	[1]—
1982	193	35
1983	250	29
1984	251	30

1990	245	18
1991	230	14
1992	194	8
1993	189	9

[1] Figures not available.

Inspections ranged between one and five days duration depending upon the type of plant.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many samples were taken from processing plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs in each year from 1981; and how many in each year were found to be salmonella-positive.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The number of official samples from processing plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs and the numbers found to be positive for salmonella were as follows:

	Number of official samples	Number of official samples found to be positive
1981	[1]—	[1]—
1982	1,085	114

Milk

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many gallons of milk were consumed in England in the most recent year for which figures are available; and how many gallons of milk were produced in England in that year.

Mr. Jack: The volume of milk produced and sold through milk marketing schemes in England in 1992 was 9,743 million litres or 2,143 million gallons.

Total liquid milk consumption figures are not separately available for England. However, for England and Wales as a whole the volume of milk produced and sold through milk marketing schemes and subsequently used for liquid milk was 5,857 million litres, or 1,288 million gallons, in 1992. Except for the effect of trade in liquid milk, this will equate closely to consumption as measured in whole milk equivalent. This represents 52 per cent. of the total sales through marketing schemes for England and Wales of 11,198 million litres, or 2,463 million gallons.

These figures exclude milk sold outside milk marketing schemes, milk consumed on-farm, wastage and milk fed to stock.

The consumption of milk in the form of all products is difficult to assess because of problems of double counting when milk is manufactured into more than one product. However, approximately 15,880 million litres of milk were required to produce all the milk and milk products consumed in the United Kingdom in 1992. This figure is available only at the United Kingdom level. It should also be noted that some elements of this milk—for example, the skimmed milk by-products of imported butter production —are not consumed in the United Kingdom. Total United Kingdom production sold through milk marketing schemes in 1992 was 13,525 million litres.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research her Ministry has carried out into the ways in which bovine tuberculosis is transferred from badgers to cattle.

Mr. Soames: Research is continuing at the Department's central science laboratory in Gloucestershire on the ways in which bovine tuberculosis is transferred from badgers to cattle. Detailed observations are made on the way in which badgers infected with bovine tuberculosis may contaminate the environment. This work has demonstrated the potential importance of badger excretory products in disease transmission to cattle, with field margins having been identified as areas of highest risk.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of her Department's badger culling in terms of the reduction of bovine tuberculosis.

Mr. Soames: There have been no cases of confirmed bovine tuberculosis in cattle in the areas of Steeple Leaze, Dorset and Thornbury, Avon, since the ending in 1979 and 1981 respectively of the experimental programmes under which badger control operations were carried out continuously. The incidence of bovine TB in cattle in those areas had previously been high.

Analyses at the Department's central veterinary laboratory suggests that the effect of the routine badger control operations carried out in other areas between 1975 and 1982 reduced the incidence of infection in cattle herds by around 60 per cent, compared with no control.

Similar studies have shown that badger removal operations between 1986 and 1993 on farms which suffered a breakdown may have reduced the chances of a subsequent cattle breakdown by between 40 and 65 per cent.

The new strategy announced on 8 December will include a trial element to measure its effectiveness. Further details are set out in the background note in the Library of the House, a copy of which I have sent to the hon. Member.

Mr Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will declare a moratorium on the culling of badgers; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I have no such plans; I announced a new programme to control bovine TB in the House on 8 December, Official Report, columns 260-61.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give details of (a) the incidence of bovine turbercolusis and (b) the numbers of badgers culled on the authority of her Department in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Soames: The number of cattle herds experiencing new confirmed breakdowns of tuberculosis in Great Britain for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available were as follows:

Year	New confirmed breakdowns	Badgers culled
1983	79	1,239
1984	73	1,337
1985	52	1,119
1986	82	782
1987	108	711
1988	122	778
1989	125	727
1990	143	811
1991	125	993
1992	155	1,054
1993	[1]273	[1]1,093

[1] Provisional figures.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will provide a figure for the number of staff in her Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Jack: Approximately 11,000 of the staff employed by the Department and its agencies are eligible for statutory sick pay.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people there are in her Department's meat hygiene service.

Mr. Soames: The meat hygiene service will be an agency of MAFF and will be launched in April 1995, taking over hygiene and welfare responsibilities in fresh meat plants from 300 local authorities. It will employ up to 1,300 plant-based staff, a saving of some 5 per cent. on current numbers. Management and administrative support will total no more than about 70, which will be less than is currently required.

At present approximately 230 man years are devoted to meat hygiene policy and its implementation within the core Department. This level of effort will be reduced significantly after the setting up of the meat hygiene service.

"Food—a Fact of Life"

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total cost to her Department of the British Nutrition Foundation's "Food—a Fact of Life".

Mr. Soames: The total level of support provided by this Department since 1990 has been £796,000. This educative tool is held in high regard by teachers and others and the Department is therefore planning to provide a further £250,000 worth of support in the coming financial year to enable it to be extended to the 11 to 16-year-old age group.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice her Ministry gave to the British Nutrition Foundation in developing the material for "Food—a Fact of Life"; and what steps were taken to ensure the material was in line with the Ministry's policy.

Mr. Soames: This Department has been closely involved with the development of this programme since its inception. Officials currently participate in the group monitoring its progress where they seek to ensure consistency with departmental policy where relevant.

Food Surpluses

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total sum expended by member states and by the EC itself on the storage and disposal of food surpluses in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and if she will publish a table showing the relevant expenditure of the EC and by member states in each of the previous five years.

Mr. Jack: The guarantee section of the European guidance and guarantee fund—EAGGF—provides funding to member states for the costs of intervention storage, export refunds, and other disposal measures for products subject to the CAP. Information on expenditure on these measures for 1992 and for the previous five years can be obtained from the annual financial reports of the EAGGF guarantee section, copies of which have been deposited in the Library of the House of Commons. Annex 7 of these reports provides details of expenditure on intervention storage, and withdrawals and similar operations, and annex 5 on export refunds. The breakdown of expenditure by member state for these measures can be derived from annex 2 of these reports.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on farm incomes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Total income from farming is estimated to have risen by 40·7 per cent. in 1993 compared with 1992. This is welcome news for farmers and I hope will be recognised as such. Detailed estimates of income, output and productivity of United Kingdom agriculture in 1993 were published this morning and these have been placed in the Library of the House.

Whaling

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what exemptions from EC [illegible] governing whaling activities have been sought by the Norwegian Government in their submission to the Council of Ministers; and what has been the outcome of the Norwegian demands.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

The Norwegian Government have requested exemptions from the EC habitats directive annex IV*(a)* in respect of fin, minke and killer whales and from the EC convention on international trade in endangered species regulation in respect of fin and minke whales. The member states of the European Union have rejected these requests.

Customs and Excise (Searches)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 3 December, Official Report, column 767, if he will list, for each United Kingdom port of entry, the breakdown by ethnic origin of persons stopped and searched by Customs and Excise officers during 1993.

Sir John Cope: The number of persons subject to search of persons of all kinds by Customs and Excise during 1993 distinguished by collection and ethnic origin is given in the table. Information for each port of entry is not held centrally and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

VAT

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will exempt cultural bodies which have charitable status from VAT on certain cultural services and goods;

(2) what considerations he has given to EC directives on VAT giving exemptions to certain cultural services and goods;

(3) whether he will exempt non-profit-making cultural bodies from VAT on certain cultural services and goods;

(4) what steps he is considering to harmonise the application of VAT to certain cultural services and goods in the United Kingdom with other EC countries.

Sir John Cope: On 22 July, Official Report, column 303, I announced that I would be holding discussions with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage with a view to examining the case for exempting certain cultural services and associated goods supplied by public authorities. Discussions are continuing and when these have been completed a consultation paper will be issued to seek the views of interested parties.

Russia

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what sums have been disbursed by the International Monetary Fund to Russia.

Mr. Nelson: Russia joined the IMF in June 1992. In August 1992, the IMF disbursed $1 billion under a first credit tranche drawing. In July 1993 a further drawing of $1·5 billion was made under the systematic transformation facility.

European Parliament Pension Scheme

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change the payment of death gratuities and dependants' benefits to beneficiaries under the European Parliament (United Kingdom Representatives) pension scheme.

Mr. Portillo: Parliamentary approval will be sought later this year in an order under the European Parliament (Pay and Pensions) Act 1979 to changes to the European Parliament (United Kingdom representatives) pension scheme. These changes will bring the scheme's provisions for death gratuities and dependants' benefits into line with those introduced for the parliamentary contributory pension fund by the Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1991. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £700 will be met from repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund. Once the order has been approved, the Contingencies Fund will be repaid upon approval of the Contingencies Fund repayment vote.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his departments covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Nelson: The number of staff in post at 1 January 1994 in my departments covered by statutory sick pay was 114,052.

Weapons (Customs and Excise)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many weapons have been seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise for each of the past 10 years (a) at each port and (b) by raids on suspects.

Sir John Cope: Customs does not hold central statistics on seizures of weapons that can be broken down in this way. However, the table sets out the number of illegal weapons seized by Customs and Excise nationally in the last 10 years.

Income Support

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a breakdown of the average weekly spending on items in the family expenditure survey of (a) an individual of over 24 years and (b) a family of one parent and two children who are wholly dependent on income support.

Mr. Nelson: The figures in the table are from the 1992 family expenditure survey. The survey has a small number of households in these categories, so the figures are subject to large sampling variations. Figures are rounded to the nearest 50p. The figures refer to households whose gross income is made up of income support, child benefit and one parent benefit where appropriate and up to £2 of other income.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The ethnic minority business grant is administered by a small number of staff, equivalent to less than one full-time post, who have a range of other duties. The itemised expenditure requested for the last year, and since the scheme was developed, is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

(12) what was the number of (a) male and (b) female Vietnamese nationals who were either (i) remand or (ii) sentenced prisoners in prisons in England and Wales as of 25 January.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Misuse of Drugs Act 1971

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the annual cost to his Department of enforcement of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Misuse of Drugs Act provides the legal framework for controlling drugs to prevent their misuse and for dealing with social problems connected with their misuse. It also regulates the legitimate trade in drugs. For England and Wales, the cost to this Department of enforcing the provisions of the Act, including police activity and the costs of dealing with convicted offenders, was estimated at about £147 million for the year 1992-93.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of court cases involving the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 are (a) cannabis, (b) cocaine and (c) heroin related.

Mr. Maclean: In 1992, the last year for which figures are available, the percentage of persons found guilty of offences against the Misuse of Drugs Act in respect of each type of drug was: cannabis, 65 per cent.; cocaine, 3 per cent.; and heroin, 4·5 per cent.

Drug-related Crime

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the estimated annual cost of drug-related crime;

(2) what have been the changes in (a) the number of drug-related crimes and (b) the percentage of all crime that is drug related since 1979;

(3) what is his estimate of the percentage of crime committed annually that is drug related.

Mr. Maclean: The involvement of drug misusers in criminal activity is difficult to quantify. It is not possible to estimate with any accuracy the amount of crime which is drug related or the cost of such crime.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the changes in (a) the number of drug-related crimes involving firearms and (b) the percentage of all crimes involving firearms that are drug related.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in the United Kingdom have a criminal record for possession of cannabis; and how many police officers in the United Kingdom are solely engaged in combating drug-related crime.

Mr. Maclean: Information on the total number of persons who have a criminal record for possession of cannabis is not collected centrally. The number of persons who have been found guilty, cautioned or compounded for possession of cannabis in each year from 1982 to 1992 is given in table 3.3 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Statistics of drugs seizures and offenders dealt with, United Kingdom, 1992"—issue 30/93—a copy of which is in the Library.

By the end of 1992 over 1,400 police officers were wholly engaged in the investigation of drug-related crime in England and Wales; in Scotland more than 120 police officers were specifically engaged in drugs work; and in Northern Ireland some 34 officers were so occupied.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number and proportion of the prison population serving sentences for convictions on drug-related offences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 31 January 1994:

DRUG RELATED OFFENCES

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what is the total number and proportion of the prison population serving sentences for convictions on drug-related offences.

Figures for the population in Prison Service establishments by offence group are published annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales", Table 1.8 of the volume for 1991 (Cm 2157). Provisional information for 30 September 1993 shows that 3,244 prisoners were recorded centrally as being sentenced for drug offences, just over 10 per cent. of the total sentenced population for whom an offence was recorded.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number and proportion of prisoners convicted for drug-related offences who reoffend.

Mr. Maclean: The available information on the reoffending of prisoners is the rate of reconviction within two and four years after discharge from prison.

The latest statistics are for those discharged from prison service establishments in 1987 after completion of a prison sentence for which the principal offence was a drugs offence. Within two years of discharge, 1,136 or 37 per cent. of those discharged had been convicted of a further offence; within four years, 1,506 or 49 per cent. of those discharged were reconvicted. The numbers exclude the reconviction of a small number of discharges whose criminal histories could not be traced in the offenders' index.

Passport Agency

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for the future of the Passport Agency.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The performance and options for the future of the United Kingdom Passport Agency are currently being reviewed in accordance with the normal procedure for triennial reviews of executive agencies. A decision on the future of the Passport Agency will be made in the light of these reviews. An announcement will then be made.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average cost of issuing a passport by (a) the Passport Agency and (b) equivalent agencies in each of the other European Union countries.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The cost of the 10-year standard British passport is £18. I am advised that the cost of the passports of each of the European Union countries is as shown in the table:

	£
Belgium[1]	36-48
Denmark	40
France[1]	40
Germany	11·50
Greece[1]	19
Ireland	43
Italy[1]	39
Luxembourg[1]	4
Netherlands[1]	32
Portugal	13
Spain[1]	6

[1] Passports valid for five years.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the financial results for the past two years of the Passport Agency and the expected results for the next two years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Passport Agency's financial performance is measured by efficiency reductions in the unit cost of passport services. Over the period 1991-92 and 1992-93 the agency has made significant reductions in unit costs amounting to 4·2 per cent. compared with an aggregate target of 3·9 per cent. in this period. In the financial years 1993-94 and 1994-95 the agency expects to achieve further efficiency savings of around 3 per cent. in each year.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) those prisons in which there is a problem with trafficking in illegal drugs and (b) those in which there is no problem with drug trafficking.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 31 January 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about drug trafficking in prison.

The attached figures show establishments where there have been convictions in the last two years for offences of "trafficking" ie selling or delivering controlled drugs and attempting, assisting or inciting the selling or delivery of controlled drugs. The figures also show the number of such convictions. There have been no trafficking convictions at any other Prison Service establishment.

The Prison Service is committed to taking all reasonable measures to prevent drugs entering prisons and to eliminate the use of drugs within prisons. Existing programmes include the extensive use of searching and intelligence, as well as support for drug abusers to help them overcome their addiction.

Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's estimate of the annual expenditure by users on drugs.

Mr. Maclean: Drug misuse is an illegal and, therefore, clandestine activity. It is not possible to produce a reliable estimate of the amount spent annually on drugs by users.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the changes in the consumption of (a) heroin, (b) cocaine and (c) cannabis since 1979.

Mr. Maclean: Reliable information on levels of consumption of the drugs mentioned is not available. Information on the percentage change in the number of recorded seizures of each drug over the period in question is given in the table.

United Kingdom	Number of seizures
	1979	1992	percentage change
Heroin	600	2,968	+395
Cocaine	348	2,365	+580
Cannabis	14,116	57,663	+308

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many registered addicts are addicted to prescribed drugs in the United Kingdom;

(2) if he will list the 10 prescribed drugs to which the largest number of addicts are addicted in the United Kingdom and the totals of addicts.

Mr. Maclean: Information on the identity of the drugs, dependence on which requires medical practitioners to notify the Home Office, and the numbers of persons addicted to those drugs, is given in table 2 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Statistics of drug addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1992"—issue 15/93—a copy of which is in the Library.

All these drugs are legitimately prescribed or administered on occasion, but the proprietary names of those drugs in the list, where they exist, are: methadone (Physeptone); dipipanone (Diconal); dextromoramide (Palfium); and phenazocine (Narphen). Methadone is the drug normally used to treat dependence on heroin.

Air Guns

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what controls exist on the sale of air guns and air rifles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The acquisition, possession and use of air weapons are regulated by the Firearms Act 1968 which prohibits their sale of hire to anyone under the age of 17. Young people under 14 may not buy, hire, be given, or own an air weapon and may use one only if they are supervised by someone over 21. Those air weapons which are classified as "specially dangerous" under the Firearms (Dangerous Air Weapons) Rules 1969 are subject to firearm certificate control.

In its second annual report the Firearms Consultative Committee, the independent statutory body established to advise Government on the firearms legislation, concluded that the law as it stands is adequate to deal with current levels of misuse. My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to introduce further controls.

Weapons Smuggling

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to other EC Governments concerning the smuggling of weapons into Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No specific representations have been made. A directive on control of the acquisition and possession of weapons was adopted by the Council of Ministers on 18 June 1991. All member states of the European Union are bound by the directive which came into effect on 1 January 1993.

Under the directive, movements of firearms are subject to a new licensing system. As before, anyone bringing a firearm into this country must have prior permission. In addition to this, though, each transfer of a firearm into this country will be notified to my Department via a new information system. The information will be passed to police and customs officers who will investigate any irregularities.

Secure Establishments

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the secure establishments to which youngsters aged 12 to 14 years will be remanded by the courts while awaiting trial or sentence, giving the number of places available at each and the normal resident age range in each.

Mr. Maclean: I have tabled an amendemnt to the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill which will provide courts with the power to remand 12 to 14-year-olds to local authority accommodation with a security requirement. The responsibility for placing a juvenile so remanded will rest with the local authority. The pool of secure accommodation available to local authorities to assist them in discharging this duty will be expanded. The Government will be providing further funding to local authorities for this purpose.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Howard: The number of Home Office staff covered by the statutory sick pay scheme is about 49,500.

Firearms Licences

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are held by the Metropolitan police to assess the suitability of an individual for a firearms licence.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Before issuing a firearm certificate a chief officer of police must be satisfied that the applicant is not prohibited from possessing a firearm, can be permitted to possess a firearm without danger to public safety or the peace, and has a good reason for having a firearm. These criteria are set out in the Firearms Act 1968 to 1992 and apply equally to all police force areas.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of firearms certificates issued per year for each of the last 10 years by the Metropolitan police; how many in each year were renewals; and what was the total number of valid certificates at each year.

Mr. Maclean: The following table shows for the Metropolitan police district for the years 1986 to 1992 the number of new firearms certificates granted, the number of renewals and the number on issue at 31 December. Figures for the years prior to 1986 are not readily available and those for 1993 are not yet available.

Firearm certificates granted, renewed and on issue at 31 December in the Metropolitan police district, 1986 to 1992

Year	Granted	Renewed	On issue at 31 December
1986	1,066	2,625	9,084
1987	993	2,568	9,036
1988	738	2,278	8,877

Year	Granted	Renewed	On issue at 31 December
1989	825	2,249	8,615
1990	864	2,657	9,929

1992	855	2,531	9,427

Young Offenders

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements exist within the Prison Service statistical divisions for providing information on juveniles and young people in prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 27 January 1994]: Information on the Prison Service establishment in which held, the age, type of offence, length of service, type of custody, previous convictions, time served and on the frequency of reoffending following release of young offenders is compiled by the research and statistics department. It is published annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales". Summary information is monitored on a monthly basis. Operational information about the numbers of young offenders is monitored daily.

The provision of full information has only recently been reinstated following completion of changes to the computer system to reflect the implementation in October 1992 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. The publication of the 1992 issue of "Prison Statistics" has been delayed.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Allowances

11. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of people on disability living allowance and attendance allowance at any one time; and what were the equivalent figures for mobility allowance and attendance allowance in 1979.

12. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants are on disability living allowance and attendance allowance at any one time; and what were the comparable figures for mobility allowance and attendance allowance in 1979.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table:

Receipt of attendance allowance, mobility allowance and disability living allowance

	1979-80	1993-94
Attendance allowance	285,000	830,000
Mobility allowance	140,000	n/a
Disability living allowance	n/a	1,005,000
Totals	[1]425,000	[2]1,835,000

Sources: The Government's expenditure plans 1984-85 to 1986-87 Cmnd. 9143-II and social security departmental report 1993-94 to 1995-96 Cmnd. 2213.

[1] People getting both benefits are counted twice underestimating the real increase between 1979-80 and 1993-94.

[2] From April 1992 disability living allowance replaced attendance allowance and mobility allowance for people who became disabled before age 65.

Pensioner Incomes

13. Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average pensioner's income from savings.

Mr. Hague: Pensioners' estimated average weekly income from savings is as follows:

£30·30 for all pensioners[1];
£45·10 for pensioner couples; and
£21·60 for single pensioners.

[1] Single people over state pension age and couples where the husband is over state pension age.

Source: The 1990-91 family expenditure survey. Figures are at January 1991 prices.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much total pension incomes have increased per annum between 1979 and the latest year for which figures are available; and what was the equivalent figure between 1974 and 1979.

Mr. Hague: The estimated average annual increase in pensioners' total income in the years 1979 to 1990-91—the latest year for which figures are available—was:

3·1 per cent. for all pensioners[1];
2·9 per cent. for pensioner couples; and
2·9 per cent. for single pensioners.

The available information, although not directly comparable, shows an increase of 0·6 per cent. per year between 1974 and 1979.

[1] Single people over state pension age and couples where the husband is over state pension age.

Note: Information for the period 1979 to 1990-91 derives from the family expenditure survey, and is consistent with the methodology of the households below average incomes survey. For years prior to 1979 the FES is not consistent with the HBAI. In particular, there is no breakdown between single pensioners and pensioner couples.

26. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the rise in pensioners' total average net income since 1979.

Mr. Hague: The estimated rise in pensioners' total average net income, in real terms, from 1979 to 1990-91—the latest year for which figures are available—was:

Before housing costs:
42 per cent. for all pensioners[1];
39 per cent. for pensioner couples; and
39 per cent. for single pensioners.
After housing costs:
54 per cent. for all pensioners[1];
53 per cent. for pensioner couples; and
49 per cent. for single pensioners.

[1] Single people over state pension age and couples where the husband is over state pension age.

23. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the value of the average pensioner's income from savings and occupational pensions; and what were the comparable figures in 1979.

Mr. Hague: The latest estimate of the average weekly income to pensioners from savings and occupational pensions is:

£63·20 to all pensioners[1]
£99·50 to pensioner couples and
£41·80 to single pensioners.

The comparable figures for 1979 are:

£27·80 to all pensioners[1]
£46·40 to pensioner couples and
£18 to single pensioners.

husband is over state pension age.

Independent Living Fund

14. Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many severely disabled people have received payments from the independent living (1993) fund; what percentage of its budget the fund has so far used; and how many clients received funding from its predecessor independent living fund in each of the last two years of its existence.

Mr. Scott: On 20 January, 108 people had received payments from the independent living (1993) fund and a further 28 cases had been approved for payment. The fund had spent 13 per cent. of its budget. The old ILF made 7,319 new awards in the year 1991-92 and 10,620 such awards in 1992-93. support for those cases continues through the independent living (extension) fund which is now paying 18,500 people at an estimated cost of £120 million in the current year. The 1993 fund is an integral part of the Government's community care initiative. It is therefore inappropriate to compare the performance of the two funds.

Family Credit

15. Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual spending on family credit; and what was the spending on family income supplement in 1979.

Mr. Burt: The published forecast for family credit expenditure for 1993-94 is £965 million. This is 14 times more in real terms than the £24 million spent on family income supplement in 1978-79. The 1994 departmental report, to be published in March, will give a revised estimate.

25. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the results of the introduction of payment of family credit as a lump sum.

Mr. Burt: Since 25 October 1993, over 3,000 awards of family credit of £4 a week or less have been made by lump sum payment.

Invalidity Benefit

16. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of people who will receive invalidity benefit two years after the introduction of the proposed incapacity benefit.

Mr. Scott: Invalidity benefit and sickness benefit will, subject to parliamentary approval, be replaced by a single new benefit—incapacity benefit—from April 1995. The estimated average number of people who will receive incapacity benefit in 1996-97 is 1,814,000.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been made in entitlement to and the method of calculating invalidity benefit since 1979.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table:

[1] Changes to the entitlement conditions for sickness benefit which affected the numbers subsequently qualifying for invalidity benefit.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people receiving invalidity benefit on 1 December 1993 were at that time aged (i) between 45 and 49 years, (ii) between 50 and 54 years, (iii) between 55 and 57 years and (iv) 58 years or over.

Mr. Scott: Information for 1 December 1993 is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The latest available information relates to 4 April 1992, and is in the table.

Invalidity benefit recipients by age[1]

Invalidity benefit recipients	Number[2]
Aged 45-49	127,000
Aged 50-54	187,000
Aged 55-57	154,000
Aged 58 and over	674,000

[1] Age as at 31 March 1992.

[2] Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain at 4 April 1992, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Income Support

18. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children in Britain are dependent on income support; and how many were dependent on supplementary benefit in 1979.

Mr. Burt: In February 1993, 2·97 million children were dependent on an adult receiving income support. In November 1979 there were 0·92 million.

Notes:

1. Sources: supplementary benefit statistics annual inquiry, November 1979/income support statistics quarterly inquiry, February 1993.
2. The figures have been rounded to the nearest ten thousand.
3. Children are defined as being under 16 years of age. Dependants are young people under the age of 19 still living in the parental home.

Pensioner Households

19. Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households there were in 1979 and in the year for which the latest figures are available below the 1979 supplementary benefit level.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available. Supplementary benefit rates varied widely between households and it is therefore not possible to refer to a single level.

Since 1979, pensioners' average income has increased by 42 per cent.

Child Support Agency

21. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for further changes to the operation of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The recently announced changes were formulated in the light of representations received from hon. Members and the public, and of the recommendations of the Social Security Select Committee. They form a balanced package which takes account of the interests of children, parents with care, absent parents, and the taxpayer.

There are no plans for further change.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether there is a distinction under the terms of the Child Support Act 1991 between who can be notified of the outcome of a maintenance assessment decision dependent on whether the case is being dealt with in England and Wales or in Scotland.

Mr. Burt: The only such distinction is that a child who is over the age of 11 years and is resident in Scotland may apply to the Child Support Agency for maintenance assessment to be made in respect of him. If he makes such an application he, together with the parent with care and the absent parent are notified of the outcome of the application. There is no provision for a child resident in England or Wales to make an application under the Child Support Act.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland considers representations made by residents of Wales on Child Support Agency matters.

Mr. Burt: Where an application for child support maintenance is made by a parent with care who is resident in Northern Ireland in respect of an absent parent who is resident in Wales, the application would be dealt with in Northern Ireland, in accordance with the Child Support (Great Britain Reciprocal Arrangements) Regulations (Northern Ireland). Similarly, if a number of cases are linked together because they share a parent in common all the cases are dealt with under the legislation under which the first application was considered. In these cases, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland would consider representations other than those proper to the independent adjudicating authorities.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what revenues or savings to public funds are expected to accrue as a result of the creation of the Child Support Agency; and what changes in the expected revenues or savings will arise from the implementation of the proposed changes in the agency's rules.

Mr. Burt: The amount of child support maintenance originally estimated to be collected in 1993-94 is £530 million. The actual amount will be lower than the estimate, but it is not possible to provide an accurate revised figure, since the full impact of the proposed policy changes is not yet known.

28. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement summarising changes the Government are introducing into the operation of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The proposed changes include: a significant increase in the margin of protected income which all absent parents keep above income support levels; reductions in the element within the formula which reflects the care needed by children, when the youngest child reaches age 11 and 14; reductions in the rate of contribution towards the additional element, above the basic maintenance requirement, where there are fewer than three children; and a substantial extension of the provisions for phasing in new payments for absent parents who previously had a formal maintenance agreement.

The changes form a balanced package which takes account of the interests of parents with care, absent parents, children and the taxpayer.

"A Lost Generation"

22. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what responses he has made to the report "A Lost Generation", published by the National Children's Home, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: I received a copy of the report about a month after it was published, but not directly from the National Children's Home. I replied to the sender and drew attention to the Department's expenditure on income support in 1993-94 which is to exceed £16 billion—an increase of £1·6 billion over 1992-93.

Benefits

24. Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent measures his Department has taken to maintain the real level of benefits.

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State shall shortly be laying before the House the annual uprating order which, subject to parliamentary approval, will increase social security benefit rates from April. Benefits will be increased in line with inflation with additional increases for those on income-related benefits, pensioners, and the sick and disabled.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish an analysis of the estimated per capita expenditure in England, Wales and Scotland on (a) supplementary benefit, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) sickness and invalidity benefit, (d) industrial disablement benefit (e) housing benefit and (f) other benefits.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the precise form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Estimated per capita expenditure

£ per person per year

	England	Scotland	Wales
Income support	257	295	288
Unemployment benefit	32	30	25
Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit	102	178	247
Industrial disablement benefit	10	11	19
Housing benefit/council tax benefit	86	122	87

Notes:

1. Figures are for 1992-93 and are estimates only.
2. Estimates are based on benefit expenditure per head of population in England, Scotland and Wales and not an average of the number receiving each benefit.

State Pensions

27. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people per annum lose their entitlement to part of their state pension because of incomplete contributions.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested.

The number of men and women resident in Great Britain who reached state pension age—65 for men and 60 for women—in the year ending 31 March 1993—the latest date for which information is available—and who were awarded a state retirement pension based on their own contributions at less than the standard rate due to insufficient contributions was 130,920.

Information is not available where state pension is claimed after age 65 for men or 60 for women or where a person has no entitlement to state pension.

National Insurance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average number of years of national insurance contributions per claimant which have been paid by people now receiving invalidity benefit.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Children (Unemployment)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the latest figures showing for the Durham area (a) the number of children who live in families with an unemployed head and (b) the number of children living in families with a long-term unemployed head.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the form requested. For information on Great Britain as a whole I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Croydon, North-West (Mr. Wicks) on 28 January, Official Report, column 449..

Benefit Overpayments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases action has been taken to recover overpayments of benefits under common law in each year since 1970.

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Social Fund

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the 1994-95 social fund budget will be broken down between (a) mandatory grants, (b) budgeting loans, (c) crisis loans and (d) community care grants.

Mr. Scott: No decision has yet been made on the breakdown of the discretionary social fund budget between loans and grants. Regulated payments from the social fund are not subject to a cash-limited budget.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the administrative cost as a proportion of expenditure on the social fund for each year since its inception.

Mr. Scott: Administration costs as a proportion of programme expenditure are published annually in the departmental report. Annual social fund administration costs have only been included since 1990-91. Details are in the table.

	Social fund administration costs (in £ millions)	Administrative cost as a percentage of benefit expenditure
1990-91	132	47·1
1991-92	163	45·2

The information for 1992-93 will be contained in the next departmental report due to be published in March 1994.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish a table showing the gross and net social fund discretionary budget in each year since 1988-89 in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms in 1993-94 prices, broken down into (i) budgeting loans, (ii) crisis loans and (iii) community care grants.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table. Gross expenditure has risen in real terms since 1988-89. Direct comparisons between net expenditure in 1988-89 and subsequent years would ignore the additional expenditure made possible by the recycling of money received from loan repayments.

Social fund expenditure since 1988-89

all figures are £ million

	1988-89 outturn	1989-90 outturn	1990-91 outturn	1991-92 outturn	1992-93 outturn
Crisis loans (gross)	17	22	28	37	43
Budgeting loans (gross)	108	119	128	160	181
Crisis loans (net)	9	8	9	11	9
Budgeting loans (net)	68	25	22	38	27
Community care grants	41	60	67	79	90
Total gross expenditure	166	201	223	276	314
Total gross expenditure 1993-94 prices[1]	218	248	254	297	324

[1] Real terms figures have been calculated using the current GDP deflator and may alter. In any event the social fund budget is based on a number of factors, including the level of gross allocation permitted by expected loan recoveries; and is not linked to inflation forecasts.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing (a) the gross and (b) the net discretionary social fund budget on a per capita basis of the number of income support claimants in (i) cash and (ii) real terms for each year from 1988-89 to 1994-95.

Mr. Scott: The available information is in the table.

Expenditure and caseload figures for 1993-94 and subsequent years will not be available until after the end of the relevant financial year. However, the net social fund discretionary budget was increased by £5 million in 1993-94 which will lead to significantly higher expenditure in that year.

Social fund expenditure per capita of income support claimants

Year	Cash terms £	[1]Real terms £
1988-89	38·52	50·81
1989-90	48·38	59·69
1990-91	53·22	60·62
1991-92	59·23	63·52
1992-93	59·02	60·90

[1] Real terms figures are expressed at 1993-94 prices and have been calculated using the current GDP deflator and may alter.

Compensation Payments

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of the benefits claimants who have been awarded compensation for injury and disease and who have repaid benefits to the compensation recovery unit subsequently had their compensation payment reduced because of contributory negligence;

(2) what is the total sum of money claimed back under the Social Security Act 1990 by the compensation recovery unit from benefit claimants who have been awarded compensation for injury or disease and who have had their compensation payment reduced because of contributory negligence.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Goode Report

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what new proposals he has to implement the conclusions of the Goode report.

Mr. Hague: The Department issued a series of consultation papers in December to promote discussion of the issues raised by the Goode report. The responses to the consultation exercise will inform decision making, and the Government will make proposals in due course.

Advisory Panel on Assessment of Incapacity

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) for what reasons the identity of the members of the advisory panel on assessment of incapacity is regarded as confidential;

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of briefing and background papers supplied to members of the advisory panel on assessment of incapacity;

(3) whether members of the advisory panel on assessment of incapacity have access to the responses to the consultation document on the subject;

(4) if he will publish the form of invitation to join the advisory panel on assessment of incapacity.

Mr. Scott: The consultation exercise and the associated consultation document seek views from all interested parties on the proposed new, more objective, medical incapacity test. The assessment panel has been formed to help us construct incapacity scales to be used in the test. The work of the panel is an important part of the consultation exercise.

The panel is being asked to complete a series of exercises which focus on technical questions, and to give their individual expert opinions, not to act as representatives. We are not seeking to influence the decisions of panel members, and we hope they will be free from other pressures, although we do encourage them to discuss tasks with colleagues if they wish.

The panel has been drawn as widely as possible from the medical and scientific communities and from groups of and for disabled people so that a full range of views can be heard. We welcome the comments of individual panel members on the wider issues discussed in the consultation document as well as their views on the incapacity scales.

We are committed to producing a report on the results of the consultation exercise and on the new test. Parliament will then have the opportunity to consider the detail of the new test when the relevant regulations are made. This will allow the widest possible public scrutiny of the methods used.

A copy of the background paper used by the assessment panel and a form of the invitation to join the panel have been placed in the Library.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the projected savings from the arrangements for the dependents of new incapacity benefit claimants under pensionable age during weeks 28 to 52 of any period of sickness.

Mr. Scott: It is estimated that there will be a net saving of £5 million in 1995-96 and £10 million in 1996-97.

Note: Estimate expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to nearest £5 million and is net of offsetting changes in expenditure on income-related benefits.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the projected savings from the introduction of higher rate incapacity benefit payable to claimaints from weeks 28 to 52 in any period of sickness.

Mr. Scott: It is estimated that paying the higher rate of short-term incapacity benefit between the 28th and 52nd weeks of incapacity will produce net savings of around £110 million in 1995-96, and around £150 million in 1996-97.

Notes:

(1) Estimates expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to the nearest £10 million, and net of offsetting changes in income related benefit expenditure.

(2) Estimates take account of the effect on incapacity benefit recipients of the planned changes in the qualifying conditions for the disability premium paid with the income-related benefits.

Asbestos-related Diseases

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will exempt benefits claimants who are awarded compensation for asbestos-related diseases from repaying benefits under the Social Security Act 1990.

Mr. Hague: The compensation recovery scheme is now administered under the Social Security Administration Act 1992. We have no plans to add awards for asbesto-related diseases to the list of exempt payments.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Scott: Including casual staff, approximately 100,000 as at 31 December 1993.

Mortgage Payments

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to provide means-tested assistance towards mortgage payments for people in low-paid employment who are excluded from income support.

Mr. Burt: We have no such plans. A mortgage benefit scheme which helps such people would be very costly as well as significantly increasing dependence on state assistance both by individuals and the market.

Job Seeker's Allowance

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what distinction will be made in payment of the job seeker's allowance between (a) claimants under 25 years old and (b) claimants over 25 years old, from April 1996.

Mr. Burt: Job seeker's allowance will be a single, integrated benefit with unified rates of payment aligned to those for income support. Therefore, differential rates will apply to people aged 18 to 24 and those aged 25 years or over.

Social Security Tribunal

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many times in the last six months he has not accepted the recommendation of the social security tribunal regarding a reduction in the repayment of benefit owed to the Department where the person has been sentenced through the criminal courts and is still in receipt of state benefits;

(2) how many times in the last six months he has used his powers to overturn a decision of the social security tribunal and instructed that no benefit repayment should be made where a person has been sentenced by the criminal court and is still in receipt of state benefit;

(3) what discretion the social security tribunal has to recommend that no repayments of state benefits are made where an illegal claim for benefit has been made, and the claimant has been sentenced by the criminal court.

Mr. Burt: Social security appeal tribunals can only determine whether the adjudication officer has applied the law correctly in determining an overpayment. The decision to enforce recovery of an overpayment is a matter solely for the Secretary of State. Therefore there is no discretion nor any recommendation in these circumstances.

State Earnings-related Pensions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much SERPS pension is payable in 1994-95 to a contracted-out employee with average earnings who retired at pension age at the end of each year from 1980 to 1993.

Mr. Hague [holding answer 19 January 1994]: The information is in the table.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Langaurgh (Mr. Bates) of 1 December, Official Report, column 598, if he will give figures for the numbers of employees opted out of state earnings-related pensions in each region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hague [holding answer 21 January 1994]: Information for 1991-92, the latest year for which information is available, is in the table.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the number of people holding (a) personal pensions and (b) occupational pensions (i) in total and (ii) in each region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hague [holding answer 21 January 1994]: The number of people accruing benefits with personal pensions in 1991-92 was 7·8 million. The number of people accruing benefits in an occupational pension scheme in 1991-92 was 10·7 million. Only the numbers of people with appropriate personal pensions and contracted-out occupational pensions can be broken down by region. TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (a) costs and (b) benefits accrue to Britain from the reduction in electricity voltage agreed with the European Community.

Mr. Eggar: All EC countries are changing their low voltage supply systems to a nominal voltage of 230/400 volts to provide voltage harmonisation throughout the EC. The United Kingdom decided to do so after extensive consultation.

The costs to Britain of this standardisation will largely be borne by the electricity supply industry. Estimates put these at £680 million, at 1992 prices, over a 30-year period, together with an annual increase in distribution losses of £20 million.

The benefits are less readily quantified but are those arising from standardisation which brings greater market opportunities to manufacturers, exporters and importers, and to consumers.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the conversion costs of the electricity supply industry to reduce voltage on supplies.

Mr. Eggar: The electricity supply industry has advised that to move from a reduction of 230 volts+10 per cent./–10 per cent. to, say, +6 per cent./–6 per cent. will require the replacement of many distribution transformers. The cost is estimated to be £680 million at 1992 prices assuming a phased replacement programme over a 30-year period.

GATT

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what agreements were reached at the trade negotiations committee of GATT, held on 20 January, in regards to preparation of a work programme on trade and the environment for the forthcoming Marrakesh meeting of GATT.

Mr. Needham: The GATT trade negotiations committee decided on 15 December to draw up a programme of work:

> to identify the relationship between trade measures and environmental measures, in order to promote sustainable development and
>
> to make appropriate recommendations on whether any modifications of the provisions of the multilateral trading system are required, compatible with the open, equitable and non-discriminatory nature of the system.

It was agreed that the TNC would present the programme of work for adoption as soon as possible and no later than the ministerial meeting in Marrakesh.

Nuclear Fuel Industry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new opportunities will become available to the British nuclear fuel industry following the recent decision of the French nuclear authorities to reopen its fast breeder reactor project at Creys Malville.

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for the companies concerned.

Malaysia (Exports)

Mr. Mudie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the value of exports from the United Kingdom to Malaysia in each year since 1980.

Mr. Needham: The information is given in the following table.

Value of United Kingdom exports to Malaysia

Year	£ million
1980	223·3
1981	196·2
1982	210·6
1983	248·3

Pergau Project

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many files marked "Not for NAO eyes" his Department holds in relating to the Pergau hydro-electric project in Malaysia.

Mr. Needham: My Department holds two files marked "Not for NAO eyes" relating to the National Audit Office inquiry into the Pergau hydro-electric project.

As explained in the answer I gave to the right hon. Gentleman on 6 December 1993, Official Report, column 38, the marking "Not for National Audit Office eyes" is used only in accordance with an agreement between the Treasury and the National Audit Office, under which current documents relating to the handling of relations between Departments and the National Audit Office and Public Accounts Committee are not automatically available to the National Audit Office.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what options he is considering for the scope and format of the review of the future prospects of nuclear power in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Mr. Merchant) on 16 December 1993, Official Report, column 759.

Coal Mines

Mr. Lester: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 645, if a subsidy may be paid by the Government to British Coal if the mine in question is not expected to return to profit shortly without the aid of a subsidy.

Mr. Eggar: The aim of the subsidy is to provide temporary financial support to pits that have long-term potential, to provide them the time needed to reduce costs and become competitive. In order to qualify for subsidy my Department must therefore be satisfied that the pit has a realistic chance of supplying coal on a commercially viable basis in the longer term, without the need for subsidy.

Regional Enterprise Grants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what total amount of funding has been made available over the last year by (a) regional enterprise grants and (b) the English Estates scheme.

Mr. Sainsbury: The provision for regional enterprise grants in 1993-94 in England is £8·8 million. Forecast capital expenditure by English Estates on behalf of my Department in 1993-94 is £71 million.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has examined a copy of the Touche Ross report on the prospective profitability of the THORP plant at Sellafield.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 17 December 1993, Official Report, column 986.

Deregulation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many copies of the final recommendations document of his deregulation task forces were printed; at what cost; to whom were they distributed; and if he will make a statement on the proposals for reform contained in the documents.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: A total of 10,000 copies of the booklet setting out the proposals of the seven business deregulation task forces have been printed at a cost of £1,100. Copies were made available to Members via the Vote Office and were distributed to Government Departments, the press, business and consumer organisations, people who submitted evidence to the task forces and members of the public on request. Of the 605 proposals, 250 have been agreed, 280 are under review and 75 have been rejected.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the methods used by his Department to assess whether particular regulations are a burden to business.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The principal methods of assessing whether regulations are an undue burden upon business are compliance cost assessment and risk assessment. The CCA methodology is set out in a booklet "Checking the Cost to Business: A Guide to Compliance Cost Assessment" and guidance on risk assessment is given in a booklet "Regulation in the Balance: A Guide to Risk Assessment". Copies of both booklets have been placed in the Library of the House.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been spent on information technology in each of the last five years within the Insolvency Service; and what is the projected expenditure over the next five years.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The expenditure on information technology on behalf of the Insolvency Service during the last and next five years is in the table:

	£ million
1989-90	[illegible]·9
1990-91	2·0
1991-92	1·5
1992-93	3·0
1993-94	5·2
1994-95	3·5
1995-96	2·6
1996-97	2·5
1997-98	2·5
1998-99	2·5

The current and earlier years figures include, where appropriate, capital expenditure paid, on behalf of the Insolvency Service, from the DTI's capital computer budget.

Figures for 1994-95 onwards include committed current and capital expenditure plus minor amounts for project enhancements. Future major projects are excluded as these are yet to be quantified or approved.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bankruptcy prosecutions were successfully obtained by the Insolvency Service for each of the last five years; and how many of those cases in each year were prosecuted under each of the relevant sections of the Insolvency Act 1986.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The numbers of bankrupts successfully prosecuted by my Department on reports received from the Insolvency Service were 249 in 1989, 209 in 1990, 220 in 1991 and 192 in 1992. The total for 1993 will not be known until all court returns have been received.

Information on the number of convictions obtained under the relevant sections of the Insolvency Act 1986 and associated legislation is regularly published in the Insolvency Service general annual report, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Disqualification Proceedings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many directives he has issued in each of the last five years for the institution of disqualification proceedings showing the number issued (a) after receipt of a report from the Official Receiver and (b) after receipt of a report from insolvency practitioners.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The following number of directions to proceed have been given:

Bio-ethics

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which aspects of the report of the Nuffield committee on bio-ethics in relation to the use of genetic screening information by insurance companies are being considered by his Department.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Lord President on 11 January 1994, Official Report, column 83. My Department, in consultation with others, is considering those aspects of the report concerned with the balance to be struck between the commercial freedom of insurance companies, considerations of public health and the individual's right to privacy.

British Nuclear Fuels plc

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the chairperson of BNFL about the redistribution of the surplus in the pension fund.

Mr. Eggar: I meet the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc from time to time to discuss a range of issues.

Employees of British Nuclear Fuels plc are members of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority pension schemes. There is no pension fund and consequently no surplus as these schemes are unfunded public service pension schemes. Payments to members are met through class IV, vote 3 of the supply estimates.

Energy Savings Trust

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to ensure that new gas suppliers maintain the support the Government have established for the energy savings trust.

Mr. Eggar: I shall consider what obligations it is appropriate to impose upon suppliers to the new competitive gas market in the light of the response to the consultation which I shall be carrying out jointly with the Director General of Gas Supply.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what requirement he (a) imposes and (b) plans to impose on the director-general of Ofgas to take into account energy efficiency in her decisions.

Mr. Eggar: Section 4 of the Gas Act imposes upon the Director General of Gas Supply the duty to exercise her functions under the Act in the manner which she considers is best calculated, inter alia, to promote efficiency and economy on the part of gas suppliers and the efficient use of gas.

Consultants

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the cost of employing consultants to advise on the future of (a) the Accounts Services Agency, (b) the industrial research establishment agencies, (c) the Insolvency Service Agency and (d) the Patent Office Agency.

Mr. Eggar: The fees paid to the consultants employed in each case are confidential for commercial reasons.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a copy of the relevant consultants' report dealing with the future of (a) the Accounts Services Agency, (b) the industrial research establishment agencies, (c) the Insolvency Service agency and (d) the United Kingdom Patent Office Agency.

Mr. Eggar: These reports may contain information which is managerially or commercially sensitive. Decisions on whether to place copies in the Library of the House will be taken when the findings of each report are considered.

Advisers

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the terms on which (a) Francis Maude and (b) Ray Reardon are employed as advisers to his Department.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Francis Maude has agreed to chair, in a voluntary capacity, the new deregulation task force.

Ray Reardon has been asked to consider how various corporate restructuring techniques could be applied to parts of the Department. He has also agreed to do this in a voluntary capacity.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will reconsider his decision to end the iron and steel readaptation benefit scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Mr. Milligan) on 27 January 1994, Official Report, columns 369-70.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. John M. Taylor: In 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, and 1993 the number of employees convicted of fraud was, respectively, two, one, none, three and three. Of these, six were dismissed by the Department, and three resigned before any internal disciplinary proceedings were taken.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Employees of the Lord Chancellor's Department who are convicted of fraud will be subject to internal disciplinary proceedings. Although each case will be treated on its own merits, serious fraud is regarded as gross misconduct, and will usually lead to dismissal at the conclusion of the internal disciplinary proceedings.

HEALTH

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the cost of implementing the regional health authority changes proposed from 1 April 1994.

Dr. Mawhinney: The proposals announced in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement on "Managing the New NHS" on 21 October 1993 will streamline national health service central management. It is not possible to estimate the cost of implementing the proposals at this stage. However, the changes will result in substantial savings which will be reinvested in patient care.

Public Relations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all the occasions since 1990 on which an external public relations company or consultant was employed by her Department with the name of the company or consultant involved; and what was the cost of each transaction.

Mr. Sackville: The functions that are identified as public relations are normally carried out by the Department's information division.

No public relations company or consultant has been directly employed since 1990. During European Drug Prevention Week the organisers sub-contracted a public relations consultant to help produce a video news release. Costs for this cannot be separately identified.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants have sought early retirement in each of the last five years in each region.

Dr. Mawhinney: Data collected do not distinguish between consultants and associate specialists and it is not maintained in regional form.

The total numbers of consultants and associate specialists who retired early under provisions to allow for replacement of senior consultant posts are:

	Number
1989-90	75
1990-91	45
1991-92	38
1992-93	35
[1]1993-94	48

[1] To 31 December 1993.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of officers employed on programmes dealing with drug abuse in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Bowis: Government guidelines state that drug misusers should have access to a range of services, including advice and counselling, in-patient and community detoxification, residential rehabilitation and follow up support, where needed. These services are provided by both the statutory and non-statutory sectors. Services employ a range of staff which may include specialist doctors, drug workers, general practitioners, community psychiatric nurses, social and youth workers. Information on the total of these is not held centrally.

Mr. Richard Marsh

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 1003, what are the particular qualifications, expertise or experience relating to health and social services of her special adviser, Mr. Richard Marsh.

Mr. Sackville: I do not intend to comment on the qualifications, expertise or experience of the special adviser to my right hon. Friend.

International Peto Institute

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress there has been in the construction of an International Peto Institute in Budapest; when she expects building work to begin; when Her Majesty's Government's obligation to help fund this project will expire; and what assessment she has made of whether the funding pledged by Her Majesty's Government to this project could be more effectively spent in creating an equivalent facility in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Bowis: Under the agreement between the United Kingdom and Hungarian Governments, further payments are dependent upon the commencement of construction of the International Peto Institute, for which no date has yet been set by the International Peto Foundation. Under this agreement, the institute has to be operational by February 1996 to avoid repayment of all or part of the payments made. Facilities for conductive education are already developing in the United Kingdom.

Diabetics

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what policy she has for targeting care towards insulin-dependent diabetics who are lone parents.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has no plans to adopt such a policy.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the (a) total budget for diabetic care and (b) the budget for education work among diabetics.

Mr. Sackville: Figures for the total budget for diabetic care are not available nor are figures for the budget for education work among diabetics.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the numbers of insulin-dependent diabetics in the United Kingdom; and how many of them live alone.

Mr. Sackville: The number of insulin-dependent diabetics in the United Kingdom is not recorded; neither is it recorded how many live alone.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she plans to encourage diabetics to be open about their condition to ensure community support.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has no plans to seek to influence personal decisions of this nature.

Hypnosis

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy on hypnotism for entertainment; and what research she has sponsored into hypnosis and its consequences for health.

Mr. Sackville: The use of hypnotism on stage is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage and, on television, for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Within the national health service, hospital medical staff and general practitioners can arrange for their patients to receive complementary and alternative therapies, including hypnosis, where they are satisfied that a clinical need for the treatment exists and if the resources can be made available locally, subject to the patient's consent to the treatment. It is widely accepted that hypnosis has a valuable role as an adjunct to medical and psychological treatments and is legitimately practised by a range of reputable therapists. Health professionals are bound by the ethical codes of conduct of their individual professions and, when practising in the NHS, by the terms of their contracts with NHS bodies. The Department has commissioned no research into hypnosis.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all chairs and non-executive directors of NHS trust hospitals who hold a chair or non-executive post at more than one NHS trust; and if she will list the trusts concerned.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under the National Health Service Trusts (Membership and Procedure) Regulations 1990—SI 2024 Regulation 11(1)(e)—serving chairmen or non-executive directors of national health service trusts may not serve concurrently on the board of another NHS authority or trust.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of hospital admissions in the East Anglia region are (a) immediate, (b) within six weeks, (c) within three months and (d) longer than a year; and what the figures were in May 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: The latest year for which figures are available is 1991-92, in that year, 56 per cent. of hospital admissions were immediate. Of those admitted from waiting lists, 52·1 per cent. were admitted within six weeks, 69·1 per cent. within three months and 7 per cent. had to wait longer than a year.

In May 1990, 57 per cent. of admissions were immediate. Of those admitted from waiting lists, 40·7 per cent. were admitted within six weeks, 67·1 per cent. within three months and 4·6 per cent. had to wait longer than a year.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) the East Anglian region and (b) the Great Yarmouth and Waveney district had been waiting more than one year for hospital admission in (i) April 1991 and (ii) the latest available month.

Dr. Mawhinney: There were 10,175 patients waiting more than 12 months for in-patient or day case treatment in East Anglian regional health authority at 31 March 1991. This included 3,502 patients who had been waiting more than two years. By 30 September 1993, the number waiting more than a year had decreased by 66 per cent. to 3,503 and no one was waiting more than two years.

The area covered by Great Yarmouth and Waveney district health authority in March 1991 is now covered by Anglian Harbours and James Paget hospital national health service trusts. At 31 March 1991, in the district health authority 1,420 patients had waited more than a year for treatment and 586 of these had waited more than two years. By 30 September 1993 in the trusts, the number waiting over a year had fallen by 68 per cent. to 450 and no one was waiting more than two years.

Skin Disorders

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which statistics her Department keeps about the prevalence of skin disorders in the United Kingdom (a) by region, (b) by district health authority and (c) by family health services authority.

Mr. Sackville: The Department holds data for England and Wales on the incidence of skin cancer, on death rates, on numbers of deaths and on the average annual years of life lost per 10,000 of the resident population by region, district health authoriy and family health services authority. The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys keeps a register of newly diagnosed cases of skin cancer by regional health authority, district health authority and FHSA. It also records the number of deaths by sex and age from diseases of the skin and subcutaneous tissue by region, district health authority and FHSA. In addition, the Department keeps central statistics by district and regions on leprosy, which is a notifiable disease.

Health Expenditure

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent per head of population in (a) Great Yarmouth and Waveney health district and (b) the East Anglia region in (i) May 1979 and (ii) May 1991; and what is the expected level in April 1994.

Mr. Sackville: The information available shows that Great Yarmouth and Waveney health authority's revenue outturn increased from £40,349,819 in 1988-89—1988-89 cash—to £73,181,520 in 1992-1993—1992-1993 cash. Over the same period, East Anglia region's revenue outturn increased from £474,430,697 to £717,980,886. The population of East Anglia region was 2,034,439 in 1988 and 2,089,398 in 1992, that of Great Yarmouth and Waveney in the same years was 200,091 and 202,255. This represents a spend per head of population in 1988-89 of over £201 in Great Yarmouth and Waveney and £233 in East Anglia as a whole. In 1992-93, the corresponding figures are over £361 for Great Yarmouth and £343 for East Anglia.

Consultant Referrals

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of consultant referrals in the East Anglia region are (a) immediate, (b) within six weeks, (c) within three months and (d) longer than a year; and what the figures were in May 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: Summaries of waiting times for in-patient and day case treatment are given in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England" published twice yearly. The latest published figures for September 1993 are available in the Library. Under the patients charter, regional health authorities are required to set local charter standards for waiting times for first out-patient appointments. These are published locally.

Hospital Treatment

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients from the Great Yarmouth and Waveney health district were treated in hospitals outside the district in the last year in which figures are available; and how many out-of-district patients were treated within the Anglian Harbours hospital trust and the James Paget hospital.

Mr. Sackville: My hon. Friend may wish to Contact Dr. Ronald Duncan, Mrs. Kath Currie and Mr. John Wells, chairmen of the Great Yarmouth and Waveney health authority, Anglian Harbours national health service trust and the James Paget hospital trust respectively, for this information.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest figures for response times by ambulances to 999 calls for each of the trust and health authority areas in East Anglia; and what is the average for England as a whole.

Mr. Sackville: Information on ambulance emergency response times is not collected centrally on an individual health authority or trust basis. The latest available information by ambulance authority is shown in the table.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines have been issued by her Department regarding the need for hospital accident and emergency departments to make staffing provision for possible increased workload caused by occasional, exceptionally high levels of emergency treatment required.

Mr. Sackville: Every health authority is required to have contingency plans for dealing with major incidents. However, it is for individual hospitals to determine local staffing levels in accident and emergency departments which, so far as possible, match expected workloads and take account of busy periods.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in her Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Sackville: Prior to March 1991, the Department of Social Security was responsible for action on staff discipline for the Department of Health. It will be providing information for 1989 to March 1991.

The following information gives the number of Department of Health staff judged to be guilty of obtaining money by making false representations since March 1991:

In 1991, three staff were judged guilty of fraud and two were dismissed. The third was given a severe reprimand.

In 1992, one member of staff was given an oral warning and another was downgraded.

In 1993, four staff were dismissed.

In 1991 and 1992, those not dismissed were guilty of minor offences.

The penalty imposed depends on the severity of the offence, the member of staff's length of service and previous conduct. In cases of fraud involving significant amounts of money, dismissal is automatic.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Sackville: All civil servants are subject to strict rules of conduct and are expected at all times to maintain high levels of integrity. Any member of the Department of Health's staff found guilty of obtaining money or goods by making false representations would be subject to disciplinary penalties which range from a written warning to dismissal. All cases of fraud involving significant amounts of money would result in dismissal.

Patient Care

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all those services for patient care in East Anglian regional hospitals, Anglian Harbours hospitals trust and the James Paget hospital Gorleston, which have been expanded since May 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The number of patients treated in East Anglian region continues to rise. Since 1982, in-patient activity is up by more than 40 per cent. and day cases up by more than 135 per cent. In the Great Yarmouth and Waveney health authority area the increases were over 40 per cent. and 300 per cent. respectively.

Since 1979, the number of hospital doctors in the region has risen by more than 50 per cent. and there have been more than 40 major capital projects in the region costing over £130 million.

My hon. Friend may wish to contact Sir Colin Walker and Dr. Ronald Currie, chairmen of East Anglian regional health authority and the Great Yarmouth and Waveney health authority respectively, for more details.

NHS Pay

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision has been made in the NHS budget for 1994-95 for the implementation of the recommendations of the pay review bodies.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 31 January 1994]: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health said at the time of the Chancellor's autumn statement, the national health service has been given additional resources of some £1·6 billion for 1994-95. If pay rises are earned through increased efficiency, as the Government urged in their evidence to the review bodies, these resources will make possible an increase in activity of around 4 per cent.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

St. Helena

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visitors and work permits have been applied for by residents of St. Helena; and how many have been granted in each year since 1989.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: St. Helenians do not require prior entry clearance to come to the United Kingdom as visitors and the number actually entering the United Kingdom is not separately recorded.

The number of work permits granted to St. Helenians from 1989 to 1993 is as follows:

Year	Work permit
1989	51
1990	53
1991	30
1992	34
1993	20

Figures for the total number of applications are not available.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements exist for St. Helenians to be treated for serious injury or disease which cannot be carried out on the island.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The services on St. Helena provide medical attention in the first instance. Patients requiring longer-term treatment are referred to Cape Town or the United Kingdom under arrangements which work well. These referrals travel by the Royal Mail Ship St. Helena.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many St. Helenians have been working (a) on Ascension island and (b) in the Falklands in each year since 1989.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The number of St. Helenians working on Ascension island and the Falkland islands in the years 1989 to 1993 was as follows:

	Ascension Island	Falkland Islands
1989	459	132
1990	470	209
1991	501	262
1992	488	274
1993	534	214

Kashmir

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Indian high commission on the issuing of visas to allow (a) hon. Members and (b) Amnesty International access to that part of Kashmir which is under Indian jurisdiction.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have frequently urged the Indian Government to allow visits by independent observers and human rights groups, including Amnesty International, to Kashmir.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy toward the decision of the International Court of Justice to rule on the legality of nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our position is that the use of nuclear weapons would have to be judged as lawful or not in the light of the particular circumstances in which they were used, and that it is inappropriate to burden the International Court of Justice with hypothetical questions of this nature.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he will undertake in deciding whether to make submissions to the International Court of Justice on the legality of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We will be making a submission to the International Court of Justice on the question of the legality of nuclear weapons. Submissions are due to be made by 10 June.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to make a submission to the International Court of Justice on the legality of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We will be making a submission.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he is prepared to submit from British organisations on the legality of nuclear weapons to the International Court of Justice.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. Our submission to the International Court of Justice will set out the position of the Government on this question.

India

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Indian high commissioner about the continued detention of Syed Ali Shah Geelani, Abdul Gani Lone and Shabir Shah.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Her Majesty's high commission in New Delhi has been following the cases of Syed Ali Shah Gilani, Shabir Shah and Abdul Gani Lone and has provided us with regular reports. We have repeatedly raised our concerns about human rights with the Indian Government, and shall continue to do so when we believe such representations are helpful and appropriate.

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the working methods and constitution of the Indian National Human Rights Commission (a) in general and (b) in relation to its investigation of the Bijbehara massacre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Indian Human Rights Commission is due to publish its first quarterly report at the end of January. We have not sought to prejudge the operation of the commission before it has established itself. We shall look carefully at its first report which we understand will include an account of the incident at Bijbehara in October.

Sudan

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government is proposing following the Biro report on human rights issues in Sudan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Dr. Biro is finalising his report, which he will submit shortly to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. We will work to secure the continuation of his mandate. We will continue to press the Government of Sudan both bilaterally and in international forums over its human rights performance.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's latest estimate of the state of the SPLA factions in the southern Sudan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Discussions involving the leaders of the SPLA "mainstream" and "united" factions are continuing under the auspices of the IGADD initiative. On 6 January, the faction leaders signed a joint declaration outlining their position on an agenda for peace talks. Together with our European Union partners, we will continue to urge the faction leaders to settle their differences by peaceful means, and to respond constructively to the IGADD initiative.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest information available to the United Kingdom Government about what has happened to the people in the Nuba mountains area of Sudan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our information is limited, given the restrictions on access to the area. We remain profoundly concerned, however. We note the assessment in the interim report of the UN special rapporteur on the human rights situation in Sudan that the "violations committed by the Sudanese Army and the paramilitary forces under its control . . . seem to be of such a grave nature that the fate of the Nuba communities in the area may be questioned".

We strongly support the rapporteur's recommendation that the Sudanese Government give human rights organisations free access to the Nuba mountains.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Goodlad: No member of this Department has been judged to have been guilty of fraud since 1989.

One officer in the diplomatic wing was, however, found guilty in 1992 of false accounting, served nine months' imprisonment and was dismissed from the Department. One other officer was found guilty in 1993 of false overtime claims and was also dismissed.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Goodlad: Possible cases of fraud are investigated fully. All cases, other than minor offences, are referred to the Crown Prosecution Service to consider police investigation and, if appropriate, prosecution. Individuals found guilty of fraud would be subject to internal disciplinary proceedings, which would generally lead to dismissal, independently of any action taken by the Crown Prosecution Service.

Malaysian Arms Deal

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many files marked "Not for NAO eyes" relating to the Malaysian arms deal are held in his Department or in the high commission in Kuala Lumpur.

Mr. Goodlad: None.

NATIONAL FINANCE

North Sea Oil

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the total amount of revenue which has accrued to the Exchequer for each year since 1979 from North sea oil, breaking this down into each aspect of the relevant tax regulations.

Mr. Dorrell: Revenues raised from North sea oil and gas production by category of tax since 1979-80 have been as follows:

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 20 December on VAT on domestic fuel reference 0595/29.

Sir John Cope: I replied to this letter on 27 January 1994.

Maintenance Orders

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what part of a maintenance order imposed by the Child Support Agency is allowable against personal taxation.

Mr. Dorrell: Payments made under a Child Support Agency assessment, like those made under a court order or legally enforceable written agreement, may qualify for tax relief up to a limit equal to the married couple's allowance, currently £1,720. Where an assessment replaces arrangements first made before March 1988, tax relief may be available up to a limit equal to the payments for which the payer was entitled to relief in 1988-89.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, columns 974-75, if he will outline the particular qualifications, expertise or experience in the economic and financial area of (a) Mrs. Tessa Keswich and (b) Mr. David Ruffley.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: It is not my practice to comment on the qualifications, expertise or experience of my special advisers.

Gross Domestic Product

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current gross domestic product per head by constituency.

Mr. Nelson: The information is not available at this level of detail. The most detailed available estimates of GDP are at the county level. The most recent information available by county is for 1991, which was published in the December 1993 issue of "Economic Trends", a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Community Care Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the figure for community care expenditure agreed for each of the next three financial years under (a) the Department of Health and (b) other departmental programmes in (i) cash and (ii) real terms.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The level of spending on community care will be determined by individual local authorities, and will reflect their views about local needs and relative spending priorities. The Department of Health programme makes provision for a special transitional grant to local authorities, in recognition of their new responsibilities for community care, amounting to £735·9 million in 1994-95 and £647·6 million in 1995-96, including funding in respect of the arrangements to succeed the independent living fund. A decision on the special transitional grant for 1996-97 has not yet been taken.

The total of the Department of Health special transitional grant and the transfer from Department of Social Security announced last year, is shown in the table. It should be noted that, apart from the special transitional grant, local authorities are not obliged to spend these amounts on community care; nor need they be confined to these amounts.

In Northern Ireland, the DSS transfer will be £65·3 million in 1994-95 and £100·3 million in 1995-96—£60·8 million and £90·2 million in 1993-94 prices.

In addition, the Department of Social Security plans to spend £120 million on successor arrangements to the independent living fund in 1994-95, and approximately £1,830 million on benefits for those in residential or nursing home care prior to 1 April 1993. Figures for later years are not available.

Nora Heeren

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what instructions were given to Customs and Excise officers regarding the inspection of the Nora Heeren;

(2) if the Customs and Excise conducted a full inspection of the cargo of the Nora Heeren.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Customs officers were asked to inspect the cargo on board ship, and to inspect the ship's papers relating to it.

A visual inspection of the cargo, stowed on deck, was carried out. Inspection of the ship's holds was also made so far as it was possible without offloading the cargo ashore.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the reduction in mortgage interest relief will be in 1994-95 and 1995-96 for a taxpayer on the average income for households with a mortgage, and with an average mortgage, as a result of measures announced in the March and November 1993 Budgets; and whether this information can be broken down to produce figures for Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the English regions;

(2) what the reduction in mortgage interest relief will be in 1994-95 and 1995-96 for a taxpayer on average earnings with an average mortgage as a result of measures announced in the March and November 1993 Budgets; and whether this information can be broken down to produce figures for Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the English regions.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Assuming current levels of mortgage interest rates, the reduction in relief on the average mortgage of £30,000 will be £115·50 a year in 1994-95 and a further £115·50 in 1995-96. For those mortgagors who have mortgages of less than £30,000—about half of all mortgagors—the reduction in relief will be lower. A person with an average mortgage is benefiting by £1,920 a year as a result of the reduction in interest rates since 1990. Forecasts of the average size of mortgages in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the English regions are not available.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 23 November, Official Report, column 33, if he will now list the titles of papers his office has made available to the Scott inquiry.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

The Prime Minister: A full list of non-departmental public bodies, in existence for each year since 1979, is available in the following publications: "Report on Non-Departmental Public Bodies" (Pliatzky Report, Cm 7797, January 1980), "Non-Departmental Public Bodies: Facts and Figures 1980", "Non-Departmental Public Bodies: Facts and Figures 1981", and "Public Bodies", published annually from 1982. Copies of these publications are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

For each year since 1986, lists have been prepared centrally of public bodies which have been created and abolished. Copies will be sent to the Libraries of both Houses. Such summary data for the years 1979 to 1985 were not prepared and could be reconstructed only at disproportionate cost.

Meetings

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his practice to give substantive details of his meetings showing when he has met and plans to meet in replying to hon. Members' questions on his engagements; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 1 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

The Prime Minister: None.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 704, what were the major categories of trade, with amounts and dates, that he included in his export figures to Malaysia of £5 billion.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Information of the value of United Kingdom exports to Malaysia since 1982 is given in the table:

Mr. Boyes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: I have no plans to buy or borrow any photographs.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Heseltine: There are five paintings and no photographs on the walls of my office at the Department of Trade and Industry.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what Government grants or subsidies have been made to the tobacco industry in the United Kingdom or abroad in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sainsbury: The following regional selective assistance grants have been paid by the Government to the tobacco industry in the United Kingdom over the last five years. No other assistance has been made available, nor any abroad.

Oil and Gas Reserves

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the proportion of United Kingdom oil and gas reserves which have so far been taken from offshore fields.

Mr. Eggar: Cumulative oil and gas production to the end of 1992 has been 1,560 million tonnes and 855 billion cu m respectively. The range of estimated reserves on the United Kingdom Continental Shelf—UKCS—that is, onshore and offshore, is as follows:

United Kingdom initially recoverable reserves (31 December 1992)

Range of estimates	Oil (million tonnes) Lower	Oil (million tonnes) Upper	Gas (billion cubic metres) Lower	Gas (billion cubic metres) Upper
Discovered	2,170	3,635	1,465	2,720
Potential additional reserves	160	500	140	325
Undiscovered	530	3,370	270	1,277
Total	2,860	7,505	1,875	4,322

The data are published in table 7 on page 20 of my Department's "Development of the Oil and Gas Reserves of the United Kingdom", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Part 2 of the publication provides more detail of the reserves and explains how they are estimated. The limits of the ranges should not be regarded as maxima and minima.

The figures do not provide an indication of the longevity of UKCS reserves. In recent years, the annual increment to estimates of reserves has often been larger than the amount produced in the year. At the end of 1992, for example, estimated remaining proven plus probable reserves of oil were about 135 million tonnes higher than the equivalent at the end of 1991; that is, the reserves increased by 230 million tonnes whilst production in 1992 was 94 million tonnes.

Exporters (Support)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to increase support for British exporters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The Government are more than ever committed to helping United Kingdom companies win in overseas markets. To achieve this, we are developing a long-term export strategy, involving a partnership between Government and industry.

A particularly good example of the partnership being developed is the export promoter scheme. My Department is recruiting people with private sector experience, on secondment, to act as export promoters. Some 65 are already on board and actively helping business. These secondees bring to government a business oriented way of tackling problems and promoting export opportunities.

To guide the overall strategy for export promotion, market plans are being drawn up for each of the United Kingdom's top 80 overseas markets. This will help ensure that resources are focused to best effect. We are building on the strengths of the United Kingdom capital goods industry; and targeting the overseas markets which offer the best prospects for those strengths.

Over the past two years the Export Credits Guarantee Department—ECGD—premium rates have been cut by more than a quarter. And in the last Budget the Government announced a further round of reductions—some as high as 20 per cent.—for business with important emerging markets such as Argentina, India, Mexico, Poland, Slovakia and Turkey. By 1996-97, ECGD cover for key markets, where the risks are subject to special controls, will be virtually double the level available in 1991-92.

Over the next three years, the cover available for important markets like China, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Malaysia and South Africa will exceed £9 billion. This is in addition to an allocation of US$1 billion already set aside for business with the former Soviet Union.

These initiatives will build substantially on the current matrix of support available to help our exporters. This will ensure that ever greater numbers of United Kingdom exporters get the first-class support they deserve to help them win in world markets.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bankruptcy and company case administrations were completed in each of the last five years (a) by the Insolvency Service and (b) by insolvency practitioners.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: (a) Official Receivers completed their administration, including handing over cases to insolvency practitioners where they have been appointed trustee or liquidator in place of the Official Receiver, of the following numbers of compulsory insolvencies:

	Bankruptcy	Company
1989-90	7,980	3,861
1990-91	10,799	4,982
1991-92	15,516	5,900
1992-93	16,169	4,957
1993-94 (9 months)	16,751	4,711

(b) Insolvency practitioners completed the administration in the following number of compulsory insolvencies:

	Bankruptcy	Company
1989-90	N/A	N/A
1990-91	N/A	N/A
1991-92	2,844	857
1992-93	3,024	1,030
1993-94 (9 months)	2,452	861

The Insolvency Service does not maintain data on the number of voluntary liquidations completed in any year.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many successful fraudulent trading prosecutions there were in each of the last five years arising from investigations by (a) the Insolvency Service, (b) insolvency practitioners and (c) other bodies.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Prosecutions by my Department for fraudulent trading resulted in 17 convictions in 1989-90, 22 convictions in 1990-91, 11 convictions in 1991-92, 24 convictions in 1992-93 and 26 convictions so far in 1993-94. Records are not kept in such a form that information about the origin of all these cases is readily available, but I can say that 19 of the convictions in 1992-93 arose from investigations by the Insolvency Service, and that 24 of the convictions in 1993-94 arose from such investigations.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many disqualification reports were received by the Insolvency Service in each of the last five years from (a) the Official Receiver and (b) insolvency practitioners.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The number of disqualification reports received was as follows:

Practitioners	Official Receivers	Insolvency
1988-89	1,204	3,005
1989-90	1,358	2,086
1990-91	1,617	2,891
1991-92	2,402	3,769
1992-93	2,657	4,053
9 months to 31 December 1993	2,487	2,841

A report is received where at least some element of unfit conduct on the part of the director(s) has been identified. Unfit conduct may vary from, for example, an isolated delay in complying with requirements relating to the production and filing of accounts and returns at Companies House to a failure to safeguard deposit monies received from members of the public. It would not therefore be appropriate to institute disqualification proceedings in every case in which a report is submitted.

Phoenix Companies

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions his Department has instigated criminal prosecutions in each of the years 1991, 1992 and 1993 in relation to possible offences involving the use of phoenix companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: In 1990-91, 11 prosecutions were carried out by my Department for offences under section 216 of the Insolvency Act 1986. The figure for 1991-92 was nine and, for 1992-93, five. So far in this financial year, there have been eight such prosecutions.

Electricity Franchises

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further representations he has received from individuals and organisations expressing concern about the postponement of electricity franchises in the 1 Mw to 100 Kw bracket since his answer of 18 February 1993, Official Report, column 318.

Mr. Eggar: I received a number of representations during the coal review on this issue. In the White Paper "The Prospects for Coal", Cm 2235, published in March 1993, the Government confirmed that they did not intend to postpone the reduction of the electricity franchise to 100 Kw.

Nuclear Material

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, columns 184-85, how many of the (a) temporary and (b) permanent withdrawals from safeguards involved plutonium.

Mr. Eggar: There have been 70 notifications of withdrawal of plutonium from safeguards since May 1979. These were all either small amounts withdrawn as samples for analytical or research purposes or part of transactions, involving the temporary transfer of plutonium to or from the civil cycle, which did not involve the net transfer of any plutonium from safeguards.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has made available to the Scott inquiry a copy of a letter by L. F. Byrne of Allivane International Ltd. to the export licensing branch of his Department dated 6 April 1988.

Mr. Needham: The Department has no record of this document.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the implications of THORP's beginning operations on 17 January for the delivery of spent fuel from Japan after 1 January under the terms of planning condition No. 9 of the amended planning permission of 6 April 1988 for receipt of spent nuclear fuel granted by Copeland borough council under the Town and Country Planning Act 1971.

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for Copeland borough council as planning authority and British Nuclear Fuels plc as operator of the Sellafield site.

Export Control Compliance

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many copies of his Department's code of practice on export control compliance have been distributed since 21 May 1993.

Mr. Needham: Some 3,500 copies have been distributed since 21 May 1993, making a total of 9,500 distributed since publication.

Departmental Directory

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a copy of the DTI "Functional Directory".

Mr. Eggar: A copy is available in the Library of the House.

Electricity Pricing

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will undertake a review of the powers of the regulator in respect of electricity pricing.

Mr. Eggar: I have no plans for such a review. The Director General of Electricity Supply is free to seek a review of his powers in respect of electricity pricing if he is not satisfied that his existing powers are adequate.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Eggar: Dismissal.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Eggar: The information is as follows:

Year	Number
1989-93	Nil
1994	1

The employee concerned was dismissed.

Cetaceans

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what steps he is taking to ensure maximum information on the effect of seismic activity on cetaceans is collected during offshore oil exploration;

(2) if he will make it his policy to require holders of offshore oil exploration licences to invite independent researchers to carry out surveys of the behaviour of cetaceans during seismic operations.

Mr. Eggar: My officials encourage companies to offer facilities to environmental bodies to observe cetaceans. I understand that a number of seismic surveys conducted in blocks licensed during the 14th round have been accompanied by observers from such bodies.

It is not always possible to do this: adverse weather conditions can force changes to the dates of surveys at short notice, while the small size of some survey vessels means accommodation space is sometimes strictly limited.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to require operators to carry out preliminary surveys of the distribution and behaviour of cetaceans before carrying out offshore seismic operations or any source testing; and if he will make these surveys publicly available before operations or testing begin.

Mr. Eggar: In the 14th round, applicants for blocks in areas frequented by cetaceans were asked to carry out a preliminary environmental survey of all local sensitivities including cetaceans. Before carrying out seismic operations in sensitive areas, licensees are, in any event, expected to consult with the sea mammals research unit. In addition, during the survey, the lowest possible energy settings should be used.

By seeking such environmental surveys prior to licensing, I have the opportunity to ensure environmental concerns are taken into account when deciding licence awards. Similar arrangements will apply in future. Such surveys are the property of the companies commissioning them.

Export Licences

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all occasions when hon. Members have sought assistance in obtaining export licences during the past five years to import items from overseas.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 January 1994]: My Department is only one of a number of Departments which operate import controls by issuing import licences. Before an import licence can be issued, it is often a pre-requisite that an export licence is provided by the competent authorities of the exporting country. My Department would not expect to know whether assistance had been sought to secure the provision of such an export licence; and no instance are know of.

The other Departments operating similar licensing controls are the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food—agriculutral products—the Home Office—drugs—the Department of the Environment—wildlife—and the Health and Safety Executive—explosives and fireworks.

Human Genes (Patenting)

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines his office has produced on the patenting of human genes; what discussions he has had on this subject with his European counterparts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 28 January 1994]: In accordance with current practice, patents may be granted for inventions relating to human genes of identified function and outside the body if they comply with the usual requirements of patentability—that is, novelty, inventive step and industrial applicability.

Agreement has now been reached within the framework of the European Council on a draft EC directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions, which sets out to harmonise what is patentable in this area along the lines mentioned above. Council is expected to adopt a formal common position shortly.

I understand that the Office of Science and Technology supports the policy of the Medical Research Council in not filing any futher patent applications for DNA sequences of unknown function. The Office of Science and Technology has not, however, produced any guidelines on when patents on human genes should be sought.

Late Payment

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his Department's consultation on late payment.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 31 January 1994]: On 30 November 1993, the Department of Trade and Industry issued a consultation paper "Late Payment of Commercial Debt". The consultation paper seeks views from interested parties on possible options to address late payment, including a statutory right to interest and a British standard for prompt payment. Responses have been requested by 31 March 1994.

Nora Heeren

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if his Department obtained a full cargo manifest of the Nora Heeren.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 31 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 24 January, Official Report, column 12.

European Plug and Socket System

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the safety implications of adopting a harmonised European plug and socket system; what representations he has had from (a) trade and (b) consumer representatives about a harmonised European plug and socket system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 24 January 1994]: CENELEC, the relevant standards-making body, has not published a standard for a harmonised European plug and socket system against which an accurate assessment could be made. In considering whether any change to our present standards might be desirable at some future date full account will be taken of consumer safety issues and the many representations which we have received.

My Department is in frequent contact with the principal trade associations covering electrical appliances and fittings, and also with such bodies as the British Standards Institution, the Institution of Electrical Engineers, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents and the Consumers Association. We have also commissioned an independent analysis of the possible costs and benefits for the United Kingdom. Work is continuing on the final report from the consultants and we expect to publish the full report in the spring to form the basis for a wider consultation.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Grants (Remission of Debt)

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidelines are used for the remission of debt on grants issued by his Department.

Mr. Sproat: The guidelines used by my Department, and the bodies we sponsor, to determine whether or not to write off a particular grant are set out in "Government Accounting". These are that losses are to be written off only after a most careful appraisal of the facts; that Departments satisfy themselves that there is no feasible alternative; and that all reasonable action has been taken to effect recovery. I am satisfied that the control systems for authorising the write off of grants are working effectively in my Department.

For grants made by sponsored bodies, the decision to write off is, in the first instance, taken by the body, subject to delegated limits. For amounts above those limits, approval by my Department and the Treasury will be required, depending on the sums involved.

Theatres

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what support his Department intends to give to signed performances in theatres.

Mr. Brooke: Each building-based theatre company supported by the Arts Council aims to provide at least one signed performance of each production. Touring companies are also being encouraged to do at least one signed performance at each venue. According to a recent report by the Royal National Theatre, approximately 40 theatres currently provide signed performances. One of the problems in this area has been the shortage of trained personnel. The Arts Council has now provided two training courses for signed theatre interpreters.

Regional Orchestras

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will estimate the minimum staffing of regional orchestras; and if he will make a statement on the financial situation of those in receipt of public funds.

Mr. Brooke: According to the Arts Council, the minimum number of players in each of the major regional orchestras is as follows:

	Number
Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra	79
Bournemouth Sinfonietta	29
City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra	103
Halle Orchestra	98
Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra	91
Northern Sinfonia	37

Depending on programmes, these numbers can be augmented through the employment of contract musicians. The numbers of administrative staff vary because of the differing situations of the orchestras. For example, the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Society is responsible for Philharmonic hall as well as the orchestra; and the two Bournemouth orchestras are jointly administered.

The Arts Council carefully monitors the financial situation of all its clients and, in consultation with the orchestras themselves, would be able to provide the additional information requested.

Concessionary Television Licence Scheme

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will consider further expanding the concessionary television licence scheme to include those people who previously lived in sheltered accommodation or institutional care, but who now live at home in consequence of the community care policy.

Mr. Sproat: No. The Government have no plans to extend the regulations governing the concessionary television licence scheme.

Royal Palaces (Accommodation)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 652, what accommodation consists of for the private secretaries and officials of the Queen's households and other households in the grace and favour accommodation at the occupied royal palaces.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The accommodation that is provided to serving members of the royal household and for which either rent is charged or the benefit of which is taken into account in determining wage and salary levels is as follows:

St. James's Palace

17 apartments in total of which 5 have 1 reception room with 1, 2 or 3 bedrooms. 4 have 2 reception rooms with between 2 and 4 bedrooms and 5 have 3 reception rooms with generally 4 bedrooms. The remaining 3 apartments have 4 reception rooms and 4 bedrooms.

Marlborough House Mews

5 apartments of which 4 have 1 reception room and 1 to 3 bedrooms and 1 is a bedsit.

Hampton Court Mews

1 apartment with 1 reception room and 1 bedroom.

Bushy Park

2 houses, 1 with 3 reception rooms and 5 bedrooms and 1 with 2 reception rooms and 4 bedrooms.

"Back to Basics"

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the implications of the Government's "back to basics" policy for his Department during 1994.

Mr. Sproat: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what working definition of "back to basics" is used by his Department; and what his Department has done in the past three months to implement the policy.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 20 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 January, Official Report, column 849.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The number of staff within the Department of National Heritage excluding its agencies, the Historic Royal Palaces and the Royal Parks, on 31 December 1993 who were eligible to receive statutory sick pay was 333.

Tower of London

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total cost of constructing the new jewel house at the Tower of London.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Historic Royal Palaces under its chief executive, Mr. David Beeton. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Beeton to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 27 January 1994:

The Secretary of State for National Heritage has asked me to reply to your Written Parliamentary Question on what is the total cost of constructing the new Jewel House at the Tower of London.

The detailed estimate, which I approved before work started on site in October 1992 was £10,007,000. The latest estimate of that total cost is £9,753,819. Work will be completed on the original timetable and the Jewel House opened on the 24 March 1994.

This total cost has been funded from increased business income, generated by my Agency in the last three years, during which period the annual call on the taxpayer has fallen from £10·26 million (1991-92) to £7·6 million (1993-94). The scheme is forecast to increase the business income of the Tower by £4 million a year.

ENVIRONMENT

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many representations he has received on the subject of the THORP project; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many representations he has received in support of the THORP project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A total of 42,500 responses to the public consultation were received. About 15,000 respondents supported THORP. A detailed breakdown of responses is in the BNFL Sellafield further public consultation summary of responses document which is in the House Library.

Environmental Approach (Launch Meeting)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria were used in choosing to launch Her Majesty's Government's strategy documents on sustainable development, climate change, biodiversity and sustainable forestry, at the Banqueting house on 25 January; and which hon. Members were given advance notice of the date and venue of the launch.

Mr. Atkins: The launch in the Banqueting house was primarily a press conference, although in the presence of individuals, or representatives of organisations, who had been associated with preparation of the documents. My right hon. Friend informed the House on 20 January, in answer to a written question from my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs), Official Report column 844, that publication would be on 25 January.

Hotels (Change of Use)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce an outcome to his review of the change of use of hotels and guest houses to hostels for social security claimants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Shortly.

Environmental Conference

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total cost of the environmental conference on Rio two years on held at the Mansion house on 25 January.

Mr. Atkins: The conference was held in the Banqueting house, Whitehall, not the Mansion house, and cost approximately £20,000.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how the present policy on high-level waste management is covered by Her Majesty's Government's commitment to meet the responsibility of nuclear waste management by the present generation.

Mr. Atkins: The Government's policy is that high-level radioactive wastes should be stored for at least 50 years to allow them to cool. As this is the most appropriate technical means of dealing with the wastes, it is the strategy which best meets our responsibilities to future generations.

Radioactive Waste Inventory

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial contribution is made by his Department to the radioactive waste inventory.

Mr. Atkins: The cost of the radioactive waste inventory is shared between the Department of the Environment and UK Nirex Ltd. The cost to the Department of the 1994 inventory, for which contracts have recently been let, is expected to be £163,871 spread over two and a half years.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to strengthen part 1 of the Building Regulations relating to energy conservation.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 19 January, Official Report, columns 671-72.

Market Franchises

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number and nature of the representations he has received (a) in favour of the proposal to abolish market franchises and (b) against it.

Mr. Curry: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short) on 18 January, Official Report, column 564.

TRANSPORT

Airports (Night Flying)

Mr. Mellor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for revised night flying restrictions for Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted for summer 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: On 10 November 1993 the Secretary of State for Transport published proposals for revised night flying restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted for the 1994 summer season and for the arrangements to apply from winter 1994-95 until the end of the summer 1998 season. Comments on the summer 1994 proposals were invited by 31 December 1993 and on those applying for the longer term by 11 February 1994. As indicated in the consultation paper, airlines normally expect to finalise their timetables for the summer season during January. We acknowledged their need for an early decision by separating the proposals in the consultation paper to enable us to announce conclusions for the 1994 summer season in advance of those for the following years. The conclusions that I have reached relate to the 1994 summer season only and in no way prejudge the conclusions that I may reach in respect of the following four years.

On 6 July 1993, following an extensive period of consultation, the Government announced a new five-year policy for night restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted whereby quotas, based on the noise rating of aircraft, would provide the basis of control. A quota was announced for each airport which would enable a greater number of movements at night to take place if the quieter types of aircraft were used or fewer movements if noisier types were used. Many people welcomed this approach. However, following judicial review proceedings the court ruled that section 78(3)(b) of the Civil Aviation Act 1982 requires specification of "the maximum number of occasions" on which aircraft may be permitted to take off or land in a specified period.

The proposals put out to consultation in November were that there should be a movements limit for each airport with the quota system also applying as a supplementary control. An alternative approach was also set out which would dispense with the need for quotas but impose subsidiary limits on movements by the noisier types of aircraft. The responses to the consultation have shown that there is very little support for this alternative approach. I have therefore concluded that the night restrictions for summer 1994 should be in the form of movements limits supplemented by quotas. The movements limits and quotas for each airport for the summer 1994 season will be:

	Movements limits	Quota
Heathrow	3,250	7,000
Gatwick	7,000	9,550
Stansted	6,500	4,200

The figures for Heathrow and Gatwick are as proposed in the consultation paper; the movements limit for Stansted is lower.

I also confirm that the provision in place for the current winter season for end-of-season flexibility up to 10 per cent.—and with penalty for excess thereafter—should apply, as proposed, to the movements limits as well as to the quotas for the summer season.

I have given careful consideration to the responses from airlines and aviation bodies asking to be allowed more movements, particularly at Heathrow and Gatwick. I have also given careful consideration to the responses from people living around the three airports, the local authorities and other local organisations, that the proposed movements limits and quotas were too high. My aim remains, as previously, to maintain the policy of continuing to protect local communities from excessive exposure to aircraft noise while not unduly restricting those who wish to go about their business at night. I have concluded that the movements limits and quotas which I have confirmed today for all three airports should achieve this.

At Stansted it remains difficult to predict the likely pattern of traffic wishing to operate at night even only a few months ahead. Although traffic is still growing, operations have not developed quite as fast as they might have and this is reflected in the lower movements limit confirmed today. The movements limit for Stansted is still higher in relation to the quota than that for other airports. This underlines our commitment to quieter aircraft. Services at Stansted are expected to expand. The numbers which I am confirming today should provide an incentive to those who operate those services to use only the quietest types of aircraft at night.

While the arrangements for reporting on movements and usage of the quota were generally welcomed, some responses raised doubts as to whether they would provide sufficient assurance that the system was being administered properly. It was suggested that the reporting arrangements should embrace "a full audit trail" to provide this assurance. I do not doubt the integrity of those operating the system at present, but it is undoubtedly complex. It is right that people should be assured that it is being operated properly. I therefore welcome the suggestion—and the fact that it has come out of the present consultation—that the reporting arrangements should cover the full audit trail. I am therefore asking the Aircraft Noise Monitoring Advisory Committee to consider how best to achieve this.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions have been made to facilitate the introduction of international rail passenger services through the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: Major infrastructure improvements have been undertaken on United Kingdom lines to the channel tunnel. Regular services to Paris and Brussels from the new dedicated international passenger terminal at Waterloo will begin this year. Day and night time services will also run from regions north and west of London to Paris and Brussels. These services should begin in 1995.

BR/SNCF and SNCB have on order from a consortium led by GEC-Alsthom a fleet of high-speed trains for use on inter-capital services. BR is responsible for 11 of these Eurostar trainsets. BR is also purchasing from the consortium seven modified versions of these same trainsets to provide daytime services from north of London to Paris and Brussels.

The board has been considering the financing options for these trainsets and has concluded that leasing arrangements can give commercial and financing benefits. A number of leases have been finalised in 1993-94, through the board's subsidiary, European Passenger Services, to which I have given my approval, and more leases are expected. The Government intend to give a non-statutory guarantee to BRB in respect of its liability under the leases. The guarantee will be notified to Parliament in the usual way.

A new joint venture company, European Night Services Ltd., has also been set up by BR, SNCF, German and Dutch railways to provide sleeper services through the channel tunnel. European Night Services has entered into a leasing arrangement in respect of the rolling stock which will be used for these services.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the forecasts of the number of commuters expected (a) to use the channel tunnel rail link and (b) to leave the channel tunnel rail link at St. Pancras.

Mr. Freeman: It is too early to say. The number of commuters using the line and the St. Pancras terminus will depend, among other factors, upon the general level of commuting from Kent into London and upon the precise service pattern adopted.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for a direct link between the channel tunnel rail link and crossrail.

Mr. Freeman: The proposed connection via Forest Gate and Ripple Lane was ruled out because it would have been expensive, environmentally damaging and possibly impractical.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will define the relationship which now exists between his Department and Union Railways following the final announcement of the channel tunnel rail link route.

Mr. Freeman: Union Railways continues to have operational responsibility for all aspects of the channel tunnel rail link project. Union Railways is responsible, under the overall direction of the Department of Transport, for the private aspects of the proposed hybrid Bill; and acts, together with European Passenger Services, as project manager to the Department for the competition to transfer UR and EPS to the private sector.

Vehicle Insurance

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he has given to the introduction of insurance discs, similar to the tax discs already required, as an additional way of identifying those drivers who fail to insure their vehicles.

Mr. Key: As explained in the answer I gave on 23 June 1993 to my hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Duncan), there would be some practical problems associated with a windscreen insurance disc system. However, we continue to take the problem of uninsured driving very seriously and would be willing to look again at any proposal for overcoming these drawbacks.

Transport Policy

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the main points of his programme for a sustainable transport policy.

Mr. MacGregor: The main points for a sustainable transport policy are set out in "Sustainable Development —The UK Strategy", a copy of which is in the Library.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out for each port the number of ports state control inspectors in 1993 flag by flag.

A19

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the installation of the hard shoulder on the A19 will be carried out.

Mr. Key: There are no proposals to provide a hard shoulder on the A19.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many serious accidents and deaths have occurred on the section of the A19 running through the Easington district in each year since 1991.

Mr. Key: The number of personal injury accidents that have occurred on the A19 in Easington district each year since 1991 is:

Year	Fatal	Serious	Slight
1991	2	6	45
1992	1	7	31
[1]1993	3	3	35

[1] To November.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the section of the A19 which runs adjacent to Peterlee to be illuminated.

Mr. Key: A scheme to provide highway lighting between Passfield way, Peterlee and Sheraton is currently being assessed.

There are no current proposals to provide highway lighting north of Passfield way.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects emergency telephones to be installed on the A19; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Work is expected to commence shortly on a scheme to provide emergency telephones on the A19-A168 between Dishforth and Stockton on Tees. A further scheme on the A19 between Stockton on Tees and the Tyne tunnel is planned.

The telephones will be provided in existing lay-bys at approximately one-mile intervals where possible with a direct link to the local police control room.

MV Nora Heeren

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange for an immediate port state control inspection of MV Nora Heeren.

Mr. Norris: No; the Nora Heeren is understood to have left United Kingdom waters on 21 January. A port state control inspection of the vessel was conducted at Middlesbrough last September and the Department has no reason to doubt the seaworthiness of the vessel.

M40

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give figures for traffic flows on the M40 between junctions 4 and 5 during October 1993.

Mr. Key: The average daily flows over the month of October 1993 were 39,310 vehicles Eastbound.

38,977 vehicles Westbound.

Flows on weekdays are generally higher than those at weekends.

Coaches (Weight)

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department takes to prevent coaches registered in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) elsewhere in Europe of more than 17 tonnes gross weight from using United Kingdom roads.

Mr. Key [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Coaches using Britain's roads which are subject to a maximum permitted weight of 17 tonnes are liable to be check weighed by vehicles inspectorate examiners. Those found to be more than 17 tonnes can be prohibited from continuing their journey. Drivers and operators of overweight coaches are also subject to prosecution. If the vehicle is registered elsewhere in Europe they are also reported to their Government for appropriate action.

London to Warsaw Air Services

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about current air services from London to Warsaw; what was the position a year ago; and what are the reasons for the changes that have been made.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 28 January 1994]: There are currently no direct air services between London and Warsaw. I refer my right hon. Friend to the letter I wrote to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 16 November 1993 which was deposited in the Library of the House and which explains the background to the current situation. During the winter season 1992-93 British Airways and LOT each operated a daily return service between London and Warsaw.

Driving Standards Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the numbers and grades and salary costs of staff at each Driving Standards Agency office affected by the proposed marketing test of the booking of driving tests and the processing of driving test fees.

Mr. Key: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Driving Standards Agency under its chief executive, Dr. Ford. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dr. S. J. Ford to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 27 January 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about the Market Testing of DSA's driver test booking service.

First you asked about the numbers and grades of the staff at each office affected. The staff-in-post information is in the attached schedule.

Secondly, you asked for salary costs at the Agency offices. In our 1993-94 Business Plan, which was deposited in the Library of the House in May 1993, DSA estimated its total payroll costs for 1993-94 to be £3·6 million for all regional offices and £1·8 million for the headquarters office (although not all of these staff will be affected by the market test).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler: The Northern Ireland Office Ministers have no plans at present to buy or loan any photographs.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Sir John Wheeler: There are 49 paintings and three photographs in the Northern Ireland Office Ministers' rooms.

Prisoners (Christmas Leave)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will name the prisoners who were granted Christmas leave in 1993.

Sir John Wheeler: No. It would not be appropriate to name the 446 individual prisoners who were granted Christmas leave in 1993.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so ratified and consulted upon.

Sir John Wheeler: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Arable Area Scheme

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was (a) the maximum, (b) the minimum and (c) the average amount paid out under the arable area payments scheme in Northern Ireland in the latest available year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Final statistics for the 1993 scheme year are not yet complete. As at 31 December 1993, 96 per cent. of claims had been paid of which: (a) the maximum amount paid out was £33,394; (b) the minimum amount paid was £48·03; and (c) the average amount paid out was £1,241 per applicant.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Sir John Wheeler: The figures are:—

	Number of employees	Number dismissed
1989	—	—
1990	—	—
1991	1	1

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Sir John Wheeler: The procedures in respect of disciplinary offences are described in the "Departmental Terms and Conditions of Service" which apply to all civil servants. The attention of all staff is drawn to these conditions. The procedures are invoked following allegations of misconduct, including fraud. A range of penalties, including dismissal, are available to the Department.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Vessels (Safety)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will extend current grant aid for mandatory safety equipment to fishing vessels under 12m.

Mr. Jack: Grant aid is available, in respect of vessels which are required by the Fishing Vessel (Safety Provisions) Rules 1975 to have a United Kingdom fishing vessel (safety) certificate, to meet the relevant safety requirements. Certification applies only to vessels of 12m or more in length. The Department of Transport is considering a House of Lords Select Committee recommendation that a more stringent statutory safety regime should be applied to vessels under 12m. Once a final decision is taken on this, Fisheries Ministers will consider what are the implications for the safety grants scheme.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in her Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Jack: Since 1989, there have been 12 cases of what can be considered fraud, mainly petty theft or incorrect expenses claims, of which five resulted in dismissal.

GATT

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what matters in regard to the recently completed general agreement on tariffs and trade for EU agriculture policy were discussed at the Agriculture Council of 24-25 January.

Mr. Jack: The Agriculture Council met and concluded its agenda on Monday 24 January. It took forward the business following from the decisions at the preceding December Council. Although the GATT Uruguay round on agriculture was not itself on the agenda, its implications for future reform of the fruit and vegetable regime were noted.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the implications for (a) low-input agriculture and (b) continued protection of countryside habitats of wildlife populations of the GATT completed in December 1993.

Mr. Jack: Non-trade-distorting payments, including incentives for environmentally beneficial farming practices such as those that entail habitat protection and reduced use of fertilisers and pesticides, are classed as "green box". As a result, they are exempt from the limitations elsewhere in the agreement, including those on domestic support.

Bovine Embryo Transfers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines the Government have laid down on bovine embryo transfers.

Mr. Soames: The Bovine Embryo Collection and Transfer Regulations 1993 require that embryo transfer is carried out by either a veterinary surgeon on the register of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons—RCVS—or a member of an approved embryo transfer team which is under the control of a veterinary surgeon on the register. The RCVS has produced a code of practice for embryo collection and transfer in cattle. The code is published in the 1993 edition of the "Guide to Professional Conduct" which is sent to all those listed on the register. I have arranged for a copy of the code of practice to be placed in the Library of the House.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to buy or loan any photographs; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The Government art collection has a number of photographs in its collection from which the Minister may borrow as she wishes. She has no plans to buy photographs.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of her rooms.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend has four paintings and one photograph on the walls of her office at the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give (a) the maximum, (b) the minimum and (c) the average amount paid out under the arable area payments scheme in England in the latest available year; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Under the integrated administration and control system, a single application for arable area payments must be submitted in respect of all the land farmed by the same individual or organisation and some applications cover a significant number of separate holdings, which may be located in different parts of the United Kingdom. The maximum total payment made to date to an applicant under the 1992-93 arable area payments scheme has been of the order of £1·25 million. Claims under the simplified arrangements for small producers in 1992-93 can range from about £50 up to just over £2,000 for land situated in England. The total amounts paid to date averaged over the total number of applications submitted in England for 1992-93, would give an average payment of slightly less than £13,400. This does not include the final instalment of the area payment for oilseeds, which is due to be made early in 1994.

Milk

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much milk was produced and consumed in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the European Community as a whole in each of the last five years.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The quantity of milk produced by dairy cows and the quantity of liquid milk consumed in both the EC as a whole and in the United Kingdom are given in the table.

Production and consumption in the former GDR is excluded from the EC total for the years 1987 to 1989 inclusive. Production includes deliveries to dairies, sales direct from farms, milk consumed on farm, milk fed to stock and wastage. The drinking milk consumption figure includes whole milk, semi-skimmed milk, skimmed milk and buttermilk. It is derived as production plus imports less exports, less stock change and less wastage.

Milk production and consumption in the EC and the United Kingdom 1987-1991 [4]

'000s tonnes	1987[1]	1988[1]	1989[1]	1990	1991
Dairy Cows milk production[2]:
EC	112,179	109,800	198,248	117,500	114,865
of which, United Kingdom:	15,506	15,140	14,943	15,251	14,762
Drinking milk consumption[3]:
EC:	28,978	28,868	28,781	28,542	28,488
of which, United Kingdom:	7,064	7,077	7,081	7,043	7,039

[1] Excludes the former GDR.

[2] Gross production from the dairy herd, including milk fed to stock and wastage.

[3] Consumption of whole milk, semi-skimmed milk, skimmed milk and buttermilk in product weight. Consumption is derived as production plus imports, less exports, less stock change and less wastage.

[4] EC data are not available for 1992. For the United Kingdom, 1992 production was 14,702,000 tonnes and consumption was 7,072,000 tonnes.

Salmon

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment she has made of the effect of the decision of the European Court of Justice in joined cases CZ67/8 (Keck), 24 November 1988, on measures by European Community member states to restrict the importation of farmed salmon and other fishery-products from Norway; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 24 January 1994]: I have been asked to reply.

The decision of the European Court of Justice on joined cases C267 and C268/91—Keck and Mithouard—of 24 November 1993 is very recent, and its full implications for intra-Community trade are still being considered. The cases relate to national measures which prohibit the reselling of products at prices less than their actual purchase price. In concluding that the purpose of the national measures under consideration was not to regulate trade in goods between member states, the European Court of Justice held that the measures were permissible provided that they had the same effect, in law and in fact, upon all products, domestic or imported, of the same kind, and were not used expressly to prohibit or restrict imports or to inhibit free trade.

I have no reason to believe that there is any similarity between the situation addressed by the European Court in the cases referred to, and the current situation of over-supply of salmon to the European market.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Liberian Trust Fund

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution Britain has made to the Liberian trust fund; and what are the limitations placed upon the use of those funds.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have contributed $1 million to the United Nations Trust Fund for Liberia. The contribution is for humanitarian relief purposes only.

Humanitarian Aid

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the United Nations agencies in delivering humanitarian aid.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Each of the operational humanitarian agencies of the United Nations has a role in delivering humanitarian aid, according to its individual mandate. Co-ordination of the delivery of such aid is the responsibility of the United Nations department of humanitarian affairs.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the distribution of aid funds to the eastern European countries and the former Soviet Union.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The main objective of the know-how fund, Britain's programme of bilateral technical assistance to central and eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, is to help these countries move towards democracy and a free market economy by providing advice and expertise. Total expenditure for 1992-93 was £47·1 million. The public expenditure provision for 1993-94 is £53 million. A list of projects and the latest annual report are in the Libraries of both Houses.

Aid Programme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the consequences of the United Kingdom's efforts for developing countries; and what proposals he has to improve the United Kingdom's aid programme.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The effectiveness of the United Kingdom aid programme has been recognised by the development assistance committee of the OECD. My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development's speech at Chatham house on 18 October 1993 described future directions for the aid programme. Copies of the speech are in the Libraries of the House.

World Bank

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the accountability to Parliament of the United Kingdom board member of the World bank.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Kingdom executive director of the World bank is appointed by, and accountable to, Her Majesty's Government. The Government are accountable to Parliament for payments made to these institutions.

South Africa

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the remaining European Union restrictive measures in force against South Africa.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The remaining measures are an embargo on exports of arms and para-military equipment to South Africa; an embargo on imports of arms and para-military equipment from South Africa; a refusal to co-operate in the military sphere—that is, a continuing ban on joint military exercises.

On 4 October 1993, the Foreign Affairs Council lifted the separate ban on accreditation of defence attachés and on official contacts and agreements in the security sphere.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much humanitarian aid is currently supplied by the United Kingdom to the former Yugoslavia; and what information he has on aid supplied by other countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 26 January 1994]: We have committed over £157 million, including our share of EC aid, for victims of the conflict in the former Yugoslavia. We were the largest bilateral contributor to the UN High Commissioner for Refugees' programmes there in 1993. Other major bilateral donors include the United States, France, Germany, Japan and the Netherlands. We also contribute substantially to the Sarajevo airlift; through our contribution of 2,300 troops to UNPROFOR and through our approximately 140 ODA staff in the field.

I pay tribute to the courage and dedication of the former ODA driver Paul Goodall who was so brutally murdered on 27 January. Following a review of security procedures with the UN, the ODA resumed convoy operations, on a phased basis, on 31 January. Despite the appalling atrocity committed against our drivers, their colleagues are determined that the aid effort should continue and are keen to resume full operations.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Voter Registration

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the percentage of voter non-registration in each of the age groups (a) from 17 to 24 years, (b) from 25 to 29 years, (c) from 30 to 49 years and (d) over 50 years; if he will publish a breakdown of the estimated number of non-registered voters in each of those age groups by sex and ethnic origin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Peter Lloyd: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys carried out research on behalf of the Home Office and the Scottish Office Home and Health Department after the 1991 census to assess the coverage and quality of the electoral register in Great Britain in 1991. The proportions of eligible people in the survey who were not included in the register, for different groups of people, are set out in the table. Copies of the survey, "Electoral registration in 1991", are in the Library.

Secure Training Centres

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which sites are under consideration as locations for the proposed secure training centres for persistent juvenile offenders.

Mr. Maclean: A notice was placed in the Official Journal of the European Communities—OJEC—on 5 January inviting expressions of interest from companies to finance, design, build/refurbish, operate and maintain secure training centres either on Home Office land or on alternative sites which they themselves would propose. The deadline for receipt of applications is 11 February 1994. Before then, I cannot say which sites will be considered.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which organisations have been invited to consider the establishment and running of secure training centres for persistent juvenile offenders.

Mr. Maclean: Potential providers of secure training centres will be identified through responses to the OJEC notice issued on 5 January 1994. Invitations to tender will be issued following an assessment of the responses received.

Terrorism

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, columns 475-76, if he will list all those who have been convicted of scheduled, terrorist-related offences held in custody in England and Wales, giving in each case the nature of their conviction, the sentence given and the date on which their sentence began.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 1 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prisoners in custody in England and Wales convicted of terrorist related offences.

Readily available information on prisonerss serving sentences in England and Wales for serious offences related to terrorism is limited to those classified as Category A.

Sharon Tabarn

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department has investigated the death after hypnosis of Sharon Tabarn of Hesketh Bank, Lancashire.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There was a police investigation into the circumstances surrounding Ms Tabarn's death. Such matters are entirely the responsibility of the chief officer of the police force concerned. I understand that an inquest subsequently found that Ms Tabarn died from natural causes.

Mohammed Riaz and Abdul Raja

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 414, when he expects to tell Mohammed Riaz and Abdul Qayyum Raja the life sentences they are to serve; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The decision as to the period to be served for retribution and deterrence was sent to each prisoner individually on 20 December 1993.

Life Sentences

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many life sentences have been referred to him since he became Home Secretary; what was the racial origin of each prisoner; in how many cases he has (a) increased the sentence recommended, (b) reduced the sentence recommended and (c) not varied the sentence; by what date he expects all those serving life sentences will have been informed of the sentence they are to serve; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since he took office, my right hon. and learned Friend has received 151 reports from the judiciary in respect of prisoners sentenced to mandatory life imprisonment. Details of their ethnic origin would be available only at disproportionate cost. The cases are being processed in accordance with the arrangements set out in my right hon. and learned Friend's reply to my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence) of 4 November 1993, at columns 376-78. The gist of the relevant judicial recommendations has been disclosed to 128 of these prisoners, and representations have been received from 26 of them. The period for retribution and deterrence—the tariff—has not been set in any of these cases.

Also, in accordance with the arrangements referred to above, retrospective disclosure is being given to those prisoners whose tariffs have already been set. To date, 91 such disclosures have been made. Representations have been received from six prisoners, four of whom have received decisions.

We aim to complete the process of tariff setting and retrospective disclosure for all prisoners currently in custody, by the end of this year.

Prison Dog Service

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on plans to market test the prison dog service section; and how much the exercise has cost.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 1 February 1994:

> The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about progress with plans to market test the Prison Dog Service; and how much the exercise has cost.
>
> This market test has been suspended, as under present law contractors in directly managed prisons would be unable to exercise powers to stop and search inmates. Provision is included in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill to change this situation and plans for market testing will be re-considered when it becomes law.
>
> Work on the project is estimated to have cost approximately £10,500, mainly for two staff members temporarily allocated to it.

Fire Service College

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the Fire Service college annual report and accounts for the year ended March 1993 will be published;

(2) what was the financial target set for the Fire Service college on being given trading fund status; and if it has been achieved.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Fire Service college under its commandant chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from B. L. Fuller to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 31 January 1994:

> The Secretary of State has asked The Fire Service College to write to you directly in reply to two of your Parliamentary Questions about the College.
>
> The Fire Service College Annual Report and Accounts for the year ended March 1993 were laid before both Houses on 4 November 1993 as part of Votes and Proceedings on that day. Printed copies of the Report should be available shortly but have been delayed due to my negotiating what the cost to the College would be of providing a limited number of copies.
>
> On being given trading fund status, The Fire Service College was set two financial targets:
>
> (i) "to manage the funded operations so that the revenue of the fund consists principally of receipts in respect of goods or services provided in the course of the funded operations and is not less than sufficient, taking one year with another, to meet outgoings which are properly chargeable to revenue account."
>
> (ii) "a further financial objective desirable of achievement by the Fire Service College for the period 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1995 shall be to achieve a minimum return, average over the period as a whole, of 6·5 per cent. in the form of an operating surplus expressed as a percentage of average net assets employed at current values."
>
> The first was not met in 1992-93, the second cannot be finally assessed until 1995 but the first year showed a return of 0·65 per cent.
>
> I hope this is helpful.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Fire Service college has made a loss since achieving trading fund status; and who will make good such a loss.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Fire Service college became an agency operating as a trading fund on 1 April 1992. In the year 1992-93, it made a small operating surplus, but, after allowing for interest on the capital debt, it recorded a deficit of £1·152 million. The college is a Home Office establishment and the situation is being kept under review.

Prisons (Code of Standards)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be publishing the Prison Service code of standards referred in para 7.22 of the Prison Service corporate plan published in April 1993.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is hoped to publish a code of standards early in 1994.

Prison Service Headquarters

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what payment has been paid to Hyperion Properties in respect of the cancellation of the move of the Prison Service headquarters to Derby; and on what basis the payment was made;

(2) what payment has been made to any company other than Hyperion Properties in respect of the cancellation of the move of the Prison Service headquarters to Derby; and on what basis such payment was made;

(3) what has been the cost of negotiations between the Prison Service and/or his Department and companies seeking compensation in respect of the cancellation of the move of the Prison Service headquarters to Derby.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 1 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the cancellation of the move of Prison Service Headquarters to Derby.

A payment of a little under £9 million has been paid to Hyperion Properties plc in settlement of their claim for damages for breach of contract following the cancellation of relocation. This payment represents full and final settlement of all claims from Hyperion, their contractor and sub-contractors.

In addition, £20,000 was paid to Barcol-Air (UK) Ltd in respect of design work for the air conditioning system which would have been installed in the headquarters in Derby.

The Prison Service's costs in negotiating this settlement amounted to around £128,000.

Obscene Publications

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the adequacy of the enforcement of the Obscene Publications Act 1959.

Mr. Maclean: The enforcement of the Obscene Publications Act 1959 is a matter for the police, and it is for the chief officers concerned to allocate resources to particular police activities. The Government are, however, most concerned to ensure that the law on obscenity is enforced as effectively as possible, and we take special account of the views of those who actually enforce the legislation, particularly when they identify gaps in the law which should be closed. That is why we have come forward in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill with a number of measures designed to improve matters in this area. These were described in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 7 December 1993, at column 163.

The most recent statistics we have for prosecutions under the Obscene Publications Act are for 1992. In that year, there were 213 prosecutions and 171 convictions under section 2 of the Act. Figures for seizures and forfeitures under section 3 of the Act are not collected centrally. However, from inquiries we have made of the two largest forces in England and Wales—the Metropolitan police and Greater Manchester—both of which have specialised obscene publications squads, I understand that a total of 234,386 items were seized by them in 1992.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Buckley Hall prison will be market tested; if an in-house bid has yet been received; and when the prison will open.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 1 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Buckley Hall prison.

No in-house bid has yet been received. The process of market testing has started and expressions of interest in tendering were received on 21 January. It is expected that invitations to tender will be issued in early February. The opening of the prison is dependent on the rebuilding programme. It is planned to open the prison in phases and the earliest possible date for the opening of the first phase would be October 1994.

Asylum

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a breakdown of the number of asylum seekers held in detention on 1 January, (a) by nationality, (b) by length of detention and (c) by immigration status at the time of application.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information shows that 622 asylum seekers were held in detention on 21 January; information relating to 1 January is not available.

The breakdown by nationality is as follows:

Of the 622 asylum seekers held in detention, 341 had been detained at the port of entry and 228 were discovered to thave entered unlawfully. They would not, therefore, have had current leave at the time of their application. The remaining 53 detainees are the subjects of deportation action. Of these, 42 are known to have been overstayers at the time of their asylum applications. The status of the remaining 11, who are to be deported on conducive grounds, or on the recommendation of a court, is not recorded.

Mr. Glens Tarimo

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons Glens Tarimo, being deported to Nairobi on 27 December, was placed on a plane to Khartoum.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Mr. Tarimo was removed to Nairobi via Khartoum, the same route by which he had arrived, in accordance with normal practice.

Prisons (Market Testing)

Ms Roddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria will be used to select the next two operational prisons for market testing.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matte has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 1 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about market testing of further operational prisons.

The approach to the selection of operational prisons for market testing will be to select those where there is the greatest scope for improving performance. The Prisons Board will look at factors such as the extent and quality of regime activities and the cost per place in determining whether good value for money is currently being provided.

Consideration will also be given to factors which may affect performance, such as the nature of the prisoner population and any limitations of the buildings.

Crime Victims

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce provisions, in respect of compensating victims of violent crime, for individual assessment of loss of earnings and other financial loss.

Mr. Maclean: The recent White Paper, "Compensating Victims of Violent Crime: Changes to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme", Cm 2434, explained the Government's intention to establish a new tariff scheme, which will come into force on 1 April 1994. Under that scheme, compensation payments to blameless victims of violent crime will be made from a tariff of awards for injuries of comparable severity. The tariff levels have been set by reference to awards made in the recent past by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board which, because they are based on common law damages, include elements for loss of earnings and the other heads of damage. To that extent, the awards will contain an element of loss of earnings, but there will be no separate assessment.

The new scheme will be more straightforward and claimants should get their compensation more quickly and with less fuss. When the tariff scheme is introduced, the majority of claimants should get as much as or more than they could have expected under the current arrangements.

Detainees (Escorts)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report column 927, what was the total amount paid to private security firms for escorting detainees and their dependants overseas in 1993, including ticketing costs;

(2) what was the total amount paid to Airline Securities Consultants Ltd. for escorting detainees and their dependants overseas in 1993; and what has been the total paid to ASC ever for this purpose.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The total amount paid to private security firms for escorting detainees and their dependants overseas in 1993, including ticketing costs, was £615,035. Information about payments to Airline Security Consultants Ltd. is commercially confidential.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 927, who provided the 7 per cent. of in-flight escorts for people being removed at public expense, including deportees, which were not provided by the private sector.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Provincial police forces.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deportees, and how many of their dependants, were escorted by private security firms in 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Between April and December 1993, 167 people removed under powers in the Immigration Act 1971, including deportees and their dependants, were escorted overseas by private security firms. Statistics for January to March 1993 are not available.

Deportees (Drugs Administration)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what percentage of deportations in 1993 drugs were administered to the deportee or their dependants;

(2) in what percentage of cases where drugs were administered to deportees or their dependants in 1993 their medical records were checked first.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is not normal practice for drugs to be administered to deportees or their dependants. Where medical records are available, they would be consulted as necessary before the administration of any medication.

New Prisons

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the estimated timetable for the financing, designing, building and opening of the new prisons announced in October 1993;

(2) when he will be inviting private sector proposals for financing, designing, building and managing the six new prisons which were announced in October last year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 1 February 1994:

> The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your two recent Questions about the timing of plans for the design, construction, management and finance by the private sector of the six new prisons which were announced in October last year.
>
> Expressions of interest for the first two of these, in South Wales and on Merseyside, have been invited. Private sector companies interested in bidding for these contracts have been asked to let the Prison Service have their initial responses by 11 February 1994. By 31 March 1994 the Prison Service plans to issue invitations to tender for the two projects. The timetable for the award of contracts and completion of the prisons will depend on the initial responses, but it is intended that the two prisons should be brought into use as speedily as possible.
>
> Work is currently in progress to identify suitable sites for the other four prisons.

Dog Attacks

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the most recent figures for dog attacks on humans in the metropolitan areas for (a) 1991, (b) 1992 and (c) 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is not available in all the metropolitan areas.

Ethnic Minorities (Grants)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what total amount of funds have been made available over the last year under (a) the safer cities scheme, (b) section 11 grants, (c) ethnic minority grants and (d) ethnic minority business grant.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: During the 1992-93 financial year funds were made available under these schemes as follows:

	£ million
Safer cities	7·7
Section 11	129·7
EMG	4·0
EMBI	0·4

Safer Cities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of safer cities, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Since the safer cities programme was launched in 1988, the following expenditure has been incurred on the programme's administration:

£ thousand

	1988-93	1993-94[1]	Totals
Publicity	533	90	623
Evaluation	188	47	235
Administration	1,619	309	1,928
Salaries	3,617	1,013	4,630
Surveys	1,060	62	1,122
Capital	307	3	310

[1] 1993-94 figures represent expenditure up to, and including, the third quarter.

The above mentioned budgets comprise the following categories of expenditure:

Publicity—producing action plans, annual reports, local brochures-organising seminars and conferences-publicising crime prevention schemes and activities.

Evaluation—data collection, census statistics, analysis software, analysis consultancies and census boundary data in order to evaluate the Programme.

Administration—project running costs, including stationery, staff travel and subsistence expenses–office rent and rates–minor office works–recruitment of staff–staff training–workshops and a national conference–equipment maintenance costs

Salaries—salaries of project staff

Surveys—local surveys and research work to identify crime problems and solutions, and to evaluate grant-aided schemes-centrally commissioned surveys to assist the evaluation of the Programme

Capital—project furniture and equipment

A further breakdown of the programme's expenditure could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Fire and Emergency Calls

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table showing (a) the number of fire and emergency calls per 1,000 population in each fire authority area, (b) the number of fire officers per 1,000 population and (c) the number of fire and emergency calls per officer, for each fire authority are in (a) 1989, (b) 1990 and (c) 1991.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is being collated. I will send a table to the hon. Member as soon as it is available.

Airline Securities Consultants Ltd.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the outcome of his Department's investigations into the two other cases apart from Dorothy Nirokedi and Meya Mangeta regarding complaints alleging excessive force by Airline Securities Consultants Ltd.; whether his Department will continue to use Airline Securities Consultants Ltd.; and if he will publish in full the complaints against this company, and his Department's investigations of them;

(2) what were the names of the deportees involved in the four complaints alleging excessive force in individual cases in which Airline Securities Consultants Ltd. has been employed by his Department to escort deportees; and where they were deported from.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The complaints about the alleged use of excessive force in escorting Mrs. Dorothy Nwokedi and Mr. Meya Mangete have been thoroughly investigated and were found to be unsubstantiated. Two further complaints about the conduct of Airline Security Consultants Ltd. in escorting two people being removed from the United Kingdom are still being investigated. These people have not sought any publicity for their cases and it would not be appropriate to disclose their names. Nor would it be appropriate to publish the complaints made against Airline Security Consultants or the reports of these investigations. I will, however, write to the hon. Member advising her of the outcome when they have been completed. I do not consider there are grounds for suspending the use of Airline Security Consultants Ltd. to escort deportees.

Research Projects

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those research projects (a) undertaken internally by his Department and (b) commissioned by his Department from external contractors, within the last five years, which have gathered data on the employment status (i) of persons convicted of crimes and (ii) of persons given custodial sentences.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not routinely collected, and special research exercises are required to do so. The national prison survey, carried out in 1991, provides the information for a representative sample for persons given custodial sentences. Results are published in "Home Office Research Studies" No. 128. The research and planning unit has recently commissioned a similar survey on offenders on probation "People On Probation", results of which will be available around the end of the year.

Many of the projects in the research and planning unit's programme include reference of some sort to employment status. The main projects are listed in the table, including publication details of those completed.

Internal projects

1. The National Prison Survey 1991: main findings, (HORS No. 128).
2. Developments in the use of compensation orders magistrates' courts since 1988, (HORS No. 126).
3. Deductions from benefit for fine default, (RPU Paper No. 60).
4. Unit fines: experiments in four courts, (RPU Paper No. 59).
5. Day Centre reconviction rates, British Journal of Criminology 32(3) 1992.
6. People on probation.
7. Implementation and use of the combination order.
8. Predicting sexual reconviction.
9. Reconviction Prediction score.

External projects

10. Custodial and post-custodial work and employment.
11. Managing the needs of women prisoners.
12. Imprisonment and family ties.
13. The dynamics of recidivism.

Criminology Researchers

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on the granting of permission to criminology researchers to interview prisoners.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. Derek Lewis to Mr. John McFall, dated 1 February 1994.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question about the policy on granting permission to criminology researchers interview prisoners.

Requests to interview inmates in prison establishments in England and Wales are considered on the basis of the practicability and likely benefit of the research, the demands of the research project on Prison Service resources, the qualifications of the researcher, and the consent of the prisoner.

Deportation

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 927, what plans he has to ensure that his Department makes appropriate checks on private security firms employed by carriers required by the Immigration Service to effect the removal of a passenger refused leave to enter.

Mr. Charles Wardle: As I explained in the answer to which the hon. Member refers, carriers are responsible for all the arrangements necessary to comply with directions to remove people refused leave to enter. There are no plans to change these arrangements.

Hoax Fire Calls

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hoax fire calls per 1,000 population were made in each fire authority area in (a) 1989, (b) 1990 and (c) 1991.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information on malicious false alarm incidents attended by local authority fire brigades is shown in the table.

Immigration (Children)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children, and from which countries, have entered the United Kingdom for adoption in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Statistics of children entering the United Kingdom with a view to adoption are not collected centrally.

Prisoners (Press Interviews)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what rules exist to prevent payment to convicted prisoners or their agents or relatives, as a way of capitalising on their notoriety and crime by granting press interviews;

(2) if he will consider taking powers to prevent all payments to convicted prisoners who agree to sell their stories to the media.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Prison Service standing orders prohibit sentenced prisoners from engaging in correspondence, or in communicating by telephone about matters, which includes material intended for publication in return for payment. Visits to inmates by journalists or authors in their professional capacity are generally not allowed. In addition, the newspaper industry's code of practice specifically provides that people involved in crime or their associates should not be paid for their stories. It would not be feasible to devise legal restraints sufficiently broad to prevent criminals profiting from published accounts of their criminal activities, while at the same time avoiding unjustifiable restrictions on media reporting of matters of legitimate public interest. Enforcement could be particularly difficult since payment could be made indirectly, covertly or outside the jurisdiction.

Young Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) 18-year-olds, (b) 19-year-olds, (c) 20-year-olds and (d) 21-year-olds were held in Prison Service establishments, both on remand and sentenced, on the last day of each month from 31 January 1992 to the present; and in which establishments they were held;

(2) how many (a) 15-year-olds, and (b) 16-year-olds, (c) 17-year-olds were held in Prison Service establishments, both on remand and sentenced, on the last day of each month from 31 January 1992 to the present; and in which establishments they were held.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 27 January 1994]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 1 February 1994.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions asking how many (a) 15-year-olds, (b) 16-year-olds, (c) 17-year-olds, (d) 18-year-olds, (e) 19-year-olds, (f) 20-year-olds and (g) 21-year-olds were held in Prison Service establishments, both on remand and sentenced, on the last day of each month from 31 January 1992 to the present; and in which establishments they were held.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the amount of housing revenue account subsidy for 1993-94 and 1994-95 for each district council in Wales, and for Wales as a whole, showing the percentage increase or decrease in each case.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The amount of housing revenue account subsidy claimed by each authority in Wales as a whole in 1993-94 is given in the following table. Comparable information for 1994-95 is not yet available as first subsidy claims for that year are not due until April.

Mr. David Davis: The amount of statutory sick pay reimbursement due to the Office of Public Service and Science is offset against employer's national insurance contributions payable to the Department of Social Security. The amount offset between 1 April 1992 and December 1993 was £56,300.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the names on the public appointments unit central list are known to be politically active.

Mr. David Davis: Details of political affiliation are not sought by the public appointments unit. From the information made available by candidates, only 13 per cent. of those on the central list are known to have been members of a political party.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the current savings that have resulted up to January from the introduction of market testing in the civil service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 20 January, Official Report, columns 775-76.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 1031, what are the particular qualifications, experience or expertise relating to employment policy of the special adviser, Mr. Michael McManus.

Mr. David Hunt: It is not my practice to comment on the qualifications, expertise or experience of my special adviser.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) pursuant to his answer of 13 December, Official Report, column 515, if he is yet in a position to place in the Library a list of the directors of each training and enterprise council and the companies or organisations which they represent;

(2) if he will place in the Library a list of the directors of each training and enterprise council in 1992-93 and the companies or organisations which they represented.

Miss Widdecombe: The list of current directors will be available in the Library from 4 February 1994. It will cover the training and enterprise councils for England and will be updated quarterly.

The information requested for 1992-93 is not held centrally, and the cost of obtaining it would be disproportionate.

Employees (Food)

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the statutory provisions or relevant circulars or guidance from his Department affecting employers' powers to restrict the kinds of food made available to employees at their place of work.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are no provisions in employment or health and safety legislation governing this matter; nor has this Department issued any such guidance or circulars.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will supply the figures for the number of weeks, after having their babies, that working women have off before they return to work, for each of the years since 1983.

Miss Widdecombe: The information for each year since 1983 is not available. However, the survey "Maternity Rights in Britain" by the Policy Studies Institute, based on research co-funded by the Department, indicates that in 1988 working women returned to work after a median of 19 weeks absence following child birth.

ILO Conventions

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the number of International Labour Organisation conventions deratified by the United Kingdom; and how many have been ratified by each other EC state.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Over the years, successive United Kingdom Governments have denounced 10 conventions. The United Kingdom is currently bound by 69 conventions. The number of conventions by which other EC states are bound is shown in the table:

Stansted Airport

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received to date about the effect of the transatlantic air travel bilateral restrictions on employment at and around London's Stansted airport.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received seven representations on this matter.

Redundant People

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has concerning schemes administered by the North Derbyshire training and enterprise council which offer subsidies to employers to take on redundant people; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The North Derbyshire training and enterprise council offers a wide range of support to unemployed people to help them acquire the skills they need to get and keep jobs. This includes encouraging employers to recruit unemployed people by assisting with the cost of training.

Redundancies

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many requests he has received for information regarding notification procedures for impending redundancies as required under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992;

(2) how many requests for information regarding notification procedures for impending redundancies under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 have been denied on the grounds of confidentiality; to what type of information confidentiality applies; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what criteria he uses when deciding that confidentiality applies to the operation of parts of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department receives requests from time to time for information about individual notifications of redundancies made by employers under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. Records are not kept of such requests. The Department's policy, based on legal advice, is that such information is given and treated in confidence. The Department is not able to comment on individual notifications unless details of those notifications have already been made publicly available by the employer.

GCHQ

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment in what circumstances the Government would allow unions to represent again employees at GCHQ.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government have made it clear that their overriding objective remains to ensure the maintenance of continuous operations at GCHQ for the protection of national security. It is necessary to ensure that the staff are not subject to potential conflicts of loyalty. The Government are willing to consider any proposals which are consistent with that objective. All staff at GCHQ are free to join the Government Communications Staff Federation which is listed as a trade union under the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. More than 50 per cent. have done so.

DEFENCE

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) of 11 January, Official Report, column 7, if he will place in the Library the paper his Department submitted to the joint Department of the Environment—Ministry of Agriculture assessment of THORP for the consultation exercise; and if he will set out the basis of his statement that conversion of nuclear material to military purpose can be achieved only with extreme difficulty.

Mr. Aitken: My Department participated in the preparation of the statement of Government policy on reprocessing and the operation of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield, which was made public on 4 August 1993. No submissions have been made since then by my Department in respect of the consultation or decision on the new Sellafield discharge authorisation. A copy of the statement of Government policy has been placed in the Library of the House.

I have nothing to add to the position set out in paragraph 51 of that statement, on the usefulness of plutonium from THORP for weapons purposes.

Vickers Armoured Vehicle

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is his intention to acquire the Vickers mark II armoured vehicle for the British Army.

Mr. Aitken: No.

Horizon Programme

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the Horizon programme.

Mr. Aitken: Following the signing of a memorandum of understanding in July last year, a joint project office was established in London in November of last year, to manage Project Horizon, the common new generation frigate, on behalf of the United Kingdom, France and Italy. Two international consortia are now being formed to conduct competitive project definition for the combat management system to be contracted later this year. And a competition is underway for the selection of the United Kingdom member for the international joint venture company which will design and build the three first of class ships, which we currently plan to enter service around the turn of the century.

Departmental Dwellings

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number and location of (a) dwellings and (b) vacant dwellings owned by his Department in (i) each district of Hampshire and (ii) Hampshire as a whole.

Mr. Hanley: Statistics on Ministry of Defence dwellings are not maintained by local authority districts and such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

As at 31 December 1993, the Ministry of Defence owned 8,288 dwellings in Hampshire, of which 1,051 were vacant, located as follows:

	Stock	Vacant
Aldershot	2,405	390
Bordon	673	77
Farnborough	104	9
Middle Wallop	509	61
Oakhanger	92	4
Odiham	581	11
Portsmouth area	3,446	386
Worthy Down	478	113

Many of the vacant properties were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work or already allocated to service families who were due to move in shortly.

In addition, 1,003 properties, of which 188 were vacant, were in the process of being sold.

South Citadel Building, Whitehall

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts were placed for refurbishment of the command centre under the south citadel building in Whitehall between 1979 and 1985; who were the main contractors; and what was the value of each contract.

Mr. Aitken: Four main contracts were placed for the refurbishment of the command centre under the south citadel building in Whitehall between 1979 and 1985. The contractors were Griffiths McGee Demolition Co Ltd, Mirrless Blackstone Stamford Ltd, Taylor Woodrow Construction Ltd and Hayward Tyler Ltd. The total value of the four contracts when let was approximately £700,000.

Nimrod Aircraft

Dr. David Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF Nimrod aircraft are allocated to royal duties.

Mr. Hanley: No Nimrod aircraft are specifically allocated to royal duties, although aircraft can be made available in the search and rescue role should it be considered necessary on any occasion.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Nimrod aircraft were on royal duty in Australia on 26 January.

Mr. Hanley: None.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Nimrod aircraft there are in the RAF.

Mr. Hanley: The Royal Air Force currently has 33 Nimrod aircraft.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF Nimrod aircraft are located overseas.

Mr. Hanley: Two Nimrod maritime patrol aircraft are scheduled to depart the United Kingdom to conduct routine training in the Mediterranean on Tuesday 1 February. In addition to routine training deployments, Nimrod aircraft do deploy from time to time to Sicily from where they contribute to the NATO and Western European Union forces conducting maritine operations in the Adriatic; the next deployment is due to begin on Friday 4 February.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to alter the numbers of search-and-rescue helicopters based at the royal naval bases at (a) Portland and (b) Culdrose.

Mr. Hanley: There are no current plans to alter the numbers of search and rescue helicopters at the royal naval air stations at Portland and Culdrose.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current number of SAR helicopters based at the royal naval bases at (a) Portland and (b) Culdrose.

Mr. Hanley: Currently, three of the Sea King Mk4 helicopters held at the royal naval air station Portland are equipped for search and rescue operations. One duty aircraft provides day time cover with another held on standby. The royal naval air station Culdrose has a squadron of five Sea King Mk5 helicopters, all of which are capable of search and rescue operations. One aircraft is on duty at all times while another is held on standby.

Malaysian Arms Deal

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many files marked "Not for NAO eyes" relating to the Malaysian arms deal are held in his Department.

Mr. Aitken: None.

SSN Flotilla

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the modernisation of the SSN flotilla.

Mr. Aitken: I am pleased to announce that we have today placed a contract with Ferranti Thomson Sonar Systems—FTSS—for the full development and initial production of sonar 2076 which will be fitted to Trafalgar class fleet submarines.

The contract has been awarded following competition and covers the provision of four boat sets and supporting shore equipment. At a price in excess of £180 million it is the largest single sonar order placed for some time and will continue to keep the Royal Navy at the forefront of sonar technology and capability into the foreseeable future.

The contract is likely to create a number of new jobs and will safeguard hundreds of others at FTSS and at many sub-contractors, and will be welcomed by British industry.

EDUCATION

Technology College Status

7. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools have now expressed an interest in obtaining technology college status.

Mr. Patten: There has been a very encouraging level of interest from schools and businesses. More than 200 schools have made inquiries to my Department or the City Technology Colleges Trust on the technology college initiative.

Grant-maintained Schools

11. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement about the progress of the scheme for grant-maintained schools in Northumberland.

Mr. Robin Squire: There is only one self-governing school in Northumberland at present—a much smaller proportion than in the country as a whole. But there is considerable interest at other schools, representatives from 50 of which attended one of the Department's conferences about grant-maintained status last year.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to establish freephone lines to advise the public on grant-maintained school status on a national and regional basis; how long he expects such lines to be in operation; if they will offer a 24-hour a day service; and what is the estimate of cost.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what has been the cost of the recent press advertisements promoting the availability of information concerning grant-maintained school status.

Mr. Robin Squire: The cost of the present series of advertisements, designed to provide factual information on grant-maintained status to parents, governors and schools, will be about £200,000.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many pupils are now being educated in self-governing grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Patten: Over 530,000 pupils are now being educated in 814 self-governing schools. This represents 16 per cent. of England's secondary school population, and a significant and growing proportion of all primary school pupils.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools within Greater London have opted out of local education authority control; and how many have applications being considered by his Department.

Mr. Robin Squire: By 31 January, 145 schools were operating with grant-maintained status in the Greater London area, and two more had been approved for incorporation on 1 April. In addition, 14 schools had applications for grant-maintained status under consideration, and another six had voted in favour but had not yet published proposals.

Nursery Education

13. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many state-funded nursery school places are available in south Liverpool; and what is the annual demand for them.

Mr. Forth: Figures for south Liverpool are not held centrally. Nor is information collected on the demand for or supply of nursery school places as such. The Department's statistics relate to pupils attending maintained schools in whole local education authority areas.

16. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what calculation he has made of the percentage of three and four-year-olds that could be provided for by local education authorities if the element in the standard spending assessment for nursery education was used fully for this purpose.

Mr. Forth: It is for local education authorities to determine what type and level of educational provision to make for under-fives. The number of under-fives who could be supported with a given level of expenditure would depend on the type of provision, mode of attendance and take up of places. Many parents choose to make use of the many and varied alternative provisions made by the significant voluntary and private sector.

23. Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list those local education authorities which spend more than the element in the standard spending assessment for nursery education on providing places in nursery schools, units or classes.

Mr. Forth: This information is not held centrally.

25. Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received on recent policy announcements on the availability of nursery education.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received a large number of representations on nursery education in recent months.

Truancy

15. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the correlation between truancy rates and teaching standards.

Mr. Forth: Many factors contribute to truancy, some of them outside the immediate control of schools. However, evidence from Office for Standards in Education inspections and other research suggests that there may be factors in pupils' classroom experience which contribute to the disaffection of some pupils and encourage them to stay away from school.

26. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to cut down truancy.

Mr. Forth: The Department is currently supporting expenditure of some £9·6 million in 71 English local education authorities under the reducing truancy programme of the grants for education support and training —GEST—scheme 1993-94. The programme will be extended in 1994-95 to include a "Truancy Watch" component as a means of promoting community involvement. Approved projects will be announced shortly.

Ministerial Visits

17. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he will next be visiting Rochdale to discuss the educational needs of its population.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to visit Rochdale.

Performance Tables

18. Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools improved their performance in the school performance tables last year over that of the previous year.

Mr. Robin Squire: The tables show that, on the most widely used measure of school performance—the percentage of 15-year-old pupils gaining five or more A to C grades at GCSE—62 per cent. of schools improved their performance in 1993 as compared with 1992. This is a most creditable performance by the schools concerned.

Capital Expenditure

19. Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received from Cornwall county council about the level of its financial allocation for capital expenditure projects for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: None. Local education authority bids for capital are dealt with consistently and fairly, in line with published criteria. Cornwall's annual capital guidelines are a reflection of the extent to which its plans for spending matched these criteria.

Education Policies, Redbridge

21. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received in the last year about the education policies of the London borough of Redbridge.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received several representations, including from the hon. Member, about the admission of pupils to schools in Redbridge.

Religious Education

22. Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimates have been made of the adequacy of the supply of teachers of religious education.

Mr. Robin Squire: Our target intakes for initial teacher training provide for a 31 per cent. increase in recruitment to RE courses up to 1996-97—well above the average for secondary subjects. We review these targets annually.

Capital Works

24. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the current estimate of outstanding capital works in schools in England.

Mr. Forth: Information from the 1991 National Audit Office report on school buildings suggests that some £2 billion, at 1990 prices, was required to deal with the outstanding capital needs of school buildings. In 1994-95, Government support for capital and repair work at maintained schools will total over £600 million, much of which will go towards improving the school stock.

Special Educational Needs

27. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to reduce the amount of time it takes local education authorities to produce statements of special educational needs.

Mr. Forth: Subject to Parliament's approval, from September this year regulations will set time limits within which statements must be made and a code of practice will provide guidance on how those limits should be met. Normally, the process should take no more than 26 weeks from start to finish.

Dearing Report

28. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what has been the response of the teacher unions and associations following the publication of the Dearing report on the national curriculum and testing.

Mr. Robin Squire: All the teacher unions have recognised the improvements to the national curriculum and testing embodied in the Dearing report. I welcome the subsequent action of the Association of Teachers and Lecturers and the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers in calling off their boycott of national tests. I hope that the National Union of Teachers will follow suit so that we can continue to raise standards in our schools in the interests of pupils.

Training Targets

29. Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recent representations he has had from employers about national education and training targets.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend welcomes the continuing support from employers for the national education and training targets. He shares the view expressed to him by employers that the challenge presented by the targets must be met if the country is to remain competitive in the international marketplace.

Surplus Places

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will reconsider the formulae by which he calculates surplus places in small schools in rural areas.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department assesses surplus places in the same way for all schools based on their physical capacity. We have always made it clear, however, that whether surplus places can be removed will depend on the type of school concerned and where it is.

Further Education

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of secondary school pupils taking post-16 education remain in the same school rather than transferring to sixth-form colleges or other educational institutions.

Mr. Robin Squire: Of the 16-year-olds who remained in full-time education in 1992-93, the proportion in school was 50·5 per cent.; 46·5 per cent. were in the same secondary school as when they were 15 years old, and 4 per cent. had transferred to another school. The proportion in sixth-form colleges was 12·2 per cent., while 37·3 per cent. went to other colleges of further education.

School Discipline

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proposals he has to (a) improve discipline in schools and (b) reduce the number of exclusions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend recently issued for consultation draft guidance on behaviour and discipline and on exclusions from school. The aim of the guidance is to help schools to improve standards of behaviour and to reduce the need to exclude pupils. Consultation lasts until 11 March, with a view to issuing guidance in final form in May.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Boswell: No employees of this Department have been found guilty of fraud since 1989.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Boswell: The Department's policy is to dismiss any employee who is convicted by the courts of fraud.

Education Expenditure (Cornwall)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much central Government money was spent per head of the population on education in Cornwall in each year since 1979.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Regional Offices (Training)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will give details of the training to be given to civil servants who will staff the proposed regional offices within the Department for Education.

Mr. Boswell: With effect from 1 May 1994, a group of staff working at the Department for Education will be given specific responsibility for regional links and for ensuring proper co-ordination with those Departments represented in the Government's integrated regional offices. Staff will be provided with training as appropriate to their individual needs.

Student Publications

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the effect of his policy on student unions on the charitable work carried out by student rags.

Mr. Boswell: The Government are determined to reform student unions and to secure that the principles of choice, democracy and accountability are universally observed in their activities. It is not our intention to jeopardise student services, for which funding will remain available in institutions' budgets.

Office for Standards in Education

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the cost of the setting up of the Office for Standards in Education.

Mr. Robin Squire: When Ofsted was created on 1 September 1992, it incurred gross expenditure for the remainder of the financial year of £7·7 million.

Regional Offices

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the estimated cost of setting up regional offices within his Department.

Mr. Boswell: The Department has no plans to set up regional offices.

Dance and Drama

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many local education authorities made full discretionary awards for accredited courses for dance and drama in 1987 and in 1993; and if he will estimate the total population in the authorities that now make no discretionary awards at all.

Mr. Boswell: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Music and Arts Advisory Services

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which local education authorities still have (a) a music advisory service and (b) an arts advisory service.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information on these discretionary services is not collected by the Department. It is the Government's policy that, wherever possible, decisions about the need for such services and how best to obtain them should rest with the schools. Local education authorities may provide them if there is sufficient demand locally.

SCOTLAND

Glenlight Shipping

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the criteria used by the Scottish Office in deciding the level of subsidies to shipping companies for general cargo and timber transportation; which Scottish companies are currently in receipt of these subsidies for general cargo and timber transportation; how much these subsidies have amounted to during each of the last five years for (a) general cargo and (b) timber transportation; and how much the Glenlight Shipping Company has received in respect of its transportation of timber for Caledonian Paper plc.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Each shipping operator's tariff rebate subsidy—TRS—allocation is based on the operator's estimates of traffic to be carried within the specified period and on previous years' actual traffic carried as compared with forecasts. The companies currently operating within the TRS scheme are listed in the table. All companies within the TRS scheme are eligible to receive subsidy on both general cargo and timber transportation. It is up to each individual company to decide on a commercial basis which commodities they wish to carry. Information is not available in the form requested for subsidy disaggregated between different commodities. The total amount of TRS paid during the last five years is also listed.

Companies operating within the TRS scheme:

P&O Scottish Ferries
Orcargo
Orkney Line Ltd.
Shetland Line Ltd.
Dennison (Shipping) Ltd.
Easdale Island Shipping Line
Gardner Shipping (Scotland) Ltd.
Glenlight Shipping Ltd.
Hay & Company (Lerwick) Ltd.
Roderick Cunningham (Scalpay) Ltd.

P&O and bulk shippers' tariff rebate subsidy 1989-90 to 1993-94

	P&O	Bulk Shippers
1989-90	4·3	1·0
1990-91	5·0	1·6
1991-92	4·2	2·0
1992-93	4·3	2·2
[1]1993-94	6·8	3·1

[1] Provision.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contact there has been between the Scottish Office and Caledonian Paper plc concerning the recent closure of the Glenlight Shipping Company and the implications for the operation of Caledonian Paper plc; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Glenlight Shipping Ltd. has not closed. The company is still operating, but has taken the commercial decision to discontinue bulk shipping operations in the highlands and islands area apart from the carriage of timber. The Scottish Office is continuing to provide tariff rebate subsidy to the company on the basis of eligible cargoes carried. There has been no contact between the Scottish Office and Caledonian Paper plc regarding this matter.

Timber Barges

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the public subsidies payable by the Scottish Office to companies operating timber barges; and if he will retain the level of subsidy at the current levels.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are currently 10 shipping companies operating within the tariff rebate subsidy scheme and each of them is eligible for subsidy for the transportation of timber. Currently only one company, Glenlight Shipping Ltd., operates timber barges. The bulk transport of timber currently attracts a TRS rate of 40 per cent. Arrangements for the operation of the TRS scheme in 1994-95 have not yet been finalised.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria he uses to determine that a trunk road should be detrunked.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Whether or not a road should cease to be a trunk road is a question of whether it should form part of a national system of routes for through traffic. Where a road ceases to fulfil a significant role in serving long-distance traffic, it will, therefore, be appropriate to detrunk it.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultation is carried out before a trunk road is detrunked.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As a matter of practice, consultations take place with all the local authorities for the area through which a road passes prior to publication of a notice by the Secretary of State of his intention to detrunk the road.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many roads or sections of roads in north-east Fife have been detrunked in the last five years for which information is available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One. A Section of the A91 road at Petheram roundabout, St. Andrews was detrunked on 1 April 1993.

Mr. Menzies-Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by region the roads or sections of roads that have been detrunked in the last five years for which information is available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is given in the table.

A91

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the future of the A91 road from the M90 to Cupar.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are at present no plans which would affect the future of the A91 from the M90 to Cupar. The question whether the whole of the A91 should be retained as a trunk road is one which we shall consider as part of an examination of the whole of the trunk and primary route network consequent upon reorganisation of local government.

Rose McCormack

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to examine the circumstances surrounding the death of Rose McCormack and her baby in Grangemouth.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate is fully aware of the circumstances of these tragic deaths, since their circumstances were reported by the police to the procurator fiscal at Falkirk, who in the normal way examined in detail what had occurred.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed;

(2) what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Lang: Staff who are involved in fraud are dealt with under departmental disciplinary proceedings. A range of disciplinary penalties is available, including dismissal. Depending on the circumstances of the case criminal proceedings may also be brought against the member of staff concerned.

The number of financial frauds which have been recorded since 1989 are as follows:

Year	Number

1992	2
1993	[illegible]

Eight of the cases have resulted in dismissal.

NHS Trusts (Pay)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cars each national health service trust and health board has bought as part of a payment package for senior personnel in the last year; and what is the average value of such cars.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 74, on the percentage rise of national health service trust chief executives' pay between 1992 and 1993, how many chief executives exceeded the 1·5 per cent. norm for settlements; and by how much in each case.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The information requested is not available centrally.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has received from Atomic Energy Authority Technology in regard to its imminent plans to increase radioactive discharges from its Dounreay reprocessing plant in Caithness.

Sir Hector Monro: Following an application by AEA Technology for revised limits Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate is currently reviewing the AEA Technology authorisations to dispose of solid, liquid and gaseous wastes. The applications for revised certificates of authorisation have been placed on public registers where they are available for inspection, at the offices of the inspectorate and at the offices of Caithness district and Highland regional councils.

Public Appointments

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appointments he has made within his responsibilities as Secretary of State for Scotland for each year since June 1987.

Mr. Lang: The information held centrally by my Department does not show the number of appointments made in any given year. The total number of appointees at 1 September 1993 to non-departmental public bodies, NHS bodies and nationalised industries which are the responsibility of my Department is shown in the summary tables in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1993", copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House. Information about the total numbers of appointees in earlier years is available in previous editions of this annual publication.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many relatives of Conservative hon. Members have been appointed to public bodies in Scotland since 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The relationship of those appointed to non-departmental bodies sponsored by my Department is neither sought nor recorded.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all public body appointments made by him where the current annual salary is (a) over and (b) under £10,000.

Mr. Lang: The remuneration of those appointed to non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department is listed in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1993", copies of which are in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will name the members of political parties appointed by him to public bodies each year since 1987; and if he will give the political affiliation of each.

Mr. Lang: Appointments are made on the basis of aptitude and merit. I do not make appointments of members of political parties in that capacity and no central record is kept of the political affiliation of those appointed to public bodies.

Scottish Homes

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if Scottish Homes is seeking revenue subsidy for housing associations from local authorities in all parts of Scotland; and what such grants have already been made.

Mr. Lang: Scottish Homes does not seek revenue subsidy for housing association from local authorities. If associations undertake activities jointly with local authorities, the funding of such activities is for negotiation between the parties concerned.

Criminals (Employment Status)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the employment status of persons convicted of crimes in Scotland in the last five years for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The only information collected centrally on the employment status of persons convicted of crime relates to crimes of homicide and can be found in the statistical bulletin, "Homicide in Scotland 1983-1992".

Highlands and Islands Objective 1 Plan

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when he expects to announce the location of the secretariat for the administration of the highlands and islands objective 1 plan; how many personnel he expects to be employed within the secretariat; and when the appointment of the head of administration will be announced;

(2) what representations his Department has received regarding the location of the secretariat for the administration of the highlands and islands objective 1 plan; if he will give details of any submissions which have suggested locating the venture outwith Inverness district; and if he will give details of the submissions which have suggested locating the venture on an island.

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1994]: As part of the process of drawing up the highlands and islands objective 1 plan, the Scottish Office has had discussions with the various agencies involved about the possibility of establishing a programme executive within the Highlands and Islands Enterprise area. Those discussions have focused on locating the executive in the Inverness area, although not necessarily within Inverness district. There have been no formal submissions on the location, but in responding to the draft plan, the following suggestions were made:

Organisation	Proposed location
Sutherland District Council	Sutherland
Argyll and Bute District Council	Oban
Ross and Cromarty District Council	Ross and Cromarty
Western Isles Islands Council	Western Isles/Stornoway
Shetland Islands Council	Shetland
Strathclyde Regional Council	Argyll and Bute

Western Isles Objective 1 Group	Western Isles

An announcement about the appointment of the programme director will be made shortly. Under the terms of an interim agreement with Highlands and Islands Enterprise, the director will be employed by HIE and his office will be located in their headquarters in Inverness. One of his initial tasks will be to prepare more detailed proposals for the functioning of the executive including staff numbers and their location.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he will take to ensure that assistance from the European structural funds, under objective 1, will be channelled into crofting.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Crofters already benefit from a range of national and EC structural support measures which will continue under objective 1. In addition, the objective 1 plan which was recently submitted to the European Commission allows for consideration to be given to additional measures to help crofters to increase efficiency and improve the quality of their produce.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the general practitioner fundholders operating within the Ayrshire and Arran health board area; what is the size of the budgets under their control; and if he will make a statement on the criteria which GP practices have to fulfil in order to gain fund holding status.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Three fund-holding practices have been operating within the board area from 1 April 1993: Dr. Richardson and partner, Institute avenue, Catrine combined with Dr. Cleland and partners, High street, Mauchline; Dr. Thomson and partners, 8 Cathcart street, Ayr and Dr. McSherry and partners, 9 Frew terrace, Irvine.

Details of the allotted sums, or funds, determined by the health board and deployed by a GP fundholding practice are published annually in each individual practice's audited annual accounts. Such audited accounts are not yet available for 1993-94.

The health board is required to determine each application according to the National Health Service (Fundholding Practices) (Scotland) Regulations 1993—SI 1993 No. 488. The main criteria to be fulfilled to gain GP fundholding status are that the practice, or group of practices, must have a list size of at least 6,000 patients; the fundholding application must be made by all members of the practice partnership; the practice must demonstrate that it has the managerial capability and resource plans necessary to manage a fund effectively and efficiently; and it must have a computer system to support the effective and efficient management of the fund.

The number of individual dentists registered on health board dental lists to provide national health service general dental services in each of the four health board areas within Strathclyde region and the total number of dentists registered in Scotland is contained in the table. Information for individual local government districts and regional areas is not available.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The available information is as shown in the table.

No breakdown is available between those prescription items which were free from charges and those covered by a pre-payment certificate. Column 5 shows, where available, the value of the pre-payment certificates issued in the respective years. No information is available regarding prescriptions paid for in some other way.

Milk

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secetary of State for Scotland how many gallons of milk were consumed in Scotland in the most recent year for which figures are available; and how many gallons of milk were produced in Scotland in that year.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The volume of milk produced and sold through milk marketing schemes in Scotland in 1992 was 1,156 million litres. The volume used for consumption as liquid milk was 662 million litres.

Meigle Cottage Hospital

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the representations his Department has received regarding the future of Meigle cottage hospital.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Since March 1991, the Scottish Office Home and Health Department has received 37 letters from 29 individuals regarding the future of Meigle cottage hospital.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what details of population growth for the Blairgowrie cottage hospital and the Meigle cottage hospital which were used to determine the hospital needs for both these catchment areas.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Tayside health board has responsibility to assess the needs of the local population and to obtain appropriate services to meet these needs. In doing so, it takes into account a wide range of factors including predicted changes in the size and composition of the local population. In the particular case of Meigle and Blairgowrie, I understand that the health board used the population projections of the General Registrar's office.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library the report by the Forestry Commission on the review of access to Forestry Commission woodlands after sale.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 31 January 1994]: I shall arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library shortly.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Goode Report

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he proposes to reform the law on pensions in the light of the Goode report.

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 31 January.

Rhinitis

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council regarding its proposed inquiry into occupational rhinitis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I wrote to the chairman of the council, on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 23 September 1993, asking the council to consider and advise on whether the present prescription of the prescribed disease D4—inflamation of the mucous membrane of the upper respiratory passages or mouth—should be changed and, if the council concludes that it should, for recommendations on revised terms of prescription.

Housing Benefit

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if a person enrolled on a full-time training course supported by (a) training for work or (b) the European social fund and attending an educational establishment, is eligible for (i) housing benefit or (ii) council tax benefit; how their training allowance is taken into account in assessing the amount of benefit they should receive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: A person attending a full-time training for work course is eligible for housing benefit and council tax benefit, subject to normal rules. The training allowance is taken into account in assessing benefit entitlement, but any payment reimbursing travelling expenses, any training premium and, in certain circumstances, any living away from home allowance is disregarded.

A person attending a full-time training course supported by the European social fund, which does not fall within the definition of a training allowance, is ineligible for housing benefit and council tax benefit unless he or she is a member of the vulnerable groups, including disabled people and lone parents.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide full details of the arrangements for awarding performance-related pay to staff employed by the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Warley, West (Mr. Spellar) by the chief executive of the Child Support Agency on 19 January 1994, at column 797.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the estimated reduction in yield to the Child Support Agency arising in a full year from the reduction in extra maintenance payments from 25p in every additional pound of assessable income to 15p and 20p if there are two children;

(2) what is the estimated reduction in yield in a full year to the Child Support Agency arising from the reduction of one quarter in the care element of the maintenance requirement for a child over 11 years and of a further quarter when the youngest child reaches 14 years;

(3) what is his estimate of the total sum forgone by the Child Support Agency as a result of the changes to the child support system announced by his Department on 22 December;

(4) if he will estimate the reduction in yield to the Child Support Agency of the phasing proposals set out in the Child Support (Miscellaneous Amendments and Transitional Provisions) Regulations 1994;

(5) what is the estimated reduction in yield to the Child Support Agency arising in a full year from the increase in the level of protected income above income support from £8 to £30 and the 10p in the pound to 15p.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money he has made available for the cost of the modifications announced on 22 December 1993 to the Child Support Act 1991.

Mr. Burt: The estimated costs of the changes to the assessment formula and of the extension to the provisions for phasing in new amounts of maintenance are in the table.

These estimates are derived using the assumptions about volume of cases, taking account of factors such as time taken, throughput and compliance rates underlying the figures published in the agency's business plan, and do not, at this stage, make any allowance for changes in these variables in response to this package of changes.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost to the Child Support Agency of the withdrawal of the collection fee in cases where maintenance is being paid direct to the parent with care.

Mr. Burt: It is not possible to provide an accurate estimate of the cases affected. The number is likely to be small, so it is anticipated that the cost will therefore be minimal.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the Child Support Agency's administrative budget for 1993-94 and for the next three financial years.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Child Support Agency will be publishing an annual report; and how the public will be able to obtain it.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 31 January 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency's annual report.

As stated in its Business Plan for 1993-94, the Agency intends to publish an Annual Report in the summer of 1994. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House, and will also be available from the Agency's headquarters at Millbank Tower.

I hope you find this letter helpful.

(ii) May include two or more spells commencing for the same person.

(iii) Figures include spells where benefit is not paid because of entitlement to overlapping benefits.

(ix) There are no figures available for 1975-76 as this was an incomplete statistical year.

Invalidity Pension

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to make to people whose entitlement to earnings-related invalidity pension based on contributions paid since 1978 is to be abolished will receive a refund of the contributions proportionate to the reduction in benefit.

Mr. Scott: National insurance contributions correctly paid at the time of payment are not refundable. We have no plans to change this position.

Social Fund Loans

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families were refused loans from the social fund because they were too poor to repay them or because they were considered of insufficient priority within the budget.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. General information on refused loan applications is published in my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's annual report on the social fund for 1992-93, which is in the Library.

Hearing Loss

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many representations he has received on the increasing of minimum assessment to 20 per cent. in cases of hearing loss among ex-service men; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many representations he has received from associations representing ex-service men and women on the proposed increase to 20 per cent. of the minimum assessment figure of those suffering from hearing loss; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available on how many further representations have been made since the change became effective.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of ex-service men and women receiving war service and disability pensions suffer from hearing defects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Benefits (Calculation)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to reduce the nominal amount of income assumed on savings for calculation of benefits.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 16 December, at column 837.

Bronchitis and Emphysema (Compensation)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will extend the recent arrangements to compensate former mineworkers who suffer from severe bronchitis and emphysema as a result of their employment to make similar provision for workers in the steel industry who suffer from these diseases as a result of the conditions of their employment.

Mr. Scott: We have no such plans. The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council concluded in its report "Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema", Cm 2091, that, on present evidence, it could not recommend prescription of the diseases in relation to metal production workers.

Income Support Personal Allowance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if a step-child living with a parent with care is taken into account for the purposes of deciding if the absent parent's liability for the income support personal allowance is reduced to 50 per cent.

Mr. Burt: No.

Child Support Act 1991

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how much it will cost to implement the modifications announced on 22 December 1993 to the Child Support Act 1991.

Mr. Burt: The final cost of implementing the changes is difficult to estimate as the impact extends over several years, until all phasing cases are dealt with. Initial indications suggest that the total work involved would cost in the region of £3 million, which it is intended to absorb within current estimates.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the cost of the modifications announced on 22 December 1993 to the Child Support Act is being made available from the budget for (a) 1993-94 or (b) 1994-95.

Mr. Burt: The changes will have some effect on expenditure in the current financial year: this will be met from the Reserve and will not add to the planned total of public expenditure. A supplementary estimate will be sought shortly. The main financial impact of the changes will be in 1994-95 and subsequent years.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) whether the assessment forms issued to absent parents under the terms of the Child Support Act 1991 indicate that any information disclosed in the assessment forms will be disclosed to the other parties directly involved in that assessment;

(2) whether the assessment forms issued to absent parents under the terms of the Child Support Act 1991 indicate that any information disclosed in the form is confidential and for the use of the Child Support Agency only.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 31 January 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security requesting information about the maintenance enquiry forms used by the Child Support Agency.

When the Agency takes on a case, the absent parent is sent a maintenace enquiry pack. In this pack, the absent parent is advised that, as part of the Department of Social Security, the Agency is bound by very strict rules of confidentiality. The pack also makes clear that, unless ordered to do so by Court Order, the Agency will not normally disclose an address or telephone number to the other party without the absent parent's specific permission.

In addition, the Child Support Agency Charter states that, like the courts, the Agency is required by law to let both parents know what financial information was used to make the maintenance assessment.

I hope that you find this reply useful.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed;

(2) what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Hague: Allegations of internal fraud are investigated under the Department's disciplinary procedures. Where an employee is considered, on the balance of probabilities, to have committed such an offence, dismissal would be appropriate.

Since 1989, a total of 68 officers have been dismissed in such circumstances or have resigned during the course of an investigation. The yearly breakdown is as follows:

	Number
1989	9
1990	6
1991	13
1992	18
1993	21
1994 to date	1

Pensions

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, columns 424-25, if he will list the organisations and individuals which have been issued with a copy of the consultation document on age-related benefits.

Mr. Hague [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1994, columns 20-22]: The following organisation also received copies of the consultation document on age-related rebates: Confederation of British Industry.

Industrial Injury Claims

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amount was recovered, under section 22 of the Social Security Act 1989, from the damages paid to victims of industrial injury for Durham for each year since 1989.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 31 January 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the amount recovered, under Section 22 of the Social Security Act 1989, from damages paid to victims of industrial injury in Durham since 1989.

Firstly, I should explain that the information is not available in the precise format requested. This is because information held is by Benefits Agency (BA) Districts whose boundaries do not correspond exactly with those of counties. I have, however, provide below information relating to the BA Districts of North and South Durham which most closely cover the Durham area.

The Recovery Scheme did not begin to operate until September 1990 and the amount recovered for the period September 1990 to March 1991 is £862·00

From April 1991 to March 1992 the amount was in the region of £30,000; from April 1992 to March 1993 it was £558,000.

The total amount recouped for the period April 1993 to the latest date that figures are available, December 1993, is in the region of £733,000.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Compensation Payments

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the total number of benefits claimants who have been awarded compensation for injury or disease and who have repaid benefits to the compensation recovery unit under the Social Security Act 1990, in each year since 1990;

(2) what was the total sum of money claimed back under the Social Security Act 1990 by the compensation recovery unit from benefit claimants who have been awarded compensation for injury or disease in each year since 1990.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. John Denham, dated 31 January 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking about the numbers of benefit claimants who have been awarded compensation for injury or disease and have repaid benefits to Compensation Recovery Unit in each year since 1990; and the total recovered in these cases.

I have provided the information you require in the table below. It should be noted, however, that figures are only available from the Recovery Scheme's inception in September 1990 up to December 1993, the latest date for which figures are available.

	September 1990 to March 1991	April 1991 to March 1992	April 1992 to March 1993	April 1993 to December 1993
Number of benefit claimants who have repaid benefits to the CRU	3,390	19,181	44,398	25,888
Sum of money recouped by the CRU from benefit claimants	£3·6 million	£25·4 million	£51·3 million	£56 million

I hope my reply has been helpful.

Pensioners (Benefits)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give his Department's estimate of the number of people in receipt of state old-age pensions who are also in receipt of (a) housing benefit and (b) income support for each year since 1980; and what he estimates the figure will be for 1994-95.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

Mr. Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, what is his estimate of the payments per employed worker into occupational or private pensions schemes for each year since 1980; and what he estimates the figure will be for 1994-95.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table. Estimates for 1994-95 are not available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Supergrass Evidence

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the use of supergrass evidence in securing the conviction of terrorist suspects.

Sir John Wheeler: There are no cases currently pending which would result in the reintroduction of so-called "supergrass trials". If the police in Northern Ireland should come across accomplice evidence that could be used to assist in the prosecution of individuals who have committed acts of terrorism it is, however, right and proper for the Director of Public Prosecutions to consider the use of that evidence in any subsequent proceedings.

Training and Employment Agency

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the cost per job outcome delivered by the Training and Employment Agency in 1992-93;

(2) what was the cost per non-vocational qualification delivery by the Training and Employment Agency in 1992-93.

Mr. Tim Smith: Responsibility for the subject matter in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. J. S. Crozier. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from J. S. Crozier to Mr. Andrew Hunter, dated 2 February 1994:

Parliamentary questions Nos. 84 & 91:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to your questions about the cost per job outcome delivered by the Training & Employment Agency (No. 84) and the cost per non-vocational qualification delivery by the Training & Employment Agency (No. 91).

Question No. 84

I set out below the average programme cost per job outcome associated with the various Agency services and programmes. All figures relate to 1992/93.

Placements into employment

The Agency was able to place 33,590 people into jobs advertised through its local offices. The average cost was £56 per placing.

Action for Community Employment

The average cost per place on the Action for Community Employment (ACE) programme, which provides temporary employment opportunities for long-term unemployed adults, was £5,277.

Training programmes and qualifications

The Agency's main training programmes are the Youth Training Programme (YTP) and the Job Training Programme (JTP). The main aim of the Agency's training programmes is to provide participants with training leading to qualifications. This is fully reflected in the Agency's targets. While the objective of training is to assist people to find employment, job availability on the Northern Ireland labour market is an ever-present constraint. The Agency's response to this constraint is to push for better qualifications to enhance job opportunities.

Youth Training Programme

The average cost per job outcome of the YTP is £9,190. This average relates to training providers in the Community, Employer-led and Further Education sectors. The programme guarantees young people under 18 two years full-time training with work experience or employment.

Training Centres

The average cost per job outcome for young people attending Training Centres is £10,926. The Centres provide training mainly leading to NVQ Level 3 and above.

Job Training Programme

The average cost per job outcome of the JTP is £7,901. This one-year programme is designed to help unemployed adults to improve their job prospects.

Costs per job outcome: comment

The number of jobs used to arrive at the above average costs per job is derived from the first destinations of trainees after leaving the YTP and JTP programmes. Relating expenditure on these programmes to immediate job outcomes can only partially reflect the worthwhileness of the training. We cannot take account of how successful trainees will subsequently be in obtaining employment.

Question No. 91

Non-Vocational Qualifications

You also inquired about the cost of non-vocational qualifications delivered by the Agency. Non-vocational qualifications form an insignificant part of the Agency's overall programme delivery which is almost exclusively vocational. It is not therefore possible to segregate out the costs attributable to non-vocational qualifications.

Less-favoured Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cattle and sheep farms are wholly or mainly in the less-favoured areas.

Mr. Ancram: In the Northern Ireland agricultural census, a farm is classified to the less-favoured area if any of the land which is owned by the farmer is within that area. Any land which the farmer may take under the short-term leasing system known as conacre is disregarded.

On this definition, there were 15,279 cattle and sheep farms in the LFA at the June 1992 agricultural census and 15,241 in 1993. In each year, the figure includes an estimated 600 to 700 farms with less than half their owned land in the LFA.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the total subsidy to be paid on cattle and sheep in the less-favoured areas in 1994.

Mr. Ancram: The total subsidy to be paid on cattle and sheep in the less-favoured areas in Northern Ireland under the suckler cow premium, sheep annual premium and hill livestock compensatory allowance scheme is estimated to be at least £70 million in 1994.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts Committees

Mr. Heald: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals his Department has for magistrates courts committees and the employment of their staff as set out in the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill [Lords].

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor has considered carefully the points raised during the debate on the House of Lords Second Reading of the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill, and in particular the fears that the Bill's provisions could give central Government an inappropriate level of control over the management of the magistrates court service and may undermine the independence of the advice received by magistrates when dealing with individual cases. The Lord Chancellor has also, since the Second Reading debate, met representatives of the Magistrates Association, the Central Council of Magistrates Courts Committees, the Justices' Clerks Society, the Association of Magisterial Officers, and the Standing Conference of Clerks to Magistrates Courts Committees.

The Government are entirely committed to a locally managed magistrates courts service and to the protection of the judicial independence of the magistracy. We do not believe that these principles are in any way undermined by the Bill. However, in order to place these matters beyond doubt, the Lord Chancellor will table amendments to the Bill at the Lords Committee stage.

The effect of these amendments will be:

(a) that the chairman of a magistrates courts committee would be appointed by members of the committee without requiring the approval of the Lord Chancellor;

(b) that the terms of the contract of employment between chief justices' clerks or justices' clerks and their magistrates court committees should be left entirely to local discretion. The Lord Chancellor would accordingly have no power to require that contracts be for a fixed term or that remuneration be related to performance;

(c) the renewal of appointments as a chief justices' clerk or justices' clerk would not require the approval of the Lord Chancellor.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has no plans to buy or borrow photographs.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Nelson: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has 13 paintings and no photographs on the walls of his rooms in the Treasury.

National Average Income

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what statistics he bases his calculation of the national average income.

Mr. Nelson: National accounts estimates are derived from a wide variety of statistics collected by the Central Statistical Office, other Government Departments and other organisations. Details are given in "United Kingdom National Accounts: Sources and Methods", which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how often during the course of a year the official national average income is recalculated.

Mr. Nelson: Quarterly national accounts, including revisions, are published four times each year, in March, June, September and December.

Budget Consultation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the meetings he has had with hon. Members to discuss representations by their constituents during the Budget consultation process.

Mr. Dorrell: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor and his ministerial colleagues held a large number of formal and informal meetings with hon. Members in advance of the Budget, at which they had an opportunity to make representations on behalf of their constituents. In addition, Treasury Ministers received and considered a substantial body of correspondence about the Budget from hon. Members on behalf of their constituents.

Public Sector Pay

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which particular areas of public sector employment (a) are and (b) are not covered by the recommendation that public sector pay bills should not increase.

Mr. Portillo: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his statement of 14 September 1993 and confirmed in the Financial Statement and Budget Report, in 1994-95 Government Departments will be expected to keep their running costs, including pay budgets, to their 1993-94 level in cash terms, except where, there are significant changes in activity. This is not a freeze on pay settlements and does not pre-empt forthcoming pay negotiations. However, pay increases will need to be funded by efficiency improvements. The Government expect a similar approach to be applied to all other public sector pay groups.

Departmental Interest Payments

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what are the consequences of the decision in Esso Petroleum Company Limited v. Ministry of Defence for the tax treatment of interest paid by Government Departments.

Mr. Dorrell: The effect of this decision is that the provisions of schedule C of the Taxes Acts apply only to interest on Government securities and do not extend to other types of interest payments made by Government Departments. In accordance with this view, payments of interest, other than on Government securities, made by Government Departments after the decision, have not been subject to deduction of tax at source under schedule C. In the light of legal advice, the Inland Revenue and the Government Departments concerned are not taking any steps to seek out, nor make further payments to, the recipients of earlier payments of interest. An Inland Revenue press release which is being issued today provides further details; a copy has been placed in the Library.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rise in the basic rate of income tax a household on average income with an average mortgage would have to pay in 1994-95 and 1995-96 to yield the equivalent of the reduction in their mortgage interest relief resulting from measures announced in the March and November 1993 Budgets.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: The cost of the reduction in mortgage interest relief will be £115·50 a year in 1994-95 and a further £115·50 a year in 1995-96 for individual taxpayers in the category described. A person with an average mortgage is benefiting by £1,920 a year as a result of the reduction in interest rates since 1990. It is not sensible to try to make the comparison with other tax rates that the question invites.

Earnings

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update to April 1994 the information on net earnings provided in his answer to the hon. Member for Fulham (Mr. Carrington) of 10 February 1987, Official Report, columns 177-78.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Estimates of the levels of earnings for the top 5 per cent. of earners are not published. The information in the table is based on estimates of these levels derived from distributions of earnings published in the relevant New Earnings Survey for April 1993. Earnings levels are for men or women as appropriate paid at adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. Taxpayers are assumed to have no reliefs or allowances other than the appropriate personal allowance.

Taxation

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 777, on tax liability by region, if he will provide comparable information for total tax liability by quartile group in each region.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Available information on the annual reduction in income tax liability by region for the years 1989-90 to 1991-92, compared with the 1978-79 indexed regime is given in the tables. The 1978-79 regime has been indexed by reference to the statutory formula and allowing for independent taxation for 1990-91 and 1991-92. For 1989-90 married couples are counted as one unit. For the purposes of these calculations the indexed regime of 1978-79 is applied directly to the later income base. In practice, retention of the regime, indexed as appropriate, for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base. In view of the length of the tables, I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Members' Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister when the press release accompanying his speech launching Her Majesty's Government's sustainable development strategy at the Banqueting house on 25 January was made available to hon. Members.

The Prime Minister: The press release was delivered to the House of Commons Library on 25 January.

THORP

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if the latest round of Anglo-Irish talks in Dublin covered the security implications for Northern Ireland and the Republic of plans for increased nuclear reprocessing at Sellafield.

The Prime Minister: A communiqué was released after the intergovernmental conference and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. Otherwise details of matters discussed at the intergovernmental conference are confidential between the two Governments.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what further information Her Majesty's Government have officially been asked to supply to the European Commission, pursuant to complaint No. P4695/92 regarding the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; and what is the timetable for complying with the request.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The United Kingdom has recently received an informal inquiry from the European Commission. It is the convention that the contents of such correspondence between member states and the Commission are treated in confidence.

Regional Airports

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has had from the chief executive of Manchester Airport plc in regard to liberalising access to regional airports; what reply he is sending; what action he will take; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received a letter from the chief executive. A reply will be sent as soon as possible.

Councils of Ministers

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East of 17 January, Official Report, columns 366-67, if he will deposit in the Library videos and transcripts of the televised Councils of Ministers.

The Prime Minister: Yes. Videos, dubbed in English where English was not used in the Council, and verbatim records, in the original languages only, are available for televised sessions of Council meetings and will be placed in the Library.

Interactive Telephone Services Group

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the appointment as chairman of the Interactive Telephone Services Group of the right hon.

Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) in respect of the terms of paragraph 105 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers"; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have no information which would lead me to believe that this appointment contravenes paragraph 105.

HOME DEPARTMENT

National Alliance of Women's Organisations

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what core funding he is providing for the National Alliance of Women's Organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Insufficient resources are available in 1994-95 to core-fund the National Alliance of Women's Organisations.

European Elections

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that students of other European Union states studying in the United Kingdom are able to vote in the European elections in June.

Mr. Maclean: Students from other member states of the Community will be eligible to apply to be included in the electoral register on the same basis as other Community nationals once Parliament has given its approval to the regulations to extend the franchise.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to launch the advertising campaign relating to the rights of European Union citizens resident in the United Kingdom to vote in the European elections in June.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information about the arrangements for exercising the rights of Community nationals to vote and to stand as a candidate at European parliamentary elections will be distributed once Parliament has approved the regulations to give effect to those rights.

Community Charge

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 275, relating to imprisonment for non-payment of outstanding community charge, if he will now publish the table to which reference was made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Walley, dated 2 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking pursuant to his answer on 13 January, Official Report, column 275, relating to imprisonment for non-payment of outstanding community charge, if he will now publish the table to which reference was made.

The information you have requested is given in the attached table.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, column 150, if he will outline the particular qualifications, expertise or experience relating to his departmental responsibilities of each special adviser listed.

Mr. Howard: It is not my practice to comment on the qualifications, expertise or experience of my Department's special advisers.

Probation and Bail Hostels

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the need for places in probation and bail hostels.

Mr. Maclean: Before concluding that 10 per cent. of approved hostel capacity should be reduced, I took account of a number of factors, including the need for places as reflected in levels of occupancy and the cost of maintaining those places to an acceptable standard.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what level of occupancy is assumed in the development of funding allocations to probation and bail hostels.

Mr. Maclean: The revenue grant funding formula for approved hostels assumes a normal minimum occupancy level of 80 per cent., which may be temporarily reduced in individual cases of newly opened hostels or hostels being refurbished.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whom he has consulted about his proposals to close 11 probation and bail hostels.

Mr. Maclean: The chief probation officers and managing committees whose hostels were affected were notified on 1 December of our closure proposals and given the opportunity to comment.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of stay in probation and bail hostels.

Mr. Maclean: The information is not readily available in the form requested.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide occupancy figures for each probation and bail hostel in each region of the country for each of the last four quarters for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not readily available in the form requested. The occupancy figures for each probation and bail hostel for September 1993, the most recent month available, and for April 1992 to March 1993 as a whole, are as follows:

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have no plans to buy or borrow any photographs.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Howard: There are five paintings and one print on the walls of my office and five photographic reproductions of paintings on the walls of the ministerial conference room. They are all part of the Government art collection. There are no photographs on the walls of either room.

Reoffending Rate

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the reoffending rate for convicted persons leaving probation hostels.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available.

Police (Child Maintenance)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in relation to the numbers of police officers threatened with termination of their careers due to indebtedness resulting from assessments of liability as absent parents by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Some Members of Parliament have written to Home Office Ministers on behalf of their constituents about the Child Support Agency's dealings with police officers. They have been informed that the Department of Social Security has responsibility for the Child Support Agency and that it would be for a police officer's senior officer to decide whether and, if so, what management action was appropriate in response to the officer's indebtedness.

Offenders, Newham

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of offenders appearing before the courts in the borough of Newham were aged under 21 years in each year since 1988;

(2) what percentage of offenders appearing before the courts in the borough of Newham were unemployed in each year since 1988.

Mr. Maclean: Information is not collected centrally on the employment status of defendants appearing before the courts. The table shows the number and percentage of offenders by age convicted at the Stratford and West Ham petty sessional divisions and at the Crown court who were committed by the above two petty sessional divisions 1988 to 1992. Information on cautioning is available only for police force areas.

Ms Gillian Taylforth

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Metropolitan Commissioner on the manner in which information which was the subject of the Taylforth/Knight libel action was made available by the police to a Sun reporter in the first instance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand from the Commissioner that the Sun did not obtain this information from the police in the first instance.

Electoral Register

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how his Department measures the accuracy of the electoral register.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys provides an annual comparison of parliamentary electorates with corresponding estimates of the resident population in the publication "Electoral Statistics (Series EL)", copies of which are in the Library. In addition, following the 1991 census, OPCS conducted research on behalf of the Home Office and the Scottish Office to check the coverage and quality of the 1991 electoral register. Copies of the survey, "Electoral Registration in 1991", are also in the Library.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought each year since 1978 by each local authority against individuals failing to complete electoral registration forms; and what percentage of the total number of registrations in each authority this represents.

Mr. Maclean: Information given in the table shows the number of prosecutions for failing to complete electoral registration forms for the years 1979 to 1989 by petty sessional division within police force areas. The prosecuting local authority cannot be identified from the centrally collected records. Data for 1978 and 1990 to 1992 are not available.

Data on the total number of electors included in the register in each local authority area can be found in the annual OPCS publication "Electoral Statistics Series EL", published by HMSO, copies of which can be found in the Library.

Police Authorities

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about his proposals for the constitution of police authorities, as set out in the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill [Lords].

Mr. Howard: I have considered carefully the concerns expressed on Second Reading in another place.

The Government want to put beyond doubt their intention that the new police authorities should be indpendent. The Government will therefore table amendments to the Bill in another place, as soon as possible.

The effect of these amendments will be:

- (i) that the chairman of a police authority would be appointed by the members of the authority. We propose that, as now, they should be required to select the chairman annually.
- (ii) the independent members of police authorities will be appointed according to a procedure on the lines of that set out in my reply to the hon. and learned Member for Burton on 17 January, columns 375-77. But the Bill will be amended to provide a statutory basis for the independent selection procedure, and the scheme under which the statutory procedure will operate will be subject to a parliamentary oversight;
- (iii) there will be a power for the Home Secretary to increase the number of members of police authorities in specific cases where in all the circumstances it seems appropriate to do so. Where the number of members exceeds 16, one half will be councillors and not more than one third will be independent members.

Prisons (Sanitation)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards providing prisoners with 24-hour access to sanitation.

Mr. Michael Howard: The target for the Prison Service for 1993-94 is to provide through the accelerated sanitation programme 24-hour access to sanitation in at least 4,700 existing prison places. In addition a further 2,400 newly constructed and renovated places, which will have integral sanitation, are scheduled for completion in the year. Eighty-nine per cent. of prisoners currently have 24-hour access to sanitation. This compares with 82 per cent. in March 1993 and 46 per cent. in 1981.

By the end of 1994, more than 95 per cent. of prisoners should have access to sanitation at all times, a considerable achievement and one of the key measures of progress in providing decent conditions for all prisoners. The other main measure is the reduction of overcrowding and avoidance of the use of police cells. The percentage of prisoners sharing cells designed for one has been reduced from 38 per cent. in 1987-88 to 16 per cent. at the end of 1993. There has been no significant use of police cells since February 1993. These achievements have been possible as a result of the major prison building programme which has added over 18,000 new places since 1979.

In the face of the forecast increase in the prison population, resources are being directed to providing additional places and the amount of accommodation that it was planned to take out of use for refurbishment during the next two years has been reduced. Although this will preclude completion of the sanitation programme by December 1994, the alternative would have been a return to the prolonged use of police cells and an unacceptable level of overcrowding.

The Prison Service continues to give very high priority to completing the sanitation programme as soon as possible, within the constraints imposed by the prison population. It aims to complete the programme no later than February 1996, the date recommended by Lord Woolf in his report.

Reconviction Rates

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in developing a key performance indicator on reconviction rates as envisaged in the Prison Service business plan for 1993-94.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Statistics of the reconviction rates of prisoners following discharge from prison are already published. The progress of the work on performance measures in relation to reconviction rates will be reported in the Prison Service's business plan for 1994-95.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Michael Howard [holding answer 1 February 1994]: I have asked the Director General of the Prison Service to write to the hon. and learned Member about Prison Service staff. The information in respect of other Home Office staff is as follows:

Child Support Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of service men and women, as to (a) officers and (b) other ranks who are threatened with discharge due to indebtedness arising from assessments made by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Hanley: Service personnel can be liable for discharge where their persistent indebtedness has caused inefficiency or led to indiscipline; however, I am not aware of any instance where this has occurred as a consequence of an increased liability for child maintenance resulting from an assessment made by the Child Support Agency. Counselling is available to those who experience difficulty in managing debts and guidance will be given in dealing with creditors.

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence curently has no plans, but would be willing to consult the hon. Member.

RAF Machrihanish

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the current functions of Royal Air Force Machrihanish; and if he will make a statement on those functions which are being withdrawn under his recently announced plans.

Mr. Hanley: The primary role of RAF Machrihanish is as a forward operating base available for activation at short notice for United States Navy maritime patrol aircraft assigned to SACLANT. Additionally, the station is used occasionally for training and exercises. The FOB role will remain but the activation time has been extended which will allow the introduction of a care and maintenance regime.

RAF Honington

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the intended functions of Royal Air Force Honington after the transfer of No. 13 Squadron to Royal Air Force Marham.

Mr. Hanley: RAF Honington will beecome the RAF Regiment depot when the RAF Regiment units relocate there from RAF Catterick and RAF West Drayton. It is planned that the airfield will be activated for use in exercises once or twice a year.

Policy Developments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policy developments there have been over the past decade for the time scale as respects the information of Parliament on detailed policy developments within his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 8 December 1993, Official Report, column 296. It remains our practice to inform Parliament of policy and other relevant developments as soon as is practicable.

Territorial Army

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the future of the Territorial Army in north London.

Mr. Hanley: We are continuing to re-examine the operational requirement for, and hence the size and shape of, the Territorial Army. We will make an announcement as soon as our proposals are formulated.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 899, what are the particular qualifications, expertise or experience in the defence area of his special adviser Mr. Crispin Blunt.

Mr. Hanley: It is not our practice to comment on the qualifications, expertise or experience of my right hon. and learned Friend's special adviser.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what amount (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of gross national product was spent on defence in the last year for which figures are available by (i) each NATO country, (ii) Japan, (iii) Switzerland, (iv) Finland and (v) Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: Details of NATO countries' defence expenditure in 1992 both in total, and as a proportion of gross domestic product, are contained in the 1993 Statement on the Defence Estimates (Cm 2270). Comparable information based on estimates published by the International Institute for Strategic Studies for Japan, Switzerland, Finland and the Republic of Ireland is set out in the table.

	Budget	Per cent. of GDP
Japan	35,900,000,000	1·0
Switzerland	3,700,000,000	1·5
Finland	2,080,000,000	1·9
Republic of Ireland	560,000,000	1·2

For consistency with data in the SDE, non-NATO defence expenditures are shown in US Dollars.

Mutual Weapons Development Programme

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Britain and the United States of America set up the mutual weapons development programme; what was the range of the programme; why it was set up; which United Kingdom Ministry of Defence establishments were involved; and what is the current status of the programme.

Mr. Aitken [pursuant to his answer, 26 January, Official Report, c. 307]: Additional research has now produced some information on the mutual weapons development programme. This was a collaborative programme that arose from the authorisation by the US Congress in 1956 under the mutual security programme of financial support for R and D programmes of friendly countries. Information about this programme is limited, but investigation is continuing and I will write to the honourable Member as soon as this is complete.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

D-Day Landings

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what will be the role of Lowe Bell in arranging the programme of events to commemorate the D-Day landings on 6 June 1994; what consideration has been given to carrying out the work in-house; what proportion of the total public expenditure on the programme of events is being paid to Lowe Bell; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: The D-Day programme is primarily to commemorate the landings by the armed services. But, through a series of appropriate nationwide events, it will also mark the important involvement of the wider civilian population.

Lowe Bell was chosen, in open competition, to assist the DNH to co-ordinate and publicise these events, to stimulate new ideas for other events and to help organise them, and to raise private sponsorship. Through the DNH it will complement the work done by the MoD and the tourist board.

The public expenditure on the D-Day commemorations will be affected by the extent of private sponsorship, and by activities which the tourist boards, local authorities and other public bodies undertake. The proportion of this activity represented by Lowe Bell's fee is not yet known. Its fee, as has already been made public, is £62,500.

Arts (Business Sponsorship)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will estimate the real levels of business sponsorship of the arts, and the percentage change, in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Brooke: The Department of National Heritage relies on the Association for Business Sponsorship of the Arts to provide information on business support for the arts in the United Kingdom. To date, ABSA have carried out three annual national surveys which have identified the following expenditure by business on arts sponsorship:

	£ million[1]	Increase/ decrease (Per cent.)	£ million (real terms)[2]	Increase/ decrease (Per cent.)
1990-91	57·1	—	63·05	—
1991-92	[3]65·4	+14·5	67·91	+7·70
1992-93	57·7	−11·8	57·70	−15·03

[1] These figures include business support through corporate membership.

[2] Calculated to reflect the effects of general inflation as measured by the GDP deflator.

[3] Includes sponsorship of two exceptional initiatives: the Japan Festival and the rebuilding of Glyndebourne opera house.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what further proposals are being considered in public consultation on English heritage's forward strategy, which could involve a change in current responsibilities for grade II listed buildings outside London.

Mr. Brooke: No change is proposed in current responsibilities for grade II listed building casework outside London. Various changes in notification procedures were, however, proposed in annex 8 of the consultation draft of Planning Policy Guidance Note 15 "Historic Buildings and Conservation Areas", copies of which are in the Library. The responses to the consultation are being considered.

HEALTH

Health Service Managers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the salary of the general manager/chief executive of each health authority and hospital trust in each year since 1990-91;

(2) if she will collect and publish the salary of the chief executive of each health authority and trust in England on 1 October 1993 and give the percentage increase over the preceding four years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on the individual salaries of health authority general managers and trust chief executives is not available centrally. General managers in regional, district and special health authorities and family health services authorities are paid on centrally-determined salary ranges. Their individual salaries are dependent on a variety of factors including personal performance against locally set targets. The current salary ranges are set out in "National Health Service Guidelines (HSG(93)58)", a copy of which is available in the Library. The salaries of trust chief executives are matters for trust boards; information on their emoluments is included in annual accounts available locally. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 13 January that from 1 April 1994 each NHS authority and trust will be required to publish an annual report which includes information on the total emoluments of their general manager or chief executive.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the employment conditions and the security of employment for nurses affected by the decision of fundholding general practitioners practices purchasing services from provider units many miles from normal catchment areas.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for local contractual arrangements between individual nurses and their employers.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the purchasing patterns of fundholding practices in the Macclesfield parliamentary constituency.

Dr. Mawhinney: In Macclesfield, as elsewhere, fundholders are using their purchasing power to achieve the highest standards of patient care whilst obtaining value for money for the national health service. Service improvements include the establishment of in-house clinics for dermatology and physiotherapy.

Community Services

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about GPs obtaining community services for their patients from a considerable distance from their catchment area.

Dr. Mawhinney: General practitioner fundholders have the freedom to purchase the best possible health care for their patients from whichever provider unit they judge best. Fundholders must be able to satisfy the regional health authority that the contract offers value for money and a high-quality service for patients.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the latest details of response times by ambulances to 999 calls for each of the health authorities or trust areas within England, and for England as a whole.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) on 1 February at columns 601-2.

Clinical Effectiveness

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how her policy of basing practice on clinical effectiveness will be implemented in those areas where knowledge of clinical effectiveness is of poor quality or lacking; what steps she is taking to fill these gaps in knowledge; and what efforts are being made to recruit, train and retain the staff needed to do this health service research.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is the responsibility of clinicians, in the first instance, to provide the most clinically effective interventions. The national health service research and development strategy aims to promote research into areas where there is a paucity of information and results should have greatest benefits. The research councils and universities take the lead in recruiting, training and retaining staff to carry out health services research, together with professional organisations and charities. The health departments work closely with these bodies with the aim of ensuring that there are sufficient trained researchers to meet the needs of the NHS.

Clothier Report

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects to receive the findings of the Clothier report;

(2) if she will list the names of each individual giving evidence to the Clothier inquiry; and if she will list the capacity in which each of them is taking part.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have now received Sir Cecil Clothier's independent inquiry report, which contains names and details of witnesses. The report will be published shortly and in full.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the terms of reference of the Clothier inquiry; what are the names and qualifications of those holding the Clothier inquiry; and which parts of the Clothier report she will be placing in the public domain.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir Cecil Clothier QC, a former health service commissioner, has chaired the independent inquiry into incidents on ward 4 at Grantham and Kesteven general hospital between February and April 1991. He has been assisted by Anne McDonald, RSCN, RGN, DipN (London), who is director of quality at the Royal Manchester Children's Hospitals and Professor David Shaw, CBE, FRCP, FRCP (Edin), Emeritus Professor of Clinical Neurology at the University of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

The report of the inquiry team will be published in full.

The inquiry's terms of reference were:

1. To inquire into the circumstances leading to the deaths of four children and injuries to nine others on Ward 4 at Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital during the months February to April 1991 (inclusive).
2. To consider the speed and appropriateness of the clinical and managerial response within the hospital to the incidents, and to make recommendations.
3. To examine the appointment procedures, systems of assessment and supervision within the Hospital and Mid Trent College of Nursing and Midwifery respectively, including an examination of the occupational health services available to both the College and the Hospital, and to make recommendations.
4. To review the recommendations of the regional fact finding inquiry (July 1992) into paediatric services at the hospital and to advise whether any additions or amendments to those recommendations are necessary.
5. In the light of the events on Ward 4 at Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital between February and April 1991 (inclusive):
    - 5.1 to advise on the most efficient way for health authorities to be informed of serious untoward incidents and to monitor their handling;
    - 5.2 to consider whether and, if so, how the regional health authority should be informed of serious untoward incidents and the way in which they are handled.
6. To consider such matters relating to the said incidents as the public interest may require.

NHS Management Executive

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether all information held by the NHS Management Executive is regarded as information held centrally.

Mr. Sackville: All validated information held by the National Health Service Management Executive is regarded as information that is available centrally. Validated information is that which has been checked by the Department for accuracy, consistency and statistical reliability. The NHS Management Executive also holds a disparate range of administrative and management data obtained from a number of sources which may not be compiled on a comparable basis or use common definitions, or which may contain subjective judgments.

Psychogeriatricians

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for the last four years the number of psychogeriatricians employed by the NHS.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information is shown in the table.

Hospital doctors in old age psychiatry in England as at 30 September each year, in whole time equivalents

Year	Old age psychiatry
1989	78·6
1990	103·3
1991	154·2
1992	170·1

Notes:

These data include doctors in the following grades: consultants, associate specialists, staff grades, senior registrars, hospital practitioners and clinical assistants.

Until recently, old age psychiatry was covered by general psychiatrists, but it is now a specialty in its own right. Some general psychiatrists have sub-specialty interest in psychogeriatrics, but these are not collected in the data.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those district health authorities which do not employ a psychogeriatrician.

Dr. Mawhinney: Psychogeriatric services are purchased on behalf of patients by purchasing and commissioning agencies, and they are responsible for ensuring that these services are available to the local population. They may purchase these services across different district or regional boundaries. At 30 September 1992, 63 of the 252 employing authorities in England employed old age psychiatrists.

Until recently, old age psychiatry was covered by general psychiatrists, but it is now a specialty in its own right. Some general psychiatrists have sub-specialty interest in psychogeriatrics, but these are not collected in the data.

Health Authorities

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what were the names and qualifications of the district general manager and the chairman and district health authority members of the South Lincolnshire district health authority in each of the last three years;

(2) what were the names and qualifications of the Trent regional general manager and the chairman and members of the regional health authority in each of the last three years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Chairmen and non-executive members of the health authorities are appointed for their personal qualities, knowledge and skills and for the contribution they can bring to the strategic leadership of their authority. The selection of both executive and non-executive members of health authorities is a matter for each individual body. The names of the chairman and non-executive members of Trent regional health authority in each of the last three years are:

Year	Chairman	Non-executive members
1991 and 1992	Sir Michael Carlisle	Mr. M Dessau Mrs. P. Wildgoose Dr. K. Edwards Mr. G. Clemons Mr. D. Bertram

Mr. Bowis: These are matters for the North Western regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Sir Bruce Martin, for details.

Consultants, Trent

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants have been suspended in the Trent region in each of the last 10 years; and how many consultants in the region are under suspension at present.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for Trent regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Michael Carlisle, chairman of Trent RHA, for details.

Research Units

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 26 November, Official Report, columns 242-44, what discussions her Department has had with research unit directors about the adequacy of the review procedure.

Dr. Mawhinney: As stated in the previous reply to the hon. Member, expert peer review of long-term research contracts is well established and unit directors are given the opportunity to comment fully on the text of reports. The present round of site visits was discussed with unit directors when they met with the Department's director of research and development on 27 November 1992.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 26 November, Official Report, columns 242-44, which of the reports of site visits of her Department's research units which have already taken place have been discussed with the relevant unit director; and how soon her Department will be initiating discussions about site visit reports with directors of other units which have alredy been reviewed.

Dr. Mawhinney: Directors have had an opportunity to comment on reports of site visits to the following units:

Paediatricians

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines have been issued as to the distance a consultant covering a paediatric unit can live or work away from that unit when on call for that unit.

Dr. Mawhinney: Employing bodies are encouraged, when drawing up consultants' contracts of employment, to include a requirement to live within a 10-mile radius of their place of work.

Pinderfields Hospital

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to review the quality, standard and practices of senior management at Pinderfields hospital.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her latest information about the current incidence of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease; and what information she has as to the ages of persons so suffering.

Mr. Sackville: Figures for the total number of definite and probable cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease are produced on a yearly basis by Dr. R. G. Will, consultant neurologist at the national CJD surveillance unit, Edinburgh. His reports are available in the Library.

Forty-eight definite and probable cases of CJD were identified by the surveillance unit between 1 May 1992 and 30 April 1993. Their ages range from 30 to 86.

Unfair Dismissal

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the maximum level of the award for unfair dismissal in the year that it was first introduced; what is the equivalent amount upgraded for inflation since that time; and what is the current maximum award.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Compensation for unfair dismissal usually consists of a basic and a compensatory award. The compensatory award, introduced in 1972, was then limited to 104 weeks' pay or £4,160, equivalent to £27,606 today when uprated by the retail prices index, whichever was the less. The current limit is £11,000. The basic award, introduced in 1976, was subject to a maximum limit of £2,400, equivalent to £8,611 today. The current limit is £6,150.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to increase the maximum level of the award for unfair dismissal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering the results of the consultation exercise in connection with the annual review of these awards and will announce the outcome in due course.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

European Social Policy

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will respond to the European Union's Green Paper on European Social Policy before 31 March.

Redundancies

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on how many occasions employers failed to provide his Department with the required notice of impending redundancies under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1992 in each of the last five years; how many of these employers were prosecuted under section 194 of that Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The following table shows the number who have notified the Department but who failed to do so within the time limits. In each case an explanation is sought. Section 193(7) provides that where it is not reasonably practicable for the employer to comply with the full requirements, he shall take all reasonable steps to comply as far as possible. Taking account of this, it has not so far been considered appropriate by successive Governments since 1975 to prosecute an employer for failure to meet the notice requirements. The figures include many notifications by insolvent companies.

GCHQ

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what response the Government will make to the International Labour Organisation's concern over the ban on union membership at GCHQ; and when the last correspondence took place over this matter between the ILO and Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The Government made it clear to the ILO when it last reported in February 1993, and will continue to make it clear in future reports, that their overriding objective remains to safeguard national security, but that they are willing to consider any proposals which are consistent with that objective.

Pyrotechnic Articles

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which EC legislation affects the issue of import licences for pyrotechnic articles.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 1 February 1994]: To avoid barriers to trade, EC directive 93/15/EEC on explosives for civil uses required the removal of import licensing for those explosives within its scope. It was implemented in Great Britain by the Placing on the Market and Supervision of Transfers of Explosives Regulations 1993 which removed import licence controls for all explosives including pyrotechnic articles.

The new regulations require explosives, including all pyrotechnic articles, supplied in the United Kingdom whatever their place of manufacture to be authorised by the Health and Safety Executive, and in the case of fireworks, compliance with British Standard 7114 or an equivalent standard. The Government believe that these new provisions will effectively maintain safety standards.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Passported Benefits

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the main passported benefits to which recipients of (a) income support and (b) family credit are eligible; and if he will estimate the average weekly value of each benefit in each year since April 1988.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Passported Benefits from Income Support

Average weekly value	1988-89 £	1989-90 £	1990-91 £	1991-92 £	1992-93 £

Passported Benefits from Income Support and Family Credit

Average weekly value	1988-89 £	1989-90 £	1990-91 £	1991-92 £	1992-93 £
Social Fund Maternity Payments[6]	86·00	86·00	100·00	101·00	101·00
Social Fund Funeral Payments[6]	497·00	545·00	612·00	706·00	789·00
NHS Benefits				See note 7

Notes:

1. Housing Benefit (HB)—the award of Income Support allows the award of maximum HB. Average weekly value relates HB (rent rebates and rent allowances) payable to eligible IS recipients.
2. Community Charge Benefit (CCB)—the award of Income Support allowed the award of maximum (80%) of CCB. In England and Wales CCB, existed for three years from April 1990 to March 1993. Figures for the average amount of CCB in 1988-89 and 1989-90 are not available. CCB was replaced by Council Tax Benefit (CTB) in April 1993. The award of IS allows the award of maximum (100%) CTB. Information on the average amount of CTB payable is not yet available.
3. The weekly amount of Cold Weather Payments increased from £5·00 to £6·00 in February 1991. It is only paid for weeks in which the weather forecast is for the temperature to fall to an average equal to, or below, 0 degrees celsius for the period of the forecast. It is payable to Income Support recipients either (a) whose applicable amount includes one or more of the premiums specified in paragraphs 9 to 14 of Part III of Schedule 2 to the General Regulations (pensioner premiums and various premiums paid in respect of a disability), or (b) whose family include a child aged less than 5.
4. Free School Meals—the responsibility for the provision of school meals rests with local education authorities and with governing bodies of self-governing (grant-maintained) schools. It is for them to decide the prices they charge for all school meals and as a result prices vary throughout the country. It is not therefore possible to provide a national average figure.

5. Information about the average weekly value of free milk and vitamins available to recipients of Income Support and Family Credit and their dependents is not available centrally.
6. The amounts shown are the average awards. Social Fund funeral and maternity payments are made as one-off payments for particular events.
7. NHS Benefits are not cash benefits. People receiving IS and FC are entitled to full remission of NHS charges for prescriptions, dental treatment and wigs and fabric supports. They are also entitled to free sight tests and the full value of optical vouchers towards the cost of their glasses. They may also have help with the cost of travelling to hospital for NHS treatment. The statistical information collected centrally by the Department of Health does not separate the prescriptions etc provided free of charge to IS and FC recipients from those provided to other beneficiaries of the NHS Low Income Scheme.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of administering unemployment benefit for Durham in 1993.

Mr. Burt: Information in the form requested is not available. The cost to the Employment Service of administering unemployment benefit and income support for Durham in the financial year 1992-93 was £3·8 million.

War Pension Entitlement

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes he has agreed to make following the review of war pension entitlements.

Mr. Hague: None. There has been no such review.

Social Fund, Lewisham

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the budget for the Lewisham district office social fund for the current year as set at 1 April 1993; whether the budget was subsequently increased; how much remains in the budget; how many applicants have been refused a grant, giving the reasons for refusal; how many applicants have been refused a loan, giving the reason for refusal; how many applicants refused went on to appeal; and how many of these appeals were successful.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 1 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Social Fund (SF) in the Benefits Agency's (BA) Lewisham and Brixton District.

Details of the initial budget allocations for Lewisham and Brixton District for the 1993-94 financial year are in the Library. There has not been any subsequent additional budget allocation this year. The balance outstanding as at 31 December 1993, the latest date for which figures are available, was £252,848 for grants and £778,676 for loans.

With regard to the number of applicants refused a grant or loan in the District, information on the SF is not kept by SF applicant but by SF application. At 31 December 1993 the numbers of grant and loan applications refused were 6,714 and 5,589 respectively. The reasons for refusal are given at Annex A.

The new Social Fund Computer System (SFCS), introduced to Lewisham and Brixton in July 1993, collects additional statistics which were not collected under the old system. Many statistical items are collected differently and are not directly comparable with previous years. The old system recorded reasons for refusal per application whereas SFCS records reasons for refusal per item requested. In cases where a partial award is made a reason for refusal will also be appropriate. Therefore, the sum of all reasons for refusal will not equal the number of application refusals.

There is no right of appeal against discretionary SF decisions. Applicants dissatisfied with a decision may seek a review of the decision and this is initially conducted within the District. If still dissatisfied, the applicant can ask for a review by the Independent Review Service (IRS) which is independent of the BA. For the period 1 April 1993 to 31 December 1993, 3,014 review applications were received by Lewisham and Brixton District. These figures include those that requested a review by the IRS. Overall, 873 resulted in a changed decision.

I hope that you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much of its target million the Child Support Agency has collected to date; and of that amount how much has been paid as maintenance net of reductions in payments of welfare benefits.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 31 January 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how much of the Child Support Agency's target has been collected to date.

The Agency was set a target for benefit savings. No separate target has been set for collection of maintenance. For the period from April 1993 to December 1993, benefit savings of £214·5 million have so far been reported. This figure does not represent the total amount of savings achieved because some will be scored retrospectively.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual salary of the chief executive of the Child Support Agency; and what are the weekly hours of work she is contracted to undertake.

Mr. Burt: The current basic salary of Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive of the Child Support Agency, is £48,520 plus London weighting of £1,776. Her contract requires at least 36 hours per week, but there is no upper limit.

Pension Books

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the considerations which led him to give prominence to the title "Social Security" on new pension books; and if he will consider changing the term "Social Security" to "Pension".

Mr. Hague: The administration of benefit payments is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 1 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to respond to your recent Parliamentary Question about the wording on the cover of the new Pension Books.

Firstly, it may be helpful if I explain that the design of the cover of order books is constant across all types of social security benefit, as was the case with old style order books. The reason for this is that the cover does not automatically identify which type of benefit a person is receiving, so that a casual observer cannot identify which social security benefit an individual is in receipt of simply by looking at the cover of an order book. This allows an individual's financial affairs to remain confidential.

There are also practical considerations if separate covers were required for individual benefits. Perhaps the most significant would be at the printing and assembly stage. Print runs would have to be stopped to allow different covers to be loaded to reflect the type of benefit being paid which would mean additional cost implications. Consideration would also have to be given as to how a book containing a number of benefits combined would be reflected on a cover—order books are issued by benefit groups and a number of different benefits are within each group. This would only add to the difficulty in identifying which cover should be assembled to the foils.

The design of the order book is constantly under review, and the cover design is a component of many considerations. The last change was introduced primarily as an anti-fraud measure and it may interest you to learn that since the introduction of the new design no counterfeits have been found to be cashed. This is a major achievement which should result in significant savings by reducing order book fraud. It is, however, too early to estimate how great these savings will be.

For the reasons stated above there are no plans to replace the term Social Security with that of Pension.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Housing Benefit

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) council tenants, (b) housing association tenants, (c) private tenants and (d) owner occupiers were in receipt of housing benefit in (i) Inverclyde, (ii) Strathclyde and (iii) Scotland as a whole at the latest available date.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

Strathclyde	60	55
Scotland	60	50

Sources: Housing Benefit Management Information System quarterly caseload returns for 1991 and the 1991 Scottish Office tenancy statistics.

Notes:

(i) Information on the number of Housing Association tenancies is not available, therefore, the information is included with the private tenants.

(ii) Owner Occupiers in Scotland have not been eligible for Housing Benefit (rate rebates) since April 1989 when the Community Charge Benefit was introduced.

(iii) The caseload data is an average of four point in time counts and includes estimates for non-responding authorities, therefore, the information should be regarded only as a general indication.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for the United Kingdom in total, and by standard region including Greater London, the number of households claiming housing benefit for each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his current estimate of the number of eligible persons in the borough of Newham who do not claim income support;

(2) what is his current estimate of the number of eligible persons in the borough of Newham who do not claim housing benefit;

(3) what is his current estimate of the number of eligible persons in the borough of Newham who do not claim family credit.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Record, columns 899-902, if he will publish tables, similar to those in his Department's tax benefit model table, showing net weekly spending power for each of a single waged married couple (a) with two children aged four and six years and (b) with three children aged three, eight and 11 years earning (i) £60, (ii) £70, (iii) £80, (iv) £90, (v) £100, (vi) £110, (vii) £120, (viii) £130, (ix) £140, (x) £150, (xi) £160 and (xii) £170 per week under the benefit system as per its uprating in 1993.

Mr. Burt: The information requested is provided in "Tax/Benefit Model Tables 1993", published in October 1993, copies of which are available in the Library.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many payments have been made under the special compensation scheme for claimants who claimed (a) disability living allowance or (b) attendance allowance after February 1993; and what is the total amount paid.

Mr. Scott: [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1994, col. 18]: The answer should have read as follows: No claims to disability living allowance or attendance allowance made after February 1993 have attracted a payment under the special compensation scheme. This is because all claims considered under that scheme must have been received on or after 3 February 1992 and had payment issued prior to 1 April 1993. Additionally, any claim must have suffered a delay of more than eight months, or more than six months in special rules cases.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farmers Charter

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if her Department has considered initiating a farmers charter in the light of the Chancellor's reference in the Budget speech to the effects of late payment on small business; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The Department has already set out targets for dealing with grant, subsidy and licence applications in "Commitment to Service", which was published in December 1992. In a number of cases, EC legislation determines the dates which apply.

Dietary Supplements

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the terms of reference of the research being undertaken by the national poisons unit into the toxicity of dietary supplements, sponsored by her Department; what information she has concerning the number of cases of (a) minor and (b) serious medical problems as a result of the consumption of such dietary supplements; what comparative assessment has been made with information of which she is aware, relating to poisoning as a result of organophosphorus or organochlorine pesticide ingestion or absorption over a comparable period of time; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The project currently being carried out at the national poisons unit is commissioned to follow up both clinically and analytically any case reports notified to the unit in which dietary supplements or traditional remedies are implicated. The project is still under way, but interim results show a link between exposure to dietary supplements or traditional remedies and clinical effects in 49 cases out of 5,568 investigated. The interim nature of these results makes comparison with any similar data on pesticides unreliable. The Ministry will use the final results of this project to aid in the formulation of policy on dietary supplements and traditional remedies.

Intervention Beef

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will inquire into the circumstances under which beef was released by the Intervention Board free of charge to Mr. Ray Woolford, of Lambeth council.

Mr. Jack: Yes. I would be grateful if the hon. Member would let me have further details of the circumstances.

Fishing (Drift Nets)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what rules have been agreed to allow fishing vessels the use of drift nets over 2·5 km in length.

Mr. Jack: Since 31 December 1993 the use by Community vessels of drift nets over 2·5 km in length has been prohibited under the provisions of EC regulation 3094/86.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Jack: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Polwhele Veterinary Investigation Centre

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has for the future of the Polwhele veterinary investigation centre; what assessment he has made of its performance over the past two and a half years; how she has taken into account the implications for livestock movements following the introduction of the European single market; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The review of the Polwhele veterinary investigation unit has been postponed until the outcome of the review of the animal health and veterinary group, which includes the state veterinary service, is known.

Forestry

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) in respect of how many forest parks in England she has given an assurance that they will not be privatised; and if she will make a statement;

(2) if she will list the precise criteria which led the Government to exempt the New Forest from privatisation; how those criteria have been applied to other Forestry Commission lands in England; and if she will list the land affected in each case.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In giving the assurance that the New Forest will not be privatised, full account was taken of its place in the nation's history and heritage. Ministers will await the advice of the Forestry Review Group before considering what action, if any, should be taken in respect of the ownership and management of other Forestry Commission woodlands, including forest parks.

Less-favoured Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle and sheep farms are wholly or mainly in the less-favoured areas.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As at the June 1992 agricultural census there were 11,842 farms in England which had at least half their land in the less-favoured areas and were classified as cattle and sheep farms.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is her estimate of the total subsidy to be paid on cattle and sheep in the less-favoured areas in 1994.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The total direct subsidies paid under the hill livestock compensatory allowances, sheep annual premium and suckler cow premium schemes in 1994 on cattle and sheep in the less-favoured areas in England is estimated to be at least £144 million.

EDUCATION

National Curriculum Council

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much the carpets incorporating the initials NCC in the National Curriculum Council's York office cost to purchase; when they were purchased; and what has happened to them.

Mr. Robin Squire: The carpet was purchased in 1990, when the National Curriculum Council was fitting out its offices in York. No information on the cost of the carpet is held centrally, and the cost is not separately identifiable from the published accounts of the NCC. The council was dissolved on 1 January 1994 and its former York office, with the carpet still in place, has been transferred to the Secretary of State. It will become the headquarters of the new Funding Agency for Schools from April this year.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Boswell: In the calendar year 1993 the amount reimbursed was £97,283. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Funding Agency for Schools

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what rent the Funding Agency for Schools will pay for its office accommodation in York; and what rent the National Curriculum Council paid.

Mr. Robin Squire: The annual rent for Albion Wharf is £280,724 excluding VAT, which is the sum previously paid by National Curriculum Council. Under the terms of the lease the rent is subject to review every five years with the next review due in June 1995.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what will be the cost of refurbishing premises in York for use by the Funding Agency for Schools; and which organisation will meet the cost of refurbishment.

Mr. Robin Squire: The cost of refurbishing Albion Wharf will be around £650,000 excluding VAT, to be met by the Department out of the budget set aside for the establishment of the Funding Agency for Schools.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Boswell: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

LEA Schools (North Yorkshire)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the capital allocation for North Yorkshire local education authority maintained schools in 1993-94.

Mr. Forth: North Yorkshire LEA's annual capital guideline for 1993-94 is £5·296 million. In addition, the authority has received two supplementary credit approvals totalling £710,000 in the course of this financial year. Voluntary aided and special agreement schools in North Yorkshire have been allocated grant totalling £949,000.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member on Tuesday 1 February, Official Report, column 611.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many new applications have been received from secondary and primary schools to change to grant-maintained status since his answer of 25 October 1993, Official Report, column 436.

Mr. Robin Squire: Since the answer of 25th October 1993, applications for grant maintained status have been received from 38 primary and 27 secondary schools.

Secondary Schools (Performance)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many copies of the secondary school performance tables were published by his Department.

Mr. Robin Squire: A total of 109 separate booklets containing secondary school performance tables were published in November 1993, of which some 1,087,600 copies have so far been distributed.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many copies of the secondary school performance tables were sent to primary schools in each local education authority; what criteria were used in determining how many copies would be sent; and for what purpose the tables were provided.

Mr. Robin Squire: Every primary and middle school in England with 10-year-old pupils on roll was sent 50 copies of the performance tables booklet for their local education authority area. The decision to send a standard number of booklets to each primary and middle school was taken on the grounds of overall economy and efficiency. The tables contain useful information for parents considering which secondary schools would best suit their children, and help parents and others to be better informed about the standards being achieved in schools in their area.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the budgeted expenditure for (a) publication and (b) distribution of the secondary school performance tables.

Mr. Robin Squire: The total budget for the 1993 performance tables exercise, covering secondary, 16 to 18, and national unauthorised absence tables, was £1·9 million. The production of the secondary and 16 to 18 tables has cost £864,800 to date, and the cost of distributing the tables amounts to some £386,100; requests for the tables are still being received. It is not possible to separate the production and distribution costs as between the secondary and the 16 to 18 tables.

Year Six Pupils

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many year six pupils there are in each local education authority.

Mr. Robin Squire: Information is collected from schools in England on the number of pupils in each age group rather than year group. The numbers of pupils in January 1993 who were aged 10 at the beginning of that school year—most of whom were in year group six—are shown in the table.

Chief Inspector of Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will place in the Library a copy of every letter to hon. Members from Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 24 January 1994]: Professor Sutherland has agreed to make available in the Library any letter which he sends to an hon. Member on a matter raised in a parliamentary question which has been referred to him for reply by my right hon. Friend or other Ministers.

WALES

Diesel Fuel Duties

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will discuss with bus operators in Wales and other involved parties the impact of the increase in diesel fuel duties on local bus services in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No. The effect on operators' costs will be minimal—as little as 1 per cent. of their total operating costs. Services in Wales should not be greatly affected.

Cwmcarn Secondary School

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when the headteacher of Cwmcarn grant-maintained secondary school in Gwent retired;

(2) how the early retirement of the headteacher of Cwmcarn grant-maintained school, Gwent, was financed.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 17 December 1993, columns 1078-79, to the hon. Member for Dewsbury (Mrs. Taylor).

Uplands Acidification

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what strategy is being considered by the Welsh Office to combat the effects of uplands acidification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A significant programme of action is under way in the United Kingdom to reduce the emissions which cause acid rain. This includes measures to reduce emissions from the power industry, the fitting of catalytic converters to all new cars and the implementation of pollution controls under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

In addition, the Welsh Office, in conjunction with the National Rivers Authority and the Countryside Council for Wales, is promoting research and monitoring on the environmental impact of acid deposition in upland Wales.

Development Agency

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what Welsh Office scrutiny there is of the working of the Welsh Development Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Development Agency, like other non-departmental public bodies, is subject to a range of controls, directions and monitoring as required by the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975. Targets, objectives and performance measures are set in the context of the corporate planning cycle. The agency's finances are monitored on a monthly basis and its accounts are audited by the National Audit Office.

House Condition Survey

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who conducted the interim house condition survey; what was the date originally scheduled for publication; what is the date currently scheduled for publication; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The 1993 Welsh House Condition Survey has been conducted in two stages. The first stage was a social survey undertaken by Research and Marketing Ltd. The second stage included a physical survey which was carried out by Bailey Widnell. Both contracts were placed after competitive tendering.

Our provisional intention was that the results of the surveys be available early this year. We now expect them to be published in the spring.

Magor-Castleton Motorway

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to publish the submissions received on the consultation exercise on the proposed Magor to Castleton motorway.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Relevant details will be announced when a decision is taken on whether or not to proceed with any of the published routes. This is currently anticipated by the summer of 1994.

Emergency Highway Works

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if arrangements similar to the special arrangements for emergency work referred to by the Secretary of State for Transport in respect of the introduction of full competition for local authority highway works in England will apply in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Yes. The implementation date is 1 October 1997, which takes account of proposals for local government reorganisation.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions since 1982 in Wales a potentially damaging operation to a site of special scientific interest has been carried out following the failure to reach a management agreement as set out in section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested by the hon. Member about potentially damaging operations is not available in the form requested. Available data on damage to SSSIs up to 31 March 1991 can be found in the Nature Conservancy Council's annual reports. Damage since 1 April 1991 can be found in the Countryside Council for Wales annual reports. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Less-favoured Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cattle and sheep farms are wholly or mainly in the less-favoured areas.

Mr. Redwood: In June 1992 there were 13,715 cattle and sheep farms wholly or mainly within the less-favoured areas in Wales.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the total subsidy to be paid on cattle and sheep in the less-favoured areas in 1994.

Mr. Redwood: The total direct subsidies paid under hill livestock compensatory allowances, sheep annual premium, and suckler cow premium schemes in 1994 on cattle and sheep in the less-favoured areas in Wales is estimated to be £157 million.

Farm Accidents

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many accidents were reported on farms in Wales in 1992-93; and what measures were taken to increase awareness of accident prevention.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

In the agriculture and horticulture industry in Wales in 1992-93 a provisional total of 65 occupational injuries were reported to enforcing authorities. Information on the number of injuries which occurred on farms cannot be separately identified.

The Health and Safety Executive is carrying out an extensive programme of measures aimed at helping to reduce the numbers of injuries and to increase awareness of health and safety in the agricultural industry. These measures include targeting inspection at those workplaces that present the greatest risk, extensive advisory and publicity work, and liaison with the industry to improve the safety of agricultural equipment.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Pergau Hydro-electric Project

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many files marked, "Not for NAO Eyes" relating to the Pergau hydro-electric project there are within his Department; and how many are at the British high commission in Malaysia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Six. The high commission in Malaysia does not hold any such files.

The marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is used in accordance with long-established practice. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's internal audit unit regularly checks to ensure that the marking is not abused.

Correspondence

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the instruction from the Foreign Secretary to the permanent secretary of the Overseas Development Administration dated 4 July 1989.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The document to which the hon. Member refers is dated 4 July 1991. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 31 January 1994 at column 493.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the memorandum to the Minister for Overseas Development from the permanent secretary of the Overseas Development Administration dated 7 February 1989.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Permanent Secretary's memorandum to which the hon. Member refers is dated 7 February 1991. The Public Accounts Committee was informed that, in accordance with usual practice, this internal document would not be released. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will prepare a full memorandum in response to the request now expected from the Foreign Affairs Committee following their decision of 26 January.

Special Adviser

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Afairs, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 961, if he will outline the particular qualifications, expertise or experience relating to the Overseas Development portfolio of the special adviser, Mr. Maurice Fraser.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet his counterparts in the European Union to discuss a joint response to forecast food deficits in Ethiopia and Eritrea.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The food aid needs of countries in the Horn of Africa, including Ethiopia and Eritrea, were discussed by officials of the European Community and its member states on 13 January. The European Commission indicated that they expect to provide some 250,000 tonnes of food to Ethiopia and Eritrea through various channels during 1994. Member states are considering their individual responses. A further meeting on 3 March will review the position.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for the supply of emergency food aid following forecasts of crop deficits in Ethiopia and Eritrea.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have allocated 10,000 tonnes of relief food aid for Eritrea and 15,000 tonnes for Ethiopia since 1 November 1993 from our 1993-94 national food aid programme. This food is being channelled through various NGOs. We will shortly be considering the possibility of further allocations from our 1994-95 programme.

Crop Deficits

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received regarding forecasts of crop deficits in Ethiopia and Eritrea.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received reports of joint FAO/WFP crop and food supply assessment missions carried out in November and December 1993 for both Ethiopia and Eritrea. Additional information has been received from the British embassy in Addis Ababa and various NGOs.

Environmental Appraisal Manual

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes the Overseas Development Administration has made to the "Manual of Environmental Appraisal" since April 1992.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There have been no changes. We plan to review the manual on a three-year cycle, but sections can be amended in the interim if there are key developments.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Lord President of the Council what proportion of correspondence received by (a) his Department and (b) each of his Department's agencies receives (i) an acknowledgement within five days and (ii) a substantive reply within 15 days.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 17 December 1993]: Current practice is for acknowledgements of correspondence to be sent immediately in cases where it is clear that a substantive reply cannot be given without consultation or research. Substantive replies are sent to correspondence as quickly as possible, but detailed analysis of response times could not be prepared except at disproportionate cost. The Privy Council Office has no responsibility for any agencies.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 1 February 1994]: None.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Employees suspected of fraud would be dealt with under disciplinary procedures and, where appropriate, the criminal code. An employee subsequently found guilty would normally be dismissed.

European Union ambassadors discussed human rights with the presidential candidates before the November elections.

Poland

17. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Poland in relation to the applications by Poland to join the European Union and NATO.

Mr. Hurd: We strongly support Poland's wish to join the European Union.

Far East (Exports)

18. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department is doing to encourage exports to the far east.

Mr. Goodlad: All FCO posts in the far east have export promotion as a top priority. They seek out export opportunities, advise British companies on the business to be won in their markets, lobby on their behalf for major contracts and against discrimination, organise visits by Ministers and trade missions with the specific object of winning business amongst other tasks. I am happy to say, for example, that our exports to China were 72 per cent. up in the first 11 months of 1993 compared to 1992, to the Philippines 50 per cent., to Thailand 39 per cent., to South Korea 21 per cent., to Malaysia 50 per cent., to Hong Kong 32 per cent., to Singapore 24 per cent., to Japan 17 per cent. and to Taiwan 20 per cent.

19. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had about the middle east peace process; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary visited Lebanon, Israel, the Occupied Territories and Jordan from 3-6 January. The Prime Minister met Crown Prince Hassan of Jordan in London on 11 January. The Prime Minister, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I held discussions with the Lebanese Prime Minister in London on 25 and 26 January. I am encouraged by the determination of all the parties to make progress towards a just, lasting and comprehensive peace.

Western European Union (Membership)

20. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place concerning the widening of Western European Union membership by the inclusion of countries in eastern and central Europe.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Western European Union Council of Ministers of 22 November requested the WEU

Permanent Council to study the possibility of an enhanced status for the countries of central and eastern Europe to allow them to participate to a greater extent in WEU activities.

21. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future relationships between the Western European Union and the countries of central and eastern Europe, in the light of the adoption of the "Partnership for Peace" policy at the recent NATO summit.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Discussions have taken place between the Western European Union Permanent Council and representatives from central and eastern Europe, following on from the agreement reached at the 22 November WEU ministerial meeting, regarding the possibility of an enhanced relationship with the WEU for these countries. Any such enhanced relationship would be complementary to and compatible with the links developed through NATO's "Partnership for Peace".

Malaysia

22. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with Malaysia.

Mr. Goodlad: We attach importance to the United Kingdom's relations with China, which cover a broad range of issues. We have a shared responsibility under the Joint Declaration for the future of Hong Kong. We have a good working relationship in the UN Security Council. Our commercial relationship is expanding rapidly, with United Kingdom exports up by 72 per cent. in the first 11 months of last year.

Belize

25. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Belize.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Our relations with Belize remain close and warm.

Russian Parliament

26. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department is taking to establish firm links and lines of communication with the new Russian Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We look forward to regular contacts with the new Russian Parliament. The Speaker of the House has invited the Chairman of the State Duma, Mr. Rybkin, to visit the United Kingdom later this year. Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed our trade links with a number of Japanese Ministers including the Prime Minister, during his visit to Japan in April 1993. I did so too during my visit in November. Our commercial relationship is making good progress. Despite continuing recession in Japan, British exports during the first 11 months of 1993 rose by 17 per cent. compared with the same period in 1992.

Foreign Policy (Co-operation)

29. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he proposes to have discussions with his European Union partners concerning the strengthening of intergovernmental co-operation on foreign policy.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs meets his European Union partners regularly to discuss the strengthening of intergovernmental co-operation on foreign policy.

South Africa

30. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests he has received concerning assistance with the process of the election in South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: On 14 January the UN Security Council approved the Secretary-General's report containing his proposals for international assistance for the South African elections. 36. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contributions Her Majesty's Government are planning to make to the groups monitoring the planned South African elections in April.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Britain is contributing to the UN, EU and Commonwealth observer operations. The exact number of British observers has yet to be finalised.

Paraguay

31. Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with Paraguay.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Relations with Paraguay are good. There were several high-level British visitors to Asuncion in 1993. We hope that President Wasmosy can visit Britain later this year.

32. Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding progress towards European Union enlargement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At the NATO summit on 10-11 January, allies reaffirmed their readiness, in accordance with relevant UN Security Council resolutions, to carry out air strikes to prevent the strangulation of Sarajevo and other threatened areas. NATO is also prepared to use air power, if requested, in support of UNPROFOR operations, including the delivery of humanitarian aid.

Soviet Republics

34. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the current conflicts within certain of the republics of the former Soviet Union.

Mr. Goodlad: We seek co-operation with China for a smooth transition in Hong Kong. On arrangements for the 1994 and 1995 elections, despite 17 rounds of talks, we have so far been unable to reach agreement. It was necessary for the Governor to begin the legislative process on the more urgent issues in December. We wish to continue discussion with China on the remaining electoral issues in the time available. We will also continue to seek rapid solutions, through the joint liaison group, to the many other outstanding issues related to the transition, not least those concerning Hong Kong's new airport.

Next week he shall meet his European Union counterparts in Brussels.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what physical assistance has been offered to the United Nations commission of inquiry into alleged war crimes in former Yugoslavia to excavate alleged mass burial sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom has offered no physical assistance to the excavation of alleged mass graves. Instead the United Kingdom has concentrated its efforts on the collation of substantiated evidence on war crimes by the MOD's defence debriefing team. Three batches of evidence have so far been submitted to the United Nations commission of experts.

Land Mines

39. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what international agreements cover the provision of assistance for clearing land mines.

Mr. Goodlad: The DSS has reimbursed the following amounts to the FCO and the ODA in respect of statutory sick pay provision over the past three financial years:

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all proposed road-widening schemes in England with the year when he expects the work to begin and be completed together with the estimated cost of each scheme.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. MacGregor: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Citizens Charter

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the amount of money paid to the travelling public by British Rail under the terms of the citizens charter.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail launched the passengers charter in March 1992. I understand that between April 1992 and November 1993 it paid £4·4 million in compensation to passengers under the terms of the charter.

Highway Works (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the amount of money for contract administration and monitoring that will be added to client costs under the proposed full competition for local authority highway works in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: I expect that any additional costs incurred by local authorities will, on average, be more than recouped by the efficiency and financial benefits gained.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the details of the special arrangements for emergency work referred to in the announcement of the introduction of full competition for local authority highway works in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: I am consulting the local authority associations on a proposal that emergency works should continue to remain exempt from competition requirements. This would give local authorities maximum flexibility in responding to unpredictable situations.

Drivers (Training)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether training of drivers undertaken under the Road Traffic (Carriage of Dangerous Substances, Packets etc.) Regulation 1986 will be accepted under the Road Traffic (Training of Drivers of Vehicles Carrying Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Drivers of vehicles over 3·5 tonnes gross weight carrying dangerous goods in packages must undertake approved training and hold a vocational training certificate from 1 January 1995, as required by EC directive 684/89. The training requirements have been well publicised and were introduced after full consultation.

The 1992 regulations allowed a two-and-a-half year transitional period until the end of 1994 for drivers of vehicles carrying dangerous goods in packages to obtain a certificate.

Traffic Cones Hotline

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total cost of the traffic cones hotline to date; and what is the precise purpose of the hotline.

Mr. Key: Separate costs of the cones hotline are not available since they have been met from the existing running costs budget. No staff have been employed exclusively on hotline activity.

The purpose of the hotline is to enable road users to complain to the Department if they see parts of the trunk road and motorway network which appear to have been coned off unnecessarily. The complaint is then followed up within the Department.

In most cases there will be a good reason, although not necessarily an obvious one, for the cones to be in place, and the Department undertakes on request to provide a written explanation of what it is. If there is no good reason, the Department undertakes to get the cones removed.

Motorways

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned into high speed electronic debiting for urban motorways.

Mr. Key: We are currently putting in hand a programme of research and trials to develop an electronic charging system suitable for use on the British motorway network. We shall shortly be inviting industry to submit proposals and equipment for study and assessment.

Design, Build, Finance Unit

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the design, build, finance unit to commence work; and if he will give details of staffing appointments.

Mr. Key: A reorganisation of the Department's staff has established a small unit to develop design, build, finance and operate contracts. This will put into effect the policy announced by the Secretary of State on 2 December, in response to the results of the consultation paper "Paying for Better Motorways". The units' staffing is building up as the workload increases.

Projects and Contracts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table setting out each contract or project for which his Department is currently inviting bids from (a) financial, (b) political or (c) other consultants, the nature of each contract or project and the bidding time scale for each project; and if he will make a statement.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr.Norris [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Employees convicted of fraud are subject to the Department's disciplinary procedures and are liable to dismissal.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The figures for 1989 are not immediately available.

Since 1990, two employees were judged guilty of fraud in the Department: one in 1992 and one in 1993. On both occasions the individual concerned was dismissed.

In addition, in application of departmental policy, two employees who had been convicted of fraud outside the Department were also dismissed, one in 1991 and one in 1992.

Traffic Cones (Security)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what publicly funded research has taken place into the provision of transparent traffic cones in those situations where security is an important consideration.

Mr. Howard: I have been asked to reply.

Proposals for enhancing public security are always considered with care. In this case the proposal from one of my hon. Friend's constituents for the development of a transparent traffic cone was referred to the Metropolitan police anti-terrorist branch and the police scientific development branch. The police have concluded that transparent cones are unlikely to be of significant security benefit in Great Britain. Publicly funded research on possible designs, and in particular on whether a transparent cone could be produced which conformed to BS standard 873, has not therefore been carried out.

London Stansted Airport

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy that airlines should be given specific opportunities to operate from London Stansted airport to the United States of America as part of a new air service bilateral agreement.

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom has already offered the immediate removal of all restrictions on United States and United Kingdom carriers' access to Stansted as part of a proposal made last December for a liberalised United Kingdom/United States air services agreement.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which American airlines have been refused licences to operate from London Stansted airport since 1990 under the transatlantic air travel bilateral restrictions.

Mr. Norris: Several US airlines have expressed interest over this period. Most recently, last June, we turned down a request from TWA for a unilaterial concession. We were disappointed that the United States were not prepared to accept an offer we made at that time which would have allowed this service to go ahead.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to what extent the demand for transatlantic services fromn London Stansted airport has been represented at the negotiations on the air travel bilateral restrictions to date.

Mr. Norris: The Airport Operators Association, of which BAA plc is a member, attends the UOIK/US liberalisation negotiations as part of the United Kingdom's delegation team.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received to date in favour of freeing London Stansted airport from the transatlantic air travel bilaterial restrictions.

Mr. Norris: My officials and I have received a variety of written and oral representations in recent months.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the extent to which air travel bilateral restrictions which frustrate the demand for transatlantic services from London Stansted airport.

Mr. Norris: The UK/US air services bilateral arrangements allow any of the six US carriers currently serving London to operate some or all of their services from Stansted if whey wish to do so. I assess carefully the implications of requests from US carriers for further rights to serve Stansted as they arise.

Microlight Aircraft

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what progress is being made in discussions with the French authorities to raise the overall weight limits of microlight aircraft from 390 kilograms to 450 kg; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what progress is being made towards establishing a European standard to define a microlight aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation, including microlights, within the United Kingdom, rests with the Civil Aviation Authority. The Authority also participates fully in discussions, with other national aviation authorities, aimed at developing harmonised aviation requirements. I will therefore ask the chairman of the Authority to write to the hon. Member in response to his questions.

Waste Dumping

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with local government organisations the changes required in International Maritime Organisation regulations following the incident on 30 December 1993 involving the MT Stort Kestrel, to prevent the dumping of noxious substances and other waste by shipping.

Mr. Norris: My Department is indeed prepared to enter into discussion with local government organisations on the International Maritime Organisation's regulations on the discharge of noxious liquids.

Tax Concessions (Germany)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he will take to assist the competitive position of the British shipping industry following the German Government's decision to extend tax concessions for investors in shipping companies.

Mr. Norris: A number of non-fiscal measures have been introduced or are proposed, including those announced on 15 December by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Hansard, column 698-99. Issues of fiscal policy are primarily for my right hon. and learned friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Plutonium Nitrate (Transport)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he has under consideration relating to the transportation of plutonium nitrate.

Mr. Norris: My Department is preparing to implement the code for the safe carriage of irradiated nuclear fuel, plutonium and high-level radioactive wastes in flasks on board ships, which was agreed by the assembly of the International Maritime Organisation in November 1993.

MV Iran-Sokan

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions since 1985 the cargo ship MV Iran-Sokan has docked at ports in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norris: The available information indicates that the Iran-Sokan was in port in London in June 1987 and March 1988, and in Immingham in June 1993.

A38

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the A38 trunk road between Exeter and Plymouth meets the necessary criteria to be designated as an A(M) road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Roads with A(M) and M designations are built to broadly similar engineering standards and are subject to the same legal requirements. The A38 between Exeter and Plymouth does not presently meet the necessary criteria for such roads. However, as my hon. Friend is aware, a study of the future needs of this important but environmentally sensitive route is being carried out as quickly as possible.

Marine Pollution

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he was first notified of the recent marine diesel fuel pollution incident off the coasts of Scotland and Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what actions he has taken, and on what dates, to clear up the marine diesel fuel pollutants recently discovered off the coasts of Scotland and Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will give full details of the extent of marine diesel pollution in the last 10 days off the coast of Northern Ireland and Scotland; and which parts of the United Kingdom have been affected;

(4) if he will instigate an urgent marine accident investigation branch and marine pollution unit investigation into the circumstances causing marine diesel pollution off the coast of Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Norris [holding answers 1 February 1994]: The Department's Marine Pollution Control Unit was first informed of pollution on the east coast of Northern Ireland on 10 January 1994. Oiled birds were reported coming ashore on the east coast of Northern Ireland from Newcastle, Co. Down to Glenarm, Co. Antrim. Small patches of beached oil were reported, but not in significant quantities. Two days later on 12 January scattered pancakes of oil were found on the shoreline from Ballywater in the North to Ballyquintin point in the South with the heaviest depositions at Portavogie. Clean-up action was carried out by the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) on 10 and 11 January. MPCU requested beach samples to be sent to the laboratory of the Government chemist for analysis—the results are still awaited. On 12 and 17 January aerial reconnaissance by MPCU did not reveal any floating oil at sea.

Pollution incidents on the coasts of Strathclyde—Ballentrae and Turnberry—Dumfries and Galloway, Port Patrick, were reported to the MPCU between 14 and 17 January. In the Strathclyde region, isolated globules of oil were found on a 6·75 mile stretch of beach south of Ballentrae, and small amounts of oil have also been found on rocks at Turnberry point. In Dumfries and Galloway, oil described as liquid oil clinging to seaweed was found on the beach at Port Mara and Port Kale, near Port Patrick. Clean-up action was carried out by Kyle and Carrick district council over this period, and it was requested to send beach samples to the LGC for analysis. The results are not yet known. MPCU's aerial surveillance aircraft flew over the area on 12, 17, 22 and 24 January, but no floating oil at sea was detected.

There is no evidence to suggest that this pollution originated from a recent marine accident. Neither the Marine Accident Investigation Branch nor the Marine Pollution Control Unit is aware of any incident in the vacinity of the affected areas to which the pollution could be attributed. In the circumstances, there is nothing for the MAIB to investigate. The direction of any further action by the MPCU will depend on the outcome of the analysis of beach samples by the LGC.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

European Regional Assistance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether all parts of Birmingham will remain eligible for European regional development fund.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Streeter) on 28 January, Official Report, column 409.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total budget awarded under the European regional development fund to the Commission initiatives of (a) ENVIREG, (b) INTERREG, (c) PRISMA, (d) RECHAR, (e) RESIDER, (f) REGEN, (g) REGIS, (h) RENAVAL, (i) STAR, (j) STRIDE, (k) TELEMATICS, and (l) VALOREN in each year since their establishment; and what was the total budget of each awarded to (i) the northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Sainsbury: European regional development fund allocations to Community initiatives are shown in the table. Allocations by year are not available. For several of the initiatives, in the United Kingdom only Northern Ireland has been eligible.

Regional Enterprise Grants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of regional enterprise grants, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Mr. Sainsbury: Expenditure on the administration of regional enterprise grants in England in 1992-93, the first year for which figures have been published, totalled around £1 million. Publicity costs, which included printing, advertising and stationery costs, totalled £3,400 for the same year. Comparable figures for the years since the scheme began in 1988 are not available.

English Estates

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will itemise the expenditure on the administration of English Estates, including printing, advertising and stationery costs as well as worker expenses (a) over the last year and (b) since the scheme was developed.

Mr. Sainsbury: English Estates is a body which has been in existence in various form since 1936. Its activities have developed over that period. Figures going back to 1936 are not available. Forecast running costs for 1993-94 are as follows:

	£ million
Maintenance of premises and sites	4·4
Personnel costs	8·2
Office Expenses	2·0
Professional fees and charges	3·9
Research and development	0·4
Advertising and marketing	2·3

Note: Figures include the cost of activities carried out on behalf of the Rural Development Commission.

Manufacturing Programme

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what sum of money has been allocated for the manufacturing, planning and implementation studies programmes for 1993-94; what proportion thereof had been allocated as at 31 December; and how many (i) successful, (ii) unsuccessful and (iii) pending applications there have been for assistance under the programme.

Mr. McLoughlin: The forecast for the grant payments under the manufacturing planning and implementation studies programme is £3·5 million for 1993-94, of which £2·9 million had been committed on 31 December 1993. Total grant payments for the scheme is £8·75 million.

A total of 312 applications were received by the closing date, 31 May 1993. A total of 120 cases were successful and have been awarded grant status; a further 28 applications are pending. Fifty-nine applications were unsuccessful; the remainder chose not to pursue their applications.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what sum of money has been allocated for publicity and promotion of the manufacturing, planning and implementation studies programmes for 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. McLoughlin: The manufacturing planning and implementation studies programme was launched in February 1991. The spend profile for promotion is as follows:

	£
February 1991 to March 1992	75,000
April 1992 to May 1993	52,793

This gives a total of £127,793 for the promotion of the programme. Since the closure of the scheme to new applications on 31 May 1993 there has been no further promotion spend.

Chief Scientist

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the change in his Department's post of chief scientist.

Mr. Heseltine: Over the last 18 months I have redefined the Department's science and technology policies to relate more closely to my overall focus on competitiveness and to the Government White Paper on Science and Technology. In recognition of this, elements of the recently announced organisational change in my Department involve the integration of delivery of these policies with the sectoral and regional organisation for the support of industry.

One result of this reorganisation, which will take effect on 1 March 1994, is that the rationale for the post of chief adviser on science and technology in its present form no longer applies. Therefore a successor to the current holder, Dr Geoffrey Robinson, will not be appointed when Dr Robinson returns to the private sector at the beginning of March. Dr David Evans—formerly chief scientist at the Department of Energy—has been appointed head of the technology and innovation policy division, and will have overall responsibility for the Department's science and technology policies and programmes.

Cornwall (Government Expenditure)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much central Government money was spent on developing and supporting (a) manufacturing industries and (b) businesses in general in Cornwall in each year since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not possible to provide a fully comprehensive answer without a disproportionate cost. The figures account for moneys paid to Cornish Enterprises under the regional development grant II, regional selective assistance and regional enterprise grant schemes, which have been the major source of grant over the period in question.

Export Control Regulations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many companies or individual exporters have contacted his Department's export control organisation regarding the application of export control regulations since the guidance at page 84 of his Overseas Trade Board's plan was published.

Mr. Needham: The British Overseas Trade Board's annual report for 1992-93 and forward plan was published on 9 June 1993. From that date to 27 January 1994 my Export Control Organisation's inquiry unit received just over 25,000 telephone calls and fax messages about a wide range of export control matters.

Arms Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will now list those countries which receive United Kingdom aid to which arms have been exported in each of the last 14 years.

Mr. Needham: In recent years about 140 countries have been recipients of the United Kingdom's bilateral aid. To examine any correlation between each of those countries and the issue of export licences for arms for each of the past 14 years could be undertaken only at disproportionate expense.

Matrix Churchill

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what communications he has had with the United States Secretary of Commerce in regard to the trading links between Matrix-Churchill Corporation of Cleveland, Ohio and the United Kingdom Matrix Churchill company.

Mr. Needham: None.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Eggar: The sums reimbursed were as follows:

	£000
[1]1993-94	204
1992-93	281

[1] To end December.

Figures for earlier years are not available.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notification to, and consultation with, the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Eggar: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointment.

Regional Policy

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Baord of Trade what further changes he is planning in regional policy since his answer of 23 June 1993, Official Report, column 227.

Mr. Sainsbury: Regional policy is kept under continual review. Since June 1993 there have been several changes to our regional policy. The new assisted areas map was announced on 23 July 1993. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 4 November 1993 plans to introduce a single regeneration budget and integrated regional offices from April 1994. Details of the European Commission's decisions about objective 2 and 5b areas under the structural funds were announced recently.

Electronic Mail

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to issue departmental press releases by electronic mail.

Mr. Eggar: My Department's press releases, in common with those of other Government Departments, are already released electronically through the Central Office of Information's electronic news distribution system.

Coal Industry Social Welfare Organisation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations his Department has received relating to the Coal Industry Social Welfare Organisation; and what consideration he has given to them in deciding on the future of British Coal.

Mr. Eggar: The Department has received some 50 representations about the Coal Industry Social Welfare Organisation. I and my officials are in touch with British Coal and CISWO about the future provision of welfare services.

Competitiveness

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the sectors of industry and services that have been reviewed by his competitiveness unit.

Mr. Sainsbury: The competitiveness division is concerned with the overall competitiveness of all parts of manufacturing and services. The DTI's 15 sector divisions have each been considering the competitiveness of their particular sectors.

Spirits (Hungarian Quotas)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations his Department has made to the Hungarian Government about the restrictive quotas applied to Scotch whisky and other imported spirits.

Mr. Needham: My Department has a close working relationship with the scotch whisky industry both through the Scotch Whisky Association and through many individual producers. Some of the larger companies have offices in Budapest and are well known to British embassy officials.

Through this network we have been aware of the difficulties which importers of spirits face in this market for some considerable time, and have raised these when appropriate with Hungarian counterparts. We have also been active in giving support to the industry's representations to the Hungarian Administration. In some areas—for example, labelling—progress has been made.

The Hungarian quota system for imported spirits remains a concern and one which has been exacerbated by the announcement of what appear to be even more restrictive terms for the current year. We are now considering what might be done, balancing the needs of the industry with our experience of the Hungarian market as one in which insensitive lobbying can be counter-productive.

Export Credit Guarantees Department

Mrs. Browning: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has completed the review of ECGD arrangements for allocating claims recoveries to exporters.

Mr. Heseltine: As a result of a review of its IT systems, it became clear that ECGD was applying different interpretations of similar terms in different guarantees when allocating recoveries to its policyholders. The Cardiff office, which handled short-term guarantees, interpreted ECGD's legal rights differently in a particular respect from the London office which handles medium and long term guarantees, the Cardiff interpretation being in certain cases more generous to the exporter than the London interpretation. When this emerged ECGD at once put a hold on the further allocation of certain categories of recovery and sought legal advice on what has proved to tbe an exceedingly complex matter.

I have now received considered legal advice on all aspects of this matter. It is now clear how the relevant provisions of the guarantee should be interpreted and all future recoveries, including those currently held by ECGD, will be allocated between the exporter and ECGD in accordance with the London interpretation. This will mean that some policyholders will receive a lower share of recoveries than they had in the past. The hold on payments to its customers which ECGD has imposed while the review has been in progress will now be ended.

ECGD has estimated that the amounts which it has paid to policyholders since 1975 which are in excess of what is now considered to be the correct legal entitlement could total up to £83 million.

Given the complexity of this issue and the difficulty and cost of establishing the case of recovering these excess payments from a large number of exporters the Government have decided not to pursue their legal right to seek restitution of these excess payments. I believe that this represents a realistic balance between the interests of the taxpayer and of the exporter.

Shipbuilding

Mr. Etherington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the North East Shipbuilders Ltd./British Shipbuilders closure document as agreed between the United Kingdom Government and the EC in 1988;

(2) if he will list the package of aid approved by the EC in December 1988 intended to cover costs associated with the closure of North East Shipbuilders Ltd./British Shipbuilders.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answers 1 February 1994]: No. It is not the Government's policy to make available the details of agreements entered into with the European Commission where, as in this case, they contain commercially sensitive information.

An aid package worth some £45 million in total was agreed for those affected by the closure. It comprised the following three main elements: first, an enterprise zone for Sunderland; secondly, English Estates received £7 million for the provision of advance factory space; and, thirdly, some £10 million was made available over three years to Sunderland Enterprise and Training Ltd. and the Wearside Opportunity. This aid finance has been almost entirely taken up.

English Estates

Mr. Hutton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total amount spent by English Estates in providing new factory premises and serviced sites in Barrow and Furness since June 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 1 February 1994]: English Estates has spent £5·1 million in the Barrow-in-Furness travel-to-work area since June 1991. Of this, some £1 million has been used to assemble sites for the town centre redevelopment and the remainder has gone on the development of 34,500 sq ft of managed workspace to help encourage the formation of new businesses, 33,000 sq ft of workshops/small factories and 46,000 sq ft of large detached factories for both indigenous companies and inward investors.

Mr. Hutton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many acres of serviced industrial land have been provided by English Estates in Barow and Furness since 1991 under the Cumbria special support initiative announced by the Government in June 1991.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Since Cumbria county council is well advanced with its own site reclamation/servicing programmes, assisted by derelict land grant, English Estates has supported these efforts by acquiring 7·5 acres of serviced land. It has also been working with the county council to identify further locations in the Barrow-in-Furness travel-to-work area where land can be brought forward. Feasibility studies are well advanced on two possible sites involving around 30 acres in total.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to include the consideration of environmental matters such as energy efficiency in the joint OFGAS/DTI consultation paper on the licensing and competition arrangements for independent gas suppliers.

Mr. McLoughlin: [holding answer 31 January 1994]: I expect the efficient use of gas to be one of the aspects to be considered in the consultation document.

SCOTLAND

Care in the Community

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who is responsible for the loan charges when a council makes a grant to a charitable trust, in order to house people under the care in the community iniatitive; how many grants of this nature have been made by Scottish local authorities since 1983; and what is the total amount of subsidy that has been given.

Mr. Lang: When a local authority incurs a capital debt as a consequence of making a capital grant to a charitable trust in such circumstances, each year the outstanding debt will be included in the calculation of the loan charges element of the annual distribution of aggregate external finance to that authority.

Information is not held centrally on the number of grants made by local authorities of the type identified by the right hon. Member, nor on the amounts involved. It is therefore not possible to estimate the amount of loan charges support which has been given for such grants.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the planned expenditure on care in the community in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Planned expenditure on community care services is entirely a matter for local authorities to determine.

Public Appointments

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the hon. Members defeated in Scotland in the general election of June 1987; and which of them were subsequently given public appointments.

Mr. Lang: The following hon. Members were defeated in Scotland in the general election of June 1987:

Michael Ancram
John Corrie
Sir Alex Fletcher
Peter Fraser (now Lord Fraser of Carmyllie)
Barry Henderson
Roy Jenkins (now Lord Jenkins of Hillhead)
Michael Hirst (now Sir Michael Hirst)
Anna McCurley
John MacKay (now Lord MacKay of Ardbrecknish)
Albert McQuarrie (now Sir Albert McQuarrie)
Gerald Malone
Alexander Pollock
Gordon Wilson

None currently holds appointment on bodies for which my Department has responsibility. The information held centrally by my Department does not show whether defeated Members were appointed to such bodies earlier.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of appointments made by him to Scottish health board trusts; and if will give details of the political party affiliations of those appointed.

Mr. Stewart: So far, my right hon. Friend has appointed 38 chairmen and 165 non-executive directors to NHS trusts. Party political affiliations are not relevant to such appointments and such information is neither sought nor held centrally although in some cases, such as those referred to in the reply to the hon. Member's other question today, a person's political affiliation may be obvious.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the codes of practice governing the making of appointments to public bodies by Ministers.

Mr. Lang: The general procedures for the making of public appointments is contained in the Cabinet Office publication "Guide on Public Appointments Procedures" which is available in the Library of the House.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Lang: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Forestry Commission Land

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all land owned by the Forestry Commission in the Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale constituency; and what plans he has to sell off Forestry Commission land in the Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale constituency under the current disposals programme.

Mr. Lang: The Forestry Commission is preparing a list of all its woodlands in the right hon. Member's constituency, and this will identify those which the Commission is currently selling or planning to sell. I shall send a copy to the right hon. Member and I shall also arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Research Projects

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those research projects (a) undertaken internally by his Department and (b) commissioned by his Department from external contractors, within the last five years, which have gathered data on the employment status (i) of persons convicted of crime and (ii) of persons given custodial sentences.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following research reports contain data on the employment status of persons convicted of crimes: the first three were in-house projects and the remainder were externally commissioned. Unless otherwise stated, the reports were published by the Scottish Office central research unit.

1. "A Survey of Fine Defaulters in Scottish Courts" published in 1990.
2. "Diversion from Prosecution: Diversion to Social Work" published in 1992.
3. "The Deferred Sentence in Scotland" published in 1992.
4. "Treatment as an Alternative to Prosecution: Diversion to the Douglas Inch Centre" published in 1989.
5. "Sentenced to Serve: The Operation and Impact of Community Service by Offenders" published by Avebury Press in 1992.
6. "Making Amends: Justice for Victims and Offenders: An Evaluation of the SACRO Reparation and Mediation Project", published by Avebury Press in 1992.

A further two research reports contained data on the employment status of those given a custodial sentence. These were "The Prison Survey 1990-91" and "A Survey of the Employment Aspirations and Skill Levels of Offenders in Young Offenders Institutions" published by the Scottish Prison Service, 1992. Both were in-house projects.

Tourist Boards

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will, in his deliberations on the future of Scottish area tourist boards, respect the wishes of both the Edinburgh and the Borders tourist boards in respect of whether or not to have a combined board;

(2) if he will make a statement on the reorganisation of the structure of Scottish area tourist boards.

Mr. Lang: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for tourism in Scotland on 26 January, Official Report columns 314-15.

Student Grants

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the level of Government expenditure on student grants in Scotland in (a) higher and (b) further education in each academic year since 1990-91; what are the expected levels of expenditure for 1993-94 and 1994-95; and how much was spent per registered student in each of these years;

(2) what amount of Scottish university student fees was paid by Her Majesty's Government in each academic year since 1990-91; what is the expected level of expenditure for 1993-94 and 1994-95; and how much was spent per registered student in each of these years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Awards made under the students' allowances scheme to students in higher education cover maintenance, travel and fees and are available to eligible students attending full-time or sandwich courses provided by institutions, including universities, in the United Kingdom which led to a first degree or comparable qualification, or to a diploma. They are also available for full-time courses of initial teacher training. Similar support for courses in further education is the responsibility of the education authorities.

Departmental records of expenditure and plans relate to financial years. The actual expenditure on maintenance and tuition fees, and the average expenditure per award holder in the financial years 1990-91 to 1992-93 are shown in the table. The table also shows the total announced expenditure for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

	Total expenditure		Average per student[1]
	Fees £ million	Maintenance £ million	Fees £ million	Maintenance £ million
1990-91	39,145	95,189	1,145	1,347
1991-92	74,217	117,268	2.071	1,456
1992-93	86,603	136,471	2,251	1,523
[2]1993-94	[4]218,223	158,243	—	—
[3]1994-95	[4]158,914	158,360	—	—

[1] Average per award holder.

[2] Announced expenditure including winter supplementary estimate.

[3] Planned.

[4] Covers total fees expenditure. It is not possible to distinguish between expenditure on fees to universities and to other institutions.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much funding has been made available to each training and enterprise council in 1992-93 and 1993-94, expressed in cash terms and real terms, and giving a real terms percentage change from the previous year, for (a) youth training and credits, (b) training for work and the programmes it replaced and (c) business start-up allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: There are no training and enterprise councils in Scotland. The funding of local enterprise companies is an operational matter for Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. I have asked the chairmen of these bodies to write to the hon. Member.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what delay there has been in payment of sheep annual premium to Scottish farmers in the last 12 months.

Sir Hector Monro: The processing of claims for payment under the 1993 sheep annual premium scheme has been slower than in previous years because of complexities arising from the introduction of sheep annual premium quotas. Payments began in October 1993 compared to the end of August in the previous year and have continued since then at regular intervals.

Prisons (Drug Abuse)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons have died in prisons as a direct result of the abuse or misuse of (a) lawful drugs and (b) unlawful drugs in each year since 1978.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the period from 1 January 1978 to 31 December 1993 there has been only one death in Scottish prisons from abuse or misuse of drugs: in 1983 a prisoner died from an overdose of unlawful drugs.

Strathclyde

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the findings of the Parliamentary Boundaries Commission in respect of Strathclyde; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no locus at this stage of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission's review of constituencies in Scotland. The commission is required to submit its report with respect to the whole of Scotland, showing the constituencies into which it recommends the country should be divided, by 31 December 1994.

Conservation

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of economic developments which have been (a) delayed and (b) discontinued by way of objections raised under the terms of the European Community directive on the conservation of natural habitats of fauna and flora.

Sir Hector Monro: None.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on wildlife conservation on Forestry Commission land.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 31 January 1994]: One of the main aims of the Forestry Commission's forest enterprise is to enhance the wildlife conservation value of its woodlands as a whole and to safeguard special habitats. Wildlife conservation is an integral part of forest enterprise's multi-purpose forest management which integrates wood production, conservation, recreation and amenity.

In achieving these aims, forest enterprise undertakes a wide range of conversation projects. It manages some 400 sites of special scientific interest and 46 forest nature reserves and undertakes projects for many species of flora and fauna. All of its forest districts have prepared conservation plans which identify sites where conservation should be the principal management objective, and specify what action is to be taken in these sites.

Forest enterprise has set down its commitment to best environmental practice in the form of an environmental code which states that it:

(i) produces wood only from sustainable sources;
(ii) identifies and manages special habitats, protects and maintains archaeological features and carries out positive management for threatened species;
(iii) maintains expertise in environmental science and seeks a sound understanding of the interaction of its activities with the wider environment through available research and consultation with expert authorities;
(iv) promotes environmental awareness and understanding amongst its staff and the outside world;
(v) aims to minimise environmental disturbance in its operations and to meet the Forestry Authority's water, landscape and nature conservation guidelines;
(vi) works to conservation plan for all its forests and actively manages to maintain and enhance conservation value;
(vii) maintains close liaison with regulatory bodies and environmental organisations in order to keep in touch with their views on environmental policies and practices.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the costs of implementing the European Community directive 92/43 EEC on the conservation of natural habitats of fauna and flora; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland announced to the House on 8 December 1993 that Scottish Natural Heritage would be allocated £39.851 million in the financial year 1994-95. This represents an increase of 10·5 per cent. on Scottish Natural Heritage's grant-in-aid for 1993-94. Scottish Natural Heritage has been instructed to accord the highest priority to work to implement the EC habitats directive. It is not, however, possible to make a firm estimate of costs specific to habitats directive implementation until work to implement the directive is further advanced.

Courts (Vulnerable Witnesses)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research he has commissioned in respect of the circumstances surrounding the position of vulnerable adults when giving evidence in court proceedings; if he will place a copy of the results in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The treatment of vulnerable witnesses is a matter which is kept under review. Police units for assisting women who are the subject of sexual or other assault operate in all parts of the country. The Crown Office has a committee part of the remit of which is to keep under review commitments in the justice charter to improved arrangements for witnesses. Arrangements exist at local level to assist and support vulnerable witnesses before they attend court to give evidence. Present research relates to the use of closed circuit television to enable children to give evidence in criminal cases outwith the court room. The results of that research will be used to advice decisions on new research proposals in this general field.

Prisons (Suicide)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons have died by their own hand in prisons in each year since 1978; and what were the means by which such deaths were brought about.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

Year	Means	Total
1978	Hanging (2), cut throat (1), jumping (1)	4
1979	Hanging (2), jumping (1)	3
1980	Jumping[1]	1

Civil Servants

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) males and (b) females have been employed in each of the four senior grades in the Scottish Office in each of the past five years.

Mr. Lang: At 1 April each year the numbers of staff—expressed as full-time equivalents—employed in each of the four senior grades in the Scottish Office were as follows:

FTE

Unified Grade	1989		1990		As at April 1991[1]		1992[1]		1993[1]

[1] Medical staff at these grades are included in the figures with effect from 1 April 1991.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of staff employed in the Scottish Office in each of the past five years in terms of occupational grades.

Mr. Lang: The full-time equivalent numbers of staff by main occupational group, as defined by Treasury, in each of the past five years are shown in the table.

[2] There is no formal classification of posts or individuals by occupational group for staff at unified grade 7 and above—such staff are counted in the "Open Structure" group.

Nurse Grading Appeals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, for each health board area, the number of nurse clinical grading appeals which are pending at the different levels of the appeals procedure; what are the amounts of money involved in these claims; what proposals he has to improve the processing of appeals; and when he expects the whole exercise to be completed.

Mr. Stewart: I understand that there were no nurse clinical grading appeals outstanding at health board level on 21 January 1994. On the same date a total of 586 appeals were outstanding at Scottish and national levels, a reduction from 960 in May 1993. The breakdown of these by health board is given in the table.

No estimate of the total sum of money involved in these claims has been made. The nursing and midwifery staffs negotiating council is currently discussing new procedures to speed up and streamline the appeals process and I expect that the bulk of the outstanding cases in Scotland will be cleard by early 1995.

Homelessness

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were classified as homeless at the latest available date in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer of 1 December 1993, Official Report, column 479.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many social workers attained the mental health officer qualification in each of the regional and island council areas in each of the past four years; what is the total number of such qualified social workers in each of these areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Information on the number of social workers who have attained the mental health officer qualification is not held centrally. Information supplied to the Scottish Office by local authorities on the number of main grade and senior social workers who have undertaken the mental health officer course in the period October 1989 to October 1992 is set out in the table.

NHS Dental Patients

Dr. Godman: To ask sthe Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were registered as national health service dental patients in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Stewart: Formal arrangements for patients to be registered with a specific dentist were introduced under the new contract for general dental practitioners on 1 October 1990. The number of people registered in each of the four health board areas within Strathclyde region and the total number registered in Scotland is contained in the table. Information for individual local government districts and regional areas is not available.

Number of people registered with a dentist in Scotland as at 31 March

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions since 1982 in Scotland a potentially damaging operation to a site of special scientific interest has been carried out following the failure to reach a management agreement as set out in section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: Information on damage to sites of special scientific interest is contained in the annual reports of the former Nature Conservancy Council and the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland, copies of which are in the Library.

Scottish National Theatre Company

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Scottish Arts Council concerning the creation of a Scottish National Theatre Company; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: There has been no recent discussion between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Scottish Arts Council on the subject of a Scottish national theatre. I understand, however, that a working party was established recently by the Scottish Arts Council to assess the demand and potential remit of a national theatre company. It would be for the Scottish Arts Council to determine whether such a company, if established, should be supported by its funds.

Less-favoured Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cattle and sheep farms are wholly or mainly in the less-favoured areas.

Sir Hector Monro: In June 1993 there were 13,443 main holdings classified as cattle and sheep farms wholly or mainly in the less-favoured areas.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the total subsidy to be paid on cattle and sheep in the less-favoured areas in 1994.

Sir Hector Monro: The total direct subsidy paid under the sheep annual premium, suckler cow premium and hill livestock compensatory allowance schemes in 1994 on cattle and sheep in the Scottish less-favoured areas is estimated to be over £180 million.

NHS Helpline

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many calls have been received by the NHS helpline in Scotland each month since its inception.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Information on the total number of calls, both interactive and non-interactive, which have been made to the NHS helpline each month since it came into operation is as follows:

	Number
29 October—20 November 1992	759
21 November—18 December 1992	710
19 December 1992—15 January 1993	674

13 February—12 March 1993	1,140
13 March—9 April 1993	1,214
10 April—7 May 1993	834
8 May—4 June 1993	975
5 June—2 July 1993	1,128
3 July—30 July 1993	1,236
31 July—27 August 1993	861
28 August—24 September 1993	801
25 September—22 October 1993	1,059
23 October—19 November 1993	765
20 November—17 December 1993	644
18 December 1993—14 January 1994	561
Total	14,664

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of setting up the NHS helpline in Scotland and the cost to date; what has been the total cost of administering the service to date; how many staff have been employed; and what is the salary of the head of the NHS helpline.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The NHS helpline was set up in October 1992 at a cost of £72,401; and total expenditure to date on operational and publicity costs is £330,912. The service is operated on behalf of the NHS in Scotland management executive by Network Scotland on a contractual basis with the cost of administering the helpline met from within the contract price. Network Scotland employs a project supervisor and up to four part-time operators to work specifically on the NHS helpline. The salaries of Network Scotland employees are not known.

Holyrood House

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the cost to his Department of Holyrood house in each of the last 10 years; and how this cost was divided between major categories of expenditure.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The information for the most recent five years is:

	Programme expenditure £	Staff costs £	Total £
1989-90	771,667	307,856	1,079,523
1990-91	860,833	288,636	1,149,469
1991-92	723,000	334,346	1,057,346
1992-93	696,600	338,530	1,035,130
1993-94	671,550	337,852	[1]1,009,402

[1] Estimate.

These costs include all expenditure directly attributable to the palace but not professional and central administration. Information for previous years was not collected on a comparable basis.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what grace-and-favour accommodation is available at Holyrood house; who occupies it; and how costs are allocated between the occupants and his Department.

Sir Hector Monro: [holding answer 1 February 1994]: I understand that there is no grace and favour accommodation at the palace of Holyrood house.

Shameless Indecency

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the adequacy of the enforcement of the law of shameless indecency in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 1 February 1994]: I am not aware of any particular difficulties in enforcing this aspect of the common law. The statistics show that in 1992 more than double the number of persons were charged with shameless indecency than in 1988 and nearly double the number of persons were convicted of that offence by the courts.

Irvine Development Corporation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department is planning to have with tenants' groups within Irvine new town on safeguarding the interests of development corporation tenants.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Responsibility for discussion and consultation with the tenants lies with the development corporation. I understand that it has already held meetings and issued newsletters and plans to continue this practice.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the timetable for the disposal by Irvine development corporation of its housing stock.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Our policy guidance to corporations encourages them to maximise tenure diversification in the period prior to wind-up. This will involve sales to tenants under right to buy and rent to mortgage and sales of all new build and vacant houses to housing associations.

For the remaining tenanted stock, the development corporation is to submit its strategy to the Secretary of State by 31 December 1994 and once approved successor landlords will be invited to submit bids for the stock. Tenants will choose their successor landlord in ballots to be held around six months before wind-up.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many tenancies are currently managed by Irvine development corporation; how many Irvine development corporation tenants have opted to purchase their properties for each year since the introduction of the legislation allowing this; what are the current values of (a) Irvine development corporation's housing stock, (b) Irvine development corporation's commercial assets and (c) Irvine development corporation's headquarters; and what is Irvine development corporation's current annual turnover and its annual expenditure.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: There is no standard definition of turnover which can be applied to the new towns. The annual accounts of each town are prepared to a common style and disclose income arising from rents, grants, subsidies and other sources together with the income and outgoings on property transactions. The latest accounts which are contained in the corporation's annual report for 1992-93 are available in the Library of the House. These accounts also provide the net book value of the corporation's assets at 31 March 1993.

Valuations for individual properties do not appear since it is commercial inappropriate to provide these for properties which will be sold in the near future.

The tenancies managed by the corporation at 1 January 1994 were:

	Number
(a) Housing	3,668
(b) Industry	92
(c) Commercial	83
(d) Other, including agricultural	161

The numbers of corporation housing tenants who have opted to purchase their house under the right-to-buy provisions are as follows:

	Number
1980-81	21
1981-82	15
1982-83	79
1983-84	74
1984-85	94
1985-86	86
1986-87	192
1987-88	196
1988-89	279
1989-90	353
1990-91	261
1991-92	167
1992-93	138
[1]1993-94	133

[1] To 1 December 1993.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what precise measures he will take to ensure the rights of Irvine development corporation tenants to transfer to a local authority landlord, following the Government's planned reforms of Scottish local government.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The tenants of Irvine development corporation will be able to choose their successor landlord in ballots to be held before wind-up. My right hon. Friend agreed in February 1992 that the local authority could bid to be the successor landlord and the detailed guidance issued to development corporations and local authorities makes clear what is expected of all bidders. Local government reform does not alter this.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a figure for the number of staff in his Department covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 31 January 1994]: As at 27 January 1994, 7,280 staff in the Scottish Office, excluding the Scottish Prison Service, and the associated departments were covered by statutory sick pay.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many companies have been awarded regional selective assistance in Scotland and have subsequently not met the terms of the original award;

(2) from which companies his Department has managed to recoup regional selective assistance; how much regional selective assistance was recovered for each of the last five years; and from how many companies these moneys were recovered during each year of this period.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 26 January 1994]: It is envisaged that some investment projects may for good reason be revised, after an offer of regional selective assistance has been made. In some such cases the payment of assistance may still be justified according to the terms of the original offer. In other cases where changes occur which cannot be readily accommodated within the terms of the offer, the Department treats the project either as failed or reduced in scale and will seek repayment of grant paid or reduce the level of offer as appropriate. In the five years to 31 December 1993, 121 projects where some grant had been paid were treated as failed, the principal reason being the liquidation or receivership of the company.

Details of grant recoveries from individual companies are commercially confidential and are not divulged. The recovery figures requested are given in the table.

	Amount recovered £ million	Number of companies
1989	0·022	2
1990	1·117	9
1991	0·239	7
1992	0·610	4
1993	1·610	5

Cars (Allocation)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cars have been allocated to the managers, advisers and administrators employed by the NHS trust hospitals in each of the last two financial years.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1994]: This information is not held centrally.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Citizens Charters

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the total cost so far of (a) producing and (b) distributing (i) each of the citizens charters and (ii) the documents associated with each of them.

Mr. Waldegrave: Production and distribution costs of publishing the Citizen's Charter White Paper (Cm 1599) and the Citizen's Charter First Report: 1992 (Cm 2101) are borne by HMSO, which expects to recover the costs through sales revenue. The cost of producing and distributing the leaflet guides to the Citizen's Charter White Paper and First Report are £900,000 and £440,000 respectively. Individual public service organisations are responsible for producing and distributing their own charters for those who use their services. The total costs of these, as far as we are aware of them, are set out in the table.

Costs of publication and distribution of charters and associated documents

Department/Organisation	Cost £

British Rail	250,000
HM Customs and Excise	306,948

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for each of the last five years by Department (a) the number of approaches to the public appointments unit for names, (b) how many public appointments unit nominees have been forwarded in response to those approaches in (a), and (c) how many of these nominees have been appointed to a public body as a result.

Mr. Waldegrave: The number of requests for names of candidates is not kept by individual Department, and the numbers of names put forward in response to such requests is not recorded. Aggregated information is available as follows:

Year	Number of approaches to the public appointments unit (PAU)	Number of PAU nominees known to have been appointed
1988-89	215	117	1
1989-90	242	133	(32)
1990-91	188	140	(63)
1991-92	258	121	(57)
1992-93	308	128	(67)

[1] Number of female nominees appointed.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many names have been (a) added to and (b) deleted from the public appointments unit central list since 1990.

Mr. Waldegrave: Since January 1990, 1,578 new names have been added to the central list and 2,513 names have been deleted. The total number of names on the list is currently 5,015.

Charterline

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the cost of uniforms worn by staff answering telephones at the charterline offices in Havant, Hampshire.

Mr. David Davis: There is no direct cost to the Citizen's Charter Unit for uniforms worn by staff answering Charterline calls. The Charterline pilot is operated under a service contract by IBM's National Call Management Centre at Havant, and uniforms are provided as an integral part of this service.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much money has been spent on publicising the charterline scheme.

Mr. Davis: A total of £542,010 has been spent on publicising the Charterline scheme.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the pilot charterline scheme's first nine months of operation.

Mr. Davis: In background research more than 92 per cent. of people thought that Charterline should be launched; 84 per cent. of those who use Charterline are happy with the service. We will be reviewing the pilot study at the end of March.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his estimate of the cost of extending the charterline scheme to cover the whole of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Davis: It would be possible to extend the Charterline scheme to cover the whole of the United Kingdom at minimal additional cost if the current call rates were repeated across the country. The total cost of running Charterline would depend on operating and advertising costs. The pilot will run until the end of March 1994. At the end of the pilot study we will make decisions about its future, which will include options for extending the service and the costs of doing so.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans there are to extend the charterline scheme to cover the whole of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Davis: Charterline is currently a pilot available to citizens in Derbyshire, Leicestershire and Nottinghamshire. This pilot will run until the end of March 1994. At the end of the pilot study we will make decisions about its future, which will include options for extending the service.

Duchy of Lancaster Benevolent Fund

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what selection criteria are used for appointing persons to serve on the board of the Duchy of Lancaster's benevolent fund.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 31 January at column 469.

"Charter News"

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost of publishing and printing "Charter News" issue No. 2; how many copies are being distributed; and what is the total contract with Forward Publishing Ltd. worth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The cost of publishing and printing "Charter News" issue No. 2 was £35,036. Approximately 110,000 copies are being distributed. Details of the contract with Forward Publishing Ltd. are commercially confidential.

Science Budget

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the distribution of the science budget in 1994-95.

Mr. Waldegrave: The distribution of the science budget for 1994-95 represents the first allocation of funding to the new research council system outlined in the White Paper on Science, Engineering and Technology which I presented to the House on 26 May 1993. On 1 April 1994 three new research councils come into existence, namely the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council and the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council. The activities of the Agricultural and Food Research Council and the Science and Engineering Research Council will transfer to the new and existing research councils on 1 April.

I have discussed the allocations with the Director General of Research Councils and have decided that, subject to parliamentary approval of the Supply Estimates in due course, the science budget of £1,236·5 million should be allocated as follows:

Allocations for 1994-95	£ million
Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council	171·8
Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council	364·0
Economic and Social Research Council	58·9
Medical Research Council	269·2
Natural Environment Research Council	155·4
Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council	184·9
Royal Society	20·1
Royal Academy of Engineering	2·2
OST initiatives/policy studies, CEST subscription	3·6
Other, including payments to pensioners of the Science and Engineering Research Council and industrial quota CASE awards	6·4
TOTAL	1,236·5

These figures include additional funding for activities of high scientific priority and also for the introduction of some new pilot schemes targeted specifically at researchers working alongside industry. Further details are set out in the paper "Allocation of the Science Budget 1994-95" which I have placed in the Library of the House.

Charter Marks

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the total estimated cost of the charter mark regional seminars for 1994 and the additional costs of promoting and publishing charter marks.

Mr. Waldegrave: A decision has yet to be taken on the number of charter mark seminars to be held, and I am not yet able, therefore to give an estimated cost.

In 1993, we spent £105,000 to announce the scheme, and £345,000 to announce the charter mark winners. The figures are likely to be similar this year.

Citizens Conference

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost of the service for the citizen conference held on 7-8 December; who were the organisers; what was the contract worth; and what fees were paid to speakers.

Mr. Waldegrave: The service for the citizen conference held on 7-8 December 1993 was organised by Touchstone Exhibitions and Conferences Ltd.

The organisers bore all the costs of the conference, including payment to speakers.

Duchy Benevolent Fund

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for each of the last five years the organisations in (a) Lancaster and (b) the borough of Pendle that have benefited from grants and donations from the Duchy of Lancaster benevolent fund; and if he will give the amounts in each case.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Duchy of Lancaster benevolent fund has been maintained to provide income to be used for benevolent purposes primarily in the County Palatine. In making donations attempts have been made to distribute them fairly between the counties of Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside; although from time to time one area may appear to have received greater benefit than others. Donations have been made to causes which are known to duchy authorities and also in response to recommendations received.

Several charities who have received money from the fund in turn made donations to organisations and individuals resident in the County Palatine. Therefore an accurate reflection of precise geographical distribution of donations over the last five years would be difficult to obtain and would entail disproportionate cost.

I am, however, arranging for lists of donations made to charitable organisations within the County Palatine for the past five years to be placed in the Library of the House.

The offer I made to the hon. Gentleman in 1992 for a more detailed briefing on duchy matters remains open.

Council Housing Repairs

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the total cost of carrying out necessary repairs to local authority housing; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The priority placed on stock repairs and levels of expenditure are matters for local authorities. However, estimates of the works required, related to different standards of repair and to the characteristics of local authority property, are provided by the quinquennial English house condition survey. A report of the most recent survey was published in August 1993 and copies have been placed in the Library.

Housing Lets

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the numbers of local authority lets and housing association lets in each year since 1979.

Sir George Young: The number of local authority lets and estimates of housing association lets in each year since 1979 are as follows:

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution the THORP at Sellafield makes to his strategy of sustainable development.

Mr. Atkins: Reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel recovers uranium and plutonium, which may then be recycled. Provided that the necessary regulatory requirements are met, the Government believe that it should be a matter of commercial judgment whether spent fuel should be reprocessed or alternative fuel management options pursued.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had from the Irish ambassador to the United Kingdom and the Irish Minister for Energy, Transport and Communications, following his announcement of his decision to give authorisation for THORP to open.

Mr. Atkins: The Secretary of State received a visit from the ambassador in London of the Republic of Ireland on 16 December 1993. The ambassador raised a number of points with regard to THORP on behalf of his Government.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the nuclear waste arising comprised by low-level waste, disposed of at Drigg, originates from foreign spent nuclear fuel reprocessed at Sellafield.

Mr. Atkins: I understand that at the end of March 1993, some 5 per cent. of low-level waste disposed of at Drigg has arisen from reprocessing spent fuel from overseas.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Gummer: Five paintings and one photograph, as well as 14 prints.

Charities

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce measures to ensure that all charities are entitled to bid for Government grants available for environmental work.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's environmental action fund is the main source of grants for environmental work. The fund is available to voluntary organisations and a number of registered charities get grants.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, column 1, what are the particular qualifications, experience or expertise relating to the work of the Department of the Environment of his special adviser Mr. James Gray.

Mr. Gummer: It is not my practice to comment on the qualifications, expertise or experience of my political special advisers.

Climate Change

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which (a) university or (b) independent research departments were consulted in the preparation of the report on the United Kingdom climate change programme published on 25 January.

Mr. Atkins: Nineteen universities and research institutes responded to the discussion document on Britain's carbon dioxide programme that was published in December 1992. In addition, many universities and research institutes were invited to attend workshops in March 1993 and a conference in May 1993, to discuss the options for the completion of Britain's carbon dioxide programme. A list of these respondents and invitees is set out.

Local Roads Spending

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the spending assessment for each local authority for spending on maintainance of local roads in each year since 1989.

Mr. Baldry: The highway maintenance element of the standard spending assessment for each highway authority for the years 1990-91, 1991-92, 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95 are shown. SSAs were introduced in 1990-91. The figures shown for 1989-90 are the sum of the separate elements for normal maintenance, winter maintenance, and street lighting within the system of grant-related expenditure assessments which operated until 1989-90.

Comparisons between years are complicated by the transfer in recent years of funding for the structural maintenance of bridges and principal roads from the revenue to the capital account—and therefore from SSAs to transport supplementary grant and credit approvals. A total of £310 million was transferred between 1991-92 and 1993-94.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress made by Her Majesty's pollution inspectorate in assessing the effects of test firing of depleted uranium ammunition on the environment.

Mr. Atkins: The Ministry of Defence carries out a programme of regular environmental monitoring at its Eskmeals site. The results of this monitoring are made available to HMIP.

Local Government Ombudsman

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sanctions govern the enforcement of rulings arrived at by the local government ombudsman on complaints from the public.

Mr. Baldry: A local authority which declines to comply fully with the remedies imposed by the ombudsman must publish a statement of its reasons for failing to implement the report in local newspapers at its own expense, together with a statement about the matter provided by the ombudsman.

Conservation Areas

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will designate parts of Cardigan bay, the Bristol channel and St. George's channel as special areas of conservation under directive 92/43/EEC.

Mr. Atkins: The list of sites which member states shall designate as special areas of conservation must be agreed with the Commission by 1998 and the site designation process must be completed by 2004.

The Government's scientific advisers are preparing their recommendations for the United Kingdom's proposed special areas of conservation. It is therefore premature to comment on whether and when specific sites might be designated.

Retirement Housing

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) from what groups representing (a) leaseholders and (b) managing agents and landlords he sought advice during the formulation of the code of conduct for retirement housing;

(2) when he expects to be able to publish the code of conduct for retirement housing; and if it will be compulsory.

Sir George Young: Section 87 of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 gives the Secretary of State for the Environment powers to endorse codes of good management practice submitted to him for approval. The Act prevents the Secretary of State from approving any code unless he is satisfied that arrangements have been made to ensure that it has been brought to the notice of those likely to be affected by it.

The Act also provides that any code which is approved will be admissible evidence and where relevant may be taken into account in any court proceedings relating to the management of residential property.

So far, no such codes have been submitted for approval, but I understand that the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors and the Association of Retirement Housing Managers have published draft codes of practice and are consulting on them widely.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 1 February by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, Official Report, column 611.

Housing Association Grant

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria have been agreed by the Housing Corporation for the allocation of housing association grant to developing housing authorities.

Sir George Young: Housing Corporation resources are distributed on the basis of the housing needs index. The allocation of housing association grant to housing associations is made by the Housing Corporation in accordance with the following criteria: to meet the priority housing needs identified by local authorities in the most cost-effective way; to achieve targets set by Ministers for programmes such as low-cost home ownership, rehabilitation and rural housing; and, in choosing between bids to meet a particular objective, to achieve value for money in terms of the volume of housing to be delivered from a given HAG input subject to the performance of an association, its ability to deliver a good management service once the development is completed and any local authority views about the proposed development.

Council House Sales

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each London borough the total discounted value of houses and flats sold by them for each year since 1980.

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 26 January 1994, Official Report, columns 242-244, to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle).

Council Tax

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals have been lodged since the 1992 valuations of homes for the purpose of assessing council tax; and how many of these cases have now received a final adjudication.

Mr. Baldry: During the eight-month period allowed for appeal, expiring on 30 November 1993, the Valuation Office agency received 860,305 proposals to alter the council tax bands of dwellings in England. Of these, 175,206 had been settled by 31 December 1993.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department expects all the currently outstanding appeals against house valuations for the purposes of assessing council tax to have received a final adjudication.

Mr. Baldry: The Valuation Office agency has six months from the date of its receipt to consider proposals to alter the council tax banding of dwellings. If not resolved at the end of this period, cases are referred as formal appeals to a valuation tribunal.

The Valuation Office agency and the valuation tribunals are expected to have dealt with nearly 700,000 or 80 per cent. of cases in England by the end of 1994. This would be almost within a year of the end of the appeal period. Any remaining appeals will be settled as quickly as possible in 1995.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether local authorities will be expected to repay with interest any overpayments received in council tax arising from wrong valuations of properties subsequently revised under the appeals system.

Mr. Baldry: There is no provision in the regulations on council tax appeals for the payment of interest when an appeal has been determined in the taxpayer's favour. The sums at stake in such appeals are generally modest and the cost of administering an interest payment scheme would be disproportionate.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are employed within his Department investigating possible improvements to the standard spending assessment system.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. member to the reply my right hon Friend gave to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 28 January, Official Report, columns 433-34.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the representations made by Westminster city council to his Department prior to the current year's standard spending assessment allocation.

Mr. Baldry: Since March 1993 we have received a number of letters from Westminster dealing with a number of issues concerning the review of standard spending assessments and the proposals for 1994-95.

In addition, my right hon. Friend met the leader of Westminster city council on 13 October 1993 to discuss the review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the representations made by Wandsworth borough council to his Department prior to the current year's standard spending assessment allocation.

Mr. Baldry: Since March 1993 we have received two written representations from the London borough of Wandsworth on the calculation of standard spending assessments for 1994-95.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the authorities that have made representations to his Department, supporting the use of day visitors as a method of measuring grant need.

Mr. Baldry: The following local authorities made representations in support of the use of data on day visitors in the calculation of standard spending assessments, during the review of standard spending assessments or during consultation on the provisional revenue support grant settlement for 1994-95:

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions since 1982 in England a potentially damaging operation to a site of special scientific interest has been carried out following the failure to reach a management agreement as set out in section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I assume the hon. Member requests details of damage occurring to sites of special scientific interest —including those sites subject to a nature conservation order—after notice of a potentially damaging operation has been given by owners and occupiers. I regret that such information is not available in this form, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on damage to SSSIs and proposed SSSIs generally is contained in the annual reports of English Nature and of the former Nature Conservancy Council, copies of which are in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 871-72, if he will publish a breakdown of the totals spent from usable capital receipts into areas of local authority spending

Mr. Curry: This information is not available. Local authorities' capital financing decisions are, in general, taken on a corporate basis covering the whole of their capital programme. Information on the financing of capital expenditure for individual services is not therefore collected by the Department.

Energy Efficiency Targets

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has had to his call in November for organisations to publish energy efficiency targets.

Mr. Gummer: I have called for a partnership between Government, business and the voluntary sector to help the United Kingdom meet its CO_2 emission reduction targets. As part of that, I have urged all organisations to set up proper environmental and energy management systems, including the setting of clear targets and systems to monitor performance and report against those targets.

Much remains to be done both by business and the public sector in this area, but I welcome the lead given by the organisations listed which, as signatories of the marking a corporate commitment campaign, have published energy efficiency targets and are working to secure the commercial and environmental benefits that result from good energy management. I hope others will follow this lead.

The public sector is also playing its part. Central Government and health authorities and trusts are working to meet a 15 per cent. cut in energy consumption in the five years 1991-96; while the local authority associations are promoting similar aspirational targets for individual local authorities.

Northumberland Special Protection Area

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to ensure that English Nature extend the period of consultation of the proposed special protection area for the coast of Northumberland.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The consultation period has already been extended to 10 weeks, two and a half times the period normally given for such consultations. I see no reason for a further extension.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The Secretary of State for the Environment has asked his advisers on nature conservation, English Nature, to give implementation of the habitats directive the highest priority for resources. Grants in aid to English nature for the financial year 1994-95 will be £40·405 million, an increase of 6·56 per cent. over the current year.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud;

(2) how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Disciplinary action is always taken, with dismissal as the ultimate sanction when the evidence justifies it.

The table sets out the number of employees disciplined for fraud and the number ultimately dismissed in the years from April 1989—Property Services Agency in brackets.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the latest expenditure forecast for the legal aid budget in the financial year 1993-94.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng) on 20 January at columns 719-20. Based on the latest information available it seems likely that total net expenditure on legal aid in the financial year 1993-94 will be £1,225 million compared with a provision of £1,283·2 million. The actual outturn will depend on the bills presented and paid between now and the end of the financial year.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have no plans to buy or borrow any photographs.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are no paintings and three photographs on the walls of my room.

"Small Personal Injury Claims"

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he received during the consultation over his document "Small Personal Injury Claims"; and when he expects to announce the results of his consultations.

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department has received approximately 150 responses to our recent consultation paper on small personal injury claims. Consultees cover the full spectrum of interests and include solicitors, doctors, insurance companies and consumer groups. Many of their letters deal with the proposals in great detail and provide us with much valuable input and information.

We are currently considering the points made by consultees and will be taking all arguments they put forward into account when finalising the detail of new procedures. The Lord Chancellor expects to issue draft rules of court and draft forms for consultation by the autumn.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electricity Industry

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will strengthen consumer representation covering the electricity industry.

Mr. Eggar: I am satisfied that the electricity consumers' committees represent consumer interest effectively and have no plans to change the structure or the scope of their remit. The Director General of Electricity Supply is responsible for the appointment of the committees' members.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the change in electricity prices since 1989.

Mr. Eggar: The latest figures available show that domestic electricity prices fell by 0·4 per cent. in real terms between the third quarter of 1989 and the third quarter of 1993. Over the same period, average industrial electricity prices fell by about 4 per cent. in real terms.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will commission a report on the impact of electricity price rises on low-income consumers.

Mr. Eggar: I have no plans to commission such a report. Domestic electricity prices have broadly remained stable since privatisation.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has engaged the services of Touche Ross for new contracts on three occasions since 1 July 1993. During the same period two contracts previously issued were extended.

Global Warming

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the basis for the statement at paragraph 19.16 of the report on sustainable development, page 133, that nuclear power provides a source of energy free from the pollutants that contribute towards global warming.

Mr. McLoughlin: An analysis of the effect on global warming of nuclear power as well as other fuels is set out in the report "The Impact of UK Electricity, Gas and Oil Use on Global Warming" by N. J. Eyre and L. A. Michaelis of the energy technology support unit, published in 1991.

This report sets out greenhouse gas emissions for a range of fuel cycles including different forms of electricity generation. The report covers for the electricity fuel cycles the extraction, processing, transport, generation, distribution and utilisation by final user. Even taking into account these aspects of the nuclear fuel cycle, the emissions of greenhouse gases are very low.

I have arranged for copies of this report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what ways he intends to explore within the European Community alternatives to a command and control approach to environmental protection as set out in the letter by the Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Technology to Lord Ezra of 17 June 1993.

Mr. McLoughlin: The United Kingdom national sustainable development strategy, published on 25 January, restates the Government's commitment to using economic instruments, where appropriate, as an alternative to a command and control approach to environmental protection.

The European Commission has also made clear its wish to use such instruments—most recently in its communication to the Council, "Making the most of the Internal Market: Strategic Programme" (COM (93) 632 final). Officials are in touch with the Commission as specific proposals for action are developed.

In addition the Government have invited the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment to advise, from the business perspective, on the circumstances in which economic instruments, regulation or other policy instruments would be the most appropriate means for achieving environmental goals. This work will help to inform our examination of future EC proposals for environmental protection measures.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the aggregate sale of oil from the United Kingdom to all recipient countries in (a) monetary values and (b) tonnage for each month since January 1992.

Car Boot Sales

Mr. Cash: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure compliance with minimum legislative requirements within the framework of his deregulation policy at car boot sales.

Mr. McLoughlin: There is no legislation relating specifically to car boot sales. In so far as car boot sales raise questions of planning law, this is a matter for local authorities and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. In so far as they raise questions of compliance with such legislation as the Trade Descriptions Act or consumer safety regulations, they are a matter for local authority trading standards departments.

Children (Accident)

Mrs. Golding: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many accidents to children were recorded in each year since 1987.

Mr. McLoughlin: Statistics on home and leisure accidents to children are published by the Department in the home accident surveillance system annual reports for the years 1987 to 1991—the latest figures available—copies of which are held in the Library of the House. It should be noted that the national figures are extrapolated from a sample of accident cases treated in hospitals.

Statistics on road traffic and work accidents are a matter for my right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Transport and for Employment.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the recorded numbers of accidents that children had (a) in the home, (b) on the roads, (c) in school and (d) in playgrounds, in each year since 1987.

Mr. McLoughlin: The statistics requested in sections (a), (c) and (d) are published by the Department in the home accident surveillance system annual reports for the years 1987 to 1991—the latest available figures—copies of which are held in the Library of the House. It should be noted that the national figure is extrapolated from a sample of accident cases treated in hospitals.

The answer to section (b) is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Nightwear Safety Regulations

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further representations he has received from business, medical or consumer organisations about deregulation of the nightwear safety regulations.

Mr. McLoughlin: Consultation on the Nightwear Safety Regulations 1985, under the deregulation initiative, was concluded on 29 October 1993. Since then my Department has received a further 22 letters from business, medical and consumer interests which added to the general support for the retention of the regulations.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consideration he has given to the experience of T. S. Industrial Development Ltd. based in the Norwich, North constituency in failing to secure lending under the provisions of the loan guarantee scheme; if he will review the current qualification rules on the level of turnover and the number of employees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: There appears to have been no correspondence with DTI about the loan guarantee scheme and T. S. Industrial Development Ltd. Neither has any application for loan guarantee scheme assistance, from this company, been rejected by DTI. No comment on the individual case can, therefore, be made.

However, all applications for the loan guarantee scheme are reviewed by participating scheme lenders in the first instance and may be rejected by them.

The qualification rules on level of turnover and the number of employees were reviewed in 1993 and regular reviews are undertaken.

Parcelforce

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost to the Post Office of establishing Parcelforce as a separate business (a) in total, (b) for its Milton Keynes headquarters and (c) for new distribution and sorting depots.

Mr. McLoughlin: The establishment of a separate parcels operating unit within the Post Office has been taking place gradually since 1986, to improve efficiency and allow each of the main businesses to focus on its particular market. Details of the costs involved are commercially confidential; however, all Parcelforce investment projects are required to meet standard public sector investment criteria.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes have been agreed to the regulation on opencast mining since the publication of the first report of session 1992-93 from the Trade and Industry Committee on British energy policy and the market for coal.

Mr. Eggar: The Government have published their proposals for amendments to the Opencast Coal Act 1958 in the Coal Industry Bill published on 2 December.

Regional Assistance

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) of 3 December 1993, Official Report, column 765, what was the total amount spent on (a) regional enterprise grants, (b) enterprise initiative schemes, (c) regional development grants and (d) regional selective assistance in 1992-93 in (i) the United Kingdom as a whole and (ii) each of the regions.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 25 January 1994]: Expenditure in 1992-93 on regional enterprise grants—REG; enterprise initiative schemes—EI; regional development grants—RDG; regional selective assistance—RSA is as follows.

£ million

	REG	[1]EI	RDG	RSA

Fireworks

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has had from the British Standards Institute on the abolition of import licences for fireworks.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 1 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has had no representations from the British Standards Institution relating to abolition of import licences for fireworks.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what further representations he has had from the British Pyrotechnists Association on his proposals to abolish import licences for fireworks with particular reference to category 4;

(2) if he will make it his policy to amend the Consumer Protection Act 1987 to exclude category 4 fireworks from retail sales.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 1 February 1994]: On 27 January the British Pyrotechnists Association met my noble Friend Lord Strathclyde, the Minister for Consumer Affairs and Small Firms, to discuss the position of category 4 fireworks under the Consumer Protection Act 1987 following the recent changes by the Health and Safety Executive to the legislation relating to the import of fireworks.

The powers available in sections 10 and 13 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 are adequate to deal with the sale of category devices to the general public. The association has, however, promised to put forward suggestions for reinforcing the present arrangements for limiting the availability of category 4 fireworks to members of the general public and these will be considered.

Patent Office

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what will be the cost to the Exchequer of the review of the Patent Office being carried out by consultants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The fees paid to the consultants carrying out the review of the Patent Office are confidential for commercial reasons.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to raise (a) the environmental implications of the new GATT and (b) the economic implications of the international trade in nuclear materials between Europe and other economic areas at the forthcoming world economic summit in Davos.

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor attended an informal gathering of world economic leaders in Davos on 28-30 January as part of the World Economic Forum's annual meeting. This meeting was not an intergovernmental summit to discuss specific issues; it was an opportunity for international economic policy makers to discuss longer-term trends in the world economy on an informal basis.

Petrol Stations

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates have been made of the cost of implementation of the draft county councils directive 8348/92, stage 1, to petrol stations in rural and urban areas.

Mr. Atkins: I have been asked to reply.

There is currently under negotiation a proposed European Community directive which will introduce a system of petrol vapour recovery during the distribution of petrol. Following consultation with industry and a report from independent consultants, the Government have concluded that typical costs for service stations in the United Kingdom are likely to be in the range of £2,000 to £3,000. There will be variations in individual cases, dependent for example on existing equipment layout.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Goosanders

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will reconsider her decision to allow goosanders to be shot on the River Wharfe; and if she will ensure that this decision will not be used as a precedent for the destruction of goosanders and similar species as a matter of routine.

Mr. Soames: The Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 provides for the issue of licences to kill or take protected wild bird species for the purpose of preventing serious damage to fisheries. The Agriculture Departments—in England, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food —are responsible for the issue of these licences and they must not be unreasonably withheld.

Applications for licences are judged on a case by case basis and the issue of any one licence does not set a precedent. Licences to allow shooting, as an aid to scaring, will not be issued unless the applicant has provided sufficient evidence of serious damage to the fishery and where other methods of scaring are shown to be ineffective or impractical and not just difficult to implement. Each applicant is visited by Agricultural Development Advisory Service, the Ministry's wildlife advisers, before a decision is taken on whether or not to issue a licence. All licences issued are to shoot only a restricted number of birds, over a specific site, during the time of year when the serious damage is occurring.

The licence to shoot goosanders on the River Wharfe was issued only after sufficient evidence of serious damage to the fishery was presented to the Ministry.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what considerations led her to license the Bolton Abbey Estate to kill 14 goosanders on the River Wharfe and on the estate fish farm; what representations and advice she received from English Nature; if she will make it her policy that all species listed under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 will be guaranteed protection in future; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 provides for the issue of licences to kill or take protected wild bird species for the purpose of preventing serious damage to fisheries. The Agriculture Departments—in England, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food —are responsible for the issue of these licences and they must not be unreasonably withheld.

Applications for licences are judged on a case-by-case basis. Licences to allow shooting, as an aid to scaring, will not be issued unless the applicant has provided sufficient evidence of serious damage to the fishery and where other methods of scaring are shown to be ineffective or impractical and not just difficult to implement.

The Agricultural Development Advisory Service, the Ministry's wildlife advisers, visit each applicant to assess the case before reporting back to the Ministry. English Nature is consulted locally and its representations are taken into account in making the licensing decision. Nevertheless, the responsibility for the issue of such licences must remain with the Ministry. All licences issued are to shoot only a restricted number of birds, over a specific site, during the time of year when the serious damage is occurring.

The licences to shoot goosanders on the River Wharfe and on the estate fish farm were issued only after sufficient evidence of serious damage was presented to the Ministry.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current policy of her Department on the use of bovine somatotropin to increase the milk yield of cows.

Mr. Soames: It remains our view that any final Community decision on the marketing and use of bovine somatotropin—BST—should be based firmly on the scientific principles of safety, quality and efficacy, but should take into account the need to avoid international trading problems, to encourage Community-based research industries, and to maintain the competitiveness of the Community's agriculture and food industries.

BST has been cleared by all advisory bodies, and the European Commission itself has accepted that milk produced from BST-treated cattle is safe. In those circumstances it should be for the market place to determine whether BST has a role to play, and it is inappropriate to introduce fresh criteria. Nevertheless, the Community should benefit from the experience of other countries where BST is available, in particular the United States of America, where approval was recently given and took effect from the beginning of February 1994.

On that basis, therefore, my right hon. Friend the Minister accepted at the December meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers that it was sensible to extend the current moratorium for not more than one year, until December 1994, so that the Council could consider these new developments and experience overseas.

National Poisons Unit

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what resources have been made available to the national poisons unit for the assessment of (a) pesticides and (b) dietary supplements in 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Soames: The Ministry has a specific research contract with the national poisons unit—NPU—to investigate possible cases of poisoning due to dietary supplements and traditional remedies. Payments to the NPU under this contract in the financial years 1992-93 and 1993-94 were £109,000 and £117,000 respectively. MAFF is not funding any work on pesticides at the NPU.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she plans to set up a panel to evaluate research into reports of long-term health effects arising from exposure to organophosphorus sheep dips; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: Dr. D. N. Bateman BSc, MB BS, MRCS, MD, FRCP, consultant physician of Freeman hospital, Newcastle upon Tyne; reader in therapeutics; and medical director of the northern region drug and therapeutics centre, has agreed to chair a panel to look into reports of long-term health effects claimed to arise from organophosphorus—OP—sheep dip exposure. In its recent advice, the Veterinary Products Committee pointed to a lack of firm scientific evidence to support any such link, but nevertheless considered that knowledge of potential toxicity should be enhanced. The committee went on to recommend the setting up of a panel of independent medical and scientific experts to address this question, and the Government accepted the recommendation.

The terms of reference of the panel, which will act as a sub-committee to the Veterinary Products Committee, will be:

to evaluate research currently available, and in progress, on OP sheep dip products in relation to possible human exposure:

to advise on any additional work that may be needed to elucidate the potential long term effects on humans of OP sheep dips;

to advise on the suitability of any projects submitted for research; and to report findings to the Veterinary Products Committee, as its sub-committee.

Prospective members of the panel are now being approached and invited to serve. A further announcement will be made once the panel's composition has been finalised.

The Government treat with the utmost seriousness any suggestion of potential harm to human health. I am sure that the panel's work will make a valuable contribution in adding to our state of knowledge in this field.

Fishing Vessels (Decommissioning)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the moneys allocated to decommissioning fishing vessels in the current financial year has been taken up; how many tenders accepted by her Department have not been taken up; how much is left; and what she proposes to do with the remaining moneys.

Mr. Jack: As explained in my reply to the hon. Member for Cornwall, South-East (Mr. Hicks) on 14 December, fishermen whose bids have been accepted will receive their grants provided they comply with the rules. Some vessel owners who were successful in the tender have since decided not to go ahead with decommissioning and there may be others who in the event do not submit valid claims. The final position will not be clear until the 1 March closing date for the submission of claims. Any shortfall in the extent of decommissioning flowing from this round will have to be taken into account in future decisions about how the United Kingdom is to meet the targets laid down in its multi-annual guidance programme, which provides that 55 per cent. of the total reduction has to be met by cuts in fishing capacity.

Currently a shortfall of about £¾ million is expected. In the context of the overall management of the Department's budgets I would expect that expenditure on any subsequent decommissioning schemes could be correspondingly adjusted. A total of £25 million remains available for expenditure on decommissioning in the present and future financial years.

Coppicing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new proposals she has to extend coppicing.

Mr. Jack: In 1993 we secured agreement in the EC Council of Ministers that short rotation coppice could be grown on non-rotational set-aside land. On land outside the Arable area payments scheme, short rotation coppice is eligible for grants under the woodland grant scheme. Also electricity generated using coppice as a fuel may benefit from the provisions of the President of the Board of Trade's third Renewables Order imposing a non-fossil fuel obligation on public electricity supply licensees. We are considering whether any further measures to encourage coppice might be necessary, against the background of the common agricultural policy and our own forestry review.

Organic Farming

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new proposals she has to increase organic farming production.

Mr. Jack: The Government's efforts to encourage British farmers to respond to demand for organic food include a substantial research and development programme and on 10 August 1993 my hon. Friend the Minister announced a proposed organic aid scheme, designed to increase the area under organic production in England threefold.

My right hon. Friend also met representatives of the organic farming movement recently. It was agreed that there should be further discussions with officials, and another ministerial meeting in the spring concentrating on the role of organic farming in relation to reform of the Community's common agricultural policy.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Inflation

13. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of inflation rates in 1994.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I expect underlying inflation in 1994 to remain safely within its 1 to 4 per cent. target range.

28. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the target rate of inflation.

Mr. Nelson: The Government announced in October 1992 that they would aim to keep underlying inflation—as measured by the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments—in the range 1 to 4 per cent. and to bring it down to the lower half of this range by the end of the present Parliament. This objective was confirmed in the March and November 1993 Budgets. Underlying inflation has been within the target range in each month since October 1992. The most recent figure, for December 1993, showed underlying inflation of 2·7 per cent.

Public Spending

14. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a further statement about public spending levels.

Mr. Portillo: The Government are committed to firm control of public spending to ensure that spending falls as a proportion of national income while value for money is constantly improved.

Family Tax Burden

15. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much he estimates the cumulative tax increases since March 1993 will cost the average family from (a) April 1994 and (b) April 1995.

Mr. Dorrell: On average, the main tax-related changes will cost households around £5·30 a week from April 1994, and an additional £3·30 a week from April 1995.

24. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of gross earnings value added tax took up for a one-earner family on average male earnings with two children in 1978-79; and what is the latest estimate.

Sir John Cope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 19 January 1994 at columns 635-42.

Tax Evasion and Avoidance

12. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he plans to reduce tax evasion and avoidance.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government are determined to do all they can to curb both tax evasion and avoidance. In line with every budget over the last 14 years, the current Finance Bill includes a substantial package of measures to tackle avoidance. And both the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise will continue under their existing powers to combat tax evasion.

Demand Level

17. Sir David Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the level of total demand in the economy.

Mr. Portillo: For domestic demand, the most recent figures available are for the third quarter of 1993. By then, it had risen for six successive quarters, to a level over 2¼ per cent. above its trough in the first quarter of 1992. Its growth is forecast to strengthen in 1994.

Income Tax

18. Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the total income tax take (a) is currently being contributed by top rate tax payers and (b) was contributed in 1979.

Mr. Dorrell: Higher rate taxpayers currently pay 40 per cent. of total income tax compared with 20 per cent. in 1978-79.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will set out for each year between 1979-80 and 1988-89 (a) the total income, both earned and unearned, (b) the total national insurance contributions and (c) the total income tax paid by (i) the top 1 per cent., (ii) the top 5 per cent., (iii) the top 10 per cent., (iv) the bottom 50 per cent. and (v) all taxpayers;

(2) if he will publish tables showing the change in income tax in each year between 1979-80 and 1988-89 as against the 1978-79 indexed regime, broken down into the top one per cent., five per cent., 10 per cent. and bottom 70 per cent. 50 per cent. and 30 per cent., and all taxpayers, giving the number of taxpayers in each category.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1994]: This information cannot be provided since the relevant surveys of personal incomes do not include the necessary data on national insurance contributions and these analyses of income tax could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many additional income tax payers there will be in 194-95 as a result of his proposal to freeze the value of personal allowances.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1994]: About 180,000 more people will pay tax in 1994-95 under the Budget proposals than if income tax allowances had been increased in line with statutory indexation. About 1·2 million more people would pay income tax in 1994-95 if all tax allowances had been increased in line with statutory indexation since 1978-79.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many more income tax payers will be paying tax at the margin of the higher rather than the basic rate in 1994-95 (a) as a result of his proposal to freeze the pesonal allowance and (b) in addition to those under (a), as a result of his proposal to freeze the higher rate threshold.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1994]: Compared with statutory indexation of the personal allowance, about 20,000 more people will pay some tax at the higher rate in 1994-95. A further 100,000 more people will pay higher rate tax compared with statutory indexation of the basic rate limit.

Taxation

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the change in taxation per individual arising from each relevant component of the 1994 Budget, both at current prices and net of indexation, for those at one half and three quarters of average earnings, average earnings, and one and a half, two, five and 10 times average earnings; and if he will provide comparable figures for last year.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Figures for the effects of income tax and national insurance contributions changes taking effect in 1994-95 and similar figures for 1993-94 are given in the table. The effects of indirect tax changes will vary with the spending pattern of the individual.

Note:

1. Average earnings are assumed to be £359·90 per week in 1993-94 and £374·30 per week in 1994-95. Taxpayers are assumed to have no reliefs other than the standard tax allowances, to have no sources of income other than earnings and to pay national insurance contributions at the contracted-in rate.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden of 3 November, Official Report, column 257, how many of the estimated 1·9 million families with children below the income tax threshold in 1993-94 are in paid work.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Approximately 0·7 million families with children below the income tax threshold in 1993-94 had some earnings from employment or self-employment.

Taxation (Proportion of GDP)

19. Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the percentage of gross national product taken in all forms of taxation; and what were comparable figures for 1979, 1974, 1970 and 1966.

Mr. Dorrell: Taxes and social security contributions are forecast to be equivalent to 34 per cent. of GDP in 1993-94. The comparable figure in 1978-79 was 34¼ per cent.; in 1973-74, 33¾ per cent.; in 1969-70, 37½ per cent.; and in 1965-66, 31¾ per cent.

26. Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate what the nation's tax burden as a percentage of GDP will be in 1998-99; and what this figure was in 1978-79.

Mr. Dorrell: On the basis of the medium term fiscal projections shown in the latest "Financial Statement and Budget Report", non-North sea taxes and social security contributions would be 38½ per cent. of non-oil GDP in 1998-99, when the PSBR is projected to represent a ¼ per cent. of GDP. The comparable figure for 1978-79, when the PSBR represented 5½ per cent. of GDP, was 34¾ per cent.

Budget Representations

20. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the most recent representations he has received over the effect of the Budget on families.

Sir John Cope: A number of letters have been received about the impact of the Budget on family finances.

VAT (Fuel)

21. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has now received about his proposals to impose value added tax on domestic fuel and power.

Sir John Cope: I have received a large number of representations.

Illegal Drugs

22. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review his Department's relationship with police authorities in the combating of illegal drug importation.

Sir John Cope: Customs and the police co-operate closely and successfully through frequent joint operations and their joint staffing of the National Criminal Intelligence Service. The distinct responsibilities of Customs and police, and the arrangements for co-operation, are kept under regular review.

Insurance Tax

23. Mr. Dowd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had concerning his plans to impose taxation on all domestic insurance premiums.

Sir John Cope: Treasury Ministers have received a number of representations about the introduction of insurance premium tax. These have been primarily from the insurance industry about the practical implementation of the tax. There have also been some more general representations concerning the scope of the tax.

Tax Levels

25. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of income for those on average wages was taken in taxation in (a) 1979 and (b) 1993.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Barrow in Furness (Mr. Hutton).

Manufacturing Output

27. Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest manufacturing output figures.

Mr. Portillo: Manufacturing output in the three months to November was up 0·8 per cent. on the previous three months and up 1·8 per cent. on a year earlier. Business surveys point to further increases in the months ahead.

Car Industry

29. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what economic factors he attributes the performance of the British car manufacturing industry; and what comparison he has made with the performance of similar manufacturers elsewhere in Europe.

Mr. Portillo: Car production in the United Kingdom rose by 6½ per cent. in 1993 despite depressed car markets in continental Europe, the fastest growth in any calendar year since 1988. By contrast car production has fallen very sharply in France, Germany and Italy. The United Kingdom car industry's performance has benefited from the Government's policies of low inflation and sound public finances, and by its own efforts to control costs.

Government Debt

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what growth in the budget deficit would occur if growth in gross domestic product was only 2 per cent. per annum after 1994; what would be the total level of Government debt as a proportion of gross domestic product in each of the next five years on that assumption; and what proportion of the budget deficit in each of the next five years will be incurred by revenue spending at current prices;

(2) what changes there would be in the budget deficit at a rate of growth in gross domestic product after 1994 of (a) zero per cent., (b) 1 per cent., (c) 2 per cent., (d) 3 per cent. and (e) 4 per cent.; what would be the total level of Government debt as a proportion of gross domestic product in each of the next five years on these assumptions; and what proportion of the budget deficit in each of the next five years would be incurred by revenue spending at current prices.

Mr. Portillo: Table 2.5 of the 1994-95 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" shows projections to illustrate the effects on the public sector borrowing requirement of higher or lower growth than the main growth projection in the medium term financial strategy, assuming unchanged policies. On those assumptions public sector net debt would fall to around 36½ per cent. of GDP by 1998-99 in the higher growth case illustrated in the FSBR, and it would rise to around 47¼ per cent. of GDP in the lower growth case. Tables 2.2 and 2.3 of the FSBR set out the main projections and show details of Government revenues and spending, and the current balance of the public sector, over the next five years.

Cash Dispensers and Credit Cards

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the protection of the rights of individuals and companies in cases of disputes involving automatic cash dispensers or credit cards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: The Government believe that the code of banking practice and the banking ombudsman scheme provide an adequate framework in which disputes about banking services can be resolved.

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions his Department has had with the joint stock banks over the problems of phantom withdrawals from cash dispensers.

Mr. Nelson: The Treasury has had no recent discussions with the banks on this issue, but officials do keep in regular contact with the Association of Payment Clearing Services who keep them informed about what the banks are doing to improve further the security and reliability of their systems.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Sir John Cope: Once.

Incomes

Sir David Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentages of earnings, plus child benefit where appropriate, were taken in income tax and national insurance contributions from each of (a) a single person, (b) a single wage married couple with two children and (c) a single wage married couple with four children at (i) half average male manual earnings, (ii) three quarters male manual earnings, (iii) average male manual earnings and (iv) twice male manual earnings, in the tax years 1990-91 and 1992-93; and what the comparable figures are expected to be for 1993-94.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is in the tables:

Income tax and national insurance contributions[1] as a percentage of gross earnings plus child benefit

[2]Multiple of average earnings	Single	Married, one earner, with two children	Married, one earner, with four children
1990-91

[1] National Insurance contributions are at the standard class 1 rate for employees not contracted-out of the state additional (earnings related) pension scheme. Tax is calculated assuming no allowances or reliefs are available other than the standard allowance.

[2] Average earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly manual earnings of full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. These are £244·50 and £272·00 in 1990-91 and 1992-93 respectively. In 1993-94 these are estimated to be £281·50 using an illustrative growth rate of 3·5 per cent.

Sir David Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing tax-free incomes, defined as income tax thresholds plus child benefits, as percentages of average male manual earnings for single wage families with one, two, three and four children in each year since 1979-80.

Mr. Dorrell: The figures in the table give the levels of income at which there is no net deduction from income, after allowing for the effect of tax allowances, tax rates and child benefit.

[1] The level of earnings at which income tax paid is equal to the money received through child benefit.

[2] Full-time males paid at adult rates working a full week.

[3] First two children aged under 11 ; third aged between 11 and 15 and fourth aged 16 or over.

Africa (Structural Adjustment Programmes)

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those African countries currently participating in International Monetary Fund and/or World bank structural adjustment programmes.

Mr. Nelson: Twenty-five African countries currently have IMF and/or World bank structural adjustment programmes. Sixteen have IMF programmes: Benin, Burkina Faso, Burundi, The Comoros, Equatorial Guinea, Ethopia, Guinea, Kenya, Lesotho, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Rwanda, Tanzania, Uganda and Zimbabwe. In addition, Sierra Leone and Zambia have rights accumulation programmes of structural adjustment which earn rights towards IMF resources. Twenty have World bank programmes: Algeria, Benin, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Egypt, Ethopia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Malawi, Morocco, Mozambique, Sao Tome and Principe, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, Togo, Tunisia, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Nelson: That amount reimbursed by the Department of Social Security to the Treasury in respect of statutory sick pay is £39,335·25 in 1993-94 to date, and £53,964·41 in 1992-93. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Darling), of 26 November 1992, Official Report, column 750; what further inquiry he has made into the BCCI accounts to ascertain whether they facilitated arms deals with Iraq.

Mr. Nelson: None. The examination of the facts relating to the export to Iraq of defence equipment and dual use goods is a matter for Lord Justice Scott's inquiry.

Cheque Clearing

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to investigate the cheque-clearing practices of high street banks.

Mr. Nelson: None. The cheque-clearing practices of the high street banks are a matter of contract between banks and their customers.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total number of recipients of mortgage interest tax relief is expected to be in 1993-94, 1994-95 and 1995-96; and if he will make a statement of the effects on them of the reductions in the rate of relief announced in the March and November 1993 Budgets.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: Working assumptions based on recent trends are shown in the table. Also shown as the average reduction in the relief as well as the saving on an average mortgage as a result of interest rate reductions since October 1990.

	1993-94	1994-95	1995-96
Numbers of single people and married couples with mortgages (millions)	9·9	10·0	10·1
Average reduction in mortgage interest relief (£ per month)	—	7·16	14·89

Personal Allowance

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of the personal allowance against income tax in 1978-79 prices in 1978-79, 1984-85 and 1988-89; and what are his estimates for 1993-94 and under his Budget proposal for 1994-95.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The information is as follows:

	Personal allowance for a single person at 1978-79 prices (£)
1978-79	985
1984-85	1,135
1988-89	1,225
1993-94[1]	1,245
1994-95[1]	1,205

[1] Assuming that prices increase by 2 per cent. in 1993-94 and 3·25 per cent. in 1994-95 in line with the illustrative assumptions in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95.

Inland Revenue Statistics

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update table 2.4 of Inland Revenue Statistics 1993 with data for 1994-95 on the basis of his budget proposals for income tax.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The information is given in the table. Estimates for 1992-93 onwards are based on a projection of the 1991-92 survey of personal incomes.

Tax Changes

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update, to take account of the 1994 Budget, the information on tax changes contained in his answer to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) of 21 October 1986, Official Report, columns 812-14.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Readily available information on the annual reduction in income tax liability, compared with the 1978-79 indexed regime is given in the tables. The 1978-79 regime has been indexed by reference to the statutory formula and allowing for independent taxation. For the purpose of these calculations the indexed regime of 1978-79 is applied directly to the later income base. In practice, retention of the regime, indexed as appropriate, for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update to 1994-95 the information on real net earnings provided in his answer to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) of 10 April 1986, Official Report, columns 193-94.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Estimates for 1994-95 are as follows:

Payroll Giving

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees have registered with the Inland Revenue payroll giving schemes run by employers, pursuant to section 202 of the Taxes act 1988; how many employees contributed to charities via a payroll giving scheme; and what was the total amount contributed in the tax year 1992-93.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is as follows:

	1992-93
Schemes in force at end of period	6,638
Donors (thousands)	[1]280
Gross amounts donated (£ million)	13

[1] The figure includes only the number of donors at the end of the period.

Council Tax

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many appeals against council tax valuations in each London borough have been (a) received and (b) settled; and how many of those settled resulted in a reduced council tax valuation;

(2) how many appeals against council tax valuations in each London borough have been settled in the last six months; and what was the average cost of settling each appeal.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The number of appeals received in each of the London boroughs during the initial appeal period up to 30 November 1993 and the numbers settled in the six month period to 31 December 1993 are as shown.

The estimated average cost of processing a council tax appeal in the current financial year in England is £115. This estimate includes Valuation Office Agency and valuation tribunal costs.

Statistics relating to settlements which have resulted in a lower council tax band are not available centrally.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service is obtaining copies of photographs of three former Directors of Public Prosecutions to complete a set of former directors in their headquarters office.

Public Interest Immunity Certificate

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 640, if he will list the leading authorities concerning the duty of a Minister to sign a public interest immunity certificate.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the following publications for a consideration of the leading authorities: The "Supreme Court Practice 1993" vol. 1. paragraph 24/5/15 at pages 451-453, and "Archbold Criminal Pleading Evidence and Practice 1993" vol. 1 chapter 12 paragraphs 12-22 to 12-33 at pages 1/1579 to 1/1587. Copies of these extracts have been placed in the Library.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Attorney-General how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

The Attorney-General: There are eight paintings, and 156 photographs mainly of former Law Officers, on the walls of the Attorney-General's chambers.

West Midlands Serious Crime Squad

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list (a) the cases in which charges have been dropped and (b) the convictions quashed since the decision by the chief constable of the West Midlands to disband the West Midlands serious crime squad.

The Attorney-General: There is no central record of cases involving officers of the West Midlands serious crime squad. Inquiries amongst relevant CPS staff have identified no such cases which have been dropped by the prosecution, but have identified 23 appellants whose appeals have been allowed by the Court of Appeal. The inquiries covered the period from 15 August 1989.

Police Officers (Criminal Conduct)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases involving allegations of criminal misconduct against police officers were considered by the Attorney-General; and how many of these resulted in prosecutions being brought, in the last three years.

The Attorney-General: Allegations that police officers have committed criminal offences are ordinarily reported to the Director of Public Prosecutions in accordance with section 90 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and not to myself. The DPP consults me where she considers it appropriate to do so having regard to the difficulty or importance of the particular case. In addition, the DPP submits papers in any case where proceedings are considered appropriate for an offence subject to a statutory requirement that my consent be obtained.

Statistics are not maintained either in the Crown Prosecution Service or my Department as to the number of cases referred to me which relate to police officers. The number is very small but precise information could be obtained only by a trawl of all departmental files involving disproportionate expense.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will hold a public inquiry into the activities and performance of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the Child Support Agency collection enforcement manual.

Mr. Burt: There are no plans to do so.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library the departmental guidelines issued to the Child Support Agency specialist tracing section.

Mr. Burt: The guidance on specialist tracing is contained within the "Child Support Manual", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) in how many cases in the latest period for which figures are available there has been a refusal by the parent with care to supply information about the absent parent; and in how many of these cases the Child Support Agency accepted that co-operation had been refused with good cause;

(2) what is his estimate of the arrears outstanding on maintenance payments set by the Child Support Agency both in total and as a percentage of the total amount to be paid;

(3) in how many cases in the latest period for which figures are available the Child Support Agency has adjusted a maintenance assessment to allow for the recovery of arrears under paragraph 10 of the arrears regulations;

(4) what estimate he has made of the average weekly maintenance assessment set by the Child Support Agency at the latest date for which figures are available;

(5) what is the average time between the issue of the inquiry form, and the maintenance assessment, at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 2 February 1994.

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security, asking various questions about the Child Support Agency's operations.

At 31 December 1993, 35,600 cases had been received where the requirement to co-operate with the Agency was an issue. In 20,500 of these the Agency accepted that the parent with care had good cause not to co-operate in pursuing a maintenance application.

Initial estimates were that average weekly maimtenance assessments would be approximately £45–50. Information gathered on assessments completed to date is consistent with these estimates.

The Agency is not yet in a position to estimate the arrears outstanding on maintenance payments. I regret, also, that information on cases in which Regulation 10 of the Arrears Regulations has been applied is not collected.

Information on the length of time betweeen the return of the maintenance enquiry form and the completion of the maintenance assessment is not regularly collected in the form requested. From a small sample of cases it is estimated that the average time between the issue of the maintenance enquiry form and the maintenance assessment is approximately 7 weeks.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what savings the Child Support Agency has made to date.

Mr. Burt [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 2 February 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how much of the Child Support Agency's target has been collected to date.

For the period from April 1993 to December 1993, benefit savings of £214·5 million have so far been reported. This figure does not represent the total amount of savings achieved because some will be scored retrospectively.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of (a) income support or (b) other benefits have been informed by Benefits Agency staff that they would lose their entitlement to benefit if they pursued an educational course; and how many have lost benefit following a decision to study.

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the total number of tenants who received housing benefit in (a) local authority housing, (b) housing association housing and (c) the private rented sector in (i) London and (ii) Great Britain at the latest available date;

(2) what was the average level of housing benefit paid to tenants in (a) local authority housing (b) housing association housing and (c) the private rented sector in (i) London and (ii) Great Britain at the latest available date.

Mr. Burt: Details for May 1992, the latest date for which information is available, are in the table.

1. The figures are in benefit units and are rounded to the nearest thousand. A benefit unit may be a single person or a couple.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February at column 611.

Child Support Act 1991

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made as to the effects of the Child Support Act 1991 on the number of families entitled to (a) family credit and (b) income support, distinguishing between lone-parent families and the families paying maintenance.

Mr. Burt: In the long run it is estimated that increased payments of child maintenance under the Child Support Act will result in some 60,000 to 80,000 lone parent families no longer needing to rely on income support. It is expected that the majority of these will start work and be entitled to family credit. It is further estimated that around 10,000 lone parents already in receipt of family credit will move off this benefit. These estimates are based on data from the family expenditure survey for 1987, 1988 and 1989.

The Act should not have any significant effect on the number of absent parents entitled to income support or family credit.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the expected saving, in real cash terms, of delaying entitlement to the age allowance component of incapacity benefit by six months.

Mr. Scott: Estimated savings are around £10 million per year.

Note:

Estimates expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, are rounded to nearest £5 million and are net of offsetting changes in income-related benefit expenditure.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to, and consultation with, the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Hague: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Departmental Finance Limits

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes there have been in the cash limits or running cost limits of his Department.

Mr. Scott: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for class XIII vote 4 will be increased by £1,870,000 from £2,558,124,000 to £2,559,994,000. The revision takes account of an increase of £1,806,000—running costs—offset by a corresponding reduction on Department of the Environment: Property Holdings and other services to Government, class VII, vote 6, an increase of £493,000—of which £484,000 is running costs—offset by a corresponding reduction on Department of Health: administration, miscellaneous health services and personal services, England, class XII vote 3, an increase of £6,000—running costs—offset by a corresponding reduction on Cabinet Office: other services, class XIX vote 1, a reduction of £348,000—running costs—offset by a corresponding increase on Department of Health: administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England, class XII vote 3, a reduction of £47,000 offset by a corresponding increase in Foreign and Commonwealth office: overseas representation, class II vote 1, a reduction of £40,000 offset by a corresponding increase on Department of Employment: programmes and central services, class V vote 1.

Further running cost changes arise from a reduction of £99,000 for services provided by Department of Health and Social Services (Northern Ireland) on a repayment basis, an increase of £692,000 in value added tax refunds and a reduction of £6,920,000 as a result of a reallocation to capital expenditure.

As a result of these changes the running cost limit of the Department of Social Security will be reduced by £5,850,000 from £2,921,010,000 to £2,915,160,000.

The additional requirements are offset by reductions elsewhere and will therefore not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Family Credit

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the research by the social policy research unit on the assessment of self-employed earnings in family credit to be published.

Mr. Burt: I have today placed in the Library copies of the report "Measuring Low Incomes: Self-Employment and Family Credit" by the social policy research unit at the University of York.

We welcome this detailed review and plan to introduce a package of measures from April 1994 to improve the family credit service to self-employed families. The fast-track service for people who have recently started work will be extended to self-employed families. Currently the fast track for families of employees clears 95 per cent. of claims received within one week. At the same time the family credit claim pack will enable self-employed people to provide information about their earnings straightaway rather than later. These measures should speed up awards of family credit and make it as simple as possible to get the benefits due to them.

Within the next few weeks the Department will be issuing a consultative document to interested professional associations and bodies representing self-employed customers to seek their opinions on the issues raised by the report.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual cost to the Exchequer of paying unemployment benefit.

Mr. Burt: The cost in 1991-92 was £1,604 million. The estimated out-turn for 1992-93 was £1,838 million and the plans for 1993-94 account for £1,886 million. These figures are recorded in table 1 of the Department's third annual report—Cm 2213—a copy of which is in the Library.

Community Care Grants

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women were given community care grants in respect of the purchase of essential furnishings when they were re-housed from Women's Aid refuges in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland in each of the past three years; what was the average amount paid to such claimants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will set out his reasons for and the intended effect of his proposal to change the war pensions scheme by amending the Service Pensions Order to exclude diseases caused by the use or effects of tobacco, or the consumption of alcohol, from the definition of injury in schedule 4 to the order; what representations his Department has received from the Royal British Legion about the proposal; what reply he has sent; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what responses he has had from members of the central advisory committee on war pensions to his proposal to change the war pensions scheme by amending the Service Pensions Order to exclude diseases caused by the use or effects of tobacco, or the consumption of alcohol, from the definition of injury in schedule 4 to the order.

Mr. Hague: The war pensions scheme provides compensation for disablement or death suffered as a result of service in the Armed Forces. The long-standing policy of successive Governments has been that the decision to smoke or drink is a personal one, and that smoking and the consumption of alcohol should be regarded as attributable to service in the Armed Forces only where a severely disabling mental condition itself attributable to service renders the individual incapable of exercising personal choice.

The proposed amendments follow a recent decision in the High Court and would ensure that the legislation reflects the policy intention.

Nineteen representations from members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions, including three from representatives of the Royal British Legion, have been received.

Careful consideration is being given to all the representations, which have been both for and against the proposed change. Members of the committee will be advised when a decision has been reached.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Hague: The Department of Social Security has engaged the services of Touche Ross on the following occasions since 1 July 1993:

12 July 1993—Extension of contract let on 16 February 1993 to provide consultancy support to the Benefits Agency Accommodation and Office Services market testing projects.

July 1993—Consultancy support to the Contributions Agency's Information Systems Strategy.

August 1993—Quality assurance of the Contributions Agency's management information system.

August 1993—Consultancy support to the Contributions Agency's market test of data entry activity.

6 September 1993—Consultancy support for the development and preparation of an outplacement counselling contingency plan for the Benefits Agency Personnel Directorate.

Pensions

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether married women in receipt of small graduated pensions will be eligible to receive the increase in pension directly attributable to the imposition of VAT on domestic heating fuel.

Mr. Hague: The extra help for VAT on domestic fuel will be paid as an addition to the rate of basic retirement pension or income-related benefit. Married women who receive graduated retirement benefit with either a basic retirement pension or an income-related benefit will receive the extra help. Those receiving graduated retirement benefit only will receive no increase beyond normal price indexation.

EDUCATION

Surplus Places

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has of the number of surplus places that exist in the primary, secondary and special places sectors in Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire and Nottinghamshire; and what percentage this represents of the total number of places in each sector.

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Warwickshire, North (Mr. O'Brien) on 31 January 1994, Official Report, columns 517-21.

LEAs (Spending)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the estimated amount being spent by each shire local education authority on primary education and secondary education in 1993-94 and the likely amounts for 1994-95 if the 1994-95 total is increased or reduced by the proposed standard spending assessment and reduced or increased by any increase or reduction in the numbers entering schools in 1993-94, assuming that such increases or reductions were spread proportionately between the primary and secondary sectors.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information is not available in the form in which it has been requested. I will write to my hon. Friend.

Teacher Numbers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list, for each local education authority, how many full-time equivalent teachers were employed in January 1993.

Mr. Robin Squire: The table shows the full-time equivalent number of teachers employed in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools sector, including self-governing—grant-maintained—schools, in each local education authority in England at January 1993.

Genetic Screening

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what response he has made to the Nuffield report on genetic screening in relation to the aspects which affect his department.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend welcomes the initiatives of the Nuffield Council on Bioethics in producing this report. He regards it as essential that through the combination of science, religious and health education pupils are equipped to tackle the ethical issues which they will encounter at the various stages of their lives, including those resulting from advances in genetic science.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Boswell: The Department has placed one contract with Touche Ross since 1 July 1993, for a financial management and policy review of the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges.

Education Charters

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the companies commissioned by his Department in 1992-93 to carry out polling and market research in the course of preparing (a) the further education charter and (b) the higher education charter; and if he will list the areas of research, the questionnaires used and the groups questioned.

Mr. Boswell: The Department for Education commissioned The British Market Research Bureau—BMRB—and Research Services Limited—RSL—for both the further education charter and the higher education charter. BMRB undertook research among students, parents and the wider community and RSL specifically consulted employers. All areas of research undertaken are reflected in both charters.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Brass Bands

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action he is taking to seek to ensure the continuation of the tradition of civilian brass bands.

Mr. Sproat: I am keen to find ways to encourage and help civilian brass bands to flourish. I regard such bands as an important element in our British cultural traditions.

I have recently received a number of representations about difficulties confronting some of our most prestigious brass bands. I am aware of the wider economic and social factors that might have contributed to specific instances of difficulty; for example, for colliery bands.

I am also keen to see the brass band tradition strengthened in schools. I shall be raising these subjects with other Government Departments. In order to gain a better understanding of the position from an arts funding perspective, and of the current state of the brass band movement, I am consulting the Arts Council and the British Federation of Brass Bands.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will provide figures for the amount his Department or the Office of Arts and Libraries has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Sproat: The amount of statutory sick pay reimbursed by the Department of Social Security to the Department of National Heritage, excluding its executive agencies, the Historic Royal Palaces Agency and the royal parks, from 1 April 1993 to 31 December 1993 was £7,572·73. Reimbursement to the Office of Arts and Libraries in the financial year 1992-93 was £1,393·93. No figures are available for the financial year 1991-92

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible have engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Sproat: My Department has engaged the services of Touche Ross on two occasions since 1 July 1993. Neither of the agencies for which I am responsible has engaged Touche Ross's services during the same period.

Broadcasting Restrictions

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will take account in his review of braodcasting restrictions applying in the United Kingdom of the guidelines, issued on 20 January to Radio Telefis Eireann staff, and now applying to broadcasting in the Irish Republic; when he expects to complete his review of broadcasting restrictions; and if he will list the individuals and organisations which he has invited to submit views to him and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The outcome of the review will be announced very shortly. I do not propose to take special account of guidelines issued by RTE. I have taken account of the views of the broadcasting regulatory authorities in the United Kingdom, of all the main broadcasters themselves, and of those organisations including the NUJ which have directly approached my Department. I have not invited any individuals to submit views.

Tourism

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much central Government money was spent per head of the population on encouraging tourism in Cornwall in each year since 1979.

Mr. Sproat: The information is not available in this form. National and regional programmes funded by the British tourist authority and the English tourist board from grant-in-aid help to support tourism in all areas of the country, but it is not possible to say that a certain proportion of the grant-in-aid is specifically targeted on one particular area. However, the level of English tourist board support for the West Country tourist board, which covers Cornwall, were as follows:

Financial year	Amount in £
1979-80	82,895
1980-81	99,100
1981-82	106,600
1982-83	114,400
1983-84	124,140
1984-85	135,850
1985-86	141,962
1986-87	252,732
1987-88	273,911
1988-89	288,000
1989-90	334,500
1990-91	580,570
1991-92	582,766
1992-93	561,638

In the current financial year, in addition to the general funds allocated by the English tourist board to the West Country tourist board, £400,000 has been allocated to the Cornwall renewal programme.

National Lottery

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish details of all those who have applied to run the national lottery; when he expects to issue a licence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: The names and addresses of those organisations which have publicly announced their intention to apply for the main licence to run the national lottery are set out in my response to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Broadgreen (Mrs. Kennedy) on 31 January, Official Report, columns 516-17). The director general of the national lottery will publish a full list of all those who apply after 14 February, which is the closing date for applications. The timing of the issue of the licence to run the national lottery is a matter for the director general.

Royal Palaces

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the cost of refurbishment of each of the royal apartments in each of the occupied royal palaces in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The total cost of refurbishment of each of the royal apartments in each of the occupied royal palaces in each of the last three years was:

Clarence House, private apartments	2
TOTAL	52

Information on expenditure prior to 1991-92 is not held in the form required.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Where an employee is found guilty of fraud the circumstances of the case would be thoroughly investigated and an appropriate disciplinary penalty, which might include dismissal, would be invoked.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The Department of National Heritage was established in April 1992, since when no employees have been found guilty of fraud.

Department (Set-up Costs)

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what were the total costs, including the acquisition of office premises, of setting up his Department.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The total non-recurrent cost of establishing my Department was £8·2 milion plus value added tax. My Department occupies leased premises on the Government estate under an inter-departmental agreement with DoE/Property Holdings. The terms of the leases are commercial-in-confidence.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 3 February.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 3 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Review Body Reports

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, if he will make a statement on the review body reports.

The Prime Minister: The 1994 reports of the review bodies on the pay of school teachers, senior civil servants, the senior military, the judiciary, the armed forces, doctors and dentists, nursing staff, midwives and health vistors and the professions allied to medicine have now been published. Copies are available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. The Government are grateful to the members of the review bodies for the time and care which they have put into the preparation of the reports.

The Government's policy is that increases in pay must be fully met from existing budgets. Pay increases for public sector staff therefore have to be paid for by greater efficiency, or by savings in the cost of running Government itself. This position was made clear in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's statement on public sector pay on 14 September, and reaffirmed in his Budget statement and in the Government's evidence to the review bodies. It is fundamental to the Government's response to their recommendations.

The review bodies have made the following recommendations:

The School Teachers' Review Body has recommended a 2·9 per cent. increase in teachers' pay.

The Senior Salaries Review Body has recommended:

(i) an increase of 2·75 per cent. in the budget for performance-related pay for civil servants at grades 2 and 3, and a 2·75 per cent. increase in the pay of Permanent Secretaries.

(ii) A 2·75 per cent. increase in the pay of most of the senior armed forces officers in its remit.

(iii) A 2·75 per cent. increase in the pay of the judiciary.

The Armed Forces Pay Review Body has recommended a range of increases between 3·0 and 4·4 per cent. averaging 3·6 per cent. for the various ranks in its remit group.

The Doctors and Dentists Review Body has recommended a 3·0 per cent. increase in salaries, fees and allowances for doctors and dentists and the same increase in intended average net remuneration for general medical practitioners.

The Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine has recommended a 3·0 per cent. increase in national salary rates and a 2·0 per cent. increase in most leads and allowances.

The Government have taken its decisions on these recommendations on the basis of its policy on public sector pay. Except in the case of the armed forces, the Government accept the above increases and propose to implement them from the due date of 1 April. The costs will be met from the public expenditure totals published at Budget time. There will be no new money to finance these pay increases, and for the second year running there will be no call on the reserve.

In the case of the armed forces, the Government believe that the recommendations of the armed forces pay review body are too high to be implemented in full from 1 April. All ranks will receive pay increases of 2·7 per cent. from 1 April 1994, with the blance of the recommended awards paid from 1 January 1995.

The review body for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine commented that, if the trusts had been ready to implement local pay, it would have recommended an increase in national pay rates for its remit groups of only 2 per cent. rather than 3 per cent., with further increases to be determined locally. The doctors and dentists review body similarly expressed support for moves towards local pay determination. The Government welcome and support these comments and intend to ensure that pay arrangements in both trusts and directly managed units in the NHS provide for a significant measure of local pay determination from next year. The necessary details will be discussed with the trusts and with the professions and with the staff sides in the coming months.

The senior salaries review body has restated its 1992 recommendation that possible future problems in maintaining its remit groups, particularly the judiciary, should be avoided by raising their pay levels over time. The review body has now recommended that the Government should seek to implement its 1992 recommendations for the judiciary plus annual uprating by 1 April 1999. The Government have already acknowledged the different position of the judiciary amongst the review body's remit groups and accepts this recommendation. The Government are currently considering a number of issues relating to the management of the senior civil service and the military. In that context it will take a view on the SSRB's recommendations on pay ranges for senior civil servants and the differential between one and two star officers.

The review body reports point the way to making further progress in extending performance-related pay in the public services. The doctors and dentists review body and the review body for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine expressed support for developing performance pay at local level and urged that high priority should be given to establishing suitable arrangements in the coming year. The performance pay arrangements recommended last year by the school teachers review body have now been implemented and the review body intends to return to the issue of relating the pay of teachers still more closely to their performance. The senior salaries review body recommends reform of the performance pay scheme for grades 2 and 3 in the civil service through abolition of a standard pay increase, a larger performance pay budget and an increase in the width of pay ranges. The armed forces pay review body has appointed management consultants to assist it in addressing the issue of performance pay in its future work.

The Government support the review body recommendations on the development of performance-related pay and believe that they represent a valuable and effective contribution to the further development of remuneration in the public services.

HEALTH

General Practitioners

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy that GPs will not charge fees to persons on benefits for evidence in support of claims.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under their terms of service—schedule 2 to the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992,—general practitioners are required to issue a defined list of certificates to their patients free of charge, including those needed to support claims for a number of social security benefits. The list of certificates is kept under review.

Breast Feeding

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the figures for mothers breast feeding for each year from 1983.

(2) what efforts her Department has made to promote breast feeding in the last 10 years.

Mr. Sackville: A survey of infant feeding practices is carried out every five years on behalf of the Department of Health. The results of the latest of these surveys were set out in the report "Infant Feeding 1990", a copy of which is available in the Library. In 1985 the percentage of mothers who breast fed was 65 per cent.; in 1990 it was 64 per cent.

Based on unequivocal medical advice the Government have consistently supported breast feeding as the best means of feeding a baby. Measures have included the implementation of a voluntary code of practice for the marketing of infant formula and the banning of free or subsidised infant formula in national health service hospitals and clinics. The Government have also provided £265,000 in funding for the three voluntary organisations supporting breast feeding and the joint breast feeding initiative—from 1988-1992. In December 1992 it was announced that a national breast feeding working group was to be set up under the "Health of the Nation" initiative to > "co-ordinate the next stages in a programme of action to promote and facilitate breast feeding, building on the work of the joint breast feeding initiative".

Dementia

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that multidisciplinary assessment of people with dementia is available in every district health authority area.

Mr. Bowis: Since 1990 general practitioners have been required to offer an annual health check to patients aged 75 and over, and if evidence of severe cognitive impairment is found the GP will refer to the old age psychiatrist. It is for district health authorities to ensure that multi-disciplinary terms are in place to support the assessment of such patients.

Paediatric and Neo-natal Units

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines apply in relation to minimum nursing and medical staffing levels in paediatric and neo-natal units.

Dr. Mawhinney: The "Welfare of Children and Young People in Hospital", issued by the Department in July 1991 set the objective that a consultant paediatrician and at least two children's trained nurses should be available 24 hours a day to supervise the care of sick children and newborn babies and that provision of additional specially trained medical, midwifery and nursing staff should be commensurate to the degree of dependency of these children. The guide also commended additional guidance available from the English National Board for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting and the British Paediatric Association.

Residential Accommodation

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she will amend existing guidance on charges for residential accommodation to allow spouses without an occupational pension of their own, to retain 50 per cent. of their partner's occupational pensions when he or she enters long-term care in a residential or nursing home;

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure that social services departments increase the personal expenses allowance of people in residential or nursing homes where this is necessary to support their spouse at home;

(3) what provision her Department has made for the continued financial well-being of carers when their relative or spouse with dementia enters long-term care in a residential nursing home.

Mr. Bowis: Guidance was sent to local authorities last month in LAC(94)1 reminding them that they have discretion to vary the personal expenses allowance to allow the resident to retain sufficient money to enable him or her to support his or her partner remaining at home where the partner has little or no income or capital of his or her own. This discretion could be extended to allow the resident to support a carer. Additionally, local authorities have discretion to ignore the value of property where a third party—such as someone who was caring for the resident at home—continues to live there. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Population Statistics

Mr. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the estimated population of each NHS region in each of the past five years.

Mr. Sackville: The latest population estimates, shown in the table, relate to mid-1991 and mid-1992. These take into account the results of the 1991 census of population. Retrospectively revised estimates for 1982-1990 will be published shortly in the "Office of Population Censuses and Surveys Monitor PP1/94/1", copies of which will be placed in the Library. The original annual estimates for 1981-1990 are available in the PP1 series of OPCS publications, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists there are in Lancashire; and how many and what percentage undertake private treatment only.

Dr. Mawhinney: The number of dentists in the general dental service practising in Lancashire family health services authority area on 30 September 1993 was 460. The number of dentists undertaking private treatment only is not available.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of the public appointments for which she is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Sackville: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Children's Accidents

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the costs to the NHS for children's accidents (a) on the roads, (b) in the home, (c) in schools, and (d) in playgrounds for each year since 1987.

Mr. Bowis: The information available is from a study conducted by the Child Accident Prevention Trust with financial support from the Department. The trust estimated that in 1990-91 the cost to national health service hospitals and the ambulance service in treating accidental injuries to children under age 16 was some £230 million. Full information of the location of the accidents was not available, but mortality statistics collected by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys shows that, of the 480 accidental deaths among children in 1991, 283—59 per cent.—were caused by motor vehicle traffic accidents.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has spent on measures designed to prevent children's accidents for each year since 1987.

Mr. Bowis: Within the overall commitment of national health service staff and the Health Education Authority devoted to promoting children's health, a significant but unquantifiable proportion of their time is aimed at accident prevention. The Department has paid the following sums in grant aid to the Child Accident Prevention Trust under section 64 of the Public Health Act 1968:

Financial Year	Grant
1987-88	71,325
1988-89	93,500
1989-90	93,500
1990-91	106,050
1991-92	108,514
1992-93	103,000
1993-94	113,000

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide figures for the amount her Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Sackville: The following amounts of statutory sick pay provision have been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security: 1990-91 £256,874; 1991-92 £266,121 and 1992-93 £226,777.

Independent Schools (Inspection)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish the revised guidance note to social services departments on the inspection of independent schools under section 87 of the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Bowis: We shall issue draft revised guidance for consultation shortly.

Residential Care

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what current plans she has to change the capital or savings limit of £8,000 over which a person must pay the full cost of a place in residential care.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) on 21 June 1993 at column 39.

Folic Acid

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has conducted to establish whether the taking of preparations containing folic acid by pregnant women reduces the likelihood of the birth of babies with spina bifida; what steps she has taken to publicise this information; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: In October 1991 an expert advisory group was set up in response to the publication of the final results from the Medical Research Council vitamin study group. Its report, "Folic Acid and the Prevention of Neural Tube Defects", published in December 1992, confirmed that women who increase their intake of folic acid before pregnancy can significantly reduce the risk of having a baby with neural tube defects. A copy of the report is available in the Library.

This advice was disseminated to doctors, senior nurses, midwives, health visitors and pharmacists and the Health Education Authority updated its publications to include the new guidance. The Department of Health has conducted a campaign to publicise findings in the press and media. Posters and complementary leaflets have been widely distributed within the national health service and to professional and voluntary bodies.

Special Hospitals

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a breakdown by race on the most convenient date, of the inmates held in each special hospital.

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the Special Hospitals Service Authority, Mrs. Nelson, for details.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many suspected cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease have been identified since 31 May 1992.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals have been found to have suffered from Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in the United Kingdom; how many current suspects there are; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Suspected cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease—CJD—in the United Kingdom are reported to Dr. R. G. Will, consultant neurologist, at the national CJD surveillance unit in Edinburgh.

One hundred and twenty suspected cases were referred to the CJD unit between 1 June 1992 and 1 January 1994. Following investigation, 69 have been classified as definite or probable cases of CJD.

Figures for the total number of definite and probable cases of CJD in the United Kingdom each year from 1985 are shown in the table.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in the United Kingdom, definite and probable cases by year of death 1985-1993

Year	Total
1985	28
1986	26
1987	22
1988	22

Source: CJD Surveillance Unit.

Note: The final figure for 1993 is likely to show some increase over the provisional total as diagnoses of people dying in 1993 are confirmed retrospectively. It is unlikely, however, to reach the 1992 figure.

Medical Treatment

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she has received identifying instances in which it is alleged that medical treatment is allocated according to the purchaser's ability to pay; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: District health authorities are responsible for purchasing services based on their assessment of the health needs of their local population. It is for clinicians and not managers to decide who needs treatment immediately and who is put on a waiting list.

Prostate Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new diagnoses of cancer of the prostate were made in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The latest available information is shown in the table:

Registrations of newly diagnosed cases of cancer of the prostate (ICD 185)[1] for England and Wales, 1983-1987

	Number
1983	9,127
1984	9,524
1985	9,513
1986	10,180
1987	10,837

[1] International Classification of Disease, 9th Revision

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy on screening for prostatic cancer.

Mr. Sackville: The key aim of any screening programme must be to secure a demonstrable improvement in health by increasing length of life and enhancing quality of life. There is, as yet, no evidence to suggest that this would be achieved in relation to prostate cancer. The Department of Health is pursuing research in screening through its own centrally commissioned programme and through the new national health service research and development programme. A copy of the Chief Medical Officer's speech to a recent British Medical Journal conference setting out current policy implementation issues for screening in the NHS will be placed in the Library.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average five year survival rate after diagnosis of prostatic cancer.

Mr. Sackville: The average survival rate after diagnosis of prostatic cancer in England and wales is 43 per cent. —based on cancers registered in 1981, the latest year for which a five-year span is available.

Operating Lease Arrangements

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she has (a) instructed the NHS management executive and (b) notified NHS directors of finance that the provision for capital charge neutrality should no longer be applied when operating lease arrangements are submitted to the management executive for approval as part of the private finance initiative.

Mr. Sackville: Yes. Guidance on this matter was included in a letter sent by the director of finance of the National Health Service Management Executive to regional general managers and directors of finance on 7 December 1993, copies of the letter are available in the Library. The relevant passages are:

> "Regional allocations for capital charges reflect an initial move towards weighted capitation. The capital charges allocation is recurrent, and will be the starting point for further redistribution in 1995/96. The intention is that no distinction should be made between the allocation for capital charges and the allocation for other revenue, and they are used as a single revenue resource.
>
> "Where they have not already done so, RHAs are expected to start the process of redistribution of capital charges subregionally. The changes detailed above should remove a reported impediment to pursuing private finance options. The allocation a health authority receives will not be affected by changes in the asset base of its providers. Decisions on whether to pursue private finance (eg leasing) or direct purchase options should be based on value for money and transfer of risk criteria. RHAs and Outposts should ensure that this point is clearly understood by DHAs and Trusts".

GP Fundholders

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 888, what reports she has received of breaches of the provisions of the regulations covering the uses to which the earnings of general practitioners in fundholding prctices may be put.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the management fee paid to (a) second wave (b) third wave and (c) fourth wave general practitioner fundholders in each (i) family health services authority, (ii) regional health authority and (iii) nationally in 1992 and 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 26 January at column 298. The figures for 1993-94 will not be available until this time next year.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to investigate the use to which general practitioner fundholders have put surplus funds from 1991-92.

Dr. Mawhinney: The uses to which savings may be put are set out in The National Health Service (Fundholding Practices) Regulations 1993, a copy of which is in the Library. Family health services authorities are responsible for authorising general practitioner fundholders' use of savings in accordance with the regulations.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholding practices there are in the area of the Bexley and Greenwich family health services authority; and if she will list them with the amount of financial surplus for each practice in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regional health authorities are responsible for managing the general practitioner fundholding scheme in their areas and only regional level information is available centrally. For local information —in the South East Thames region—the hon. Member may wish to contact Peter Barker, chairman of the South East Thames regional health authority.

Hospital Activity Statistics

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the total cost of producing hospial activity figures; what are the benefits to patients resulting from these figures; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Hospital activity statistics are produced largely as a by-product of operational systems in the health service. This ensures that costs are kept to a minimum, but as a result the extra cost of producing the figures is impossible to quantify.

The statistics are used at all levels in the national health service and the Department of Health for contracting, monitoring performance and for planning health care. Central statistics are used for—inter alia—monitoring efficiency, securing and distributing NHS funds, accountability to Parliament and the public, support for policy initiatives such as the inquiry into London's health services, and for feeding back comparative performance measures to the NHS in health service indicators.

Accident and Emergency Ambulance Services

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has commissioned into the benefits of running accident and emergency ambulance services closely integrated to patient and contract services.

Mr. Sackville: We have commissioned no such research.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the response times by ambulances to 999 calls within the mid-Essex area for each of the last five years; what was the national average time for England as a whole for the same period; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Information on ambulance emergency response times is not collected centrally on an individual health authority basis. Information on the Essex ambulance service for each of the last five years is shown in the table.

Ambulance service emergency response times
Percentage of calls responded to within 20 minutes (1988-89 to 1990-91) and 19 minutes (1990-91 onwards)

	Essex Ambulance Service
1988-89	87·0
1989-90	79·1
1990-91	93·7
1991-92	96·5
1992-93	98·6

In 1990, following the acceptance of a report from the independent consultants ORH, a tighter response time for rural ambulance services was adopted. The response time target—now the patients charter standard—was changed from 20 to 19 minutes.

Lone Parents

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will introduce measures to enable lone parents living on low incomes but not in receipt of benefits to claim free prescriptions, free school meals, free dental treatment and free spectacles; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Help with national health service prescription and dental charges and with the cost of optical services is already available to lone parents under the national health service low income scheme. The scheme ensures that no one need be detered from obtaining necessary medication and treatment on financial grounds. The arrangements for this help and the legislation governing entitlement to free school meals in Scotland are matters for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland. The legislation governing entitlement to free school meals in England and Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Education.

Greenwich Healthcare Trust

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the people working in hospitals run by Greenwich healthcare trust who telephoned the Under-Secretary of State for Health in the week beginning Monday 24 January.

Mr. Bowis: A number of calls were received in my office. We have no intention of releasing such information as the conversations remain private between myself and the individuals concerned.

Management Consultants

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost by region of employing management consultants in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 14 December 1993, at column 558.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 1 February, Official Report, column 611.

Anti-personnel Mines

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commowealth Affairs if he will support moves initiated by other Governments to establish a moratorium on the manufacture and export of anti-personnel land mines.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The initiative was proposed by the United States, and was tabled as a resolution at the United Nations General Assembly, calling for a moratorium on the export of anti-personnel land mines that pose grave dangers to civilian populations. The United Kingdom supported this resolution; however, in doing so, we stated our view that anti-personnel land mines directed at military targets are legitimate defensive weapons when used in compliance with the 1981 United Nations weaponry convention. If they are used in accordance with protocol II of the convention, and particularly if they are fitted with a self-destructing or self-neutralising mechanism, they do not pose grave dangers to civilian populations. We therefore think it would be wrong if the possession of self-destructing or self-neutralising anti-personnel mines were restricted to countries with the capacity to manufacture them. We already adhere to the provisions of the 1981 United Nations weaponry convention, and expect to be able to ratify it later this year.

There was no call for a moratorium on the manufacture of land mines. The United Kingdom has not manufactured or exported conventional anti-personnel land mines since 1982.

Yugoslavia

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet Lord Owen to discuss developments in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 2 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs expects to meet Lord Owen on 7 February at the Foreign Affairs Council in Brussels.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Letterboard

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee how many letters hon. Members may place on the letterboard; when such regulations were agreed; and what proposals the Committee is considering to improve the ability of hon. Members to contact each other through the letterboard.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The letterboard is intended to receive letters and messages of an urgent nature. For this reason, regulations have been in place for a number of years to limit to a maximum of six the number of letters placed by Members on the letterboard on any one sitting day. Increased demand for this service in recent years has placed further burdens on the letterboard; I have therefore asked the Serjeant at Arms to consider what further short and longer-term measures are needed to improve the system. His proposals will be considered by the Administration Committee and recommendations made to the appropriate authorities.

TRANSPORT

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice he has given to the Director of Passenger Rail Franchising regarding a prioritisation review of rail routes earmarked for early sale; what form such advice took; on what date such advice was issued; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced on 2 February 1993 the first seven service groups to be prepared for franchising. On 24 May the Secretary of State announced the remaining 18 groupings to be prepared for franchising, subject to some further work which resulted in a further announcement confirming all 25 groupings on 4 August.

It will be for the franchising director to decide the order in which franchises are offered for sale, taking into account both their readiness and market interest in bidding. We shall be asking the franchising director to prepare a programme for franchising all passenger services.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Norris: This firm was awarded an accountancy commission in connection with the channel tunnel rail link on 21 January 1994.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which special advisers in his Department are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondments.

Mr. MacGregor: Neither of my current special advisers, Sir Idris Pearce and Mrs. Laing, is seconded from other organisations.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) men and (b) women were employed by DVLA in 1992-93; and how many sick days were taken by (i) men and (ii) women.

Mr. Key: The number of staff employed by DVLA at its Swansea headquarters on 31 March 1993 was 2,997—2,232 females and 765 males. Working days lost due to sick absence during 1992-93 were 22,887 for females and 15,905 for males.

On the same date, DVLA employed a further 1,566 staff—1,026 females and 540 males—in its network of local offices. Working days lost due to sick absences in these offices during 1992-93 were 17,135 but a breakdown by gender is not immediately available. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the information is to hand.

Channel Tunnel Concession

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 76, what is his Department's broad estimate of the revenue forgone; and what are the estimated parameters of the estimated costs.

Mr. Freeman: Since competition for the services provided by the channel tunnel in 2042 cannot be predicted now, and since the requirements for repair and updating of the tunnel nearly 50 years ahead are equally difficult to predict, I am unable to judge either the revenue or the costs flowing from the concession in that year. It follows that I am equally unable to say with any precision what the net present value of the extension which the British and French Governments have granted might be.

Deregulation

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which organisations were consulted by his Department, on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document, "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Norris: Each of the task force recommendations agreed or agreed in principle by the Government has been or will be the subject of appropriate consultation with interested parties.

Oil Pollution

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet Care for the Wild and other charitable organisations involved to discuss costs incurred in their clean up operation of marine diesel fuel pollutants recently found off the coasts of Scotland and Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 February 1994]: No. While I recognise the value of the work done by charitable organisations in this field, when they decide to help in clean-up operations they bear the costs themselves. They may have a claim for compensation from the polluter if he can be identified. Beach samples from the affected areas of coastline in Scotland and Northern Ireland have been sent to the Laboratory of the Government Chemist for analysis, and the results are awaited. If it proves possible to trace the polluter, the Department of Transport would consider submitting a combined claim from all those organisations including Care for the Wild who have been involved in clean up activity as a result of these recent incidents.

WALES

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans to buy or borrow any photographs.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Redwood: There are seven on my walls in London and six in Cardiff.

Schools (Ballots)

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools there were in each local authority in Wales by 1 January; how many in each case had held ballots under section 61 of the Education Act 1988; how many ballots in each case resulted in votes in favour of seeking grant-maintained status; and how many ballots in each case resulted in votes against seeking grant-maintained status.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is as follows:

Local Education Authority	Number[1] of primary schools	Number of primary schools that have held ballots	Outcome of ballot		Number[1] of secondary schools	Number of secondary schools that have held ballots	Outcome of ballot
			for GM	aginst GM			for GM	against GM

Farmers Charter

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to set up a farmers charter, with particular reference to the late payment of debts to small business.

Mr. Redwood: I intend to publish targets for dealing with grant, subsidy and licence applications in the next financial year.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the question of organophosphate sheep dips; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Veterinary Products Committee has recommended the introduction as soon as possible of a new certificate of competence for sheep dipping, which the Government have accepted. Interested parties have been consulted formally on the proposed order, in accordance with the Medicines Act 1968. Five responses have been received to date. We shall be considering all comments carefully before proceeding.

Wind Farms

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the subject of the Welsh Office planning guidelines relating to wind farms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Since the publication of planning policy guidance note No. 22, "Renewable Energy", my right hon. Friend has received two representations about its application to wind energy.

Beaches

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many beaches in Wales were accorded the EC blue flag in each year since 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The numbers of EC blue flag awards in Wales were as follows:

Year	Number of awards
1990	1
1991	3
1992	2
1993	3

Abattoirs

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the question of increasing weekly animal slaughter units in small and medium-sized abattoirs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The EC fresh meat directive contains arrangements for small slaughterhouses, which can benefit from a special list of structural requirements. They have to comply in full with the EC hygiene rules. Following discussions in the Council of Agriculture Ministers, the Council agreed to increase the throughput limit for small slaughterhouses for which operators wish to take advantage of those arrangements from 12 to 20 units per week until 31 December 1994. During this period the Commission will review the implications of the meat hygiene directives for traditional small businesses. The Government will work closely with the Commission as it carries out this review. No representations have been received recently on this matter.

Drws y Nant Improvement Scheme

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Drws y Nant improvement scheme on the Dolgallatt to Bala road will commence; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Draft orders for that scheme are due to be published this spring. Commencement of the work is dependent on the satisfactory completion of those statutory procedures.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what the closing date was for the submission of Welsh language sheep annual premium forms in 1993; and what it is for 1994;

(2) what the closing date was for the submission of sheep annual premium forms in 1993; and what it is for 1994.

Mr. Redwood: The dates for both types of forms are identical and are:

1993 scheme

First application period—15 December 1992
Second application period—20 February 1993

Claims received within 10 working days after those dates were also accepted, subject to a 30 per cent. penalty reduction.

1994 scheme

First application period—15 December 1993
Second application period—20 February 1994

Claims received during the 20 calendar days immediately following these dates will still be accepted subject to a 1 per cent. penalty reduction for each working day which has elapsed.

House Renovation Grants

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to collect information on the waiting lists for approval of house renovation grants for each district council in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I do not propose to hold such information. It is for local councils to make decisions on grants within six months of receipt of an application and they must determine their own local priorities.

Capital Receipts

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to relax for a further period the rules regarding use of capital receipts from the sale of council houses.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much additional funding will be available for each district council in Wales, and for Wales as a whole, as a result of relaxation in the budget of rules regarding the use of capital receipts from the sale of council houses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information is being compiled on the estimated levels of additional usable receipts available to local authorities during the relaxation period. I shall write to the hon. Member when figures are available and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the specific effects on Wales of the sustainable development action plan launched on 25 January.

Mr. Redwood: The United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development examines important environment and development issues at the national level over a 20-year period, and considers the role that central and local government, business, the voluntary sector and individual citizens might play in moving the country towards sustainable development. Some important measures are already under way in Wales in support of sustainability, for example the Welsh Development Agency's major land reclamation programme. The Welsh Office will be seeking to ensure that Welsh interests are properly catered for in the follow-up action planned on the strategy.

Cancer, Gwynedd

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research has been conducted on the incidence of cancer in Gwynedd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1987 the Welsh Office commissioned Professor Hubert Campbell to undertake an investigation into cancer rates along the north Wales coast for the period 1974-83. Professor Campbell's report was published in 1988 and a copy was placed in the Library of the House.

The following reports included sites in Gwynedd within a more general study:

"Cancer incidence and mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales 1959-80". Office of Population Censuses and Surveys: Studies on Medical and Population Subjects No. 51. Published by HMSO ISBN 0 11 6910682.

"Geographical variation in mortality from leukaemia and other cancers in England and Wales in relation to proximity to nuclear installations 1969-78". P. J. Cook-Mozzafari, S. C. Dargy, R. Dell, D. Fomman, C. Herman, M. C. Pike and T. Vincent. British Journal of Cancer (1989) 59, 476-485.

The Welsh Office is currently investigating the incidence of certain types of cancer around Trawsfynydd and Wylfa nuclear installations. The results will be made available in due course.

Press Releases

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes have been agreed since his answer of 5 February 1993, Official Report, column 562, on proposals to issue departmental press releases by electronic mail.

Mr. Redwood: None.

THORP

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of representations received from county district and borough councils in Wales on the subject of the proposed thermal oxide reprocessing plant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment made a full statement to the House on 15 December about the outcome of extensive public consultation in connection with the authorisation of radioactive discharges from the whole Sellafield site. Seventeen of the representations considered received were from Welsh local authorities, six being from county councils.

Welsh Economic Model

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has agreed to contribute to the funding of a model of the Welsh economy by the Cardiff Business School Welsh economic research unit.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Office has made no contribution.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funding the Welsh Development Agency received and from what sources in each year since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: The information is set out in the following table:

£ million

	Grant in aid	[1]Total gross expenditure

[1] Gross expenditure is funded from grant in aid, receipts, public dividend capital and borrowings.

[2] Forecast outturns.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Redwood: The amounts reimbursed were:

	£
1992-93	91,153·57
[1]1993-94	84,661·12

[1] April to December.

Figures for previous years are not available.

Milk

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dairy farmers in Wales have already signed and returned contracts to Milk Marque.

Mr. Redwood: The number of producers signed up by Milk Marque and other potential buyers is a matter for those concerned.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current timetable for the introduction of the Milk Marque scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Milk Marketing Board has said that it intends to submit amendments to its scheme of reorganisation. One of these is to propose 1 November 1994 as vesting day for Milk Marque. In order for this to be possible, my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and I would need to make an order extending the present deadline of 1 October for the revocation of the current milk marketing scheme.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has granted nature conservation orders for the protection of sites of special scientific interest under section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; how many are still in operation; how many he has refused in Wales since 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Since 1982, five orders have been made of which two are still in operation. Two have been refused.

Wales in Europe

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to the publicity material of the Welsh Development Agency, in respect of the Wales in Europe campaign, the Wales European Centre in Brussels and the accords signed with Catalonia, Baden-Würtemberg, Lombardy and Rhône-Alpes.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy were reported on farms in Clwyd in 1992 and 1993; and if he will give the number of beasts affected, indicating the local authority district/borough area.

Mr. Redwood: The number of reported cases of suspected bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the county of Clwyd in 1992 was 752, of which 570 cases were subsequently confirmed. In 1993, 730 suspected cases were reported and 542 subsequently confirmed. The figures for 1993 are necessarily incomplete as the basis of the statistics is confirmed cases by report in the appropriate period. It is not possible to indicate the local authority except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of whether every precaution is taken to ensure that the human food chain remains free of infection by BSE.

Mr. Redwood: The Government are advised on matters relating to spongiform encephalopathies by the spongiform encephalopathy advisory committee. The Government are advised that the measures introduced since BSE was identified, which are based on independent scientific advice, prevent any risk of transmission to humans.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research he has initiated into the potential link between BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: A wide-ranging research programme on BSE is in place, based on the recommendations of the consultative committee on research into spongiform encephalopathies. This committee was reconstituted as the spongiform encephalopathies advisory committee, which reports regularly to the Government. Its last report was issued in June 1992.

Doctors are asked to report every suspected case of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease to the national CJD surveillance unit in Edinburgh. The circumstances of each case are recorded fully and in particular all cases are examined for possible sources of transmission and any occupational factor. The unit was established in 1990 and provided reports in 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning BSE and the human food chain, including his advice concerning meat by-products.

Mr. Redwood: The Chief Medical Officer at the Department of Health in May 1990 advised:

> "Beef can be safely eaten by anyone, both adults and children including patients in hospital".

This has been repeated by his successor, Dr. Calman. Dr. Calman further stated that he was confident that all necessary action is being taken to safeguard public health.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Redwood: Yes.

Health Promotion Authority for Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the level and frequency of participation in overseas conferences and seminars of the director and staff of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The chief executive and staff of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales may take part in overseas conferences and visits to the extent that this assists their work in promoting better health in Wales and in generating income for this purpose. The former chief executive of the authority was also professor of health promotion and health education and head of the institute of health promotion at the university of Wales college of medicine and undertook overseas visits in that connection until 2 February 1994.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the value and volume of consultation work carried out in Brazil; and what evaluation he has carried out or will carry out in relation to such work.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Health Promotion Authority for Wales has not carried out or funded any consultation work in Brazil.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to the Health Promotion Authority for Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In recent weeks, I have received two letters from the hon. Member.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the duties of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales in relation to the promotion of better health in Latin America.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The primary function of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales is to undertake health promotion activity in Wales. It may only engage in international work where there is a tangible benefit to Wales from that activity. Such activity has not so far included South America.

Epidemiological Research

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for extensive epidemiological research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office will continue to support United Kingdom-wide epidemiological research in collaboration with other Government Departments—notably the Department of Health—and the research councils.

Teachers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each local education authority how many full-time equivalent teachers were employed in January 1993.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is contained in "Statistics of Education and Training in Wales: Schools", No. 2, 1994—table 6.02—published on 2 February 1994.

Right-to-repair Scheme

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of Wales whether the new right-to-repair scheme for council tenants will apply in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, together with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, laid before the House on Monday 31 January the Secure Tenants of Local Housing Authorities (Right to Repair) Regulations 1994 (SI 1994/133) which will introduce the new right-to-repair scheme in both England and Wales.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Inner Cities and Construction on 31 January 1994, Official Report, column 477.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Senior Science Posts (Women)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many female applicants there have been for senior science posts in the public service, Government Departments, agencies and the research councils at civil service grades 3, 4 and 5 and above in the period 1 January 1993 to 18 January 1994; how many female appointments have been made to these grades, by grade; and what assessment he has made as to the consistency of these figures with the policy outlined in the White Paper "Realising our Potential;"

(2) how many females have been appointed to grade 3 science posts in Government Departments, agencies and the research councils in the past 12 months; and what steps the Chancellor will be making to encourage the appointment of women to these senior posts following the publication of the White Paper. "Realising our Potential".

Mr. Waldegrave: Over the last 12 months, there have been six senior science posts—grade 5 and above—within the civil service advertised through open competition and 10 such posts within the research councils.

For the six posts filled through open competition, there were 21 female applicants—out of a total of 317—none of whom were successful. For the 10 research council posts, there were only two female applicants, and again neither was successful.

For the 12 months to the end of September 1993, there were 24 senior science posts at grades 3, 4 or 5 filled by internal appointees; no females were appointed. In December, Mrs. Helen Williams was appointed to a grade 3 post as head of the Transdepartmental S and T group in the Office of Science and Technology—OST.

The White Paper on science, engineering and technology describes women as the country's biggest single most under-valued and therefore under-used human resource. The Office of Science and Technology will shortly be publishing a report by an independent working group of eminent scientists on how to make greater use of the talents of women in science, engineering and technology.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list each executive agency which has been established since the "Next Steps" initiative commenced; and if he will list any which existed before this initiative.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Illegal Immigrants (Employment)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what report he has received at his Queen Anne's gate office concerning the employment of suspected illegal immigrants; when his authority was sought to apprehend such employees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend is routinely advised of proposed enforcement operations of a major or sensitive nature, but his authority has not been sought to apprehend suspected immigration offenders employed at the Home Office, Queen Anne's gate.

Gatwick Passengers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for a nationwide operation this week to track down passengers who arrived at Gatwick on 21 December and who were given leave to enter the United Kingdom as visitors; how many such operations he has authorised over the past year, to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Where there is reason to believe that a passenger from the flight is in breach of the immigration laws, the case will be followed up in the usual way. No nationwide operation is planned, nor was such an operation conducted in 1993.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, columns 329-30, what is the total cost, to date, of removing passengers on flight ULE966, which landed at Gatwick on 21 December, who were refused entry to the United Kingdom, or granted temporary admission pending removal and removed including the costs of flights and escorts; what was the total cost of detention; where they were detained; if any third party is liable for meeting all or part of the costs of removal or detention; and if he will make a statement;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 25 January, Official Report, columns 162-63, what has been the total cost, to date, of removing from the United Kingdom passengers on flight BA1262 (KT310) which arrived at Gatwick on 15 December, including the costs of flights and escorts; what was the total cost of detaining other of those passengers; where they were detained; if any third party is liable for meeting all or part of the costs of removal or detention; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Those passengers refused entry from flights ULE966 and BA1262 and not removed on the charter flight on 15 December were removed under arrangements made directly by the inbound carrier or its agents and the costs are a matter for them. The total detention cost is still being calculated. Those detained were held in detention accommodation at Gatwick, Newhaven and Campsfield house. Police and Prison Service accommodation was also used.

Where the carrying company or its agents are given directions under paragraph 8 of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971 to remove a passenger or to make arrangements to do so, they are responsible for all the costs involved, including those of any necessary in-flight escorts.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received, to date, from the Jamaican high commission in London concerning flight BA1262 (KT310) arriving at Gatwick on 15 December and flight ULE966 arriving at Gatwick on 21 December; what was the nature of those representations; what discussions have taken place between him and his officials and representatives of the high commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Immigration Service at Gatwick was in touch with the Jamaican high commission on the days of arrival of both flights.

As I stated in my reply to the hon. Member on 11 January at column 147 the high commission has maintained a close interest in the treatment of its nationals who were refused entry. A representative of the high commission was among a delegation I met on 18 January.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 329-30, what are (a) the names, (b) the ages and (c) the sex of the passengers on flight ULE966 arriving at Gatwick on 21 December who have absconded from temporary admission; what were the terms of the temporary admission which they were granted; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: It is normal practice not to disclose the names of individual passengers. Of the six referred to in my earlier reply, five are females aged 14, 16, 20, 23 and 25 and one is a male aged 16. One further female refused entry, aged 33, failed to report back from temporary admission on 26 January. A woman aged 25 also absconded from temporary admission before a decision was reached in her case.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what period those Jamaican citizens who arrived at Gatwick on 21 December on flight ULE966 and were given leave to enter the United Kingdom were allowed to enter.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The majority sought entry as visitors and were given leave to enter for six months; 20 were given leave to enter until 17 January 1994.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 329-30, what were the ages and sex of the children aged 16 years or under who arrived on flight ULE966 who were refused entry; if any were travelling unaccompanied; were any of the 10 who were removed from the United Kingdom were travelling unaccompanied; what is the age and sex of the child who has absconded from temporary admission; and if the child was accompanied.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Of the 14 children referred to in my earlier reply seven are male and seven are female. Details of their ages are as follows:

3 aged 16
1 aged 14
2 aged 13
1 aged 12
3 aged 11
1 aged 9
1 aged 8
1 aged 4
1 aged 3.

Four were unaccompanied. Four of the 10 children so far removed were unaccompanied. Three children have now absconded, a male aged 16 and two females aged 16 and 14, one of whom arrived unaccompanied.

Disclosure of Information

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 331, what was the nature of the disclosure of information to a newspaper which may have taken place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The investigation relates to the possibility of unauthorised disclosure to a newspaper of information about an operation conducted by the police and the Immigration Service enforcement directorate.

Immigration Officers (Powers)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discretion immigration officers may exercise in deciding what period of leave to grant; and for how long those granted leave to enter may lawfully remain in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The immigration rules provide certain periods for which a person seeking entry in various categories should normally be admitted. A person who has lawfully obtained leave to enter will normally be allowed to remain, provided he or she complies with any conditions attached to the leave, until the end of the period granted or the expiry of any variation of that leave.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Home Office has let five contracts to Touche Ross since 1 July 1993.

Telemillion Scheme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations have been carried out into the status in terms of the Lottery and Amusements Act 1976 of the telemillion scheme operated by Interactive Telephone Services Group plc.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Any investigation of allegations of criminal offences under the 1976 Act would be a matter for the police.

Immigration Powers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 329, under what powers, apart from the Immigration (Carriers Liability) Act 1987, he can demand any third party to defray all or part of the costs of (a) detention, (b) escorting and (c) removing from the United Kingdom (i) any person refused entry to visit the United Kingdom and (ii) any person granted temporary admission pending removal who is removed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Those contained in paragraph 19 of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971.

Exclusion Order (Withdrawal)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now arrange for the exclusion order issued against the president of [illegible] Fein to be withdrawn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: No.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the planned expenditure on the criminal injuries compensation scheme for each future financial year to 1997-98 at 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Maclean: Forecast expenditure on criminal injuries compensation, including the costs of administration, in the next three financial years is currently as follows:

	In cash terms £ million	At 1993-94 prices £ million
1994-95	212	204
1995-96	223	206
1996-97	170	153

No estimate has yet been made in respect of 1997-98.

Prisons (Drugs)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to introduce legislation to facilitate drug testing in prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The Government believe it is essential to take action to deal with the problem of illicit drug use in our prisons. I therefore intend to bring forward a clause for inclusion in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill which will allow the Prison Service to test prisoners for drug abuse. In addition to this a new prison rule will be made by statutory instrument under the Prisons Act 1952 which will make the use of illicit drugs a disciplinary offence. I understand my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland, will bring forward a similar measure.

We believe that these measures will play a significant part in tackling illicit drug use and its deleterious effect on the maintenance of good order and discipline in our prisons.

Prison Education

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he has set a minimum standard of education for prisoners to reach before leaving prison; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the curriculum for prison education for specified prisoners throughout the prison system; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will make a policy statement on standards of prison education;

(4) what is (a) the target and (b) average actual number of education hours per week for prisoners in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martyn Jones, dated 3 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the provision of education in penal establishments in England and Wales.

The policies and standards for prison education are set out in the White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice" (Cm 1647), in Prison and Young Offender Institution Rules, in Prison Standing Orders and in supplementary guidance.

Education programmes should enable prisoners to learn effectively, should particularly identify and provide help for those prisoners who have difficulty reading or writing and who are unable to do simple arithmetic, and should provide appropriate help to those prisoners who have inadequate social skills. Over and above fulfilling these basic needs, programmes aim to develop a broad based educational experience for people in custody.

Education in prison is provided under contract by Further Education Colleges and other direct education providers in the community and to comparable standards. The curriculum at any individual prison establishment is agreed between the governor and the education provider and will take account of the assessed learning needs of the inmate population. The capabilities and needs of individual prisoners vary, but programmes encourage prisoners to acquire not only worthwhile qualifications but also wider exposure to the arts and handicrafts. Education, other than for young offenders under the age of 17, is not compulsory and setting a minimum educational standard for all prisoners to reach before release would not be appropriate.

The Prison Service sets overall targets for the number of hours each prisoner should spend on a range of purposeful activities, including work, education and training, but not for individual regime activities. The number of hours that prisoners are engaged in education has, however, increased in recent years from 5·56 million in 1987-88 to 7·57 million in 1992-93.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions were agreed on the post election review on arrangements for inspecting marked registers after elections in their home electoral district rather than in London.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 20 January at column 747. Home Office officials are in consultation with officials in the Lord Chancellor's Department about the suggestion.

Prison Building

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons have completed all the design, town planning and public inquiry stages and are ready to commence building in the next financial year; and how many new prisons are in the course of construction.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith, dated 3 February 1994.

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the new prison building programme.

There is one new prison currently under construction at Doncaster. This is due to open in the summer this year and will be the twenty-first prison to be built under the current programme.

A further six new prisons have been announced but it is not planned to begin construction of any of these in the next financial year, 1994-95.

Sites at Fazakerley in Merseyside and at Bridgend in South Wales have been identified for the first two prisons. The proposal to build a prison on the Fazakerley site was the subject of a non-statutory public local inquiry held between 26 October and 10 November 1993 and we are awaiting the outcome. We have outline planning clearance to build a prison on the site at Bridgend.

Prostitutes

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women who were engaged in prostitution activities were murdered or severely assaulted in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Maclean: The information available relates to homicide offences in which the relationship between the victim and the suspect has been recorded as prostitute and client, and is set out in the table.

Similar information on assaults is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the past three years and estimate for the next three years, the number of probation and bail hostels, the number of places and the occupancy rates; if he will estimate the cost for each place and for each used place; and what are the comparable figures for the cost of gaol.

Mr. Maclean: The available information is as follows:

1. Numbers

Figures for the cost of prison places are not readily available in a comparable form.

Road Accidents

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the number of road accidents (a) per police officer and (b) per 100,000 population for each year since 1979 for the South Wales, Thames Valley, Kent, Lancashire, Avon and Somerset and Hampshire police authority areas; and what were the comparable totals for all non-metropolitan and Welsh non-metropolitan police authority areas.

ENVIRONMENT

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what evaluation he has made of the use of management agreements as a means of protecting sites of special scientific interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend considers that the United Kingdom's existing system for preventing damage to notified sites under the SSSI provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and the land-use planning system together provide effective safeguards. The financial guidelines, which provide a basis for calculating payments in management agreements, are currently under review. The revised guidelines will be the subject of public consultation before they come into force.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times he has granted nature conservation orders for the protection of sites of special scientific interest under section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; how many are still in operation; how many he has refused in England since 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: At 31 December 1993, 29 orders had been made. Of these, 10 have been revoked after satisfactory protection for the site was agreed with the owners, one was revoked after a local inquiry as the site did not meet the legal requirements for an order and 18 are in place. In the majority of these, negotiations towards a management agreement are continuing. Orders have been refused on three occasions. It is a measure of the success of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and of the voluntary principle policy that the Secretary of State has used his powers on so few occasions.

Local Government Review

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the Government's intentions for the local government review following the High Court judgment of the Lancashire challenge.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking in response to the High Court judgment in the action brought by Lancashire and Derbyshire county councils which deletes as unlawful a sentence from the November 1993 policy guidance to the local government commission.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional guidance he intends to give to the Local Government Commission on the conduct of the review following the High Court decision on Lancashire and Derbyshire on 28 January.

Mr. Gummer: The review of local government in England and the work of the Local Government Commission will continue. The Government are not appealing against the court ruling, which makes it clear that the Local Government Commission exercises its own judgment—something that has never been in dispute. The commission's reviews will continue on the basis of the policy guidance issued in November 1993 with the omission of the final sentence of paragraph 3. The aim of the local government review continues to be to provide effective and convenient local government which takes account of community identities. The Government believe that unitary authorities will often be the best way of achieving these objectives. In those cases they will be able to reduce costs and improve the quality and co-ordination of services. They will therefore often provide the best form of local government. Decisions will be taken on commission recommendations in that light. However, there is no national blueprint and the Government do not rule out consideration of two tiers in particular cirumstances, with or without changes to the status quo, where a strong case for that is made.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance he proposes to make available to London boroughs and the common council during 1994-95 in respect of extra costs which those authorities may face as a result of decisions on housing revenue account subsidy in respect of debt inherited from the former Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: For 1993-94 my right hon. Friend announced a scheme of special assistance for London boroughs and the common council facing extra costs that year as a result of his decision that housing revenue account subsidy and housing subsidy is not payable under the statute in respect of certain debts inherited from the former Greater London council. Should the House of Lords uphold the judgments of the divisional court and the Court of Appeal in respect of his decision, he proposes to make similar arrangements for 1994-95.

Betterment Levy

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the collection of betterment levy imposed by the Land Commission Act 1967.

Mr. Baldry: It is no longer cost effective to continue pursuing collection of betterment levy. In the 1992-93 financial year, £232,595 has been written off. There remain 52 outstanding cases in England and Wales, totalling £85,676·53. Against this background, I have decided that these cases should also be written off.

Hydrofluorocarbons

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will make a statement about the production of HFCs.

Mr. Atkins: The Government have no plans to ban the production of HFCs because we regard them as important alternatives for some uses of CFCs and HCFCs, particularly in refrigeration. Their production is bound to increase as those substances are phased out. They are, however, greenhouse gases and, subject to the decisions of next year's conference of parties, the climate change convention requires developed countries to take actions aimed at returning their emissions to 1990 levels by 2000. Such actions must not damage our efforts to phase out CFCs and HCFCs as quickly as possible. The United Kingdom's climate change programme, published last week, therefore commits the Government to explore with HFC producers and consumers the scope for agreements to ensure that, where HFCs are used, emissions to the atmosphere are minimised, and that HFCs are not used where emissions are unavoidable if safe, practical and more environmentally acceptable alternatives are available.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implication for the operation of local authority waste disposal companies of the recent Court of Appeal judgment on Avon county council's award of a waste disposal contract under the statutory tendering process.

Mr. Atkins: The formation of local authority waste disposal companies to which waste disposal authorities transfer the relevant part of their undertakings is envisaged in part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The Act also obliges waste disposal authorities to let waste disposal contracts through competitive tender to waste disposal contractors, which may include local authority waste disposal companies. Where a contractor believes that a waste disposal authority has not followed the competitive tendering provisions contained in the Act, the contractor may take action through the courts. The contractor has exercised that option in this instance. There is still the possibility of further legal process, and therefore it would not be appropriate for me to comment more fully on this specific case.

Housing (Publicity Expenditure)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide details of the breakdown of expenditure on departmental publicity relating to housing matters for 1993-94.

Sir George Young: As at 2 February 1993, my Department has committed £767,361·88 for publicity expenditure on housing policies. The breakdown is as follows:

	£
Advertising	356,340·99
Printing	293,643·77
Exhibitions	26,587·13
Audio Visual	2,120·88
Promotions	3,841·54
Fulfilment	33,710·34
Conferences	12,014·28
Distribution	8,435·45
Research	30,667·50

Living Over the Shop Project

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what effect his consideration of the report by the housing consultants, Chapman Hendy Associates, on "Living Over the Shop", has had on the Government's policy on the living over the shop project.

Sir George Young [holding answer 1 February 1994]: In considering applications for funding under the Department's special grants programme, which was again this year oversubscribed, we took into account all supporting information provided. Unfortunately, the application by the living over the shop project was not successful. The project has previously received grants of £113,000 over three years from the Department and the Housing Corporation.

The Government remain committed to encouraging the use of empty residential space above shops. Some £10 million of supplementary credit approvals will be available to local authorities for 1994-95: bids amounting to about £40 million have been received and allocations will be announced shortly. In addition, the Housing Corporation will be supporting schemes by housing associations.

Vacant Properties

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many vacant properties he wishes to bring back into the affordable rented housing sector; and if he will provide a breakdown by (a) Government properties, (b) private sector properties and (c) local authority properties.

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 January 1994]: On 1 April 1993 there were around 900,000 empty dwellings in England, of which 26,683 were owned by housing associations, 70,909 were owned by local authorities, around 12,400 were owned by the Government and other public sector bodies, and around 765,000 were in private sector ownership, according to statistical returns from local authorities and housing associations. My answer of 24 January to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker), Official Report, columns 23-26, gives further details. The Government wish to see the best possible use made of empty property, regardless of its ownership. They offer encouragement to local authorities and private owners to do so, and have set up a task force on Government Departments' empty homes to help to bring residential property back into housing use. The task force is expected to present its final report to Ministers shortly.

Building Management

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out (a) by region the proceeds from the sale of the constituent parts of Building

Management, (b) the amount of money set aside to cover possible redundancy costs and (c) the total number of redundancies and the cost involved.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 31 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Inner Cities and Construction on 19 January, Official Report, column 675, in respect of the Noreast Building Management business. The information on the remaining four businesses is set out in the table.

EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much funding has been made available to each TEC in 1992-93 and 1993-94, expressed in cash terms and real terms, and giving a real-terms percentage change from the previous year, for (a) youth training and credits, (b) training for work and the programmes it replaced and (c) business start-up allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Funding made available to each training and enterprise council in 1992-93 and 1993-94 for (a) youth training and credits, (b) training for work and the programmes it replaced, and (c) business start-up schemes are given in the following tables. Figures for 1993-94 are also shown in 1992-93 prices.

TEC budgets shown for employment training, employment action and higher technology national training in 1992-93 exclude allowances paid to participants, while budgets for training for work in 1993-94 include these allowances. TEC budgets for the BSUS in 1992-93 include an element for business enterprise training. This is funded through the Department of Trade and Industry in 1993-94.

In addition to the budgets shown in the following tables additional funding has been made available in 1993-94 to TECs to extend BSUS and to provide special measures in coal closure areas. Details by TEC are not yet available.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister on 1 February 1994, Official Report, column 611.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were in employment in the Amber Valley constituency, for its nearest equivalent, in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987 and (d) 1992; and what is the latest figure.

Miss Widdecombe: The information on employees in employment in the Amber Valley parliamentary constituency is available from the periodic censuses of employment, and is given in the following table:

Employees in employment in the Amber Valley constituency in September of each year.

	Number
1981	[1]29,300
1984	32,000
1987	34,300
1989	35,900
1991	36,700

[1] The boundary for this parliamentary constituency was revised in 1983 and therefore the information for 1981 is not directly comparable with that in later censuses.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current rate of unemployment in the Amber Valley constituency; what is the latest figure for the south-east; and what is the current average figure for each of the EC countries.

Miss Widdecombe: In December 1993, the seasonally adjusted rate of claimant unemployment stood at 9·7 per cent. of the workforce in the South East region. Claimant unemployment rates are not available for areas smaller than the self-contained labour markets known as travel-to-work areas. No figure is available for the Amber Valley constituency.

Internationally comparable unemployment figures based on the internationally standardised ILO definition of unemployment are published by EUROSTAT in its monthly "Unemployment Bulletin", copies of which are available in the Library. The United Kingdom ILO unemployment rate is below the EC average and is falling.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were placed in employment by (a) Kilwinning and (b) Irvine jobcentres in each month since April 1992.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 3 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of people placed into employment by Kilwinning and Irvine Jobcentres each month since April 1992.

Tables are attached which show this information.

I hope this is helpful.

Unemployed People, Cornwall

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much central Government money was spent on schemes to help unemployed people in Cornwall in each year since 1979 in total and per person unemployed; and if he will list which schemes are included in these totals for each year.

Miss Widdecombe: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Disputes

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of days lost in industrial disputes in relation to the size of the work force in each EC country in (a) the latest year for which information is available and (b) 10 years previously.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The latest available data are given in the following table:

Working days lost per thousand employees in employment[1, 2]

	1992	1982
United Kingdom	20	250
Belgium	40	[3]70
Denmark	30	50
France	30	130

Spain	670	360

[1] It should be noted that there are some differences in coverage between each country's statistics. More details can be found on page 550 of Employment Gazette December 1993.

[2] Data are not available for Luxembourg.

[3] Data relates to 1980.

[4] Less than five days lost per thousand.

[5] Data relates to 1991.

[6] Data relates to 1991.

Lettuce Growing

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many inspections were made by the Health and Safety Executive agricultural inspectorate of lettuce-growing establishments in each month since January 1993; and how many cases of misuse of pesticides were found by the agriculture inspectorate in each month since January.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Between 1 April 1992 and 31 March 1993, the latest year for which information is available, inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive's agricultural inspectorate made a total of 40,051 visits which includes visits to lettuce and other salad production establishments. During the same period agricultural inspectors investigated 206 pesticides incidents.

Unemployment Benefit

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the cost of administering unemployment benefit in the Greenock travel-to-work area in each of the past five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 3 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the cost of administering unemployment benefit in the Greenock travel-to-work area in each of the past five years.

Perhaps I should make it clear that as the Employment Service is responsible for administering several other benefits in addition to Unemployment Benefit, it is not possible to provide information on the payment of Unemployment Benefit only. Therefore the figures relate to the administration costs for all benefits paid to clients. In addition, as our records of local office running costs are retained for only the last three complete financial years, I am consequently unable to provide information in respect of those financial years prior to 1990-91. The information below is in respect of the area covered by the Greenock and Port Glasgow offices, which more or less approximates to the Greenock travel-to-work area.

Given these provisos, the relevant costs, which include staff salary and other running costs, such as fuel and telecommunications, are as follows:

Financial year	Non-integrated £	Integrated £	Total costs £
1990-91	606,942	Nil	606,942
1991-92	300,208	561,186	861,394
1992-93	Nil	1,235,560	1,235,560

These figures give a total cost for the three years of £2,703,896 broken down into £907,150 for costs related to Unemployment Benefit Offices (UBO) and £1,796,764 for those related to Employment Service Jobcentres (ESJ).

However, I must emphasise that these figures are not strictly comparable. As you may be aware, since 1990 the Employment Service has been pursuing a policy of bringing together Unemployment Benefit Offices and Jobcentres with the aim of providing a more efficient and effective service to our clients. Our Inverclyde offices have featured as part of this programme of integration, Greenock in November 1991 and Port Glasgow in March 1991. The figures provided for the periods after integration, therefore, include job broking costs as well as benefit administration costs.

Given the fact that staff in our integrated offices are responsible for all aspects of Employment Service work, it is not possible to provide any further accurate or meaningful breakdowns in these costs.

I hope this is helpful.

Essex Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how much total funding has been made available for the Essex TEC expressed in cash terms and with the percentage change from the previous year for each financial year of its existence;

(2) how much funding has been made available for the Essex TEC in 1991-92, 1992-93, 1993-94 expressed in cash terms and with the percentage change from the previous year for (a) youth training and credits, (b) training for work and the programme it replaced and (c) business start-up allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The following table provides the information requested for each full year of the training and enterprise council's existence.

Funding for TECs is negotiated annually by officials from the Department who ensure that budgets are sufficient to meet priority local needs. Officials also ensure through regular reviews that TECs deliver quality training and enterprise support in a cost-effective way.

Essex TEC

	1991-92 £ million	1992-93 £ million	1993-94 £ million
Youth/training credits	13·712	15·313	16·712
Per cent. change	—	11·68	9·14
Training for Work	5·637	6·026	6·133
Per cent. change	—	6·9	1·78
Business start up allowance	0·424	0·670	0·863
Per cent. change	—	58·0	28·8
Total	19·773	22·009	23·708

Note:

All figures except 1993-94 are based on actual spend.

1993-94 figures are estimated, based on contracted amounts.

TfW figures include the programmes replaced by TfW, including Employment Training, Employment Action and HTNT.

BSU figures are based on the amounts paid for starts and survivors.

Figures do not include the following interest-free loans:

(i) a Working Capital Loan of £1,774K the balance of which was repaid in 1992-93.

(ii) Fixed Asset Loans totalling £650K which are written off over five years between July 1990 and July 1995. The balance of these loans is currently £168K.

Jobcentre, Brixham

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will instruct his agents in Brixham to engage in the fullest consultation on the building of a new job centre in the old bus station site; and what is his policy on (a) leasing or (b) building new buildings for the purposes of employment.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 3 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about a new Jobcentre in Brixham, and about our policy on leasing or building new buildings.

For commercial reasons it is our policy not to comment on specific locations for prospective sites for new jobcentres. I can however, confirm that the Employment Service (ES) is considering a number of options in the Brixham area, and that all of these will be subjected to the fullest consideration and fully evaluated.

All options, including leasing and purchase of new buildings, will be subject to an investment appraisal in accordance with Treasury guidelines.

I hope this is helpful.

Job Shops

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his annual budget for running job shops in England; how many staff are employed; and how many of the premises are owned by his Department or leased by it and at what annual cost.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 3 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the annual cost of running Jobcentres in England, the number of staff employed and how many offices are owned or leased.

The annual budget provided for running the Employment Service (ES) Local Offices' in England for 1993-94 was some £729 million, which includes premises operating costs of £122 million.

The ES employs around 43,000 staff in 1,021 offices in England. Of these buildings 607 are Departmental Estate properties, administered by the ES, and 414 are Common User Estate properties, administered by Property Holdings.

I hope this is helpful.

DEFENCE

Airmisses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the date, location, altitude, aircraft types and joint airmiss working group determination of cause, for all category C airmiss reports involving military aircraft in the period from 1 January 1990.

Mr. Hanley: A list of all category C airmiss reports involving military aircraft in the period from 1 January 1990 will be placed in the Library of the House.

"Feedback"

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the current issue of the Royal Air Force inspectorate of flight safety publication "Feedback".

Mr. Hanley: No. "Feedback" is an internal Royal Air Force document for official use only. It is intended to provide early and practical guidance to service air and ground crews in their particular environment.

Harrier Jet (Wirestrike Incident)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the wirestrike incident involving a Royal Air Force Harrier in north Norway on 15 November 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The aircraft was on a routine training exercise and struck power cables while flying through a fjord at 335 ft. The aircraft suffered minor damage and was able to land at a diversion airfield. The cause of this incident is currently under investigation by an RAF board of inquiry.

Skyguard Radar

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of Royal Air Force Provost and Security Service monitoring by Skyguard radar of aircraft flying at altitudes higher than 2,000 ft.

Mr. Hanley: The purpose of deploying the Skyguard radar system in its low flying monitoring role is to observe military aircraft flying below 2000 ft. However, some tracking of military aircraft flying above 2000 ft is unavoidable. The Skyguard system comprises two radars; a search radar and a tracking radar. Aircraft in the area of monitoring are picked up on the search radar initially before the tracking radar is set to observe a particular aircraft in detail. Only when the tracking radar has locked on to an aircraft can its height be established. Once an aircraft has been identified as flying above 2000 ft, attention is turned to monitoring other aircraft in the area.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the system for reporting of breaches of low flying regulations recorded by Skyguard radar; to which units or offices such breaches are reported; and what are the mechanisms for instituting disciplinary proceedings.

Mr. Hanley: Following any apparent breach of low flying regulations recorded by Skyguard, the RAF police conducts further inquiries to identify the aircraft concerned and interview the aircrew. A report is then passed to my Department's secretariat—Air Staff—and copied to other interested parties, including the commanding officer of the aircrew concerned. Where breaches of low flying regulations are not the subject of court martial or summary disposal proceedings under the service discipline Acts, responsibilty for action lies with the commanding officer of the aircrew.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what equipment is carried by RAF police in covert monitoring of low flying without use of Skyguard radar; how many aircraft have been observed by such non-radar covert monitoring in each year since 1990; and how many apparent breaches of low flying regulations were detected by these monitoring deployments.

Mr. Hanley: Covert monitoring of low-flying aircraft without the use of Skyguard is carried out visually by experienced RAF Police observers following a survey of the chosen site. The relative heights and distances of local landmarks are taken into account when conducting the survey.

The number of aircraft observed using these methods since 1990 are as follows:

Year	Number of aircraft observed
1990	177
1991	533
1992	276
1993	347

Four apparent breaches of low flying regulations were detected during these covert monitoring deployments.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the changes in policy since February 1992 concerning the release of statistical information on the results of Skyguard monitoring of low flying; and what were the reasons for those changes.

Mr. Hanley: Since November 1992 it has been my Department's policy to notify hon. Members in advance when Skyguard low flying monitoring is planned to take place in their general area and arrange for the equipment to be available for the public to see at the end of the deployment. The decision to release statistical information on the results of the monitoring flowed from the revised arrangements.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the equipment used by the RAF police on Skyguard radar deployments to monitor low flying includes radio equipment capable of receiving transmissions on the common radio frequency for the United Kingdom low flying system.

Mr. Hanley: No.

Flying Hour (Definition)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what definition of flying hour is used in the recording of flight time by British military aircraft.

Mr. Hanley: British military aircraft record flight time as being from the moment an aircraft takes off to the moment it lands, as opposed to commercial aircraft where flight time includes the time the aircraft taxies for departure and on arrival.

Tornado Accident, County Durham

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the accident involving a Royal Air Force Tornado F3 aircraft in County Durham on 21 October 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The aircraft, on a routine training sortie flying at 2,000 ft and 300 knots, suffered a major fuselage fuel leak and an associated engine flame-out. Shortly afterwards, the aircraft caught fire. Both crew members ejected safely. The cause of the accident is currently being investigated by a RAF board of inquiry and a summary of its findings will be produced in the normal way. A copy of the summary will be placed in the Library of the House.

Harrier Accident, Evesham

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the accident involving a Royal Air Force Harrier near Evesham on 14 January.

Mr. Hanley: The aircraft was on a routine training sortie when it crashed near the village of Aston Somerville. The pilot, a member of the United States Marine Corps on an exchange tour with the RAF, unfortunately died in the accident. An investigation into the cause of the accident is being conducted by an RAF board of inquiry.

Harrier Accident, Bristol Channel

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the accident involving a Royal Navy Sea Harrier in the Bristol channel on 5 January.

Mr. Hanley: The accident involved a Royal Navy Sea Harrier FRS2 from 899 Squadron, based at RNAS Yeovilton. The aircraft was flying low over the sea when an engine malfunction caused the pilot to eject. The aircraft came down approximately 15 miles west of Chivenor. The pilot was uninjured. The cause of the accident is currently under investigation.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the current issue of the Royal Air Force publication "Low Flying Update".

Mr. Hanley: The document is classified and cannot therefore be released.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reports have been received from aircrew on operational low flying training sorties in the tactical training areas, of sightings of other military aircraft on non-operational low flying training sorties flying at less than 500 ft minimum separation distance.

Mr. Hanley: Central records of such reports are not maintained. However, the indications are that such reports have been received on only a very small number of occasions.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the nature of each of the breaches of low flying regulations listed in his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley of 18 October 1993, Official Report, column 57, and the height at which each aircraft was recorded as flying.

Mr. Hanley: All of the apparent breaches of low flying regulations listed in my answer to the hon. Member of 18 October 1993, Official Report, column 57, were in respect of height, except for the following which were apparent breaches of an avoidance:

Date	Location	Type of aircraft	Nationality
16 July 1991	Eshott Airfield	F4	German Air Force
2 July 1992	Beverly/Linley Hill Aerodrome	Tornado	RAF

It is not my Department's policy to release detailed information such as the recorded height of aircraft involved in apparent breaches of low flying regulations.

British Goods

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to increase the purchase of British-manufactured goods for the armed services.

Mr. Aitken: To achieve the best value for money, wherever possible, we place contracts by means of open competition. British companies have proved highly competitive to the extent that, over the past five years, we estimate that some 90 per cent. of defence equipment expenditure was spent with United Kingdom industry. My Department provides British defence industry with as much information as possible about its future procurement plans, and Ministers and officials meet regularly with representatives of defence industry trade associations.

Garelochhead Training Centre

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many training man days were spent on the Garelochhead training area in each year since 1985.

Mr. Hanley: Details for Garelochhead are available only from the financial year 1987-88 onwards:

Financial year	Man training days
1987-88	54,500
1988-89	67,183
1989-90	73,289
1990-91	56,621
1991-92	63,342
1992-93	79,182
[1]1993-94	31,308

[1] To December.

The lower than average figure for 1993-94 is due to a reduction in capacity on account of works services.

Prescription Charges

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those categories of armed forces personnel whose national health service prescription charges are reimbursed from his Department's funds; and what was the total cost of this provision in the latest year for which data are available.

Mr. Hanley: All armed forces personnel are entitled to free medical and dental treatment. As a part of this condition of service national health service prescription charges paid by service personnel based in the United Kingdom may be reimbursed from funds within my Department. Figures relating to the cost of this provision are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The entitlement to free medical and dental treatment is one of the many factors taken into account by the Armed Forces Pay Review Body when comparing pay levels in the armed forces with those in civilian employment.

Glen Douglas Depot

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future use of the Glen Douglas armaments depot.

Mr. Hanley: The NATO armaments depot—NAD—at Glen Douglas is currently used for ammunition storage by the Royal Navy, the US and the Netherlands. Following the United States' decision to withdraw its holdings, it was announced on 2 December 1993 that the task of storing and maintaining RAF ammunition would be transferred from RAF Chilmark to NAD Glen Douglas. Work has already commenced on the transfer which should be completed, on current plans, by the end of 1994.

Hercules Accident

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the summary of the report on the accident to a Royal Air Force Hercules aircraft on 27 May 1993.

Mr. Hanley: A summary of the RAF board of inquiry's findings will be placed in the Library of the House shortly.

T80U Tank

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's receipt of a tank from Russia for research purposes.

Mr. Aitken: In 1992 a Russian T80U tank was imported for defence research and development purposes.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any department of his Ministry has taken delivery of a T80U main battle tank.

Mr. Aitken: Yes. A Russian T80U tank was imported for defence research and development purposes.

Defence Cuts

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage reductions have been made in the total number of (a) armed forces, (b) military establishments, (c) naval craft, (d) aircraft, (e) munitions factories, (f) naval dockyards and (g) regiments since 1979; and what were the numbers in each case in 1979 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Armed Forces

	1979		Latest
Royal Navy and Royal Marines

(Date of information in brackets).

(b) Military Establishments. There are several possible definitions of the term "Military Establishment". On any definition, the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Records for 1979 are not held.

[2] As at 31 December 1993.

Total percentage change: −37.

(d) Aircraft. Figures available for 1979 only cover squadrons, flights or regiments, and do not give numbers of individual aircraft. Because the numbers of aircraft within units has changed over the years, a percentage change figure based on the numbers of units would not be meaningful. The available figures are as follows:

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is the Government's policy to seek the negotiation of a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty by September 1996.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory), on 31 January, Official Report, column 481.

RAF Byelaws

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what directions or guidance of a general nature now apply in respect of the arrest, detention, charge and prosecution of a person under either the RAF Lakenheath Byelaws 1986—SI 1986/480—or the RAF Mildenhall Byelaws 1986—SI 1986/479;

(2) what directions or guidance of a general nature have been given to the Ministry of Defence police and the Crown Prosecution Service in the last five years concerning the arrest, detention, charge and prosecution of a person under either the RAF Lakenheath Byelaws 1986—SI 1986/480—or the RAF Mildenhall Byelaws 1986—SI 1986/479.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence police is an operationally independent body responsible for policing the defence estate in accordance with the provision of the Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987. One of its duties is to enforce military byelaws. Those applicable at RAF Lakenheath and RAF Mildenhall are extant but under review. In November 1993 general guidance was given to MDP by its chief constable not to arrest for byelaws offences at these sites until the review process is complete.

MDP continues, however, to escort trespassers off the premises for their own safety or may make arrests if other non-byelaws offences such as criminal damage are committed or suspected.

The Crown Prosecution Service is an independent prosecuting authority which does not accept instructions from outside agencies.

Paveway III Bomb Fuse

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research is being conducted by his Department on collateral damage to humans caused by the use of the Paveway III multi-function bomb fuse in laser-guided bombs deployed by the RAF.

Mr. Aitken: My Department conducts research into a wide range of weapon technologies and effects, many of which are relevant to precision-guided systems, with the aim of improving performance in line with evolving military requirements for increased reliability and accuracy and reduced collateral damage. The RAF is currently equipped not with Paveway III but with the Paveway II guidance kit which provides a precision bombing capability and can be used in conjunction with the multi-function bomb fuse, and the UK 1,000 lb bomb.

Plutonium

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much plutonium British Nuclear Fuels plc has stockpiled at Sellafield on behalf of the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Aitken: The United Kingdom does not hold significant stocks of weapons-grade plutonium which is not required for our operational stockpile of weapons.

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions it has been necesssary for him to appeal to the Secretary of State for the Environment against a local authority's refusal of planning permission for the destruction of listed buildings or properties regarded as having heritage importance; and whether he consults the Department of National Heritage before deciding how to dispose of Ministry of Defence property of heritage significance.

Mr. Hanley: To date, there have been no occasions when it has been necessary for my Department to appeal to the Secretary of State for the Environment against a local authority's refusal to grant permission to demolish an historic building. Kennet district council has refused a recent application for consent to demolish Gore Cross farmhouse, grade II listed building. We are awaiting the outcome of an appeal which was submitted and subsequently heard by means of an informal planning inquiry during December 1993. Currently the Department does not consult the Department of National Heritage as a matter of routine when considering proposed disposals of historic buildings, although this is currently under review by my officials.

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the buildings, docklands, barracks, sites or premises that have a significant heritage value and that have become or are likely shortly to become redundant to the requirements of his Department; what action he is taking to dispose of each of these properties; from whom and at what stage he obtains advice with regard to the preservation of properties of heritage importance; and what factors dictate whether heritage aspects should be subordinated to financial considerations.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows. The listed and scheduled properties have been identified as redundant by the Department and the current position over their disposal is shown:

Property and location	Disposal position
28A Colliergate—ex. Sandhill Hotel—York, Yorkshire	With defence land agent for disposal

St. George Barracks (North), Gosport, Hampshire	Disposal linked to future of Royal Clarence yard
Waltham Abbey	Steering committee preparing case for transfer of heritage holding to a trust

These properties have been identified for disposal but not action has yet been taken:

Property and location	Proposed action
ACIO Tunbridge Wells, Tunbridge Wells, Kent	To be sold on relocation of explosive ordnance unit.
Angelsey House, Aldershot, Hampshire
Carlton House, Stirling	Two listed buildings currently used by the Army will be declared surplus.
HMS Nelson—Gunwharf—Portsmouth, Hampshire
RAF Hullavington
Royal Naval Hospital, Stonehouse, Plymouth, Devon

We are conducting a systematic review of all our historic buildings to determine which should be retained by the Ministry of Defence, in their current or alternative use, and which should be disposed of expeditiously to ensure their preservation by finding a suitable alternative use.

Following the transfer of responsibility for the upkeep of its property, including historic buildings, from the Property Services Agency in 1990, the Department has been putting in place new arrangements. An official has also been nominated to be the focal point for policy on hisoric buildings and is in active consultation with the Department of the Environment conservation unit, Department of National Heritage and the national heritage bodies over the preservation of properties of heritage importance. Defence Works Services has appointed a conservation architect who is available to advise all of our property managers, who also call upon specialist conservation consultants to produce quadrennial reports on each listed and scheduled historic building.

When disposing of historic buildings the Department aims to achieve sympathetic and suitable alternative uses which assure their preservation whilst retaining a duty to secure the best price that can reasonably be obtained.

Staff Requirement (Air) 1242

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of staff requirement (air) 1242;

(2) when he expects to announce the result of the contest for the low-level laser-guided bomb under staff requirement (air) 1242.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 17 January 1994, Official Report, column 441. I hope to be able to announce the results of the competition by April 1994.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Aitken: My Department, including its agencies, has placed six contracts with Touche Ross since 1 July 1993. These exclude local purchase orders, of small value, information on which is not held centrally.

Arms Sales

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the levels of arms sales to (a) Malaysia, (b) Indonesia, (c) Jordan, (d) Oman, (e) Thailand, (f) Nigeria and (g) India for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Aitken: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to reveal details of arms sales to individual countries. However, "Defence Statistics 1993" gives information on the value of sales by region in table 1.11. A copy of this has been placed in the Library of the House.

SCOTLAND

NHS (Staff Cars)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year since 1990 the expenditure on staff cars for each (a) health board and (b) NHS Trust in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Leisure Facilities

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement listing in descending order the net changes in the leisure and recreation and sports facilities and swimming pools grant-aided expenditure assessment for 1994-95 for each Scottish local authority; and if he will similarly list the amounts awarded to each Scottish local authority for this element of grant-aided expenditure in 1993-94 and in 1992-93.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is set out in the table. The treatment of this GAE assessment has been changed for 1994-95 following a decision by the joint Scottish Office—COSLA distribution committee of the working party on local government finance to discontinue the secondary indicator for the assessment. This indicator—the number of unemployment benefit recipients per 1,000 population—was no longer considered to be plausible.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland where the membership of the distribution committee of the working party on local government finance is drawn from; and if he will indicate specifically what representation Scottish local authorities have on this committee.

Mr. Stewart: Membership of the committee comprises Scottish Office officials, members of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities' secretariat and representatives of a number of local authorities. Each regional authority provides one member. There are six members from district authorities and one representing the islands authorities. Additionally there are four technical advisers to the committee who are also local authority officials. The local authority representatives are nominated by COSLA.

Community Charge

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines his Department has issued to Scottish local authorities in respect of pursuing unpaid community charge where the costs of pursuing the debt exceed the amount owed; what representations he has received from local authorities on this matter; and what plans he has to amend the current guidance to allow local authorities to write off community charge in situations where the costs involved in pursuing amounts owed exceed the amount being owed.

Mr. Stewart: My Department has not issued any guidance to local authorities on this matter which is for each authority to consider in consultation with its auditor. My right hon. Friend last received representations from local authorities on this issue in 1991.

Health Boards

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list any voting members of health boards who are also employed by those boards as managers or administrators showing the salaries paid in each case.

Mr. Stewart: Executive members of health boards are those who are employees of the board. They are all voting members. The present executive members are listed. Salaries are determined by the boards and details are not held centrally.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on expenditure by Lothian Health on (a) the refurbishment of its headquarters building and (b) the appointment of waiting list managers, contracts managers and any other administrative staff in connection with recent reorganisations.

Mr. Stewart: The refurbishment of Lothian health board's headquarters building will cost approximately £950,000, the bulk of which is expected to fall in the current financial year.

The appointment of staff is a matter for the board and the trust in Lothian.

Apprentices

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many 16 to 18-year-olds were undergoing apprenticeship training in Scotland in the 12-month period ended (a) December 1990, (b) December 1991, (c) December 1992 and (d) December 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available in the form requested. However, information from the labour force survey shows the numbers of 16 to 18-year-olds involved in apprenticeships in Scotland in the spring of each year from 1990 to 1993 as set out in the table:

Numbers of 16 to 18-year-olds involved in apprenticeships

Period	Number
Spring
1990	23,824
1991	26,825
1992	25,996
1993	19,495

Private Nursing Homes

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many elderly persons were living long term in private nursing homes in Scotland in the 12-month period ended (a) December 1992 and (b) December 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Information is not available centrally on persons in private nursing homes. The number of beds in private nursing homes in Scotland, as at 31 March 1993, was 16,477. It is estimated that over 85 per cent. of nursing home residents are persons over the age of 65.

Youth Training

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the trend in the numbers of persons in Scotland availing themselves of youth training including credits and training for work schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Youth training is demand-led. There is a downward trend in the number of young people in training due in part to the effect of demography. In addition more young people leaving school are moving into further or higher education, which has the effect of further reducing the potential client group. This can be seen when comparing those who entered youth training for the first time between April and September in 1992 and 1993 respectively. In 1992 over 15,000 joined youth training for the first time while in the same period in 1993 only around 12,500 did so.

The number of persons in training under training for work has also decreased since the programme started in April 1993. The introduction of the programme took place at the same time as the launch of an increased range of opportunities available to unemployed people through the Employment Service.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will release additional funds to Scottish local authorities to enable them to increase their sheltered housing facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Substantial resources totalling some £405 million have been made available to local authorities for capital investment in public sector housing in 1993-94. For 1994-95 additional resources will be made available to enable local authorities to contribute to the care in the community policy including the provision of sheltered housing. I will announce these allocations shortly.

Nursery Education

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children received pre-five education in state schools in Scotland in the academic years 1991-92 and 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of children attending education authority nursery schools and Departments in Scotland in 1991-92 was 45,238 and in 1992-93, 46,992. This confirms that the year on year rise in children receiving nursery education since 1979 is continuing.

Elderly People (Day Care)

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will release additional funding to Scottish health boards to enable them to increase the numbers of day care places they provide for the elderly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Health boards receive generous financial resources to allow them to purchase all health services for which they are responsible. It is for health boards themselves to set priorities for spend in accordance with the needs of their area. Other agencies, principally social work departments, have a part to play in the provision of day care.

Health boards and social work departments are aware that day care is one of the priorities set out in the White Paper, "Caring for People".

Nurse to Patient Ratio

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average nurse to patient ratio in Scottish NHS hospitals in the 12-month periods ended (a) December 1992 and (b) December 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The ratio of qualified nurses working in hospitals to 1,000 weighted patients was 10·9 in 1992 and 10·7 in 1993. The change reflects improvements in the deployment of staff, improvements in the management of patient care in hospitals and increases in day case surgery.

Heart Surgery

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons aged 65 years and over received major heart surgery in Scottish hospitals in the 12-month period ended December 1990 and in the 12-month period ended December 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The number of cardiac procedures performed in Scottish hospitals on people aged 65 and over in 1990 and in 1993 is set out in the table.

Number of cardiac procedures in Scottish hospitals by age (65 and over) and procedure 1990 and 1993

Year procedure	Total
1990
Valve Surgery Procedures	216
Coronary Bypass Procedures	446
Other Ischaemic Heart Disease Procedures	18
Other Cardiac Procedures	12
Total Procedures	692
1993[1]
Valve Surgery Procedures	210
Coronary Bypass Procedures	615
Other Ischaemic Heart Disease Procedures	5
Other Cardiac Procedures	18
Total Procedures	848

[1] 1993 Totals are provisional.

The figures show an increase of 22·5 per cent. in the total number of procedures performed in this age group.

Nurse to Carer Ratio

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the ratio of trained nurses to carers working within Scottish NHS hospitals in the 12 months ended December 1992 and in the 12 months ended December 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The number of carers working in the NHS in Scotland cannot be identified centrally. The ratio of qualified nurses, including midwives but excluding teachers and senior nurse managers, to unqualified nurses was 1·78:1 on 30 September 1992 and 1·76:1 on 30 September 1993, the most recent dates for which information is available.

Care in the Community

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional support facilities have been given to the elderly in Scotland who are cared for under Her Majesty's Government's community care provisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Older people form one of a number of client groups to benefit from our community care arrangements. These include involving users and carers in planning services, individual assessment of needs, greater choice of services and, where appropriate, the appointment of a care manager to ensure that appropriate packages of care are developed to meet the individual's assessed needs.

To date we have made available to local authorities over £80 million to implement our reforms. This will enable local authorities to provide and develop a wide range of services for elderly people including residential care, day and domiciliary services, aids and adaptations to houses. It is, however, for individual local authorities to decide for themselves the particular services which they provide in response to their assessment of local needs.

I believe that elderly people will be among the principal beneficiaries of our reforms.

Geriatric Patients

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will increase funding to Scottish health boards for the dedicated purpose of providing physiotherapy treatment to long-stay geriatric patients in NHS hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: It is for health boards themselves to organise physiotherapy services in accordance with the assessed needs of their area.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to ensure that all Scottish health boards guarantee to retain a minimum number of long-stay geriatric beds within hospitals which currently have a geriatric facility; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The distribution of NHS facilities is a matter for health boards to decide in the light of their assessment of needs.

The national health service will continue to provide long-stay care for patients who need continuing consultant led medical and nursing care. People whose needs are primarily for social care and whose health needs can be met by the primary care services will be the responsibility of the local authority and resources will transfer to them from the national health service. Health boards and social work authorities are developing joint strategies which fully reflect this policy.

Health Centres

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will release to Scottish health boards additional funding to be used for redecorating local health centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Capital and revenue allocations for 1994-95 to Scottish trusts and health boards were announced in December 1993. For small-scale expenditure, priorities are determined locally.

School Boards

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools within each Scottish education authority area currently have school boards; and what were the figures for 1993.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the current number of school boards is not available. The most recent information relates to May 1992, based on the 1991-92 round of biennial parental elections. The figures for 1992 are taken from statistical returns made to the Scottish Office Education Department by education authorities:

Assisted Places

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which private schools in Ayrshire have pupils under the assisted places scheme; how many pupils are supported at each institution; and what is the cost to the Scottish Office of this support.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information for school year 1992-93 is as follows:

School	Number of assisted pupils	Total cost £
Drumley House	3	10,790
Wellington School	55	183,265

Departmental Information Points

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement outlining progress in establishing the Scottish Office's information points; and what costs have been incurred so far.

Mr. Lang: Twenty information points have been established in existing Department offices throughout Scotland. Two have been set up in citizens advice bureaux offices in Airdrie and Kirkaldy, and four more information points will be opened shortly. Estimated set up operational costs amount to some £26,000. This sum was included in the figure of £175,000 quoted in my reply of 24 January, Official Report, columns 71-2.

NHS Trusts

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many secretarial staff employed by agencies are presently doing work at those hospitals which have been granted trust status but where the changeover has not yet come into effect.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

NHS (Staff Cars)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that when official cars are provided for senior executives in the NHS the recipients will be required to pay for their private motoring.

Mr. Stewart: NHS senior executives on NHS Whitley Council conditions of service are required to pay for the private use of officially supplied cars in accordance with these conditions of service. For those on NHS trust conditions of service, arrangements for the use of cars will be determined by the trust remuneration committee.

SSSIs

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times he has granted nature conservation orders for the protection of sites of special scientific interest under section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; how many are still in operation; how many he has refused in Scotland since 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend has made 14 nature conservation orders under section 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and 11 are still in force. On no occasion has he refused a request from the Nature Conservancy Council, the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland or Scottish Natural Heritage to make such an order.

Tourist Boards

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what study he has made of the costs of tourist boards between local authorities in the last two decades; and what is his future estimate of the cost of tourist boards.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The network of area tourist boards was extended throughout Scotland from 1983 onwards. Their funding position has been as follows:

	Non-Commercial Income
Year	STB/HIE Grant		LA Grant		Commercial Income		Total

I expect funding arrangements to continue to follow roughly the same pattern.

Enterprise Companies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the public relations companies employed by each of Scotland's local enterprise companies; and what is the annual cost of these services to each of the companies.

Mr. Stewart: Services contracted for by the local enterprise companies are an operational matter for Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. I will ask the chairmen of those bodies to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which agency is employed by Scottish Enterprise to handle its public relations; and what is the annual cost of these services to Scottish Enterprise.

Mr. Stewart: This is an operational matter for Scottish Enterprise. I will ask its chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the set-up costs of each of Scotland's enterprise companies.

Mr. Stewart: On 1 April 1991 Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise took over the resources, including staff and buildings, formerly administered by the Scottish development agency, the Highlands and Islands development board and the Training Agency in Scotland. Set-up costs were subsumed within the overall running costs of the new networks and cannot be identified separately. No additional provision was made available to take account of the set-up costs of the new bodies.

Telephone Information Line

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, columns 71-72, what assessment has been made of the inquiries received by the Scottish Office's information line; what was the nature of the inquiries raised; what were the main subjects raised; and what percentage of calls related to these main subject areas.

Mr. Lang: Calls received on the Scottish Office enquiry line form a small proportion of the 8,000 or so calls per week dealt with by the Scottish Office central enquiry unit. Calls relate to a wide variety of the subjects for which the Scottish Office is responsible. No central record is kept of the details of individual calls received since the central enquiry unit's task is to put the caller in touch as quickly as possible with the person in the Department who can best deal with the subject of the enquiry.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 71, how many calls have been received by the Scottish Office's information line in each month since its establishment.

Mr. Lang: The number of calls to the Scottish Office enquiry line each month since its introduction has been:

October 1993	797
November 1993	740
December 1993	452
[1]January 1994	155

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Lang: The information is set out in the table, which covers the Scottish Office—excluding the Scottish Prison Service—and the associated departments:

1990-91	1991-92	1992-93

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is (a) the total budget for diabetic care, (b) the budget for education work among diabetics and (c) the expenditure for each health board in these categories.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not collected centrally.

Universities (Academic Staff)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a profile of academic staff at Scottish universities in terms of age and department.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Figures for full-time non-clinical academic staff whose salaries are wholly met from general university funds are given for the eight traditional universities in the following table. Figures for the four new universities are given for full-time academic staff by age only as a departmental breakdown is not available.

Local Authority Boundary Changes

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish representations received regarding local authority boundary changes for Dumbarton district.

Mr. Stewart: It is not normal practice to publish correspondence received by Government Departments unless the correspondent has agreed to this. Since publication of the White Paper, "Shaping the Future—The New Councils", a number of representations have been received in relation to the Government's proposals as they effect Dumbarton district. Most of these have been in support of the proposed inclusion of Helensburgh and Cardross withn Argyll and Bute. Some letters have also requested that the Luss and Arden area be included within Argyll and Bute.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: None.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Lang: There are six paintings on the walls of my room in Dover house, London, none in my room in St Andrew's house, Edinburgh, and one in my room at the House of Commons. I have no photographs on the walls.

Ambulances (Response Times)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest figures for response times by ambulances to 999 calls for each of the health authorities or trust areas within Scotland; and what is the average for Scotland as a whole.

Mr. Stewart: The response times for the latest period available are as follows:

Queensferry (Second Road Bridge)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the results of the feasibility study ready into a second road bridge at Queensferry; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Feasibility studies into aspects of the proposals for a second Forth road bridge at Queensferry and associated road links are nearing completion. The findings will be made available to interested parties, subsequently we will consider whether or not to proceed with the proposals in due course.

European Affairs (Responsibility)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many engagements he has carried out in his role as Minister responsible for European affairs; and what engagements he has planned for the next six months;

(2) what additional resources were made available in terms of staff and finance to his Department upon a Minister being appointed to be responsible for European affairs; how often this Minister has travelled abroad to discharge his responsibilities; which countries have been visited; and for what purpose.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 28 January 1994]: In view of the importance of the European Union and of European Community policies to Scotland and to Scottish interests, in May of last year I invited my noble Friend the Minister of State to take responsibility for general European issues within the Scottish Office. In addition, all Ministers in the Scottish Office continue to look after European affairs within their own areas of responsibility, and I myself continue to be actively involved in European issues.

In the course of their responsibilities all Scottish Office Ministers have undertaken engagements with European dimensions and will continue to do so as the opportunity arises. For example, in November last year I addressed the annual general meeting of the Scottish Council of the European Movement and in December opened the Europartenariat in Glasgow and my noble Friend the Minister of State attended a meeting in December held by the Local Government International Bureau for the United Kingdom members of the Committee of the Regions.

In addition to domestic engagements, Ministers have also visited other member states to further Scottish interests in the European context. Last year, I visited Brussels in January and September to attend meetings of the joint Environment and Transport Council, of the joint Foreign Affairs and Agriculture Council and of the Agriculture Council and to undertake other engagements relating to Scotland's interests in Europe including meetings with Commissioners Millan and Brittan and with the Scottish European Association and Scotland Europa.

In November last year my noble Friend the Minister of State visited Brussels to attend a meeting of Justice and Interior Ministers, to meet Scottish MEPs and to undertake other engagements relating to his responsibilities for general European issues; and in December he visited Strasbourg to participate in Scottish Week at the European Parliament. My hon. Friend the Minister for Fisheries in Scotland visited Brussels or Luxembourg on four occasions in 1993 to attend meetings of the Fisheries Council; in addition he visited Cologne to promote Scottish exports at the ANUGA food fair and in January this year visited Brussels for a meeting with Commissioner Paleokrassas.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Tourism in Scotland visited Bavaria in February last year to promote Scotland as a tourist destination. My hon. Friend the Minister for Industry in Scotland visited Lille in June last year to support the Scottish presence at the Europartenariat event and Munich in December to participate in discussions about employment issues.

In response to the growing importance of the European dimension, the Scottish Office undertook a thorough review in 1991 of the way in which it conducts its European business. This resulted in the establishment of a European central support unit within the Scottish Office, currently staffed by one official at grade 7 level, one at higher executive officer level and one at executive officer level with clerical support. The unit is responsible for advising Ministers on general European issues of concern to Scotland.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland from which legally qualified persons he has had requests to see the evidence which he alleges he has in respect of two Libyans alleged to be involved in the crash of Pan Am 103.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1994]: My noble and learned Friend, the Lord Advocate, has received requests from one Justice Zawi of the Libyan Supreme Court and from the noble Lord, Lord Macaulay of Bragar QC and Mr Alistair Duff, solicitor, acting on behalf of the two Libyan accused. My noble and learned Friend Lord Fraser of Carmyllie, the then Lord Advocate, made a full statement of facts available to the Libyan authorities when the arrest warrants were issued in November 1991. That statement contained more detail than would be required for extradition in most European countries.

The Lord Advocate has received a number of private requests from lawyers representing different interests, in the main civil, for information concerning the case and he has, in accordance with normal practice, declined to make evidence relating to the case against the two Libyans available to third parties.

Old People's Homes

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of old people's homes, and the number of nursing homes in the Blairgowrie cottage hospital and Meigle cottage hospital catchment areas.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the number of old people's homes and nursing homes in Tayside at 31 March 1993 is as follows:

Residential Care Homes

	Number
Local Authority	30
Private	60
Voluntary	59
Nursing Homes	37

NHS Computers

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how the NHS computer system pilot scheme at Crosshouse and Ayrshire Central hospitals is being funded; what assessment he has made of the impact on existing service provision at the hospitals; what plans there are to change the existing staff structures in hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The funding of the outpatients administration system pilot scheme at Crosshouse and Ayrshire central hospitals is being provided jointly by the site and from central funds in accordance with normal practice. The new computer system will automate a number of outpatient administration functions which are presently done manually and introduce other functions not currently available with a view to making more efficient uses of hospital services and resources.

I understand that there are no plans to change the existing staff structure of the outpatient services in these two hospitals.

Labour Statistics

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new jobs have been created in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow in each year since 1975.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The information requested is not available.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list job losses in each year since 1975 in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow; and what was the level of youth unemployment in the same year.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: Information in the form requested is not available. No data are available for parliamentary constituencies on redundancies.

With regard to youth unemployment, data by age are only available quarterly from October 1983. The information is available on the NOMIS database in the House of Commons Library. Library staff are ready to assist in accessing the information.

Police Officers (Assaults)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of (a) murders, (b) murders of police officers, (c) assaults upon police officers, giving degrees of seriousness of injury and (d) policemen and policewomen in post in each year since 1975 in (i) Inverclyde, (ii) Strathclyde and (iii) Scotland as a whole.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The information in respect of Strathclyde and Scotland is set out in the tables. Statistics for Inverclyde, and information on the degrees of seriousness of injury resulting from assaults on police officers, are not held centrally.

Substance Abuse

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of people who died in each of the past seven years as a result of the abuse or the misuse of (a) tobacco, (b) alcohol, (c) heroin, (d) cocaine and (e) cannabis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The available information is as follows. It is estimated that some 10,600 people in Scotland die each year from smoking-related illnesses, including lung cancer, coronary heart disease and stroke. In some 600 cases a year the cause of death, as recorded on the death certificate, is a disease identified as being alcohol-related; however alcohol plays a part in the deaths of many more people through its contribution, for example, to hypertension, violence and road accidents. In the year from 1 November 1991 it is estimated that between 80 and 120 habitual misusers of controlled drugs died as a direct result of drug misuse; many of these cases will have resulted from the misuse of several drugs and reliable estimates cannot be offered in relation to the role of particular drugs.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what recent representations he has received concerning funding for drug and alcohol addiction treatment centres; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what proposals he has concerning the funding of drug and alcohol addiction treatment centres; whether money obtained by way of European Community structural funds can be used for such purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The drugs task force, led by my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State, has received reports from health boards, social work departments, drug liaison committees and other organisations about facilities for drug misusers. This subject will be considered by the task force at a future meeting.

No recent representations have been received about the funding of alcohol addiction treatment centres.

The principal aim of the European structural funds is to assist the economic development of areas experiencing particular structural and economic difficulties. Drug and alcohol addiction treatment centres would not therefore be eligible for support from this source.

Psychiatric Hospitals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) long-stay and (b) short-stay psychiatric beds have been closed in each year of the health board areas in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The information requested is not available in the form requested. The bed complement for psychiatric beds in total and the percentage of patients using psychiatric beds on 31 March each year from 1987 to 1993 is as follows.

Inverclyde Royal Hospital

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the persons appointed to the posts of members of the Inverclyde Royal Hospital Trust, with the dates of appointments, length of such appointments and remuneration.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The information requested on the appointments made by my right hon. Friend to the board of the Inverclyde Royal and Rankin Memorial hospital NHS trust is set out in the table. Details of the executive members of the board, who are appointed by the non-executive directors, are not held centrally.

Cervical Smears

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of women who have had to undergo medical and/or surgery treatment as a result of the reported misreading of cervical smear test slides at the Inverclyde Royal hospital; what forms of treatment have been taken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The re-reading of the cervical smear slides at Inverclyde Royal hospital led to around 440 women requiring further investigation and/or treatment. It is not possible to say how many of these patients required treatment as a result of the original misreporting of the smear results.

The forms of treatment include colposcopy without biopsy, colposcopically-directed selective biopsy, cold coagulation and conization of the cervix.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the procedures adopted by the Argyll and Clyde health board in response to the misreporting of the cervical smear tests at the Inverclyde Royal hospital, Greenock.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: Argyll and Clyde health board accepted the main thrust of the recommendations directed at them by the Inverclyde inquiry report and a task force was set up to advise the board on the action to be taken.

The proposals by the task force are to be implemented through a comprehensive purchasing plan based on service specification for all components of the board's cervical screening programme including targets and quality control procedures. The purchasing plan is to be presented to the board for approval at its meeting in February and it will be for provider units to deliver the service required through contracts.

The task force is also currently considering the implications of the rationalisation of the cervical cytopathology services. An extensive consultation exercise is currently underway involving relevant laboratory consultants, clinicians and outside experts. The task force is expected to complete this exercise and report with recommendations to the board by May.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women underwent cervical smear tests in each of the health board areas for the latest available year; what these figures are as percentages of women of the appropriate age range; what is the proportion of those who develop carcinomas before being recalled; and what is the recall period for each region.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: Information is available only on the number of smears processed and not the number of women examined. Figures for 1992—the latest available—are as follows:

	Number of cervical smears examined	Percentage of eligible population
Scotland	485,368	84·6
Argyll and Clyde	41,769	80·5
Ayrshire and Arran	33,925	85·8
Borders[1]	—	91·6
Dumfries and Galloway	12,921	91·2
Fife	32,656	88·0
Forth Valley	30,658	85·6
Grampian	54,897	90·2
Greater Glasgow	87,424	80·1
Highland	24,290	88·1
Lanarkshire	45,177	79·7
Lothian	86,294	85·4
Orkney[1]	—	91·8
Shetland[1]	—	91·6
Tayside	35,357	87·3
Western Isles[1]	—	78·8

[1] Smears of women in Borders, Orkney, Shetland and Western Isles health board areas are included in figures for Lothian, Grampian (Orkney and Shetland) and Highland health boards respectively.

Information on the proportion of women who develop carcinomas before being recalled is not available.

All health boards in Scotland are now operating a three-year call/recall system.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 759, whether the target time of 14 days for the processing and notifying the results of cervical smear tests includes the processing time for general practitioners, hospitals or clinics to report the results to their patients.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: Yes.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women living, or formerly living, in the catchment area of the Inverclyde Royal hospital have as yet not been traced in relation to the recall programme following the discovery of the misreporting of cervical smear test slides at the hospital's cytology laboratory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: As of 31 January 1994 there were 16 women with non-negative results on rescreening still to be traced. Of these 15 are believed to be in the United States, and one woman in Europe. The health board is continuing to pursue links to trace the remaining women. Approaches have been made to the United States internal revenue service to ascertain whether they can help in tracing the women.

Scottish Enterprise

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of the report by the Monitor Group into the future of the electronics sector in Scotland by the Monitor Group; if the report will be made public; and what action Scottish Enterprise has taken following the report.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 26 January 1994]: The report was prepared by the monitor group as part of a wider task to develop, with the Scottish electronics forum, a strategy for the electronics sector in Scotland. The total cost of that work was £480,000.

The text of the report has not yet been published since Scottish Enterprise does not consider the report on its own to be fully representative of all the associated work undertaken to develop the wider strategic approach. But I understand that its plans to pull this wider range of material together with the report itself, with a view to publication.

It is for Scottish Enterprise to decide how the work it commissioned from the monitor group should be taken forward; and I understand it is considering, with the Scottish Electronics forum, how that might best be done. Scottish Enterprise is willing to provide further details about the current position, or to meet the hon. Member to discuss the matter further, if that would be helpful. I have therefore written to the chairman of Scottish Enterprise asking him to write direct to the hon. Member about this matter.

EDUCATION

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what arrangements have been made for the publication of audited accounts for grant-maintained schools; and where details are available for inspection.

Mr. Robin Squire: The governing body of a grant-maintained school is required to present each year's accounts to the anual parents' meeting falling next after the submission of the accounts to the Secretary of State. The governing body must also ensure that the accounts are available at the school for inspection by any member of the public.

Cash Limits

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what changes he plans to announce to cash limits and running costs limits on votes within his responsibility for 1993-94.

Mr. Patten: Subject to parliamentary approval of the related supplementary estimates, the cash limits for class X, vote 1, schools, research and miscellaneous services; vote 2, higher and further education; vote 4, administration; and vote 6, office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in England, will be amended. The changes are as follows:

Class and Vote	Current cash limit £	Change £	Revised cash limit £
X.1	741,282,000	-32,300,000	708,982,000
X.2	5,404,831,000	+1,006,000	5,405,837,000
X.4	94,301,000	+47,000	94,348,000
X.6	48,819,000	-1,266,000	47,553,000

The reduction to the cash limit on class X, vote 1 includes a reduction of £18,500,000 as a contribution towards offsetting the increase of £155 million sought via a supplementary estimate for class X, vote 3, student awards, loans and compensation payments, which is not cash limited; a reduction of £13,000,000 to offset wholly payments to universities and colleges of further education in respect of grants from the European regional development fund towards capital projects; and a transfer of £800,000 to class X, vote 2 to increase provision in respect of bursaries for the training of teachers in shortage subjects.

The net increase of £1,006,000 on class X, vote 2 takes account of an increase of £1,306,000 in gross provision for grant in aid to the Higher Education Funding Council for England, offset by a transfer of £828,000 from the Home Office for the costs of students sponsored to attend extended and upgraded courses in social work in universities, less a transfer of £622,000 to class X, vote 3 to increase provision for student loans associated with these courses; and the appropriation in aid of receipts of £1,100,000 from proceeds of sale of redundant properties at the Royal College of Art. The remainder of the vote 2 increase is offset by the transfer of £800,000 from class X, vote 1.

The increase on class X, vote 4 is the net result of a transfer of £127,000 from Property Holdings in respect of buildings maintenance and an increase of £80,000 in receipts of payments arising from services supplied by the Teachers Pensions Agency which are to be appropriated in aid of the vote. The running costs limit has been increased by £127,000 from £90,323,000 to £90,450,000.

The decrease on class X, vote 6 is the net result of a reduction of £1,300,000 in forecast outturn on programme and a transfer of £34,000 from Property Holdings in respect of buildings maintenance. The running costs limit has been decreased by £29,000 from £31,960,000 to £31,931,000. This is the net effect of the transfer from Property Holdings and a transfer of £63,000 for non-running costs provision in the same vote.

The increases on class X, votes 2 and 4 are wholly offset elsewhere and will not therefore add to the planned total for public expenditure.

School Governors

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what right school governors have to visit and inspect schools of which they are governors.

Mr. Forth: The Education Acts do not give governors an express right to visit their schools; but governors have a range of statutory duties and powers, and are entitled to expect reasonable access to schools as necessary to allow them to carry out their functions.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what assessment was made of the previous employment record of the new property controller of the Further Education Funding Council before he was appointed;

(2) who was consulted about the conduct of the new property controller of the Further Education Funding Council while he was employed by the Welsh Development Agency before his appointment to the Council.

Mr. Boswell: In accordance with its normal recruitment procedures, the Further Education Funding Council made an assessment of the previous employment record of the newly appointed head of property services on the basis of information obtained from his application form, from discussion with him at interview and from references taken up prior to his interview and the subsequent offer of employment. The references, which were provided in confidence, provided sufficient information about his conduct during his employment with the Welsh Development Agency to satisfy the council.

Office for Standards in Education

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many Ofsted contracts have been awarded to local education authority-based registered inspectors; what is their total value; in how many cases the contract was awarded to an LEA-based registered inspector when there was a lower bid entered by a registered inspection from outside the LEA sector; and what is the sum of the amounts by which the awarded contracts exceeded the value of lowest bid submitted by a non-LEA-based inspector in the financial year 1993-94 to date;

(2) how many Ofsted contracts were awarded to registered inspectors based outside local education authorities; what is their total value; in how many cases the contract was awarded to a registered inspector from outside the LEA sector when there was a lower bid entered by an LEA-based registered inspector; and what is the sum of the amounts by which the awarded contracts exceeded the value of the lowest bid submitted by an LEA-based inspector, in the financial year 1993-94 to date.

Mr. Robin Squire: The arrangements for inspecting schools under the Education (Schools) Act 1992, including the awarding of contracts to registered inspectors, are a matter for Ofsted.

I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

City Technology Colleges

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if the policy of parental preference applies to city technology colleges.

Mr. Robin Squire: All parents of children within the catchment area of a city technology college are free to express a preference for a place at the college. So many do so that inevitably many are disappointed not to receive the offer of a place. CTCs have a duty as far as possible to ensure that the pupil intake is representative of the full range of ability among pupils within the catchment area.

Dyslexia

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will set out the actions taken by his Department over the past five years to help children with dyslexia.

Mr. Forth: The Department has provided over £300,000 to support research into the early identification of dyslexia and ways in which information technology can assist dyslexic pupils.

The Education Act 1993 and the code of practice which subject to Parliament's approval my right hon. Friend hopes to issue this summer will significantly improve the arrangements for the education of all children with special needs. The code offers guidance to all schools and LEAs on their responsibilities towards all pupils with special needs of all kinds, including those with dyslexia.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Burma

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance Her Majesty's Government are giving to alleviate the plight of the Rohingya refugees from Burma who fled to Bangladesh at the end of 1991.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Her Majesty's Government have provided some £1·2 million for the Rohingyas via the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Red Cross-Crescent movement. My noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has approved a further £1 million in response to recent UN appeals for both care and maintenance programmes and for the official repatriation programme now expected to get under way, following agreements between the Burma authorities and UNHCR.

ENVIRONMENT

Cash Limits

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits on the two PSA services votes in 1993-94.

Mr. Curry: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VII, vote 13—sale of the PSA businesses—will be increased by £4,540,000 from £39,351,000 to £43,891,000. The increase will not constitute a claim on the reserve as it will be netted off the proceeds from the Government's privatisation programme.

The provision is sought mainly to fund a payment to the purchaser of PSA projects, as provided for in the sale agreement, to adjust the consideration payment one year after completion of the sale depending on the numbers of transferred staff still employed by the business.

In addition, the cash limits for class VII, vote 11—PSA services—will be reduced by £43,535,000 from £163,760,000 to £120,225,000. This takes account of earlier recoveries of works expenditure from customer departments and a reduction in forecast severance expenditure. The net running cost limit on this vote will reduce by £7,512,000 from £103,596,000 to £96,084,000.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he has to announce to his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Gummer: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

(i) the cash limit for class VII, vote 5—central environmental services, etcetera—will be reduced by £6,300,000 from £391,336,000 to £385,036,000. This change reflects a saving of £6,300,000 in forecast expenditure on grant in aid to the National Rivers Authority;

(ii) the cash limit for class VII, vote 6—Property Holdings and other services to government—will be increased by £1,000 to £2,000. This reflects the token supplementary estimate taken for this vote. The gross running cost limit will be increased by £614,000 from £20,062,000 to £20,676,000 to meet early retirement costs and consultancy fees, and is partly funded by take up of running cost end-year flexibility entitlement—covered by the increase in the running costs limit announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1993, Official Report, columns 512-17. The net running cost limit for the Security Facilities Executive agency will be reduced by £271,000 from £1,101,000 to £830,000. This reflects changing levels of business within SAFE. The net running cost limit for the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre will be increased by £5,624,000 from £1,200,000 to £6,824,000. This reflects increased business for the QEIICC and the introduction of an accommodation charge for the centre itself. This increase will be offset by increased receipts;

(iii) the cash limit for class VII, vote 7—DOE administration—will be increased by £357,000 from £225,544,000 to £225,901,000. This change reflects a number of small transfers to and from other votes, the most significant being an increase of £353,000 from Property Holdings—class VII, vote 6—in respect of maintenance charges. The Department of the Environment's gross running cost limit on class VII, vote 7 will be reduced by £2,864,000 from £226,578,000 to £223,714,000. In the main, this reduction is necessary to match the projected shortfall in Planning Inspectorate executive agency receipts;

(iv) the cash limit for class VII, vote 8—revenue support grant, payments of non domestic rates, Valuation Office services, etcetera, England—will be reduced by £666,000 from £28,808,799,000 to £28,808,113,000. This reflects the transfer of £155,000 in manpower savings from valuation tribunals to class VII, vote 12, for disabled persons' rate relief, emergency financial assistance to local authorities and rate rebates in enterprise zones, and a saving of £511,000;

(v) the DOE/Housing Corporation non-voted cash limit will be increased by £9,113,000 from £1,786,093,000 to £1,795,206,000, to reflect the transfer of £14,404,000 from the city challenge programme—to fund housing associations in city challenge areas—and an increase of £741,000 following the full take-up of end-year flexibility entitlement—announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1993, Official Report, columns 512-17. It included the switching of £6,032,000 from capital to revenue to cover increased costs in demand-driven revenue programmes for which the Housing Corporation is responsible;

(vi) the DOE/urban aid non-voted cash limit will be reduced by £18,380,000 from £996,672,000 to £978,292,000. The change reflects a transfer of £14,404,000 to the housing vote—vote VII, 1—to meet an equivalent increase in city challenge housing association expenditure. A transfer of £1,376,000 to the Department of Transport is necessary in order to refund resources originally transferred to DOE for the London Docklands development corporation, but which are now no longer required. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport will announce an equivalent increase in his cash limit today. The London Docklands development corporation's external financing limit for 1993-94 will be correspondingly reduced to £105,388,000. A further reduction of £2,600,000 will be made to reflect an excess carry-over of resources by the docklands light railway in 1992-93. The docklands light railway external financing limit for 1993-94 will be correspondingly reduced to £32,017,000.

(vii) the DOE/local authority capital non-voted cash limit will be reduced by £3,677,000 from £2,461,475,000 to £2,457,808,000. This change reflects reductions in provision for minor current expenditure grants for private sector renewal which have been partly offset by full take-up of end-year flexibility entitlement of £1,470,000. The original entitlement of £61,000 announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1993, Official Report, columns 512-17, has been increased following revision of the forecast outturn figures;

(viii) the DOE/new towns non-voted cash limit will be increased by £20,613,000 from minus £116,938,000 to minus £96,325,000. This change reflects a shortfall in receipts of £39,607,000 and a reduction in expenditure of £17,912,000. The external financing limit for Letchworth Garden City development corporation will be reduced from zero to minus £1,082,000; and

(ix) the housing action trusts external financing limit will be reduced by £8,678,000 from £86,779,000 to £78,101,000. This change reflects a reduced borrowing requirement by housing action trusts.

Any cash limit increases will be offset by savings within the DOE, or transfers within DOE or from other Departments and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Steel and Newsprint (Energy Costs)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new measures he proposes to assist the steel and and newsprint industries to reduce their energy costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Government's best practice programme produces guides and case studies showing the successful implementation of energy efficiency technology and techniques in different industrial sectors, including steel and paper and board—covering newsprint. These have already helped stimulate take-up of measures leading to energy savings. Further projects are in the pipeline and proposed for the future.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Baldry: The figures are:

	£
1990-91	350,406
1991-92	246,508
1992-93	180,237

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon;

(2) which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts to which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Baldry: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of government relating to public appointments.

Groundwork Trusts

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funding has been allocated nationally to Groundwork trusts in each year since 1990-91; and what is the expected allocation for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Atkins: The Groundwork Foundation has allocated the following funds to Groundwork trusts in England from its grant in aid as contributions to their approved running costs:

Year	Amount £	Number of Trusts
1990-91	1,292,407	22
1991-92	1,622,319	25
1992-93	1,521,017	25
1993-94[1]	1,994,318	28

[1] Estimated outturn.

For 1994-95 the foundation has made an initial provision of £2,889,000 for a target of 37 trusts in England.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funding has been allocated to each of the individual Groundwork trusts in Yorkshire and Humberside in each year since 1990-91; and what are the expected allocations for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Atkins: There are two Groundwork trusts in the Yorkshire and Humberside region—South Leeds and Wakefield. Grants paid from the Groundwork Foundation's grant in aid as a contribution towards the trusts' approved running costs have been allocated as follows:

	South Leeds £	Wakefield £
1990-91	178,000	57,692
1991-92	150,000	48,444
1992-93	55,000	42,275
1993-94	55,000	15,000

Allocations for 1994-95 have not yet been made.

The trusts are also able to apply for grants for projects under departmental programmes, but details of these payments are not readily available.

Integrated Pollution Control

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to respond to the report by Environmental Data Services on integrated pollution control, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Atkins: The Government welcome the comprehensive review of the operation of integrated pollution control up to April 1993 by Environmental Data Services. I am pleased to note that the results of this study confirm that IPC has resulted in improved environmental performance.

Officials in the Department of the Environment and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution are currently considering the findings of the report in detail and will receive a presentation from the authors.

Ozone Layer

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the average percentage thinning of the stratospheric ozone layer over (a) Shetland and (b) northern Europe generally, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Atkins: The table sets out, for each year for which data are available, estimates of the average percentage departure of the thickness of the stratosperhic ozone layer over Shetland, from the long-term mean.

Year	Shetland (Lerwick)
1981	+5·2
1982	+7·0
1983	−2·6
1984	+2·1
1985	−1·8
1986	+0·9
1987	+0·6
1988	−2·1
1989	+1·5
1990	−0·9
1991	−0·3
1992	−3·2
1993	−6·7

Analysis of global ozone data is carried out by the World Meterological Office—United Nations Environment Programme ozone scientific assessment panel. Its latest estimate of the average depletion of the ozone layer at northern European latitudes is 3 per cent. per decade from 1979 to 1991. Large departures of 1 to 2 per cent. from this trend from late 1991 to May 1993 were reported by the United Kingdom stratospheric ozone review group, whose report has been placed in the library of the House. These years were greatly influenced by atmospheric dynamics and Mount Pinatubo volcanic aerosol and the low figures for 1992 and 1993 therefore do not necessarily imply an acceleration of ozone loss.

Environmental Information

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new classes of environmental information held by his Department were made available to the public between July 1992 and July 1993; what new rights to participate in the decision-making process on environmental issues were extended by his Department to the public in this period; and what new rights to seek remedies in the event of breach of environmental laws or failure to provide environmental services were introduced by his Department for the public.

Mr. Atkins: Since December 1992 the public have had statutory rights of access to all classes of environmental information subject to safeguards on confidentiality. In addition, a comprehensive system of public registers was already in place to enable the public to inspect information relating to the work of the pollution control authories. The environmental information regulations introduced the right of appeal to the courts for failure to release environmental information and the White Paper "Open Government"—Cm 2290—announced that the Government are considering whether an independent tribunal should be established to hear disputes.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his assessment of the adequacy of stabilisation of carbon dioxide emissions at 1990 levels as a United Kingdom contribution to the global restriction of carbon dioxide emissions.

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom's programme of measures aimed at returning emissions of carbon dioxide to 1990 levels by 2000 fully meets our commitments under the United Nations framework convention on climate change. The adequacy of the convention's commitments is due to be reviewed by the conference of parties to the convention in 1995, and again by 1998.

Living Over the Shop Campaign

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will announce his decision in respect of the living over the shop campaign; and how he proposes to implement that decision.

Sir George Young: I propose to make up to £10 million in supplementary credit approvals available to local authorities in 1994-95, to enable them to carry out flats over shops schemes. I am pleased that we have received over 500 separate bids from local authorities for resources totalling £40 million. I shall announce the allocations by the end of February. In addition, the Housing Corporation is funding such schemes from its approved development programme.

I am encouraged by increasing interest from authorities, housing associations and property owners in bringing spare space above shops back into residential use.

Disabled People

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ensure the provision of easy access for the disabled to all public buildings and spaces in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: In England and Wales, building regulations made under the Building Act 1984 make provision for access by disabled people to new public buildings. I have asked the Building Regulations Advisory Committee to advise me on whether these provisions should be extended to cover certain alterations and changes of use in such buildings. I hope to make a statement on this before Easter.

Elsewhere in the United Kingdom this is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Council Housing

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many families currently on local authority waiting lists need (a) one bedroom, (b) two bedrooms and (c) three or more bedroom properties.

Sir George Young: Information on the number of households on council housing waiting lists is reported by local authorities on their annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns.

The latest available figures show a total of 1,208,790 households on council housing waiting lists in England on 1 April 1993.

No information is collected centrally on the size of dwellings required by families on the housing waiting lists.

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) one bedroom, (b) two bedroom and (c) three or more bedroom properties local authorities manage; and how many are currently available in (i) Greater London and (ii) south-east England.

Sir George Young: Local authorities report each year on the number of dwellings that they manage in their subsidy claim form returns.

The latest available figures are for 1 April 1993 and show that local authorities managed 980,106 properties with one bedroom, 1,204,067 with two bedrooms and 1,577,847 with three or more bedrooms.

The number of local authority owned dwellings that were available for letting immediately, or after minor repairs, on 1 April 1993 totalled 9,663 in Greater London and 5,172 in south-east England—excluding London—as reported by local authorities in their latest annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns. Information is not centrally available on size of local authority-owned dwellings that are vacant.

Building Regulations

Ms. Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received from housing associations regarding the review of part M of the Building Regulations and its application; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received from (a) consumer groups and (b) Age Concern regarding the review of part M of the Building Regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I have received a number of representations regarding the review of part M of the Building Regulations, including some from housing associations, consumer groups and Age Concern who consider that the requirements in the Building Regulations relating to access for disabled people should be extended to cover new dwellings. The Building Regulations Advisory Committee is at present examining the desirability and practicability of this. I hope to be in a position to make a statement on this before Easter.

Homelessness

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 438, which local authorities formally made representations to him in writing seeking restrictions on the rights of access of homeless persons to social housing before October 1993.

Sir George Young: Over the years, as part of our continuing dialogue with local authorities, we have received a steady flow of representations on different aspects of housing policy, including the homelessness legislation. We do not keep a separate record of the sort of representations that the hon. Member appears to have in mind.

Packaging Waste

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received a plan from the companies of the packaging chain to recover packaging waste.

Mr. Gummer: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Technology and I will be meeting the producer responsibility group on Monday 7 February. We expect to receive a plan from the group at that meeting. I will ensure that copies are placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Independent Tribunal Service

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answers of 20 January, Official Report, columns 798-99, what target he has set for the time to process an appeal by the independent tribunal service; how many appeals were processed after this target time; and how many appeals in total were dealt with during this period.

Mr. Scott: The responsibility for the administration of the independent tribunal service lies with its president, His Honour Judge Anthony Thorpe. I am informed by Judge Thorpe that in his view there was until recently insufficient information on which to base a target for disability appeal tribunals. The independent tribunal service is currently collecting information to enable Judge Thorpe to set targets for this work for 1994-95.

Invalidity Benefit

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many men aged 55 years and over, have had their entitlement to invalidity benefit withdrawn in the last six months.

Mr. Scott: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Lung Cancer

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the criteria for diagnosis of asbestos-related lung cancer.

Mr. Scott: We have no such plans.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 3 February, Official Report, column 838.

Child Dependency Additions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what saving in the cost of child dependency additions will result from deferring entitlement from 28 to 52 weeks of incapacity, in 1995-96 and each subsequent year for which estimates are available; and what are the average numbers of families and children expected to be affected in each year.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table:

	1995-96	1996-97
Estimated Savings[1]	£5 million	£5 million
Estimated number of families affected[2]	10,000	10,000
Estimated number of children affected[2]	20,000	20,000

[1] Estimates expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to the nearest £5 million, and are net of offsetting expenditure on income-related benefits.

[2] Figures given are the average number of cases affected at a point in time in the years concerned, rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Advisory Panel on Assessment of Incapacity

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will consult the members of the Advisory Panel on Assessment of Incapacity as to their willingness to have their identity revealed to hon. Members; and if he will publish the names of those who have no objection;

(2) if he will make the briefing and background papers which are supplied to members of the Advisory Panel on Assessment of Incapacity available on request to organisations not represented on the panel;

(3) which organisations are represented on the Advisory Panel on Assessment of Incapacity; and by what criteria they were selected.

Mr. Scott: I am not willing to consult or publish as suggested. The assessment panel members have not been selected as representatives of particular organisations. I explained my reasons in Standing Committee E on the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Bill on 1 February at columns 27-28.

I can reassure the hon. Member that copies of the background paper used by the assessment panel are available from this Department.

European Law

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 26 January, Official Report, column 265, if he will outline what is meant by the referral to the European Court of Justice for a preliminary ruling on questions of European Law; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: If a court or tribunal isa member state is unclear on a question of European law in a case before it, the issue can be referred to the European Court of Justice for a definitive interpretation of the provisions of European law in question. Such a referral can be made by any court or tribunal if it considers that a decision on the issue is necessary to enable judgment to be given. Once the European Court of Justice has answered the question, it is sent back to the national court or tribunal, which then applies the ruling to the case before it. Such a ruling by the European Court of Justice, interpreting provisions of European law at the request of a national court or tribunal, is called a preliminary ruling.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the projected expenditure in 1993-94 on staff wages for the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 3 February 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for details about the projected expenditure on staff wages in the Child Support Agency in 1993/94.

Of the total budget of £116 million allocated for the Agency's capital and running costs in 1993/94, approximately £74 million is for staffing costs.

I hope you find this information useful.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions since April 1993 the Child Support Agency has issued letters alleging parenthood which have been subsequently withdrawn as being in error.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 3 February 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security, asking about maintenance enquiry forms (MEFs) sent in error by the Child Support Agency.

The information requested is not collected. It is estimated, however, that of the 344,000 MEFs issued to the end of December 1993, less than 0·05 per cent. have been withdrawn owing to error.

I hope that you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Act 1991

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to publish the report in connection with the operation of the Child Support Act 1991 in relation to ethnic minorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt [holding answer 28 January 1994]: Prior to the launch of the Child Support Agency, the Department of Social Security commissioned surveys on the new system of child maintenance among a number of groups, including Asian and Afro-Caribbean communities. These surveys were carried out with a view to developing specific publicity campaigns and were taken into account in addressing the information needs of the communities but were not intended for publication.

Elderly People

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's estimate of the number of people who will be aged (a) 65 years and over and (b) 80 years and over for each year to 2010.

Mr. Hague [pursuant to his reply, 28 January 1994, c. 446]: The information contained a typographical error. The estimate for the number of people—in thousands—aged 80 and over in 2001 should read "2,499".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Industrial Research Establishments

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date he received a copy of the KPMG report on his Department's industrial research establishments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 4 May 1993, Official Report, column 4, when I undertook to report the conclusions of the KPMG report to the House. An initial report was received from KPMG in November 1993 and further work has been commissioned which I expect to be completed in the near future.

Coal and Steel Industries

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total budget allocated by the European Community, under the European Coal and Steel Community treaty, to assist the improvement of economic and social conditions in the coal and steel-producing regions of the EC, giving figures separately, and in each year since their establishment, for (a) industrial loans, (b) conversion loans in areas where coal and steel industries have suffered severe job losses, (c) housing loans to improve living conditions for coal and steel workers, (d) readapation grants for workers made redundant in coal and steel industries, (e) RECHAR, (f) RESIDER and (g) coal and steel research; and what proportion of each of these grants has been awarded to (i) the northern region and (ii) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information is as follows:

	EC (million ecu)	All member states (million ecu)	United Kingdom share (million ecu)	United Kingdom percentage share
Total ECSC loans advanced 1952-92	19,670·4	—	4,792·[illegible]	24·0

A total figure for the period 1952-92 and a breakdown by country is not readily available, figures for the last three years are given:

A more detailed breakdown is not readily available but some further information is available in the ECSC financial report for 1992, which I am arranging to be placed in the Library of the House.

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 986, what are the special adviser Lady Strathnaver's particular qualifications, expertise or experience relating to his departmental responsibilities.

Mr. Heseltine: She does her job well.

Pension Funds

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many court cases have involved superannuation scheme transfers by state-owned industries since 1988; and what were their outcomes;

(2) which state-owned industries have used superannuation scheme surpluses for uses other than those for which the funds were established since 1988; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how state-owned industries' pension fund trustees are consulted over changes to the funds;

(4) how many trustees are appointed to each of the state-owned industries' pension funds; how they are selected; and if he will name the current trustees in each case.

Mr. Eggar: The management of the pension funds of state-owned industries is a matter for the individual industry concerned and for the fund trustees.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February 1994, Official Report, column 611.

British Gas

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total grant aid received by British Gas from the European Community for key infrastructure improvements prior to privatisation.

Mr. Eggar: This subject is a matter for the board of British Gas. I have therefore passed on this request to the chairman of British Gas.

Insurance

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what review he makes of insurance companies' participation in block insurance schemes of insurance companies premium rate policies in respect of geographical areas and of insurance discounts for neighbourhood watch and allied schemes.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: None. The Secretary of State's powers under the Insurance Companies Act 1982 are primarily concerned with the solvency of insurance companies and, except where such matters are concerned, he does not intervene in their day-to-day business.

Cash Limits

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes will be made to his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IV, vote 1—support for business, consumer and investor protection, energy programmes and administration—will be increased by £1,789,000 from £1,237,111,000 to £1,238,900,000.

An increase in the gross running costs limit for the Department of Trade and Industry from £328,299,000 to £330,088,000 fully accounts for this amount. The increase largely results from the take-up of £1,528,000 under the end year flexibility arrangements announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1993, Official Report, columns 512-17. The balance is accounted for by transfers from Property Holdings of £245,000 and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of £28,000 offset by a transfer to the Office of Public Service and Science of £12,000 in respect of machinery of government changes.

There are some other changes in the allocation of provision. This includes a net increase of expenditure by the Warren Spring Laboratory and United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority merger costs amounting to £5,591,000 and £200,000 towards support for the mining equipment industry. These amounts are offset by a corresponding reduction on the fast reactor energy programme.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Cryer: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what quantity of CFCs was exported from the United Kigdom for each year from 1990 to 1993.

Mr. McLoughlin: In 1990 the United Kingdom exported 48,400 metric tonnes of CFCs. These are defined as chlorinated and fluorinated derivatives of acylic hydrocarbons and comprise commodity codes 290340100 to 290340600 of the combined nomenclature. More recent information is not available due to commercial confidentiality.

WALES

Teachers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many full-time teachers were employed by Welsh local education authorities in the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The latest available data are for 1992-93. The information for that and earlier years is contained in "Statistics of Education and Training in Wales: Schools", No. 2, 1994,—tables 6.03 and 6.06—published on 2 February 1994.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made as to the effect the operation of the channel tunnel will have on transport in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Road transport will have good access to the tunnel via the trunk road and motorway network. It is for the railway operators to assess the needs of their customers. Connections with the inter-capital services from Waterloo are expected this year. Services are expected to develop as British Rail's schedules become fully operational.

Gross Domestic Product

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current gross domestic product per head by constituency in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: Estimates of gross domestic product are not available for areas smaller than counties.

A470

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when plans will be brought forward to upgrade the A470 road between Betws y Coed and Blaenau Ffestiniog; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The draft orders for the first stage of the improvement, between Cancoed and Minffordd, were published on 30 November 1993. Further stages are being progressed.

Redundancy Payments

Mr. Ieun Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the total amounts spent on redundancy payments for each Welsh health authority or trust, and for Wales as a whole, for each year since 1987.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not available centrally.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what he is doing to promote equal opportunities for women entrepreneuses in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Assistance for business start-ups and for existing businesses is of course available on an equal opportunities basis throughout Wales, but women entrepreneuses can face additional challenges and I am funding the consortium Chwarae Teg to report on the appropriateness of existing business support services in meeting the particular needs of women. In the light of these findings, Chwarae Teg will develop an action plan for improving those services.

Landfill Sites

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the landfill refuse disposal sites in Wales (a) which are licensed for co-disposal and (b) for which applications for licences for co-disposal have been made but not yet granted.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not maintained centrally. I would refer the hon. Member to the district councils which are responsible for licensing waste disposal facilities.

Breast Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of women in the eligible target group have been screened for breast cancer in the last three years in Wales; how many women have breast cancer; and how many women died from breast cancer in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: As at 31 March 1993, 39 per cent. of the eligible women in Wales—women aged 50 to 64—were known to have been screened for breast cancer in the previous three years as part of the national screening programme. However, it should be noted that the screening centres for the populations in north and west Wales did not become operational until the end of 1991 and the beginning of 1992 respectively.

Estimates of the number of women who currently have breast cancer are not available centrally. However, an average of 1,685 new breast cancer cases per year were registered for Welsh residents for the period 1984 to 1988.

In the three years to 31 December 1992 there were 2,365 deaths of Welsh female residents from breast cancer.

Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the calling in of the district auditor to investigate fraud and embezzlement in the authority;

(2) on what date the district auditor was requested to investigate the travel budget of the health promotion for Wales; and on what date he expects to receive the auditor's report.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: On 13 December 1993, following an internal enquiry, the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales requested the district audit service to carry out a full investigation of all expenses claims for international travel. Its investigation is continuing and a report is expected in mid-February. The chairman has kept the Department informed throughout and is continuing to do so.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, the chairman of the South Glamorgan health authority and the provost of the Welsh National School of Medicine in relation to the total cumulative salary and terms and conditions of employment present and future of the executive director of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Professor Catford has resigned from both his authority and college posts with immediate effect from Wednesday 2 February 1994. He therefore has no present or future terms and conditions of employment in relation to the Health Promotion Authority for Wales.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to the travel expenses of the executive director of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To date, I have received one letter and 11 parliamentary questions from the hon. Member.

Cervical Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of women in the target group have had a cervical cancer smear test in Wales within the last five years; how many women in Wales have cervical cancer; and how many women died of cervical cancer.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: As at 31 March 1993 an estimated 84 per cent. of women in the target group—women aged 20 to 64 resident in the district but excluding those no longer required to be screened—were known to have had a cervical smear test in the previous five years as part of the national recall system.

Estimates of the number of women who currently have cervical cancer are not available centrally. However, an average of 373 new cervical cancer cases per year were registered for Welsh residents for the period 1984 to 1988.

In the five years to 31 December 1992 there were 611 deaths of Welsh residents from cervical cancer.

Cash Limits

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits for his Department in the current financial year.

Mr. Redwood: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit on class XV, vote 2 will be increased by £4,500,000 from £173,940,000 to £178,440,000; the cash limit on class XV, vote 8 will be reduced by £22,145,000 from £1,381,726,000 to £1,359,581,000; and the cash limit on class XV, vote 9 will be increased by £404,000 from £65,142,000 to £65,546,000. The local authority capital cash limit—WO/LACAP—will be increased by £358,000 from £409,185,000 to £409,543,000 and the cash limit on the European regional development fund—WO/ERDF—will be reduced by £18,116,000 from £50,650,000 to £32,534,000. The running costs limit for the Department will be increased by £165,000 from £77,284,000 to £77,449,000.

The increase in the cash limit for class XV, vote 2 is required partly to offset a forecast shortfall in receipts by the Welsh Development Agency.

The net reduction in the cash limit for class XV, vote 8 arises mainly from the transfer of provision to class XV, vote 7 in respect of (i) a revised estimate of drug expenditure for GP fundholders—£6,750,000—and (ii) NHS trusts—£16,182,000. These transfers comprise part of a spring supplementary estimate for class XV, vote 7 of £46,178,000.

The increase in the cash limit for class XV, vote 9 comprises mainly a transfer of £147,000 from the Property Services Agency and additional resources for capital expenditure of £250,000.

There are also changes to two non-voted cash limits. The increase in the cash limit for WO/LACAP is in respect of a transfer from HO/LACAP in respect of the replacement of fire service mobilisation and communication systems. The reduction in the cash limit for WO/ERDF reflects lower than expected expenditure on ERDF projects in 1993-94.

None of the proposed changes will add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 871, what are the particular qualifications, experience or expertise relating to Northern Ireland of the special adviser Mr. Jonathon Caine.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: It is not my practice to comment on the qualifications, expertise or experience of my special adviser.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February, Official Report, column 611.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Amount £
1990-91	93,269·04
1991-92	60,164·56
1992-93	63,817·38

Cash Limits

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on cash and running costs limits for the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland departmental services, the independent living fund and certain national agricultural schemes for 1993-94.

Sir John Wheeler: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, it is proposed that the cash limit for class XVI, vote 1—the Northern Ireland Office—will be increased by £29,526,000 from £895,440,000 to £924,966,000.

The cash limit for most Northern Ireland departmental services will be decreased by £46,165,000 from £3,628,922,000 to £3,582,757,000. This decrease arises from the transfer of £22,333,000 to the Northern Ireland Office cash limit and other technical changes of £23,832,000 net.

The cash limit for the independent living fund will decrease by £52,000 to reflect a reduction in provision earlier in the year.

The cash limit covering national agricultural capital grant schemes and certain assistance for production, marketing and processing and the fishing industry will decrease by £1,063,000 from £11,027,000 to £9,964,000 mainly as a result of transfers to non-cash-limited areas.

The combined running cost limit for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland departments will be increased by £6,869,000 from £723,455,000 to £730,324,000. This reflects the take-up of £3,582,000 end-year flexibility entitlement announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1993, Official Report, columns 511-17, a net transfer of £1,610,000 from the Department of Social Security, mainly in respect of child support costs, a transfer of £1,657,000 from the Inland Revenue in respect of services provided and minor transfers totalling a net £20,000. Of the revised running cost provision, £174,692,000 is for the NIO and £555,632,000 is the NI departments.

These changes will not add to the planned total of PE.

Benefits

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentages of adults and children, distinguishing between claimants, adult dependants and child dependants, received (a) supplementary benefit or income support, (b) family income supplement or family credit, (c) rent rebates or rent allowances or (d) rate rebates or community charge benefit or council tax benefit in each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Ancram: The available information is set out in the tables. Housing benefit is the Northern Ireland equivalent to community charge benefit and council tax benefit.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commowealth Affairs how many times property on St. Helena has fallen forfeit to Her Majesty's Government; and if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which this occurs.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We are aware of one case in which a real property has technically fallen forfeit to Her Majesty. However, under the relevant legislation the Government of St. Helena would have to follow further procedures in order to give effect to that forfeiture. The Government of St. Helena have declared that they have no plans to take these steps. I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly setting out the legal background.

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1989-90 and after 26 October 1989, 1990-91, 1991-92, 1992-93 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There is no separate budget for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs' internal travel, which is minimal. Similarly, his overseas travel is paid from a budget shared with other FCO Ministers. The figures for actual expenditure since 1989 on his overseas travel are:

	£
1 April 1989 to 26 October 1989	287,856·86
27 October 1989 to 31 March 1990	506,903·44
1 April 1990 to 31 March 1991	694,404·04
1 April 1991 to 31 March 1992	1,037,373·50
1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993	1,569,712·00
1 April 1993 to date	1,021,503·70

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the overseas visits that have been made by Foreign Office Ministers since June 1987; and what was the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The information is available in a table of 30 pages which has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what ministerial visits have been made by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, including the Overseas Development Administration, over each of the last three years to (a) Indonesia, (b) Jordan, (c) Oman, (d) Nigeria, (e) Ecuador, (f) Malaysia and (g) India; and what was their main purpose in each case.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Over the last three years, Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers including the Minister for Overseas Development have made the following visits to the named countries.

Country	Minister	Date	Purpose of visit
Indonesia	Lord Caithness	April 1991	Bilateral

Lockerbie Bombing

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Libya to make two of its citizens available to face charges concerning the Lockerbie bombing; what responses he has recently received from the Libyan Government on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have made no such representations. The Libyan Government are fully aware of the requirements of the United Nations Security Council, and in particular that they should ensure the apearance of those accused of the Lockerbie bombing for trial before the appropriate United States or United Kingdom court.

South Pacific Commission

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the reasons for withdrawing from the South Pacific Commission.

Mr. Goodlad: Withdrawal from membership of the South Pacific Commission will allow us to concentrate limited financial resources where they will have most effect, on maintaining a bilateral diplomatic presence in a number of south Pacific countries, and on a continuing bilateral and multilateral aid programme. Since the New Hebrides became independent as Vanuatu in 1980 the United Kingdom's right to membership of the commission has depended solely on the existence of the Pitcairn island dependency. Withdrawal will not affect support for the commission's development projects, which is met from the Overseas Development Aministration's aid programme budget.

Belize

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current security of Belize; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The sovereignty and independence of Belize are recognised by all members of the United Nations. Belize is also a member of the Organisation of American States. We have made clear our readiness to participate with others in any consultations arising from a future threat to Belize's security.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise the issue of the security of Belize and the political instability in Guatemala at the United Nations Security Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have no plans to do so. Belize is a member of the United Nations and would be free to raise this issue if she so wished.

Korea

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent talks have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the United States of America concerning the current situation on the Korean peninsula.

Mr. Goodlad: We are in regular and continuous contact with the United States government on Korean matters.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the peaceful reunification of the Korean peninsula.

Mr. Goodlad: We have consistently supported efforts to achieve peaceful reunification of the two Koreas. This requires an early resumption of substantive discussions between them.

Flight ULE 966

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 25 January, Official Report, column 145, how many Jamaican citizens intending to travel to the United Kingdom on flight ULE 966 arriving at Gatwick on 21 December checked special travel documentation, issued by Caribbean Gold, the tour operators, with officials at the British high commission; and what advice these passengers received.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British high commission in Kingston has no record of any enquiries from Jamaican citizens holding special travel documentation from Caribbean Gold.

Azerbaijan

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the supply of arms to Azerbaijan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Since February 1992 a voluntary Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe embargo has been in place in the supply of military equipment to the parties in the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict. We have stood by the terms of this embargo and will continue to do so.

As I made clear in my answer to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 27 January, Official Report, column 467, it would be a serious matter if a British company were found to be breaking this embargo.

European Union

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The following meetings are planned.

Cash Limits

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further changes he proposes to make in his Department's diplomatic wing cash limits and running cost limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Goodlad: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for class II, vote 1—overseas representation—will be reduced by £2,027,000 from £818,609,000 to £816,582,000.

The gross running costs limit on class II, vote 1 will be reduced by £10,228,000 from £579,877,000 to £569,649,000 following a transfer of provision to class II, vote 2 and vote 4.

The cash limit for class II, vote 2—other external relations—will be increased by £100,827,000 from £301,230,000 to £402,057,000. The increase will be met by underspends of £9·2 million on vote 1, by underspends of £1·8 million on vote 2 and by increased appropriations in aid. The balance will be charged to the reserve.

The cash limit for class II, vote 4—the British Council—will be increased by £4,636,000 in respect of adverse foreign currency movements—£2,636,000—and restructuring costs—£2,000,000. The amounts will be met by a claim on the reserve and by underspends on vote 1 respectively.

As the increases will be offset by savings and charges to the reserve, they will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Cash Limits

Mr. Page: To ask the Lord President of the Council what changes he proposes to the Privy Council Office vote cash and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Newton: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit of class XIX, vote 3 will be increased by £7,000 from £2,308,000 to £2,315,000 and the running costs by £47,000 from £2,330,000 to £2,377,000.

The increase in the cash limit reflects the transfer of funds from Property Holdings class VII vote 6 owing to increased accommodation costs and will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The increase in the running costs reflects the transfer from Property Holdings; the additional £40,000 is for the cost of the central drugs co-ordination unit and the ambit of class XIX, vote 3 is to be modified accordingly.

SCOTLAND

Diabetics

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what policy he has for targeting care towards insulin-dependent diabetics who are lone parents;

(2) what measures he has in place, or intends to introduce, to encourage diabetics to be more open about their condition and to ensure adequate support in the community.

Mr. Stewart: As part of their treatment, insulin dependent diabetics are advised of the crucial importance of maintaining an injecting and dietary routine, and of regularly measuring blood sugar levels, in order to reduce the risk of falling into a diabetic coma. It is particularly important that those living alone, and lone parents, should follow this advice closely and consider keeping neighbours or relations informed of their movements.

A joint task force of the Department of Health and the British Diabetic Association, with Scottish and other United Kingdom Health Department representation, is currently considering the implementation in the United Kingdom of the St. Vincent declaration of the World Health Organisation on the care of diabetic patients. As part of its work, the task force is considering how best to promote the self-care and community support of diabetic citizens—including those living alone and lone parents—and their fullest possible integration into society.

Tups

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost to the Treasury of hiring out tups under the tup and bull scheme in the crofting counties; and what are the projected savings if the tups were instead to be sold to crofters.

Sir Hector Monro: The various livestock improvement schemes for crofters, including the ram supply scheme, cost approximately £800,000 in 1992-93 of which £300,000 was offset by charges and other income generated by the stud farms. The change from a ram supply to a ram purchase scheme should reduce the net annual deficit associated with the schemes by about £125,000.

Crofter Housing Scheme

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place a copy of the PIEDA report on the crofter housing scheme in the Library when it is completed; and if he will state the cost of commissioning the report.

Sir Hector Monro: My Department has commissioned PIEDA plc to undertake an evaluation study of the crofters, etcetera, building grants and loans scheme. The report of the study will be published shortly and I shall arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library.

For reasons of commercial confidentiality, I am unable to provide details of the cost of commissioning the report.

Cervical Smear Tests

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 759, if he will make it his policy to monitor centrally the amount of time taken to notify women of the results of their cervical smear tests within each health board area.

Mr. Stewart: Yes. The new national co-ordinating unit for cervical screening which is being set up, following the recommendations of the Inverclyde inquiry report, will monitor the achievement of the targets set for health boards on this programme.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much it cost Ayrshire and Arran health board to produce and distribute its annual report and financial review 1992-93; and how much it cost the health board to produce its annual review in 1993.

Mr. Stewart: It cost Ayrshire and Arran health board £12,111 to produce its 1992-93 annual report and £17,000 to produce its annual review in 1993. The 1992-93 financial review was produced in-house and costs are not separately identifiable. Distribution costs cannot be identified. They constitute mainly internal costs and some postage expenses.

GP Fundholders

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the distinction he makes in the roles of general practitioner fundholders compared to non-fundholders in respect of NHS priorities and planning guidance for the future of the NHS; and on what specific legislation he bases this distinction.

Mr. Stewart: GP fundholders are purchasers of health care and control approximately 20 per cent of the total hospital and community health services budget for the patients on their lists. As such, they are accountable under the National Health Service (Fundholding Practices) (Scotland) Regulations 1993—SI 1993 No. 488—for their purchasing decisions and need to be aware of national priorities and targets which the Government expect purchasers collectively in Scotland—health boards and GP fundholders—to achieve, within the resources it makes available.

Other general practitioners are not accountable in the same way, although the Government have encouraged health boards to involve GPs in planning and in reaching decisions about purchasing care.

Cash Limits

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes the Lord Advocate proposes to the Crown Office cash and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Lang: The cash limit for class IX, vote 12—Crown Office, Scotland, procurator fiscal service and Lord Advocate's Department: administration—will be reduced by £400,000 from £39,495,000 to £39,095,000. Within this total, the running cost limit will be reduced by £400,000 from £33,722,000 to £33,322,000. The resultant saving will, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, fully offset additional expenditure on class IX, vote 13—Crown Office, Scotland: Crown prosecutions and legal services—resulting from increased court activity and consequential higher than expected witness costs.

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he intends to make to the cash limits and running costs provision for 1993-94 within his responsibility.

Mr. Lang: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, I intend to make changes to seven voted cash limits, one non-voted cash block and three running costs limit:

(a) The cash limit for class XIV, vote 2, agricultural services, Scotland, will be decreased by £6,500,000 from £123,838,000 to £117,338,000. The reduction arises mainly from lower than expected demand for structural measures and accompanying measures to CAP reform.

(b) The cash limit for class XIV, vote 7, housing and environmental services, Scotland, will be increased by £12,703,000 from £418,959,000 to £431,662,000. The increase takes account of £11,112,000 increase in Scottish Homes' grant in aid to assist housing associations in the acquistion of local authority and new town development corporation housing stock; an increase in provision of £1,589,000 in housing support grant; and an increase in provision of £2,000 to meet an unanticipated shortfall in appropriations in aid of repayment of loans and grants by first-time buyers. These increases will be partly offset by a reduction in the SO/LA2 cash block. There is also an increase of £200,000 from £12,838,000 to £13,038,000 in the running cost provision for Historic Scotland; this will be offset by an increase in the agency's appropriations in aid from £7,674,000 to £7,874,000. In effect this means that there is a net increase of £198,000 in appropriation in aid on the vote as a whole.

(c) The cash limit for class XIV, vote 12, law, order, miscellaneous health and social work services, Scotland, will be increased by a net total of £2,453,000 from £283,532,000 to £285,985,000. The supplementary estimate allows for an increase in provision of £2,371,000 for the Scottish Criminal Records Office; and an increase in running cost provision of £400,000 for the Scottish Prison Service. These will be partially offset by transfers from other votes.

(d) The cash limit for class XIV, vote 14, hospital community health, family health—part—and other health services, Scotland, will be decreased by a net total of £17,724,000 from £2,784,391,000 to £2,766,667,000. The decrease takes account of a transfer of £21,042,000 to class XIV, vote 13 for changes in the requirements for GP practice fundholders and the external financing limit for NHS trusts; and transfers of £2,000,000 to class XIV, vote 12 and £318,000 from class XII, vote 3. There is also an increase of £5,000,000 in health boards' capital expenditure which will be offset by increased receipts from the sale of land and buildings. The increase in the NHS trusts' external financing limit includes £438,000 for take-up of the end-year flexibility entitlement.

(e) The cash limit for class XIV, vote 19, administration of justice, Scotland, will be decreased by £2,300,000 from £53,005,000 to £50,705,000. The decrease is due to fewer than expected cases arising under the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1993.

(f) The cash limit for class XIV, vote 21, Scottish Office administration, will be increased by a net total of £1,142,000 from £164,436,000 to £165,578,000. The increase results from a transfer of £195,000 from the Property Holdings agency in respect of maintenance charges; a transfer of £1,000,000 from class XIV, vote 19, as a result of running costs being redeployed; a tranfer of provision of £25,000 to class XIV, vote 12, the Scottish Office Pensions Agency for the provision of security staff; and a transfer of provision of £28,000 to class XIV, vote 12 for capital provision for the Scottish fire service.

(g) The cash limit for class XIV, vote 22, Scottish Record Office, will be increased by £26,000 from £10,269,000 to £10,295,000 as a result of a transfer from the Property Holdings agency in respect of maintenance charges.

(h) The non-voted cash block SO/LA2, which covers housing capital expenditure by local authorities and capital expenditure by new towns, will be decreased by £11,112,000 from £275,414,000 to £264,302,000. This will fully offset the increase in Scottish Homes grant in aid in class XIV, vote 7.

As a result of the transfers mentioned for votes 7, 12 and 21, the Scottish Office running cost/limit will increase by £1,795,000 from £332,856,000 to £334,651,000.

The change to class XIV, vote 19, Scottish courts administration, requires a decrease in their running cost limit of £2,300,000 from £42,758,000 to £40,458,000.

The change to class XIV, vote 22, Scottish Records Office requires an increase in its running cost limit of £26,000 from £4,054,000 to £4,080,000.

The increases will be offset by savings on other votes within my responsibility and from the reserve. There will not therefore be any addition to the planned total of public expenditure.

Prisoners (Educational Qualifications)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the educational qualifications of prisoners convicted for (a) theft, (b) burglary and (c) violent crimes against the person in each of the past four years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have asked Mr. E. W. Frizzell, the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 4 February 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the educational qualifications of prisoners convicted for theft, burglary and violent crimes against the person in each of the past four years.

Information on the educational qualifications of persons received into Scottish penal establishments is not collected by the Scottish Prison Service.

Crime Statistics

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many convictions there were in (a) the sheriff court and (b) the High Court for (i) house burglary, (ii) theft, (iii) theft from vehicles, (iv) robbery and (v) murder committed in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow in each of the past 10 years; and if he will give the total number of convictions for each of those offences committed in that area as a proportion of those committed in both Strathclyde and Scotland as a whole.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information held centrally on convictions does not indicate the location where the offences were committed but information is available for Greenock sheriff court and generally all such convictions will relate to offences committed in Inverclyde district.

The available information is listed:

Restraints

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines have been issued to police forces concerning the use of leg restraints and body-belts with handcuffs in cases involving cases of deportation; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. Police forces in Scotland are not equipped with leg restraints or body-belts with handcuffs.

Scottish Nuclear Ltd.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the objectives he has for Scottish Nuclear Ltd.

Mr. Lang: I have set the following objectives for Scottish Nuclear; they are listed in order of priority:

1. To continue the safe operation of Scottish Nuclear's power stations at Hunterston and Torness, and consolidate and develop their operating performance.
2. To decommission successfully Hunterston A power station.
3. To achieve an improved financial performance.
4. To improve the image and public perception of nuclear power generation.
5. To investigate improved generating methods, particularly reactor and related technologies for the future.
6. To consider prudent and relevant diversification which makes sensible use of the company's skills.

Scottish Nuclear has been working to these objectives since it was set up in 1989. They are still valid today, but may need to be reconsidered in the light of the forthcoming nuclear review of the prospects of nuclear power.

Dental Treatment

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the waiting time for children awaiting treatment under an anaesthetic at each dental hospital at the latest available date.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 February 1994]: This information is not held centrally.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Law on Privacy

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if the Government's White Paper on the law on privacy will address the question of the confidentiality of house sale prices; and if he intends to protect such confidentiality.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The consultation document on the law on privacy, which was issued by the Lord Chancellor's Department on 30 July 1993, did not refer to house sale prices. None of the 122 consultees mentioned it and it will not be specifically referred to in the White Paper.

House Prices

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what plans there are to enable information about the price paid for a house to be made publicly available; and how the information is to be limited;

(2) what, and how many representations, he received before formulating plans to make the price paid for a house public knowledge.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are no current plans for such information to be made publicly available. A consultation document recently issued by Her Majesty's Land Registry invites views on whether to restore the practice of entering the price paid for a property on to the public land register.

Cash Limits

Mr. Heald: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what changes there will be to the Lord Chancellor's Department's running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The cash limit for class IX, vote 11—Public Record Office—will be increased by £309,000 from £37,858,000 to £38,167,000. The running cost limit for class IX, vote 11 will be increased by £309,000 from £24,200,000 to £24,509,000 to cover certain payments to Property Holdings for building maintenance. This increase will be financed by a transfer of provision from Property Holdings and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The cash limit for class IX, vote 1—Lord Chancellor's Department; administration of justice; England and Wales—will be reduced by £17,327,000 from £795,529,000 to £778,202,000 as a result of lower than anticipated expenditure on magistrates court grants and because the payment needed for the Land Registry trading fund in respect of the value of work outstanding at 1 April 1993 was £7,327,000 lower than originally estimated.

The cash limit for class IX, vote 3—Northern Ireland court service; administration of justice—will be reduced by £880,000 from £24,769,000 to £23,889,000. The reduction arises because of savings from keener than expected tenders in several building contracts and a professional services commission which have been let during the current year. The savings from the cash limit reductions on votes 1 and 3 will more than fully offset additional expenditure on class IX, vote 4, subject to approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, required for higher than estimated expenditure on legal advice and assistance and criminal legal aid.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Service Standards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy to ensure that none of the service standards specified in the charters published to date are relaxed or withdrawn during the current Parliament.

Mr. David Davis: Under the citizens charter, public services are required to set demanding but realistic standards of service. There is no intention to relax or withdraw service standards. On the contrary, as standards are met, so they are being raised.

Charles Barker

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much money was owed to Her Majesty's Stationery Office by the public relations company Charles Barker when it went into liquidation.

Mr. Waldegrave: HMSO Books was owed £1,704 when Charles Barker Ltd. went into administrative receivership.

Cash Limits

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals he has to change the 1993-94 cash limit of running costs limit for the Office of Public Service and Science.

Mr. Waldegrave: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for the Office of Public Service and Science—class XVIII, vote 1—will be increased by £90,000 from £73,508,000 to £73,598,000 and the gross running cost limit will also be increased by £90,000 from £90,568,000 to £90,658,000. This takes account of a transfer from the Department of Trade and Industry—class IV, vote 1—of £12,000 in respect of the running costs of the Link secretariat which is being transferred from the Department of Trade and Industry to the Office of Public Service and Science. In addition, £78,000 in respect of maintenance charges is being transferred from Property Holdings—class VII, vote 6. The increase is offset by transfers from other Government Departments and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes are proposed to the cash and running costs limit in the year 1993-94 in respect of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and health service commissioners.

Mr. Waldegrave: As announced in the Government's White Paper on open government published in July 1993, there will be a major extension to the responsibilities of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration from 4 April 1994. From that date, complaints that Government Departments and certain other bodies have unreasonably refused access to information in contravention of the code of practice proposed in the White Paper may be referred to the commissioner. In preparation for this work, the commissioner has sought a supplementary estimate for 1993-94 for additional staff and to make accommodation and other resources available for them.

The supplementary estimate also covers additional staff, their accommodation and administrative costs to match the increasing work loads for the Parliamentary Commissioner for Adminstration and health service commissioners as more complaints are being referred by MPs and received direct from members of the public.

The increased provision sought reflects the fact that the main functions of the office of the parliamentary commissioner and health service commissioners are demand led. Accordingly the cash limit for the office has been increased to £5,123,000.

Parliamentary approval of this additional expenditure will be sought in a supplementary estimate for the office of the parliamentary commissioner and health service commissioners—class XIX, vote 4—of £659,000.

PRIME MINISTER

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister which advisers to his Office are seconded from other organisations; and what are the organisations and the lengths and terms of the secondment.

The Prime Minister: Lord Poole is on secondment to the policy unit from James Capel and Co. Ltd. The terms of the secondment are covered by the normal confidentiality rules which apply to employer-employee relationships. The other advisers in my Office are not engaged on secondment terms.

Political Honours

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions since 1979 the political honours scrutiny committee has referred back names submitted to it.

The Prime Minister: The political honours scrutiny committee is a committee of the Privy Council. Its proceedings are never divulged.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister if he will arrange for future honours lists to include not only particulars of public service of recipients but information on their donations to party funds over the previous 10 years.

The Prime Minister: No.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister what is the definition of the term "for political services" as used in honours lists.

The Prime Minister: The term is used to indicate that the person honoured has rendered public service through the exercise of a political office or through a political party.

Public Appointments Unit

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister what information is available to right hon. and hon. Members from the public appointments unit; how this information can be obtained; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The public appointments unit maintains a register of people who are willing to be considered for public appointments. A nomination form and a leaflet explaining the role of the unit, and giving details of the different personal qualities, skills and experience that may be required, is available from the director of the unit, which is in the Cabinet Office. The director welcomes nominations of suitable candidates from all hon. Members.

The unit also provides advice to Government Departments on public appointments policy and procedures. Details of central guidance and examples of good practice are given in the "Guide on Public Appointments Procedures", produced in September 1992, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister how many names of candidates for public appointments are held on the Chief Whip's list as described in the Cabinet Office guide on public appointments procedures.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend has a number of sources of information upon which he can draw in providing advice, when requested.

Mr. Peter Levene

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what requests his office has received for Mr. Peter Levene to give evidence to the Scott inquiry.

The Prime Minister: None.

Disabled People

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to promote the rights of disabled people within the international community.

The Prime Minister: Following the United Nations decade of disabled persons—1983 to 1992—a number of resolutions to promote the integration and equality of opportunity for disabled people have been adopted, which the Government have supported. These include standard rules on the equalisation of opportunities for persons with disabilities, and resolutions on the full integration of persons with disabilities and the international day of disabled persons. The United Kingdom is also involved in a number of European Community programmes designed to integrate disabled people more fully into society, including HELIOS, Horizon and TIDE.

No. 10 Downing Street

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 610, if he will list each category of miscellaneous indirect costs of non-official events held at 10 Downing street.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply I gave the hon. Member on 1 February 1994, Official Report, column 610.

Lords-lieutenant

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what are the powers and duties of the lords-lieutenant in England.

The Prime Minister: Lords-lieutenant have no statutory powers. Their principal function is to act as the sovereign's personal representative in the county concerned. Their duties include support of the armed forces, the magistracy and voluntary organisations, as well as certain civic and social functions.

Public Appointments

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the total number of public appointments made by Ministers of the Crown or by the Crown or nominations by Ministers.

The Prime Minister: The information, as requested, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Belize

Dr. Spink: To ask the Prime Minister what recent contact he has had with the Prime Minister of Belize regarding the security situation; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I met the Belize Prime Minister during the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Limassol in October 1993. Mr. Esquivel and I have since exchanged letters.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Prime Minister what proportion of civil servants were operating in agencies run along "next steps" lines as at July 1993.

The Prime Minister: Around 60 per cent. of civil servants were working in agencies and other organisations operating on "next steps" lines as at July 1993.

Cash Limits

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has to change the 1993-94 cash limit or running costs limit for the Cabinet Office; other services vote.

The Prime Minister: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XIX, vote 1—Cabinet Office: other services —will be increased by £166,000 from £21,634,000 to £21,800,000 and the running costs limit increased by £166,000 from £24,414,000 to £24,580,000. The increase will be offset by the following inter-departmental transfers and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure:

(a) a reduction on Her Majesty's Treasury: administration —class XVII, vote 1—in respect of the transfer of provision for central services—£116,000;
(b) the transfer of provision for Property Holdings maintenance charges—£56,000;
(c) a transfer to Department of Social Security administration and miscellaneous services—class XIII, vote 4— for central services—£6,000.

Angela Heylin

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the appointment of Angela Heylin to the citizens charter advisory group.

The Prime Minister: Members of the panel of advisers on the citizens charter are appointed in a personal capacity and bring independent, professional expertise from the private sector. Angela Heylin was appointed on that basis.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister whether he will discuss Lockerbie when he next meets President Clinton.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The agenda for my meeting with President Clinton on 28 February has not yet been fixed.

Accounting Officers

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister what were the two most recent occasions on which the Prime Minister decided that a written ministerial direction should be issued to an accounting officer overruling the accounting officer's advice.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 February 1994]: None, so far as I am aware.

HEALTH

NHS Hospital Admissions

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many admissions to NHS hospitals for each of the last three years for which figures are available were elective admissions; and how many were emergency admissions; (2) how many admissions to NHS hospitals there were in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how many of these admissions were readmissions within a month of hospital discharge.

Mr. Sackville: The table shows the number of elective, day case and non-elective admissions in the general and acute sector. It is estimated that over 80 per cent. of all non-elective admissions are emergencies. Information on readmissions is not collected centrally.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on rebuilding general practitioners' surgeries in each of the last three years; and what percentage has been accounted for by general practitioner fundholders.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table. Information held centrally does not differentiate between fundholding and non-fundholding practices.

Dementia

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to encourage the joint commissioning by local authorities and district health authorities of generic home care for people with dementia and their carers.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department sees joint commissioning between local authorities and health authority purchasers of community care services as important in further strengthening the effectiveness and efficiency of community care provision. To this end, copies of the report "Joint Commissioning—A Slice Through Time", prepared for the Department, were distributed to social services departments and health authorities in March 1993. Copies of the report will be placed in the Library. In addition, the Department is currently undertaking a development project aimed at spreading good practice in joint commissioning of community services in general. This should increase authorities' expertise in joint commissioning for specific client groups.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 1 February, at column 611.

Land and Building (Sales)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Ms Jackson) on 24 January, Official Report, column 116, if she will publish a table showing what total levels of capital receipts have been realised from the sale of health authority land and buildings for each of the last five financial years in each of the regional health authority areas other than Trent regional health authority.

Mr. Sackville: The table shows the total capital receipts of each region. No breakdown of these figures into land, buildings and other assets is available centrally.

Ethnic Communities

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes her Department has made to the health service provision for elderly members of ethnic communities in (a) London and (b) England, following her recent survey.

Dr. Mawhinney: The final reports of studies carried out by the Age Concern institute of gerontology of health and social services provision for elderly people from ethnic minorities have been carefully assessed, and executive summaries of each have been commissioned as a prelude to determining how best the research findings might be disseminated.

The 1993 Royal College of Physicians publication "Access to health care for people from black and ethnic minorities", copies of which will be placed in the Library, includes a paper by the Department's adviser in ethnic minority health which draws on the institute of gerontology's work. This sets out, for the use of health service purchasers and professionals in the field, the principles which should underline the provision of health care for black and ethnic minority elderly people. It is of course the responsibility of district health authorities to assess the health needs of their resident populations, including the ethnic communities, and to ensure that appropriate services are made available.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been private patient income of directly managed units in each year since 1990-91 nationally and by region.

Mr. Sackville: The total income figures shown in the table have decreased due to the decreasing number of directly managed units in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Notes:
1. The figures in the table include money received from NHS patients paying for accommodation in single rooms or small wards—section 63, NHS Act 1977—private in-patients—section 65—and private non-resident patients—section 66.
2. Overseas visitors—section 121—have been excluded as these are not separately identifiable for all the years requested.
3. The 1992-93 figures are provisional and subject to National Audit Office audit amendment.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much income by region has been generated by private patient facilities in national health service hospitals in each year since 1987-88.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 31 January at columns 531-32.

Counselling and Condoms

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has received from the health districts which are running evaluation projects looking at the provision of counselling and condoms on a starter basis by general practices; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Since 1992 the Department has suggested that health authorities consider developing the role of general practitioners in safer sexual counselling and the provision of information and condoms on a "starter" basis. Results from these projects are generally favourable. In particular, offering sexual health advice during family planning and smear test consultations is an efficient and effective way of reaching sexually active women. On the basis of their own evaluation, some regions have decided to expand their schemes to include more GP practices. It is, however, a matter for health authorities how they choose to develop the initiative.

Voluntary Bodies

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the organisations which are to receive section 64 funding from April 1994 and the amount each organisation will receive;

(2) if she will list the organisations, which will receive section 64 funding from April 1994, which are based outside London and indicate separately those based in the north-west.

Dr. Mawhinney: Ministers are curently considering all applications received for possible funding under the section 64 general scheme during 1994-95. Some organisations have already been notified of the outcome and the remainder will be notified as soon as decisions are taken. In addition further notifications will be issued at a later stage, where, for example, work on a project has yet to start or to accommodate slippage during the year on approved proposals. To qualify for section 64 support, an organisation must generally operate on a national basis; where its headquarters may be located is not a relevant criterion. Information on where it may be based is, therefore, not separately identified.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the reasons why the application for section 64 funding, from April 1994, by the George House trust in Manchester was unsuccessful.

Dr. Mawhinney: Bids from HIV/AIDS voluntary organisations exceeded the section 64 funding available for 1994-95 by over 100 per cent. Our priority was to continue grants to those organisations to which financial commitments had already been made.

NHS Capital Schemes

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken by her Department to notify NHS directors of finance that all NHS capital schemes will in the future need to demonstrate that private sector alternatives have been fully considered before a case is made for public finance.

Mr. Sackville: In a letter dated 14 January 1993, FDL(93)03, the National Health Service Management Executive director of finance and corporate information urged NHS directors of finance to make full and appropriate use of the new scope for private capital in the NHS, so that NHS money would be used most productively on patient care, and major improvements to the environment for patients and NHS staff, and to health care services, would be possible. Many examples of private finance options were included in the information pack "Public Service, Private Finance . . . putting private capital to work for the NHS", sent with the executive letter EL(93)101 to all NHS general managers on 18 November 1993. In this executive letter the director of finance and corporate information said:

> "I expect private finance to become a standard option that is considered in planning any NHS capital scheme".

Further instructions on considering private finance options are to be included in the forthcoming NHS capital investment manual. Copies of both letters are available in the Library.

GPs (Deputising Services)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the contractual relationship between the NHS and GP deputising services.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is for individual general practitioners to choose whether to enter into an arrangement with a deputising service, to obtain their family health services authority's consent, and to agree any contractual arrangement with the deputising service.

Accident and Emergency Units

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency units there were in London in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information available is shown in the table. From 1991-92 the numbers of national health service accident and emergency services have been recorded by management units which may provide services on more than one site. In February 1994, the London ambulance service advised that it serves accident and emergency units on 48 sites.

Adoption (Smokers)

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to encourage local authorities to ban male or female smokers from adopting children of (a) under three years or (b) over three years of age.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have no plans to encourage local authorities to ban smokers from adopting children of any age. However, the effects of passive smoking are well known and local authorities cannot ignore the information when assessing prospective adopters of young children.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her Department's policy concerning the provision of free hearing aids on the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Hearing aids continue to be available free of charge through the national health service.

Disabled Persons

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to implement the remaining sections of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have no plans at present to implement the remaining sections of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986. However, the Department is committed to reviewing the situation in the light of a few years' experience of community care.

AIDS

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a table showing details of AIDS support grant allocations to local authorities for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Sackville: 1993-94 allocations to local authorities for HIV/AIDS related services are shown in the table. Final allocations for 1994-95 have not yet been determined.

Infertility Services

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the national health service purchasing authorities which purchase infertility services according to their purchasing strategies submitted to her Department; how much each authority spends on infertility services; which national health service purchasing authorities provide each of (a) advanced reproductive technologies generally (b) in vitro fertilisation (c) gamete intrafallopian transfer and (d) infertility counselling within their infertility service purchasing plans; and how much they spend on each service.

Mr. Sackville: Individual health authority purchasing plans are monitored by the regional health authorities. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the regional health authorities for details.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the draft of the code of practice with respect to the confidentiality of medical records has been shown to the Data Protection Registrar.

Mr. Sackville: The Data Protection Registrar will be among those consulted on draft guidance on the confidentiality, use and disclosure of personal health information which we will issue shortly.

Cash Limits

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes she proposes to make to the cash limits and running costs limits for the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys for 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XII, vote 6—Office of Population Censuses and Surveys—will be increased by £149,000 to £33,809,000 and the running costs limit for OPCS will be increased by £149,000 to £48,288,000. This increase will be offset by transfers of £142,000 from Property Holdings and £7,000 from the Employment Department and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Community Care

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what conditions she intends to attach to the community care special transitional grant for 1994-95.

Mr. Bowis: We intend that local authorities will again be required to spend the entire grant on community care services and directly associated costs. They will also be required to spend 85 per cent. of the social security transfer element of the grant on community care services provided by the independent sector.

"Changing Childbirth"

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the implementation of the report of the expert maternity group "Changing Childbirth".

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced on 24 January the Government's intention to implement in full the recommendations in the report of the expert maternity group. The report was previously the subject of extensive consultation with consumers, national health service and professional bodies, and its recommendations for establishing a woman-centred service were widely welcomed.

EL(94)9 set out action required in the NHS, and copies are available in the Library.

Pregnant Women

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by region for the last five years the number of pregnant women who (a) gave birth in a hospital, (b) gave birth in the mother's home, (c) booked a midwife as their lead professional and (d) hold their own medical notes.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the number of pregnancies resulting in births at hospital and births at home can be found in table 8.2 of the annual reference volume "Birth Statistics", series FM1. Volumes for 1987 to 1991—series FM1, Nos. 16 to 20—are available in the Library. Information on women booking with a midwife as a lead professional and those holding their own medical notes are not available centrally.

Abortions

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions in 1992 were carried out under national health service agency agreements by district health authority of usual residence.

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the national health service hospitals closed for each year since 1980; to what subsequent use the sites have been put; and what revenue was gained from these.

Mr. Sackville: Since 1980-81 some £1,540 million has been generated by health authorities from the sales of surplus land and property. This money has been reinvested in hospital building contributing to the largest capital programme in the history of the national health service. Information on individual hospital closures is not available.

Breast Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of women in the eligible target group have been screened for breast cancer in the last three years for each health region in England; how many women have breast cancer in each region; and how many women died from breast cancer in each health region.

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available in the form requested. Table A shows the uptake figures for breast cancer screening by region for 1990-91 and table B for 1991-92. Table C give regional incidence data for the latest available year of 1987. Table D gives mortality data for the years 1990 to 1992.

Consultant Episodes

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 31 January, Official Report, columns 531-33, when she intends to publish the number of finished consultant episodes by region for private patients in national health service hospitals in 1992-93, in-patients plus day cases; and for what reasons the revenue generated is known for 1992-93 but not the activity level.

Mr. Sackville: Information about revenue and activity comes from different information systems. Private patient treatment numbers are part of the hospital episode statistics system which are not submitted to the Department until clinical information has been added to the patient record. We expect the information on the number of private patients treated in the national health service to be available by the end of March.

Cervical Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of women in the eligible target group have had a cervical cancer smear test within the last five years for each health region in England; how many women have cervical cancer in each region; and how many women died of cervical cancer in each health region.

Mr. Sackville: The information required is not available in the form requested. Table A gives latest available Korner data from 1991-92 on the number of women tested for cervical cancer in the last 5·5 years by region. Table B gives the latest available incident data. Table C gives the latest available mortality data for 1989 to 1992.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers health authorities have to impose financial penalties on general practitioner fundholders who have patients waiting over 18 months for surgery.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. Fundholders are expected to comply with patients charter standards in the same way as district health authorities, and are providing extremely effective in improving waiting times.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the case identified by a general practitioner in a letter to the hon. Member for Congleton, a copy of which has been drawn to her attention in a letter of 11 January, about priority used by the North Staffordshire infirmary in the allocation of treatment to the patients of fundholding and non-fundholding general practices is consistent with her policies; what action she has taken in that case; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 17 January 1994]: This was an issue about magnetic resonance imaging scanning. Patients are referred for a scan on the basis of urgent clinical need and there is no preference for the patients of either fundholders or non-fundholding general practitioners.

Accommodation Costs

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was received in total by the NHS from NHS patients paying for accommodation in single rooms or small wards in 1988-89, 1990-91 and 1992-93; what was the estimated average charge for such accommodation; and how many people paid such a charge in each of those years.

Mr. Sackville: The figures requested on income are shown in the table. Information on the number of people paying such charges are held locally. Therefore, estimated average charges are not known. Income of this sort enables hospitals to improve services for all patients.

Income from amenity beds

Year	Sum received £
1988-89	764,276
1990-91	1,260,313
1992-93	1,776,185

Source: Annual accounts and receipts and payments returns for regional health authorities, district health authorities and London postgraduate special health authorities.

Notes:

1. Figures for 1988-89 and 1990-91 were obtained from the annual accounts of health authorities. The figures for 1992-93 were only separately identifiable in the receipts and payments returns. The figures for 1992-93 are not, therefore, directly comparable with those for the earlier years.

2. Amenity bed income received by national health service trusts has been omitted as it is not separately identified from private patient in annual accounts.

GP Retraining

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to the NHS, for each of the last five financial years of allowances to general practitioners for retraining courses.

Dr. Mawhinney: Expenditure on the postgraduate education allowance for general practitioners, introduced in April 1990, has been:

	£ million
1990-91	44·4
1991-92	47·6
1992-93	49·1

These sums were not identified separately within GPs' remuneration prior to 1990-91. Payments made through the more limited postgraduate training allowance scheme totalled £1·3 million in 1988-89 and £2·5 million in 1989-90.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement of the criteria to be satisfied by retraining courses in order for general practitioners to qualify for reimbursement of the costs of attending those courses; and what was the date on which current department guidelines were introduced.

Dr. Mawhinney: Criteria for the approval of courses held in England which qualify for the postgraduate education allowance are not promulgated centrally. The responsibility for the accreditation of such courses is exercised centrally by the regional advisers in general practice.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of retraining courses undertaken by general practitioners for each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Locally based data are collected and held by the regional advisers in general practice.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data have been collected by her Department on the number of retraining courses for which general practitioners are entitled to be reimbursed.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. General practitioners are not reimbursed directly for attendance at training courses. GPs who maintain a balanced programme of education and training can claim the postgraduate education allowance. To qualify, GPs must attend an average of five days accredited training a year.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the total amount of financial penalties imposed on hospitals for having patients wait over 18 months for surgery; if she will break the figure down by financial year; and if she will list the hospitals concerned, by region.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regions have been given allocations from the waiting times fund on the understanding that deductions would be made for specific breaches of the patients charter guarantees. These deductions act as an incentive to good management and some regions therefore pass them on to the responsible provider units. Deductions are not collected directly from provider units.

Trust Chairs (Remuneration)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the annual remuneration paid to each trust chair.

Dr. Mawhinney: National health service trust chairmen's remuneration is paid on the basis of the following three bands, according to unit turnover:

Unit turnover 1988-89	Band	Rates per annum (£)
In excess of £50 million	Band 1	19,285
Between £20 million and £50 million	Band 2	17,145
Less than £20 million	Band 3	15,125

District Health Authorities

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who are those people currently appointed to serve on district health authorities.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 24 January, c. 117-19]: I regret that part of the information supplied was incorrect and incomplete. The correct and additional information about chairmen of district health authorities is set out as follows:

North West Thames Regional Health Authority

East and North Hertfordshire – Mr. A. Preston
Brent and Harrow – Mrs. C. Quest

NATIONAL FINANCE

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on which occasions since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Nelson: I regret that information going back beyond August 1991, and specific information about individual contracts after that date, can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The table gives the number of consultancies by contract type and total value awarded by Her Majesty's Treasury from August 1991 to date.

Consultant type	Number of contracts	Total value £
Management	60	1,041,053
Research	29	457,010
Job Evaluation	2	167,000
Audit	6	130,000
Computer	9	99,700
Training	10	56,501
Building/Works	8	34,642
Energy	2	30,700
Recruitment	2	20,500
Purchasing	2	10,200

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Nelson: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of government relating to public appointments.

Unicorn Heritage plc

Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on whose authority Treasury approval was given to the Heritage Department's decision to write off £200,000 owed by Unicorn Heritage plc to the English tourist board.

Mr. Portillo: Treasury officials gave their approval to a request from the Department of National Heritage to write off debts owed to the English tourist board, including that of Unicorn Heritage plc. In doing so, they acted in accordance with the procedures on losses and special payments laid down in chapter 36.2 of "Government Accounting", available in the Library of the House.

Civil Servants

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount paid out in redundancy and severance payments to civil servants in each of the past five years for which figures are available, broken down into civil service grades.

Mr. Dorrell: The total of compensation payments made to civil servants under early retirement/severance arrangements—which also cover redundancy—is as follows:

Year	£ million
1991-92	96
1992-93	180
[1]1993-94	169

[1] to December 1993.

Figures are not separately identifiable for redundancy nor is information available by civil service grade.

Inland Revenue Forms

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue forms were redesigned in 1992-93.

Mr. Dorrell: The Inland Revenue's corporate communications office, which is responsible for all the main tax forms, redesigned 1,148 forms in 1992-93.

Figures are not available centrally for forms which are not the responsibility of the corporate communications office.

Tax Relief

Mr. Enright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 455, if he will give the total tax relief paid by the Treasury without naming the individuals.

Mr. Dorrell: No. The rules about taxpayer confidentiality apply to companies as well as to individuals.

Cash Limits

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the cash and running costs limits for 1993-94 in respect of the Office of HM Paymaster General.

Sir John Cope: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVII, vote 13, the Office of HM Paymaster General, will be increased by £36,000 to £4,436,000 and the running costs limit will be increased by £1,533,000 from £25,291,000 to £26,824,000. The changes reflect a transfer of £36,000 from Property Holdings—class VII, vote 6—for building maintenance costs; additional work being carried out at the request of the Office of HM Paymaster General's customers; and early retirement costs forming part of efficiency measures currently being undertaken. The cash limit increase will be financed by a transfer from Property Holdings, and the running costs increase by additional income. These increases will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Treasury's cash and running costs limits in 1993-94.

Mr. Nelson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate on class XVII, vote 3, two changes are proposed:

(a) the cash limit for class XVII, vote 1—Her Majesty's Treasury—will be reduced by £116,000 from £76,468,000 to £76,352,000, and the running costs limit will be reduced by £116,000 from £79,621,000 to £79,505,000. The reduction reflects a transfer of central services to the Cabinet Office, class XIX, vote 1 which will be showing a corresponding increase.

(b) the cash limit for class XVII, vote 3—Forward: Civil Service Catering—will be increased by £950,000. The net running costs limit for Forward will also be increased by £950,000 and there will be an increase in appropriations in aid of £968,000. These changes are a result of increased trading activity and the impact of the sale of Forward. The cash limit increase of £950,000 is expected to be offset by receipts from the sale and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Central Statistical Office's cash and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Nelson: The cash limit for class XVII, vote 14 will be reduced by £309,000 from £43,551,000 to £43,242,000 and the running costs limit by £258,000 from £42,211,000 to £41,953,000. These reductions reflect the following: the surrender of £326,000 in running costs provision in respect of VAT receipts for payments to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, which are now VAT exempted; a transfer from Property Holdings—£68,000—class VII, vote 6; and extra receipts from the Department of the Environment—£51,000—class VII, vote 7. The changes will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Department for National Savings' cash limits and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Nelson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit on class XVII, vote 10—expenditure of the Department for National Savings on administration, publicity costs and certain other expenses—will be increased by £734,000 from £199,300,000 to £200,034,000. The increase comprises of £579,000 take-up under the end-year flexibility arrangements for running costs—as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1993, Official Report, columns 512-18—and a transfer of £155,000 from the Department of the Environment—Property Holdings—class VII, vote 6, in respect of buildings maintenance.

As a result of these changes, the running costs limit for the Department for National Savings will be increased by £734,000 from £195,142,000 to £195,876,000. The increase will be offset by a transfer and a change to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether insurance premium tax will apply to (a) private medical insurance, (b) insurance against redundancy, (c) permanent health insurance contracts of less than five years duration and (d) insurance against negative equity.

Sir John Cope: Private medical insurance, insurance against redundancy and insurance against negative equity are all forms of general insurance and, as such, will be liable to insurance premium tax. Premiums in respect of long term insurance as defined in the Insurance Companies Act 1982, including permanent health insurance for not less than five years or until retirement, will be exempt.

Taxation

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the direct and indirect tax burden in 1978-79 and in 1994-95 as a proportion of gross earnings for (i) a single person, (ii) a married couple both working, (iii) a married couple with one partner working, (iv) a married couple with two children, one partner working and (v) a married couple with two children, both working at 50 per cent., 100 per cent., 150 per cent., 200 per cent., 500 per cent. and 1,000 per cent. of average earnings.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 January 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 19 January 1994, Official Report, columns 635-42, for figures for 1994-95. Figures for 1978-79 were placed in the House of Commons Library in answer to a previous question by the hon. Member on 13 April 1989, Official Report, column 624. The available figures for a married couple with two children where both are working are given in the table:

Percentage of combined male and female gross earnings paid in income tax and national insurance contributions in 1978-79 and 1994-95
Married couple, both working with two children[1]

	Multiples of average earnings[2]
	½	1	1½	2	5	10
1978-79
Income tax[3]	1·1	16·8	22·2	24·9	44·8	62·5
NICs	6·5	6·5	6·0	5·1	2·0	1·0
Income tax and NICs	7·6	23·3	28·1	30·0	46·9	63·5
1994-95
Income tax[3]	4·7	14·9	18·9	22·6	33·0	36·5
NICs	7·1	8·6	7·6	6·1	2·4	1·2
Income tax and NICs	11·8	23·4	26·5	28·7	35·4	37·7

[1] Assuming that the husband earns the relevant multiple of average male earnings and the wife earns the relevant multiple of average female earnings.

[2] The earnings levels used are those for full-time workers on adult rates of pay, whose pay is unaffected by absence. Average earnings for males are assumed to be £92·80 per week in 1978-79 and £374·30 per week in 1994-95. Average female earnings are assumed to be £59·60 per week in 1978-79 and £256·40 per week in 1994-95.

[3] Income tax is shown net of child benefit in order to provide comparability with 1978-79 when support for children was partly given through child tax allowances. Both children are assumed to be under 11 years old. Households are assumed to receive no reliefs besides the standard allowances and only to have income from employment.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many more income tax payers in 1994-95 will be paying tax at the margin (a) at the basic rather than the lower rate as a result of his proposal to freeze personal allowances, other things being equal, (b) at the basic rather than the lower rate, in addition to those under (a), as a result of his proposal to freeze the married couples allowance and related allowances, and (c) at the lower rather than the basic rate as a result of his proposal to widen the lower rate band.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 January 1994]: Excluding the effect of changing the width of the lower rate band and other tax changes in 1994-95, there would be about 120,000 more people paying tax at the basic rather than the lower rate in 1994-95 than there would have been if the personal allowance had been increased in line with statutory indexation. Nobody will pay tax at the basic rather than the lower rate because of the freezing of the married couple's and related allowances. About 800,000 more people will have the lower rate of tax as their marginal rate through widening the lower rate band by £500.

Inflation

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average rate of inflation between (a) March 1974 and May 1979 and (b) November 1988 to January 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 3 February 1994]: Between March 1974 and May 1979 the average rate of inflation, as measured by the retail prices index, was 15·5 per cent. per annum. This compares with 5·1 per cent. for the period November 1988 to December 1993, the latest month for which information is available.

Bass Clef Jazz Club

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates was the value of goods taken by VAT officers from the Bass Clef jazz club in Hoxton square, Hackney N1, on 28 January; whose property it was that was taken; for what reason it was taken; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 3 February 1994]: It would be inappropriate for me to make public the tax affairs of a particular company. In general, removal of goods under regulation 65 of the VAT (General) Regulations 1985 is seen by customs as a last resort. However, it considers that such action is necessary when businesses refuse to pay VAT debts and the debts continue to increase.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Regional Tourist Boards

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many people sit on the executive boards of each regional tourist board; and how many are (a) councillors, (b) private sector representatives and (c) English tourist board representatives.

Mr. Sproat: The information is as follows:

Regions	Local Authority	Private Sector	English Tourist Board	Co-opted	Managing Director	Total Members
Cumbria	18	10	1	2	—	31
East Anglia	11	6	1	—	1	19
East Midlands	10	5	1	5	—	21
Heart of England	30	12	1	16	1	60
London	3	6	1	2	—	12
Northumbria	11	3	1	—	—	15
North West	9	8	1	4	—	22
South East England	29	19	1	3	—	52
Southern	49	19	1	8	1	78
West Country	53	18	1	9	—	81
Yorkshire and Humberside	25	9	1	7	—	42

The regional tourist boards are non-statutory bodies.

This information was supplied by the English tourist board and is the most up to date available.

Tourist Authorities (Overseas Marketing)

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the figures for expenditure on overseas marketing by tourist authorities in (a) Germany, (b) France and (c) Spain.

Mr. Sproat: Figures obtained by the British Tourist Authority from the national tourist offices of these countries show the following overseas marketing budgets for 1994.

	£ million
Germany	10·8
France	32·8
Spain	13·5

It is difficult to be sure exactly what these figures cover because of the very different ways in which each country organises its promotion of tourism. However, the figures for Germany exclude staff costs and any expenditure by the Länder.

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1992-93 after 25 September 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Brooke: In 1992-93, the budget for both Foreign and United Kingdom travel and subsidence for all Ministers and spokesmen in the Department was £37,000 in total. The amount spent from 25 September until the end of the financial year was £24,215. In the financial year 1993-94, the amount budgeted for the same purpose was £38,000. The spending to date is £21,053.

Royal Works of Art

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the compilation of the inventory of royal works of art will be completed.

Mr. Sproat: The Lord Chamberlain has stated that it is anticipated that the inventory of works of art in the royal collection will be completed by the end of 1997.

Broadcasting Franchises

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the recently announced changes in the regulations governing broadcasting franchises on television and radio companies based in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The only recent changes have been to the regulations governing the ownership of companies holding ITV licences. Any new owners would be bound by the terms of the Broadcasting Act 1990 and the conditions of the original licence, particularly on regional programmes and regional production.

Cash Limits

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what changes will be made to the cash limits or running cost limits for 1993-94 for which he has resonsibility.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made to the case limits within class XI:

(i) vote 1—museums and galleries—will be increased by £1,225,000 from £217,303,000 to £218,528,000 for additional provision to meet a payment to Inland Revenue in respect of an item accepted in satisfaction of tax. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

(ii) vote 5—film, tourism, sport and broadcasting—will be increased by £220,000 from £130,108,000 to £130,328,000. This is the net result of additional administrative costs of £340,000 in the promotion of tourism, partly offset by extra appropriations in aid to the vote of £120,000 from compensation payments. The net increase is being met from savings on class XI, vote 7—DNH administration.

(iii) vote 6—Royal palaces, Historic Royal Palaces agency, Royal Parks agency, historic buildings, ancient monuments and the National Heritage—will be reduced by £169,000 from £194,252,000 to £194,083,000. This is the net result of a transfer of £500,000 to the Department of Transport and a reduction of £700,000 in respect of an overspend on the vote in the previous financial year, offset by receipts of £994,000 from VAT refunds and admission fees, transfers of £15,000 from the Chessington Computer Centre in respect of services now provided on a repayment basis, and £22,000 from Property Holdings to cover additional property maintenance charges.

(iv) vote 7—Department of National Heritage administration—will be reduced by £486,000 from £25,334,000 to £24,848,000. This is the net result of a transfer of £350,000 to the Office of the National Lottery and £220,000 for the promotion of tourism, partly offset by extra receipts of £46,000 from the sale of statistical information and a transfer from Property Holdings of £36,000 to the Department and of £2,000 to the Royal Fine Art Commission to cover additional property maintenance charges.

(v) Vote 8—Office of the National Lottery—will be increased by £350,000 from £1,501,000 to £1,851,000. The increase is the net result of additional provision of £1,270,000 for consultancy and professional advice associated with the grant of the national lottery licence, partly offset by savings in other costs of £920,000. The net increase is being met from savings on class XI, vote 7—DNH administration.

(vi) In addition, the Department of National Heritage gross running costs limit will be reduced by £488,000 from £29,682,000 to £29,194,000. The gross running costs limit of the Office of the National Lottery will be reduced by £720,000 from £1,000,000 to £280,000.

Public Bodies

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which agencies, quangos and associated public bodies were transferred to the responsibility of his Department when it was set up; and what was the cost of transferring them.

Mr. Sproat: On being established in April 1992, my Department became responsible for the Historic Royal Palaces agency and for sponsoring 43 non-departmental public bodies—NDPBs—and other bodies, which are listed in "Public Bodies 1993" These are:

In addition, my Department assumed policy responsibility for the following public corporations:

British Broadcasting Corporation
Independent Television Commission
Radio Authority
Sianel Pedwar Cymru (S4C)

The costs associated with their transfer are those relating to the preparation and promulgation of the Transfer of Functions (National Heritage) Order 1992.

Broadcasting Restrictions

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, whether he has completed his review of the Northern Ireland broadcasting restrictions; and what conclusions he has reached.

Mr. Brooke: The Government will keep the matter under review in the light of further developments.

DEFENCE

Bosnia

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the roles of No. 39 (1 Photographic Reconnaissance Unit) Squadron Royal Air Force and No. 51 Squadron Royal Air Force in operations over Bosnia.

Mr. Hanley: Aircraft of No. 39 (1 PRU) Squadron undertake photographic reconnaissance over Bosnia. Their work is of value to the NATO air forces enforcing the no-fly zone and to our forces on the ground. Aircraft of RAF No. 51 Squadron do not conduct operations over Bosnia.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft, and of what types, are scheduled to be deployed to Goose Bay for low flying training in 1994; and what are their planned dates of deployment.

Mr. Hanley: Currently, the only aircraft type planned to deploy to Goose Bay for low-flying training in 1994 is the Tornado GR1. Nine aircraft will deploy at the start of the season and will be used by each squadron in rotation. The planned deployments dates for the squadrons are:

18 April to 2 May
2 May to 16 May
16 May to 30 May
30 May to 13 June
13 June to 27 June
8 August to 22 August
22 August to 5 September
5 September to 19 September

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft, and of what types, were involved in the Italian air force deployment to West Freugh during November 1993; what were the dates of the deployment; how many low-level sorties were undertaken by Italian aircraft during the deployment, and at what minimum authorised altitudes; and if he will make a statement on the nature and scope of the agreement with the Italian authorities granting access to United Kingdom weapons range and low flying facilities for Italian military aircraft.

Mr. Hanley: The Italian air force—IAF—aircraft deployed to the test and evaluation range at West Freugh between 5 and 12 November 1993 were as follows:

2 AMX—Fast Jets
2 G-222—Transport Aircraft
1 HH-3F—Helicopter

The aircraft flew a total of 17 low-level sorties over the range area; they were authorised to fly down to a minimum height of 500 ft. No low-level sorties were flown in the United Kingdom low flying system—UKLFS.

There is no bilateral arrangement between the RAF and IAF which facilitates IAF use of RAF weapons ranges outside of a NATO exercise or squadron exchange.

Low flying in the UKLFS by the IAF is carried out under reciprocal arrangements which permit RAF aircraft to fly at low level in Italy. In general, the IAF is not authorised to fly below 500 ft in the United Kingdom.

Goose Bay

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of Royal Air Force personnel on the establishment of Royal Air Force (Unit) Goose Bay, excluding personnel on temporary training detachments, on 1 August and 1 December in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement of his plans for the future role of Royal Air Force (Unit) Goose Bay.

Mr. Hanley: Figures are not available in the form requested. Figures for the years in question are, however, as follows:

		Number
March	1990	94
March	1991	93
June	1992	99
December	1992	99
June	1993	99
December	1993	102

The RAF has a continuing requirement for the high quality low-flying training which is available to it at Goose Bay and in other parts of north America. The proven ability of the RAF unit at Goose Bay to provide the comprehensive support which squadron detachments to Canada and the USA require has ensured that such training has continued to be carried out successfully. Consequently, there are no plans to alter the future role of the unit.

Euratom Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the areas of his Department's activities covered by chapter III on health and safety of the Euratom treaty.

Mr. Hanley: None. The Euratom treaty does not apply to military activities.

Depleted Uranium Shells

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress made in environmental monitoring of depleted uranium shell test firing into the Solway firth.

Mr. Aitken: We have continued our well-established programme of analysing soil and vegetation samples from seven locations on the Kirkcudbright range every four months and seawater and silt samples from the nearby waters of the Solway firth once a year. In addition a contract was placed with an independent contractor, W. S. Atkins Environment of Epsom, on 13 December 1993 to undertake an environmental assessment of depleted uranium firing at the Kirkcudbright and Eskmeals ranges. The contractor is due to make his final report in April and, in letters to local MPs, I have recently reaffirmed my intention that as much as possible of the report should be made public.

Arms Sales (Nigeria)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consignments of United Kingdom-made arms sold to Nigeria have not yet been delivered.

Mr. Aitken: The information requested can be supplied only at disproportionate cost. I will write to the hon. Member.

Military Supplies (Exports)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military supplies have been exported from the United Kingdom over the past five years.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the information contained in table 1.11 of the 1993 edition of "UK Defence Statistics", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February, Official Report, column 611.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Hanley: For the last three financial years, the Ministry of Defence has been reimbursed the following amounts by the DSS in respect of statutory sick pay provisions:

Financial year	£
1990-91	8,776,265
1991-92	6,473,761
1992-93	6,499,710

Cash Limits

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes he proposes to the class I cash limits and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Rifkind: Subject to parliamentary approval of the spring supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

Class I Cash Limits

£000

Vote	Current cash limit	Change	Revised cash limit
1	12,405,216	+264,594	12,669,810
2	3,844,613	+ 45,969	3,890,582
3	7,153,498	−383,998	6,769,500

These changes decrease the block defence cash limit by £73,435,000. They allow for increased expenditure on class I, votes 1 and 2, which will be offset by lower expenditure on class I, vote 3. The changes additionally take account of a decrease of £75,000,000 to reflect a forecast underspend against provision for recovery from Operation Granby which is subject to specific limits. Also reflected is the net effect of transfers between the Ministry of Defence and other Government Departments. The running costs limit will be increased by £55,069,000 from £5,475,310,000 to £5,530,379,000, £53,232,000 of this increase results from the continued rationalisation of activities to meet the new force structure. This involves the transfer of certain administrative tasks into the running costs total and does not add to the overall level of defence expenditure. The increase also reflects minor changes of £1,837,000 principally due to interdepartmental transfers.

EMPLOYMENT

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State since 27 May 1993.

Mr. David Hunt: Ministers in this Department do not have individual travel budgets. However, since my appointment on 27 May 1993, I have spent £3,354 on travel within the United Kingdom and £10,241 on travel overseas. These figures do not include the cost of my official car.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the proportion of workers in (a) temporary or contract employment and (b) part-time work in each EC country, in (i) the latest year for which information is available and (ii) 10 years previously.

Miss Widdecombe: Latest comparable estimates of the proportion of employees in temporary employment and the proportion working part time across all EC countries are for spring 1991 and are given in the table. No comparable figures exist prior to 1983, so proportions for this year have also been supplied in the table.

In addition, a footnote to the table provides spring 1993 figures for the United Kingdom.

[1] More recent figures for the United Kingdom, from the spring 1993 labour force survey, show 6 per cent. of employees in temporary employment and 25 per cent. of employees working part time.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the number of those aged (a) 16 to 18 years, (b) 18 to 19 years and (c) 16 to 24 years unemployed in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow; what percentages they are of the cohort; how many persons under the age of 25 years in the same parliamentary constituency have never worked; and what percentage of those aged 16 years in Greenock and Port Glasgow (i) stayed on at school, (ii) went into jobs and (iii) went into youth training in the last year for which figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe: In October 1993, unadjusted claimant unemployment in Greenock and Port Glasgow stood at 194 for 16 to 18-year-olds, 285 for 18 to 19-year-olds and 1,046 for 16 to 24-year-olds. This represents the extent of the available information at the constituency level.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average wage of (a) a male and (b) a female in (i) full-time employment and (ii) part-time employment in Greenock and Port Glasgow in each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available is for Strathclyde. The average earnings of full-time men and women in Strathclyde can be found in tables 110 and 113 of part E of the new earnings survey for each of the years concerned. Copies of the report can be found in the Library.

Information for part-time men and women is provided in the table:

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the most recent residence-based unemployment rates for each district council area in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow, giving the figures overall and broken down for males and females; what is the change in the number of unemployed claimants in Greenock and Port Glasgow for the same month in each of the last seven years; and what have been the percentage changes since 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: Information about numbers of unemployed claimants in Greenock and Port Glasgow constituency is available monthly from June 1983, and can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library. This is the extent of the available information. Residence-based International Labour Organisation unemployment rates are available from the labour force survey for some district councils, but not for Inverclyde, which contains the Greenock and Port Glasgow constituency, because the latter is too small.

One-stop Shops

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of the population was served by an Employment Service one-stop shop and what percentage was served by seperate employment and benefit offices at July 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 4 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the percentage of the population served by our one-stop offices.

The Employment Service (ES) is working progressively to bring Jobcentre and Benefit Office services together under one roof. This network will provide a new and improved one-stop service offering the full range of ES services to help people back to work. It is expected that this will be completed by March 1996 when there will be a network of some 1,100 offices.

By July 1993 we had opened 787 of these new style Jobcentres. Although we cannot say what percentage of the national population they serve we do know that they provide an integrated service to some 68 per cent. of our unemployed clients. The remaining 32 per cent. are served by our separate networks of benefit offices and Jobcentres.

I hope this is helpful.

Redundancy Payments Service

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what proportion of letters received by the Redundancy Payments Service from members of the public in 1993 had a reply within five working days;

(2) what proportion of claims received by the Redundancy Payments Service in 1993 were paid within 14 weeks.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: 99·9 per cent. of letters received by the Redundancy Payments Services in 1993 were replied to within five days, and 90 per cent. of claims were paid within 14 weeks.

Health and Safety Commission

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the membership of the board of the Health and Safety Commission, giving in each case details of days worked per month and any remuneration.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The current membership of the Health and Safety Commission is:

Mr. F. J. Davies CBE OSt J Chairman
Councillor E. Carrick
Mr. C. Chope OBE
Mr. P. Gallagher
Mr. P. Jacques CBE
Mr. N. Pitcher
Dr. G. Schofield
Mr. R. Symons CBE
Mr. A. Tuffin CBE
Dame Rachel Waterhouse

The chairman and members of the commission are appointed on a part-time basis.

Mr. Davies works three days per week as commission chairman for which he is paid £54,088 per annum.

Commission members receive £1,060 per annum plus £105 for each day they spend on commission business. In 1993, this was an average of two days per member per month.

Employment Agencies

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many agencies are currently licensed under the Employment Agencies Act 1974, giving, in each case, their location and the numbers of staff employed by them.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: At the last count on 31 December 1993 there were 14,482 holders of licences under the Employment Agencies Act: 7,966 in London and the home counties; 3,056 in the midlands, Wales and the south-west; and 3,460 in the north and Scotland. The exact location of each licence holder is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Department has no information about the numbers of staff employed by licensed employment agencies.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employment agencies have been refused a licence or had their licence revoked under the Employment Agencies Act 1974 since it came into force; and what were the reasons in each case.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Fifty-eight licences have been refused and nine licences revoked since the Employment Agencies Act came into force in 1976. Convictions for criminal offences were the reason for 26 refusals and four revocations. Evidence of lack of financial probity was the reason for 16 refusals and one revocation. The remaining cases each involved a variety of reasons, principally the persistent failure to comply with regulations applying to employment agencies.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many inspections were made of employment agencies by his Department in 1993; and what was the figure in each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The annual number of inspections was not recorded in full until 1982. The numbers for the year 1982 to 1993 in the table include visits to investigate complaints.

Inspection of Employment Agencies

Year	Number of Inspections
1982	3,686
1983	3,997
1984	3,650
1985	4,252
1986	4,337
1987	4,547
1988	4,854
1989	6,274
1990	6,093
1991	5,199
1992	4,842
1993	4,567

Cash Limits

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes will be made to his Department's cash limits or running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. David Hunt: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the following changes will be made:

the cash limit for class V, vote 1—Department of Employment: programmes and central services—will be increased by a token £1,000 from £2,499,268,000 to £2,499,269,000; and the single running costs limit for the Department of Employment—class V, votes 1 and 2 will be increased by £13,340,000 from £1,448,050,000 to £1,461,390,000.

In addition:

the cash limit for class V, vote 2—Department of Employment: Employment Service—will be decreased by £13,775,000 from £638,569,000 to £624,794,000;

the cash limit on class V, vote 3—Health and Safety Commission and Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service—will be decreased by £3,000,000 from £206,531,000 to £203,531,000 to reflect adjustments to Health and Safety Executive provision; and within the cash limit above the running costs limit for the Health and Safety Commission will be decreased by £5,000,000 from £178,131,000 to £173,131,000.

The changes listed are mainly to provide increased running costs provision to cover reorganisation costs and will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRANSPORT

Enforcement Duties

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each vehicle registration office and London enforcement office (a) the number of staff employed on enforcement duties, (b) their salary costs and (c) the enforcement revenue raised for 1992-93.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley), Official Report, column 710, on 15 December 1993.

Vehicle Excise Duty Offences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) of 15 December, Official Report, column 713, how many no further steps codes are used in relation to reports of vehicle excise duty offences; and how many offences were written off for each of those codes in 1992-93.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North, Official Report, column 712, on 15 December 1993.

Urban Motorways

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to franchise urban motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: We have at present no such plans. My right hon. Friend announced on 2 December, Official Report, column 650, that we would invite the private sector to bid for contracts under which—would design, build, finance and operate roads for which—would receive payment from Government in relation to the use of those roads; and that we would develop options for the future for more extensive use of private finance. It is too soon to say what the longer-term options might include.

Airport Departures

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his written answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 393-94, if he will provide a separate breakdown of departures for each United Kingdom airport listed in his answer.

Mr. Norris: Notwithstanding the question of commercial confidentiality of this information, a breakdown of the figures requested is not held by the Department and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information on total passenger movements at individual United Kingdom airports is published by the Civil Aviation Authority in its "Annual Statements of Movements, Passengers and Cargo". The figures for 1992 are contained in CAA publication CAP614.

Cash Limits

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1993-94.

Mr. MacGregor: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

(i) the cash limit for class VI, vote 1—national roads, England—will be reduced by £5,200,000 from £2,254,997,000 to £2,249,797,000. This decrease reflects a transfer to class VI, vote 2 partially offset by a transfer of funds from the Department of National Heritage.

(ii) the cash limit for class VI, vote 2—administration and transport services—will be increased by £10,778,000 from £202,236,000 to £213,014,000 and the Department's gross running costs limit will be reduced by £309,000 from £428,774,000 to £428,465,000. The increase in the cash limit includes various inter-departmental transfers, increased expenditure and a shortfall in receipts on Eurocontrol, increased expenditure on the sale of the DVOIT agency and items of administrative capital and a shortfall of receipts from the recovery of administrative costs and various repayment services. These increases are partially offset by a reduction in running costs and miscellaneous administrative services. There is a reduction of £782,000 from £950,000 to £168,000 in the net running cost limit for DVOIT.

(iii) the cash limit for class VI, vote 4 will be reduced by £3,037,000 from £180,778,000 to £177,741,000. This decrease reflects a transfer to class VI, vote 2 and a reduction arising from demand financing arrangements.

(iv) the DOT/LACAP cash limit will be increased by £1,376,000 from £457,135,000 to £458,511,000. This increase reflects a transfer from the DOE/UA cash limit.

The overall increase will be offset by transfers and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cash Limits

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes are proposed in her Department's cash limits for 1993-94.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class III, vote 4—Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food: agricultural, food and fishing services —will be reduced by £12,056,000 from £366,814,000 to £354,758,000. Within this limit, expenditure will be reduced by £10,570,000 on agricultural schemes and by £1,398,000 on flood protection. These reductions reflect a predicted decrease in demand and delay in implementation in further areas of these schemes. The remaining reduction —£88,000—reflects a transfer of funds to the Overseas Development Administration for the St. Petersburg model farm.

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by her Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Minister of State since 27 May 1993.

Mr. Jack: The travel and subsistence budget for myself and my private office staff for the 1993-94 financial year, including the cost of services provided by the Government car service, is £104,251. Expenditure to the end of December 1993 was £74,559. The budget does not differentiate between internal and overseas travel.

Beef Special Premium

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the number of recorded claims for the beef special premium in England and Wales; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: In 1993, there were just below 1·4 million first premium claims and just below 450,000 second premium claims under the beef special premium scheme in England and Wales. These figures are still subject to revision.

Offal

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to ban the use of offal from calves under the age of six months in meat products; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I have no plans to do so. There is no scientific justification for banning the use of any offal from calves under six months of age. This is based on advice from the Government's independent scientific advisers and is supported by the Department of Health and by international bodies such as the European Commission, the World Health Organisation and the Office International des Epizooties.

Arable Aid, Northumberland

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what delays have occurred in payments of arable aid to farmers in Northumberland who are growers of commercial oilseed rape as a result of computer failure in the Ministry's Carlisle office; what office the cheques are now being paid from; and whether all payments due to be made by 31 December have now been paid.

Mr. Jack: Sixteen producers in Northumberland who claimed set-aside payments in respect of oilseed rape grown as a non-food crop on set-aside land were affected by a temporary problem at Carlisle, as a result of which aid for areas planted to other arable crops was excluded from their payments. As soon as this problem was identified, steps were taken at Carlisle to pay the outstanding balances. Payable orders for all payments due to be made by 31 December 1993 to producers in Northumberland have now been issued except for two claims on which there are unresolved queries.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which she is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if she will give details.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 2 February, at column 736.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if her Department or any agencies for which she is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 3 February 1994]: Yes, the Department has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross since July 1993.

I can confirm that the VMD has not engaged the services of this firm or any of its partners in the period you have identified.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Walsh to Mr. Alistair Darling, dated 4 February 1994:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Question on whether her Department or any agencies for which she is responsible has engaged the services of the firm of Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

I can confirm that since 1 July 1993 the ADAS agency has not engaged the services of Touche Ross or any of its partners.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Cash Limits

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for changes to the 1993-94 cash limits within his responsibilities and to his Department's running costs limits.

Mr. Howard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VIII, vote 2—prisons, England and Wales—will be increased by £8,700,000 from £1,524,554,000 to £1,533,254,000.

The additional provision is necessary because of the need to meet costs arising from the cancellation of the planned new Prison Service headquarters. The increase will be met from provision reserved for this purpose by HM Treasury and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The cash limit for class VIII, vote 3—Home Office administration, immigration and police support services, England Wales—will be reduced by £1,930,000 from £1,312,481,000 to £1,310,551,000 to reflect transfers to the Department for Education, Property Holdings and the Department of the Environment, and to offset part of the new expenditure proposed in class VIII, vote 1—police, Criminal Injuries Compensation Board and other grants, England and Wales.

The Home Office gross running cost limit will be reduced by £10,357,000 from £1,653,927,000 to £1,643,570,000 to reflect a reallocation of money between subheads in class VIII, vote 2.

The local authority capital non-voted cash limit will be decreased by £358,000 from £125,593,000 to £125,235,000. The reduced provision results from the transfer of unallocated supplementary credit approvals from the Home Office to the Welsh Office, for the purpose of the replacement of fire service mobilisation and communications systems.

Police Cautions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions govern contracts between policemen or employees of the police and newspapers as respects details of charges or cautions (a) when no money changes hands and (b) when money changes hands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Any unauthorised disclosure by an officer of any information coming into his possession as a member of the police force is a disciplinary offence, of which the maximum penalty is dismissal. Were money or other consideration to be accepted, the possibility would also arise that the common law offence of bribery had been committed.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions he has given to chief constables with regard to the confidentiality of official police cautions and revelations of the details of those cautions to the press.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Responsibility for authorising disclosure of information to the press rests with chief officers. Unauthorised disclosure is a disciplinary offence.

Home Office guidance to chief officers indicates that police records of convictions, cautions and related information should normally be regarded as confidential, but that information may be released to third parties when to do so would be in the interests of national security, the protection of the vulnerable, to ensure probity in the administration of the law; or where it was a requirement of licensing or similar provisions.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is within the jurisdiction of the Police Complaints Authority to investigate complaints from the public regarding details of official cautions which have been revealed to the press and to ascertain if any payment was received for this information.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Such a complaint would fall within the jurisdiction of the Police Complaints Authority.

The responsibility for investigating a complaint rests with the chief officer of the force concerned. The Police Complaints Authority reviews the report of every investigation and has the power to supervise the investigation of serious complaints.

Prison Education

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with whom in his Department responsibility for prison education in England and Wales lies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Director General of the Prison Service is directly accountable to the Home Secretary for the Prison Service's performance and operations including arrangements for the provision of education to prisoners. He is also the Home Secretary's principal policy adviser on matters relating to the Prison Service.

Fire and Rescue Services

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the actual spending in the current financial year on fire and rescue in each local authority in England and Wales;

(2) what is the actual spending per head on fire and rescue in the current financial year for each local authority in England and Wales.

Mr. Howard: Fire authorities budgeted spending on fire and civil defence for 1993-94 is shown in total terms and per head of population in the table.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the standard spending assessments for the current financial year for fire and rescue services in each local authority in England and Wales.

Mr. Howard: Standard spending assessments for 1993-94 relate to fire and civil defence expenditure. The information requested in relation to England is given in the table. Individual services are not separately identified in SSAs for Welsh local authorities.

Taylforth Libel Case

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report on why it was necessary for the Hertfordshire police to hire Mr. Richard Rampton QC in relation to the Gillian Taylforth libel action against The Sun newspaper; who would have paid for this if she had won her case and been awarded costs; and what amount the police agreed to pay for (i) the Queen's counsel, (ii) junior counsel, (iii) solicitors and (iv) in total.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand that the Hertfordshire constabulary was not represented in the case in question. I am informed by the Commissioner that the Metropolitan police was represented by Mr. Richard Rampton QC, because the Metropolitan police has been joined in the proceedings as a third party by The Sun newspaper. Had the plaintiffs' claim succeeded, liability for third party's costs would have fallen to be decided at that point. The Metropolitan police's legal costs have yet to be calculated.

Police Protection

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of the spending of each police authority devoted to providing police protection for (a) the Prime Minister and (b) other members of the Government were met by each police authority in (1) 1992-93 and (2) so far in 1993-94;

(2) what percentage of the total cost of providing police protection for (a) the Prime Minister and (b) other members of the Government were met by each police authority in (1) 1992-93 and (2) so far in 1993-94;

(3) what was the spending (a) in 1992-93 and (b) so far in 1993-94 on providing police protection for (i) the Prime Minister and (ii) other members of the Government (1) in total and (2) broken down by police authority.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information about the cost of specific police operations is not collected centrally. Expenditure on protection duties qualifies in the usual way for police grant at 51 per cent. and for revenue support grant from the Department of the Environment, leaving only some 15 to 20 per cent. to be raised locally.

HMP Pucklechurch

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to rebuild or replace HMP Pucklechurch as a male remand centre, suitable for young offenders.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Mr. Robert Maclennan, dated 4 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about plans to rebuild or replace HMP Pucklechurch as a male remand centre, suitale for young offenders.

The Prison Service has no such plans. Pucklechurch has not been used as a male remand centre since April 1990. It is intended that the female prison will close in October 1995, after which the site may be sold.

Psychotherapy (Offenders)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines his Department has issued to the probation service on the provision of psychotherapy for offenders in their care.

Mr. Maclean: None.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES | SESSION 1993–94 | VOLUME 236

24th January—4th February, 1994

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS) and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
